23 Surely they shall not see the land which I swore unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it.

but my servant Caleb, because he has another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereto he went; and his seed shall possess it.

Joshua is not named, because he was not now among the people, but a constant attendant upon Moses; nor was he to be reckoned as one of them, any more than Moses was, because he was to be their chief commander. Another spirit with him, he was a man of another temper and carriage, faithful and courageous, not acted by that evil spirit of cowardice, unbelief, unthankfulness, disobedience, which ruled in his brethren, but by the Spirit of God. Fully, i. e. universally and constantly, in and through difficulties and dangers, which made his partners balk. The land whereto he went, in general Canaan, and particularly Hebron, and the adjacent parts, Josh. xiv. 9. Shall possess it, or, shall dwell it, i. e. its inhabitants, the land being set out for the people of it. Compare Josh. vii. 7, xiv. 12.

35 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwell in the valley.) To morrow turn you, and get you into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

In the valley; beyond the mountain at the foot whereof they now were, ver. 40. And this clause is added either, 1. As an aggravation of Israel's misery and punishment, that being now ready to enter and take possession of the land, they are forced to go back into the wilderness; or, 2. As an argument to oblige them more willingly to obey the following command of returning into the wilderness, because their enemies were very near them, and severed from them only by that Idumean mountain, and if they did not speedily depart, their enemies would hear of them and fall upon them, and so the evil which before they causelessly feared would come upon them; they then were, and their children would become a prey to the Amalekites and Canaanites, because God had forsaken them, and would not assist nor defend them. The verse may be rendered thus, And, or But, for the present, the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwell in the valley; therefore (which particle is here understood, as it is in other places) to morrow turn ye, &c. Though some knit these words to the former, and read the place thus, Caleb—and his seed shall possess it, to wit, the land near Hebron, and also the land of the Amalekites and of the Canaanites that dwell in the valley. Quest But how are the Canaanites said to dwell in the valley here, when they dwell in the hill ver. 45, and by the sea-coasts, Num. xxi. 1? Answer 1. Part of them dwell in one place, and part in other places. 2. The word Canaanite may here be understood more generally of all the inhabitants of Canaan. By the way of the Red Sea, i. e. that leadeth to the Red sea, and to Egypt, the place whither you desire to return ver. 1, 4.

26 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

27 How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me.

Bear with, or, pardon, as ver. 19, 20, or spare, which words are necessarily and easily understood. It is a short and imperfect speech, which is frequent in case of anger, as Eccl. xxxii. 32; Psal. vi. 3, &c. 13.

28 Say unto them, As truly as I live, saith the Lord, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you.

As you wickedly wished you might have died in the wilderness, ver. 2, I will bring your imprecations upon your heads.

29 Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have measured against me.

30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I swore to make you dwell therein, says Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

To make you, i. e. your nation, for God did not swear to do so to these particular persons.

31 But your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know the land which ye have despised.

32 But as for you, your carcasses, they shall fall in this wilderness.

33 And your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years, and bear your whoredoms, until your carcasses be wasted in the wilderness.

Wander, like sheep feeding in the deserts; or, wild, as shepherds, i. e. shall live like the shepherds of Arabia, in tents, and removing from place to place, having no certain dwelling. Forty years, i. e. so long as to make up the time of your dwelling in the wilderness sixty years, as appears from Num. xxxiii. 8, Deut. i. 3, ii. 14. Compare Amos v. 25. It is manifest that one whole year and part of another were past before this sin or judgment. Your whoredoms, i. e. the punishment of your whoredoms, to wit, of your apostasy from, and perfidiousness against, your Lord who was your Husband, and had married you to himself. See Jer. iii. 14. Whence idolatry is called whoredom.

34 After the number of the days in which ye sinned the land, even forty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, and ye shall know my breach of promise.

Each day for a year, so there should have been forty years to come but God was pleased mercifully to accept of the time past as a part of that time. My breach of promise, that as you have first broken the covenant between you and me by breaking the terms or conditions of it, so I will make it void on my part by denying you the blessing promised in that covenant, and to be given to you in case of your obedience. So you shall see that the breach of promise wherewith you charged me, ver. 4, lies at your door and was forced from me by your perfidiousness.

My breach, either passively, i. e. your breaking off from me, as such promises are oft used, as Gen. i. 4, Isa. lii. 11, lvi. 7, or actively, i. e. my breaking off or departing from you and stopping the current of my blessings towards you, you shall feel by experience how sad your condition is when I withdraw my grace and favour from you.

35 I the Lord have said, I will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

36 And the men, which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him, by bringing up a slander upon the land, 37 Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land, died by the plague before the Lord.

Either by the pestilence threatened ver. 12 or by some other sudden and extraordinary judgment, sent from the cloud in which God dwelt, and from whence he spake to Moses, and wherein his glory at this time appeared before all the people, ver. 10, who therefore were all, and these names among the rest, before the Lord.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses saying, 1 "Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come into the land of your habitations, which I give unto you,

i. e. Will certainly give you, notwithstanding this great provocation, and my unchangeable communion And for their better assurance hereof, he repeats and amplifies the laws of sacrifices, whereby through Christ he was or would be reconciled to them and theirs upon their repentance.

3 And "will make an offering by fire unto the Lord, a burnt offering, or a sacrifice "in performing a vow, or in a freewill offering, or "in your solemn feasts, to make "a sweet savour unto the Lord, of the herd, or, of the flock:

A sacrifice, i. e. a peace-offering, as appears, 1 Because that word put by itself is oft so taken, as Exod. xvi 12, Lev xvi 5, 8, xvi 37, Deut xii 27. 2 Because the offerings for sins and trespasses had no meat-offerings and drink offerings attending upon them, excepting only the case of the leper's cleansing, Lev xiv 10. 3 Because this is explained by and called peace-offerings, ver 8. 4 From the words here following, because peace-offerings were commonly offered either in performance of a vow, or freely, or by God's command in their solemn feasts, all which are here expressed

4 'Then shall he that offereth his offering unto the Lord bring "a meat offering of a tenth deal of flour mingled "with the fourth part of an hin of oil

A tenth deal, or tenth part, to wit, of an ephah, i. e. an omer, Exod xvi 36 Mingled with oil, wherein it seems to differ from such meat-offerings as were solitary, and not accessories to other sacrifices

5 'And the fourth part of an hin of wine for a drink offering shalt thou prepare with the burnt offering or sacrifice, for one lamb

6 'Or for a ram, thou shalt prepare for a meat offering two tenth deals of flour mingled with the third part of an hin of oil

Two tenth deals, because this belonged to a better sacrifice than the former, and therefore in the next sacrifice of a bullock there are three tenth deals So the accessories sacrifice grows proportionably with the principal

7 And for a drink offering thou shalt offer the third part of an hin of wine, for a sweet savour unto the Lord

8 And when thou preparest a bullock for a burnt offering, or for a sacrifice in performing a vow, or "peace offerings unto the Lord

i. e. Or any other peace-offerings, to wit, such as were offered either freely or by command, which may be called peace-offerings or thank-offerings, by way of emulations, because such are offered purely by way of gratitude to God, and with single respect to his command and honour, whereas the peace-offerings made in performance of a vow were made and offered by way of contract, and with design of getting some advantage by them

9 Then shall he bring "with a bullock a meat offering of three tenth deals of flour mingled with half an hin of oil.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire, "of a sweet savour unto the Lord

11 'Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one according to their number

i. e. As many cattle as ye sacrifice, so many meat and drink offerings ye shall offer.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 And if a stranger sojourn with you, or who soever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do. <sup>1</sup> A stranger, to wit, proselyte, for such offerings were not accepted from others.

15 One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 As to the worship of God, his sacrifices shall be offered in the same manner, and accepted by God upon the same terms, as yours, which was a pre-arrangement of the Gentiles. And this is added by way of caution and distinction, to show that strangers were not upon this privilege to partake of their civil privileges.

16 One law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you,

19 Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD.

When ye eat, i. e. when you are about to eat it, for be- fore they did eat it, they were to offer this offering to God (of the bread, i. e. the bread-corn, as that word is used Job xxxiii 5; Psal civ 15; Isa xxviii 28. Unto the Lord i. e. to the priest of the Lord, as appears from Exod xlv 30.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering as ye do the heave offering of the threshing-floor, so shall ye heave it.

i. e. Of the corn in the threshing floor as Deut xvi 13 when you have gathered in your corn. So shall ye heave it i. e. you shall offer this in the same proportion, to the same persons, i. e. the priests, and with the same rites.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And if ye have erred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

To wit, those now spoken of, those which concern the outward worship and service of God, or the rites or ceremonies belonging to it. And herein principally this law may seem to differ from that Lev iv 13, which speaks of some positive misarrange, or doing that which ought not to have been done about the holy things of God, whereas this takes only of an omission of something which ought to have been done about holy ceremonies. But besides this that law, Lev iv. 13, concerns the whole congregation of Israel, as it is there expressed, but this concerns only the congregation, or a congregation, as it is here expressed, viz. 21 i. e. any particular congregation of Israelites, whether of a whole tribe meeting together by their representatives, or a lesser congregation, such as there were to be many in Canaan, and the words rendered all the congregation may be, <sup>1</sup> whosoever by some, here, rendered every congregation. And by virtue of this law, as some suppose, the Israelites newly after their deliverance from the captivity offered twelve bullocks, one for each tribe, Ezra viii 15.

23 Even all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward among your generations.

24 Then it shall be, if ought be committed by ignorances, without the knowledge of the congregation, that all the congregation shall offer one young bullock for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, with his meat offering, and his drink offering, according to the manner, and one kid of the goats for a sin offering.

In Lev. iv. the bullock is for a sin-offering, here it is for a burnt-offering, either because they are different laws, as hath been said, or because here is added a new penalty, to bring the greater caution and diligence in the Israelites, who had given many instances, and now a fresh and eminent instance of their heedlessness in observing the commands of God, and so, besides that bullock for a sin-offering, which he leaves to be gathered out of Lev iv 14, he now requires another bullock for a burnt-offering.

25 And the priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them, for it is ignorance, and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and then sin offering before the LORD, for then ignorance.

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them, seeing all the people were in ignorance.

27 ¶ And if any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she goat of the first year for a sin offering.

28 And the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him, and it shall be forgiven him.

29 Ye shall have one law for him that sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 ¶ But the soul that doeth ought presumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the LORD, and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

Ought, understand such things as ought not to be done, and things relating to the worship of God, presumptuously, i. e. with a high, or lifted up hand, i. e. knowingly wilfully, boldly, resolutely, deliberately designedly. So this phrase is elsewhere used, See Exod xiv 8, Lev xxi 21, Numb xxxiii 3, Job xv 26, Psal xix 13. Reproacheth the Lord, i. e. he sets God at defiance and exposeth him to contempt, as if he were unworthy of any regard and unable to punish transgressors.

31 Because he hath despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off, his iniquity shall be upon him.

The punishment shall be confined to himself, and not fall upon the congregation, as it will do, if they neglect to cut him off.

32 ¶ And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the sabbath day.

This seems to be added as an example of a presumptuous sin, for as the law of the sabbath was plain and positive, so this transgression of it must needs be a known and wilful sin.

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation

34 To the rulers of the congregation, who, as they represented and governed the congregation, are called by the name of the congregation

35 And they put him in ward, because it was not declared what should be done to him.

36 Moses and Aaron, and the seventy rulers last mentioned. What should be done to him? in what manner he was to be cut off, or by what kind of death he was to die, which therefore God here particularly determines, otherwise it was known in general that sabbath-breakers were to be put to death, from 1st Cor. xxi 14, xxv 2

37 And the Lord said unto Moses, The man shall be surely put to death all the congregation shall stone him with stones without the camp

38 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died, as the Lord commanded Moses

39 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses saying,

40 Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue

Fringes were certain threads or ends of their garments, standing out a little further than the rest of their garments, left there for this use. In the borders of the four borders or quarters as it is Deut. xxi 12. Heb. angels, which is oft used for borders or ends as Ruth ii 9. 1 Sam. xi 27, xxiv 5, &c. Of their garments, i.e. of their upper garment, or that wherewith they covered themselves, as is expressed Deut. xxi 12. This was practised by the Pharisees in Christ's time who were noted for making their borders larger than ordinary, Matt. xxiii 5, and by Christ himself as may gathered from Luke vii 11. A ribband to make it more obvious to the sight, and consequently more serviceable to the use here mentioned. Of blue, or, of a purple colour as the Jewish writers agree, whose opinion is the more considerable, because it was matter of constant practice among them

41 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the Lord, and do them: and that ye seek not after your own heart and your own eyes, after which ye use to go a whoring

It is the ribband shall be unto you, i.e. shall serve you for the fringe to wit, to render it more visible and notorious by its certain, and remarkable and distinct colour, whereas the fringe without this was of the same piece and colour with the garment, and therefore less observable. Or, it is the ribband shall be in your fringes, i.e. put to your fringes destined to them that by looking upon it you may remember that if your eye may affect your mind and heart. That ye seek not on, inquire not, for other rules or ways of serving me than I have prescribed you. After your own heart and your own eyes, i.e. neither after the devices and inventions of your own minds or hearts, as Nadab and Abihu did when they offered strange fire, and as you now did, when you pretended to serve and please me by going up the hill, and towards Canaan without and against my command, nor after the examples or inventions of others which your eyes see, as you did when you were set upon worshipping a calf after the manner of Egypt. To go a whoring, i.e. to depart from me, and to prefer your own fancies before my commands and to live only by present sight or sense, and not at all by faith in my promises 40 That ye may remember, and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God.

41 I am the Lord your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God. I am the Lord your God.

Though I am greatly displeased with you for your frequent and horrid rebellions, for which alas I will keep you forty years in the wilderness, yet I will not utterly cast you off, but will continue to be your God, to preserve and provide for you there; and after that time to bring you into Canaan

CHAP. XVI

Korah, Dathan, and Abiram raise sedition against Moses and Aaron, 1-3. Moses reproving them, 4-11. Sends for Dathan and Abiram, their refusal and answer, 12-14. The manner of their punishment, 15-35. Their mourning censures are kept for a memorial and warning, 36-40. The people murmur against Moses and Aaron, for which they are consumed by the plague, which Aaron, by Moses's order, stays, 41-50

NOW Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, and Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliazar, and On, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men

Korah the first and chief author of this rebellion, ver. 11, Jude 11. Izhar was Amram's brother, Exod. vi 18, therefore Moses and he were cousins-germans. Moreover Izhar was the second son of Kohath, whereas Eliazaphan, whom Moses had preferred before him, and made prince or ruler of the Kohathites, Num. iii 30, was the son of Izhar the fourth son of Kohath. Thus the Jewish writers say much him malcontent, which at last broke forth into sedition. Sons of Reuben these are drawn into conspiracy with Korah partly because they were his next neighbours both being encamped on the south side, and therefore could easily communicate counsels, partly in hopes to recover their rights of primogeniture, in which the priesthood was comprehended, which was given away from their father. Took men to wit, those two hundred and fifty mentioned ver. 2. In the Hebrew there is nothing but took, and the Hebrew words are placed and may well be rendered thus. Now Korah took both Dathan and Abiram, &c., or took Dathan, &c., the particle and being here superfluous, as it is Gen. viii 6, and elsewhere

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, famous in the congregation, men of renown

They, i.e. Korah, Dathan and Abiram, last mentioned rose up, i.e. conspired together, and put their seditious design in execution. Before Moses, not privily and obscurely, but openly and boldly, not fearing nor regarding the presence of Moses, who was an eye witness of their conspiracy. Famous, for place and birth.

3 And they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them, wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the Lord?

They, i.e. either Korah, and the two hundred and fifty princes, which may seem probable by comparing this with ver. 12, 25, 27, where we find Dathan and Abiram in another place, even in their tents, whither it is likely they were gone by consent to form and strengthen their party there, while Korah and the rest went to Moses. Or, Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, and the rest, who kept all together when Moses spoke those words, ver 5-7, but after that Dathan and Abram retired to their tents, and then Moses went for Korah and the Levites, who had more special and more colourable pretences to the priesthood, and treats with them apart, and speaks what is mentioned, ver. 8-11; and then having despatched them, he sends for Dathan and Abram, ver. 12, that he might reason the case with them also apart.

Against Aaron, to whom the priesthood was confined, and against Moses, both because this was done by his order, and because before Aaron's consecration Moses appropriated it to himself. For whatever they intended, they seem not now directly to strike at Moses for his supreme civil government, but only for his interest and influence in the disposal of the priesthood, as may appear by the whole context, and particularly by ver. 3, 10, 15, &c. Ye take too much upon you, by perpetuating the priesthood in yourselves and family, with the exclusion of all others from it. Are holy, a kingdom of priests, a holy nation as they are called, Exod. xix 6, a people separated to the service of God, and therefore no less fit to present themselves before God and to offer sacrifice and incense for themselves, than you are. The Lord is among them, by his tabernacle and cloud, the tokens of his special and gracious presence, and therefore ready to receive all their sacrifices and services from their own hands. Wherefore lift ye up yourselves, thou, Moses, by prescribing what laws thou pleasest about the priesthood, and confining it to thy brother and thou, Aaron, by usurping it as thy peculiar privilege?

4 And when Moses heard it, he fell upon his face

Humbly beseeching that God would direct him, and defend him, and vindicate him from this false and odious imputation. Numb xiv 5. Accordingly God answers his prayers, and inspires him with this following answer to Korah, and strengthens him with new courage, and confidence of good success.

5 And he spake unto Korah and unto all his company, saying, Even to-morrow the Lord will shew who are his, and who is holy, and will cause him to come near unto him even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him

To-morrow Heb in the morning, the time appointed by him for administering justice, Psal ci 8, Jer xxi 12, and chosen by God for that work, Psal lxxiii 11, Isa xlviii 11; Zeph iii 5. Some time is allowed, partly that Korah and his company might prepare themselves and their censers, and partly to give them space for consideration and repentance. And will cause him, or and whom he will cause to come near unto him, i.e. he will by some evident and miraculous token declare his approbation of him and his ministry.

6 This do, Take you censers, Korah, and all his company,

Since ye will be priests, take your censers, and act as priests, at your peril

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the Lord to-morrow and it shall be that the man whom the Lord doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take too much upon you, ye sons of Levi.

Both choose, i.e. declare his choice and appointment of them for that work

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi:

Consider what I say before it be too late, and repent of your great wickedness.

9 Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle of the Lord, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?

near to himself, nearer than the other tribes, though not so near as the priests. Into them, i.e. in their stead and for their good. So they were the servants both of God and of the church, which was a high dignity, though not sufficient for their ambitious minds.

10 And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: and seek ye the priesthood also?

These being at this time but very few priests, and the profits and privileges belonging to them being many and great, they thought it but fit and reasonable that they, or some of the chief of them, should be admitted to share in their work and advantages.

11 For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together against the Lord and what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?

Against the Lord, whose minister and chosen servant Aaron is. You strike at God through Aaron's sides. Compare 1 Sam vii 7, Luke x 16; John xiii 20.

12 ¶ And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abram, the sons of Eliab which said, We will not come up

Moses sent, to treat with them, and give them, as he had done Korah and his company, a timely admonition. Which said unto the messengers sent to them by Moses, We will not come up, to Moses's tabernacle, whether the people used to go up for judgment. Men are said in Scripture phrase to go up to places of judgment. See Deut xxi 7; Ruth ii 1. Ezra x 7, 8. But because they would not now go up, therefore they went down quick into the pit, ver 33.

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, to kill us in the wilderness, except thou make thyself altogether a prince over us?

Out of Egypt, a place indeed of great plenty, but to them a place of torment and intolerable slavery. They invidiously and scoffingly use the same words which God by Moses commended the land of Canaan.

14 Moreover thou hast not brought us into a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards wilt thou put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up

Of these men, i.e. of those who are confederate with us, and of all the people who are of our mind. Wilt thou make them blind, or persuade them that they are blind, and that they do not see what is visible to all that have eyes, to wit, that thou hast deceived them, and broken thy faith and promise given to them? or wilt thou lead them about like blind men whether thou please, one time towards Canaan, another time towards Egypt again? We will not come up, we will not obey thy summons, nor own thy authority.

15 And Moses was very wroth, and said unto the Lord, Respect not thou their offering. I have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them

Moses was very wroth, not so much for his own sake, for he had learnt to bear indignities, Numb xii, as for God's sake, who was highly dishonoured, blasphemed, and provoked by these speeches and carriages, in which case he ought to be angry, as Christ was, Mark iii 5. Respect not their offering, i.e. accept not their incense which they are now going to offer; but show some eminent dislike of it. He calls it their offering, though it was offered by Korah and his companions, because it was offered in the name and by the consent of all the conspirators for the decision of the present controversy between them and Moses. Not one ass, i.e. not any thing of the smallest value, as an ass was; (see 1 Sam xii 3) neither have I injured them, nor used my power to dishonour or oppress them, as I might have done, but, which is here implied, I have done them many good offices, but no hurt; therefore their crime is inexcusable, because without any cause or provocation on my part.

16 And Moses said unto Korah, "Be thou and all thy company 'before the Lord, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow

Not in the tabernacle, which was not capable of so many persons severally offering incense, but at the door of the tabernacle, ver 18, which place is oft said to be before the Lord, as 1 Rod xxix 12, Lev i 11, &c., where they might now lawfully offer it by Moses's direction upon this extraordinary occasion and necessity, because this work could not be done in that place which alone was allowed for the offering up of incense, not only for its smallness, but also because none but priests might enter to do this work. Here also the people who were to be instructed by this experiment, might see the proof and success of it.

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the Lord every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers, thou also, and Aaron each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

They could easily make censers in a light manner, which would suffice for the present purpose. The fire was taken from the altar which stood in that place, Lev i 3 5, for Aaron might not use other fire. Lev x 1. And it is likely the remembrance of the death of Nadab and Abihu deterred them from offering any strange fire.

19 And Korah gathered all the congregation against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the glory of the Lord appeared unto all the congregation.

Israh gathered the congregation that they might be witnesses of the event, and upon their success, which they doubted not of might fall upon Moses and Aaron with popular rage and destroy them. And it seems by this that the people were generally incensed against Moses and inclined to Korah's side. The glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud which then shone with greater brightness and majesty as a token of God's approach and presence. See 1 Rod xvi 7, 10, Lev ix 6, 23. Numb x 6.

20 And the Lord spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

21 "Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them in a moment.

To wit Korah and his two hundred and fifty men, and the people whom he gathered against Moses and Aaron, ver 19.

22 And they fell upon their faces, and said, O God, "the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

Of the spirits, i. e. of all the word spirit in Scripture is oft used, as 1 Rod xxvi 5. 1 Sam 3, Prov xvi 22, Eccl xii 7. Luke xxiii in Acts vi 59. And this is no empty tale here, but very emphatic and argumentative, thus, Thou art the Maker of spirits, Zech. xii 1, destroy not thy own workmanship. Isa lvi 8. O thou who art the Preserver of men, and of their spirits, the Lord of spirits, Job xii 10; who as thou mayest justly destroy this people, so thou canst preserve whom thou pleasest. The Father of spirits, Heb xii 9, O God mercifully with thy own children the Scatterer of seeds, thou canst distinguish between those who have maliciously raised this tumult and those whose ignorance and simple credulity hath made them a prey to crafty seducers. Of all flesh, i. e. of all mankind the word flesh is put for men, as Gen vi 12, Job xii 10; Isa. xl 5, 6, Ezek. xx. 48, xlii 3. One was to wit Korah, the ringleader of this sedition.

23 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

Speak unto the congregation, whom for your sakes I will spare upon the condition here following. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram; and On too, who is mentioned ver. 1, though some think he desisted and repented and therefore is not now mentioned.

25 And Moses rose up and went unto Dathan and Abiram, and the elders of Israel followed him.

Because they refused to come to him, he goes to them to their cost. The elders of Israel, the seventy rulers, whom he carried with him for the greater solemnity of the action, and for his own better vindication, because he lay under such calumnies and to encourage them in their work notwithstanding the obstinate and intractable nature of the people they were to govern.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

Show your dislike of them and their wicked ways by a speedy removal of your persons and tents from about them. Touch nothing of theirs, because they and all that was theirs was under a curse, and therefore not to be touched. See Deut xiii 16 17. In all their sins, lest being guilty of their sins, you perish together with them.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side and Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

Their tents were not far asunder being both on the south side of the tabernacle as appears from Numb ii 10 in 29. Stood in the door of their tents, an argument of their foolish confidence, pride and impudent obstinacy, and impetuosity whereby they declared that they neither feared God nor reverenced man, and made themselves ripe for the approaching judgment.

28 And Moses said, Hereby ye shall know that the Lord hath sent me to do all these works, for I have not done them of mine own mind.

All these works, to wit, which I have done, and for which I am traduced by these such like wicked men, as the bringing of the people out of Egypt; the conducting of them through, and the keeping of them so long in, the wilderness; the exercising of power and authority among and over them, giving of laws to them, as about other things, so concerning the priesthood, which is the ground of the present quarrel, and that which vexeth them most, that when they were upon the borders of Canaan, and ready to enter in, I should cause them to go back into this vast howling wilderness, and fix them there for forty years. Of mine own mind, by pretending or usurping an authority which God gave me not, by feigning words or messages from God to establish my own inventions, and to comply with my own will or lust or interest, as I am now accused to have done. For this phrase, see Numb. xxv. 13; 1 Rod xii 2.

29 If these men die the common death of all men, or if they be visited after the visitation of all men; then the Lord hath not sent me.

I. e. If these men die by a natural death, or by plague or sword, or some usual judgment, I am content that you take me for an impostor, falsely pretending to be sent of God. Thus he might well say, because he was inspired by God to say this, and infallibly assured by God that this should be done.

30 But if the Lord make a sign, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they go down quick into the pit, then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the Lord.

31 ¶ And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground cleave asunder that was under them:

32 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses; and all the men that appertained unto Korah, and all their goods.

33 And the family which were there, women, children, and servants; but his sons, who were spared, Numb xxi 11, 26, 1 Chron vi 22, 37, were absent, either upon some service of the tabernacle, or upon some other occasion, God so ordering it by his providence either because they disliked their father's act, or upon Moses's intercession for them, or for some other reason. This expression may seem to intimate that Korah himself was not here; but that he consumed with his two hundred and fifty men before the Lord, ver. 18, 19, where they were waiting for God's decision of the controversy, nor is it probable that their chief captain would desert them, and leave them standing there without a head, especially when Aaron, his great adversary abode there still, and did not go with Moses to Dathan, &c. ver. 25. And Korah may seem to have been consumed with those two hundred and fifty, ver. 35, though he be not mentioned there, but is easily understood by comparing that verse with ver. 10—18, and from the nature of the thing itself there being no cause of doubt but that destruction which befell the accessories did much more involve the principal. And so much is intimated ver. 40, that no stranger come near to offer incense before the Lord, that he be not as Korah and as his company, i.e. destroyed as they were, by fire from the Lord. And when the psalmist recites this history, Psal cxi, the earth's swallowing them up is confined to Dathan and Abiram ver. 17, and for all the rest of that conspiracy, it is added, ver. 18, and a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burnt up the wicked. As for Numb xxi 10, which seems to oppose this opinion we shall see more on that place, if God permit.

34 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

35 And there came out a fire from the Lord, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

36 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder, for they are hallowed.

38 ¶ And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

39 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

40 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

41 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

38 ¶ And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

39 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

40 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

41 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

42 And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, the cloud covered it, and the glory of the Lord appeared.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

44 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

45 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

46 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

47 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

14 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,
 15 ¶ Get you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them in a moment. And they fell upon their faces.

To beg pardon, and mercy for the people as they oft did, thus rendering good to them for evil which the people requited with evil for their kindness.

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the Lord, the plague is begun.

Put on incense, which was a sign of intercession, Psal. cxli. 2, and was to be accompanied with it Luke i. 9, 10. Go quickly unto the congregation with the incense, to stir up the people to repentance and prayer to prevent their utter ruin. This he might do upon this extraordinary occasion having God's command for his warrant, though ordinarily incense was to be offered only in the tabernacle. The plague is begun, in cutting off the people by a sudden and unprovoked stroke.

17 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation; and behold, the plague was begun among the people; and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

He ran into the midst of the congregation, hazarding his own life to obey God, and to do this wicked people good.

18 And he stood between the dead and the living, and the plague was stayed.

Whereby it may seem that this plague, like that of Noah's flood, began in the uttermost parts of the congregation, and proceeded, destroying one after another in a chain manner, which gave Aaron occasion and direction to place himself as a mediator to God on their behalf.

19 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred beside him that died about the matter of Korah.

20 And Aaron returned unto Moses unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; and the plague was stayed.

CHAP. XVII.

God confirming Aaron's calling by the budding and the blossoming of his rod. 1-9. Commandeth it to be laid up for a memorial and heretofore to be held. 10. The people's sin, testified thereby. 11-13. Moses for succour. 11-13.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod according to the house of their fathers, of all their princes according to the house of their fathers twelve rods; write thou every man's name upon his rod.

Spread unto the children of Israel, that I may fully and finally satisfy all the scruples, and take away all pretence and cause of murmuring. Of every one of them, not of every person but of every tribe, as it follows. A rod, either an ordinary walking staff, or rather that staff or rods which the princes carried in their hand as tokens of their dignity and authority, as may be gathered from Numb. xxi. 18, compared with Exod. xii. 13, Num. 16, 17. According to the house of their fathers, i.e. according to each family proceeding from the patriarch or father of that tribe. Every man's name, i.e. every prince's, for they being the first born, and the head of their tribes, might above all others pretend to the priesthood, if it was communicable to any of their tribes, and besides each prince represented and stood for all his tribe, so that this was a full decision of the whole question. And this plague seems to confirm what was before observed, that not only Korah and the Levites, but also those of other tribes, contested with Moses and Aaron about the priesthood, as that which belonged to all the congregation, they being all holy, as they said, Numb. xvi. 3.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

Aaron's rather than Levi's name, for that would have left the controversy undecided between Aaron and the other Levites, whereas this would justify the appropriation of the priesthood to Aaron's family. For the head of the house of their fathers, i.e. there shall be in this, as there is in all the other tribes, only one rod, and that for the head of their tribe who is Aaron in this tribe, where as it might have been expected that there should have been two rods, one for Aaron, and another for his competitors of the same tribe. But Aaron's name was sufficient to determine both the tribe and that branch or family of the tribe, to whom this dignity should be ascribed.

1 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation before the testimony, where I will meet with you.

Before the testimony, i.e. before the ark of the testimony, either immediately close by the veil behind which the ark stood, or rather immediately within the veil in the most holy place close by the ark as may be gathered by comparing this place with ver. 10 and with Heb. ix. 4. I will meet with you, and manifest my mind to you for the ending of this dispute.

5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod, whom I shall choose, shall blossom; and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel whereby they murmur against you.

6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece for each prince one according to their fathers' houses, even twelve rods; and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

Was laid up with the rest, being either one of the twelve, as the Hebrew affirm, or the thirteenth, as others think.

7 And Moses laid up the rods before the Lord in the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness, and behold the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was budded, and brought forth buds, and blossomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.

Into the tabernacle of witness, into the most holy place, which he might safely do under the protection of God's command, though otherwise none but the high priest might enter there, and that once in a year. Yielded almonds, this being as Josephus with great probability affirms, a staff of an almond tree, as the rest also were.

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the Lord unto all the children of Israel, and they looked, and took every man his rod.

10 ¶ And the Lord said unto Moses, Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token against the rebels; and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

For if after all these warnings and prohibitions, backed with such miracles and judgments, they shall usurp the priesthood, they shall assuredly die for it.

11 And Moses did so as the Lord commanded him, so did he.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

Words of consternation arising partly from the remembrance of these severe and repeated judgments; partly from the threatening of death upon any succeeding murmurings; partly from the consciousness of their own guilt and weakness, which made them fear lest they should relapse into the same miscarriage, and thereby bring the vengeance of God upon themselves.

13 Who soever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the Lord shall die shall we be consumed with dying?

Any thing near, i. e. nearer than he should do, an error which we may easily commit. Shall we be consumed? will God proceed with us in these severe courses, according to his strict justice? will he show us no mercy nor pity, till all the people be cut off and destroyed with dying one after another.

CHAP XVIII

God appointeth to Aaron, his sons, and the Levites their office, 1-21; appointeth to Aaron and his sons their maintenance, 2-21, and also to the Levites, 21-24. He commandeth them by Moses to give tithes of their tithes to the chief priests, 25-32.

14 AND the Lord said unto Aaron, Thou and thy sons and thy father's house with thee shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood.

The iniquity of the sanctuary i. e. shall suffer the punishment of all the usurpations or pollutions of the sanctuary or the holy things by the Levites or any of the people because you have authority and power from me to keep them all within their bounds, and I expect you use it to that end. Thus the people are in good measure secured against their fears expressed Numb xvi 13. Also they are informed that Aaron's high dignity was attended with great burdens having not only his own but the people's sins to answer for, and therefore they had no such reason to envy him as they might think, if the benefits and emoluments and dangers were equally considered. Of your priesthood i. e. of all the errors committed by yourselves or by you permitted in others in things belonging to your priesthood.

2 And thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be joined unto thee and minister unto thee but thou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

Minister unto thee about sacrifices and offerings and other things according to the rules and limits I have prescribed them. The Levites are said to minister to Aaron here, to the church, Numb xvi 9, and to God Deut x 9. They shall not contend with thee for superiority, as they have done, but they shall be subordinate and servants to thee. Thou and thy sons with thee, or, both to thee, and to thy sons with thee, which translation may seem to be favoured by the following words, before the tabernacle, which was the proper place where the Levites ministered, whereas the priests did minister to God both before and in the tabernacle. Besides, both the foregoing words, and the two following verses, do entirely speak of the ministry of the Levites, and the ministry of the priests is distinctly spoken of ver 3.

3 And they shall keep thy charge and the charge of all the tabernacle only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that neither they, nor ye also, die.

Thy charge, i. e. that which thou shalt command them and commit unto them. Of all the tabernacle, i. e. of the boards and hangings and utensils of the tabernacle, to take down, and carry them, and set them up again. The vessels, which therefore were to be covered by the priests before the Levites might meddle with them. They, nor ye, they for presuming to touch them, and you for your negligence in not covering them well, or not looking to them.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle and a stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And ye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar that there be no wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

Of the sanctuary i. e. of the holy, and of the most holy place. Upon the children of Israel, for coming too near the holy place, or for usurping any part of your sacred function or for any other mismanagement which they may be guilty of through your neglect or remissness, in which case they shall perish for their error, but their blood will I require at your hands, who should have advised them better, or overruled them.

6 And I, behold, I have taken you brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel to you they are given as a gift for the Lord, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

To the Lord i. e. for the service of the Lord to assist you therein, in the service and troublesome parts of it.

7 Therefore thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for every thing of the altar and within the veil, and ye shall serve. I have given your priest's office unto you as a service of gift and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

The altar to wit of burnt offering as upon the following words. With the veil. This phrase, which signifies the inward or inward veil, but here it signifies either the outward veil, or rather both the veils, the singular number being put for the plural as when the altar is put for both the altars as hath been noted, and in this phrase comprehends both the holy and the most holy place. As a service of gift as a gift which I have freely conferred upon you, and upon you alone, and therefore let no man hereafter dare either to charge you with arrogance and usurpation in appropriating this to yourselves, or to invade your office.

8 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Aaron, Behold, I also have given thee the charge of mine heave offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel, unto thee have I given them by reason of the anointing, and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever.

Unto thee have I given them, not only the charge of them, but the use of them for thyself and family, in such manner as I have elsewhere expressed. The anointing, to wit, to the priests, i. e. because thou art priest, and art to devote thyself wholly to my service which, that thou mayest perform more diligently and cheerfully, I give thee this recompense.

9 This shall be thine of the most holy things, reserved from the fire every oblation of them's, every meat offering of them's and every sin offering of them's, and every trespass offering of them's which they shall render unto me, shall be most holy for thee and for thy sons.

The most holy things, such as were to be eaten only by the priests, and that in the sanctuary. How these differ from the holy things, see on Lev vi 17 Reserved from the fire, i. e. such sacrifices or such parts of sacrifices as were not burnt in the fire. Every oblation, which may be understood either, 1 Of the wave-loaves, Lev xxiii 17, and the shew-bread, which were most holy things, Lev xxiii 20; xxiv 9 and which did belong to the priest, nor was there any other such oblation besides what is here particularly expressed, for the peace offerings were not most holy, and the burnt offerings were not the priest's. Or, 2 Of oblations in general, and so the following particulars are mentioned by way of explanation and restriction of that general word, to show what oblations are here meant; and to exclude peace offerings and burnt offerings. Which they shall render unto me by way of compensation for a trespass committed against me in which case a ram was to be offered, Lev vi 2-6 which was a most holy thing, and may be particularly designed here. Shall be most holy, thou shalt esteem it a most holy thing and shall use it accordingly in manner following. Or these are most holy and therefore shall be for thee, and for thy sons, to wit, exclusively none else may eat them.

10 In the most holy place shalt thou eat it, every male shall eat it it shall be holy unto thee

In the most holy place to wit in the court of the priests, where there were places for this use, see Lev vi 16-17, 20, vii 6, viii 31, xiv 13. Nch xiii 5-9, 1. Ezek xiii 13 which is called the most holy place, not simply and absolutely as the place within the veil was but in respect of the thing he speaks of because this was the most holy of all the places appointed for eating of holy things whereof some might be eaten in any clean place in the camp, Lev x 11, or in their own houses. And as the most holy place is sometimes called simply holy so it is not strange if a holy place be called most holy especially this place which was near to the altar of burnt offerings which is called most holy and made all that touched it holy. Exod xxix 37. And God would have these things eaten by them in a holy place in God's presence that they might be obliged to the greater caution and not to abuse God's good creatures and especially holy things to impropriety and that they might learn to eat this and then other food with the reluctance to God the giver of it and with respect to his service and glory, which was afterward prescribed to Christians 1 Cor x 31, 1 Tim iv 5. Every male and they only, whereas of peace offerings the females might eat them. Deut xiv 18.

11 And this is thine, the heave offering of their gift, with all the wave offerings of the children of Israel I have given them unto thee and to thy sons and to thy daughters with thee by a statute for ever every one that is clean in thy house shall eat of it.

The heave offering, i. e. the right shoulder which was the priest's. Of their gift, to wit of their peace offerings as may appear because here is an enumeration of all that belonged to the priest in the several oblations, and therefore it is no likely that he would omit the peace offerings, whereas the priest had a hand and the very share here spoken of and called a heave offering which was the right shoulder. Lev vii 32 which also might be eaten by the daughters. Lev vii 31 x 11 as is here said. See Numb vi 17, &c. The heave offering is to wit the breast of the peace-offerings which were waved, Lev vii 30, 31, 31. With thee, i. e. who are with thee in this house for if they were married to strangers they might not eat of them, Lev xiii 13. In thy house, i. e. as five members of thy house though they be be 1. e. for strangers and hired servants were excepted, Lev xxi 10-11.

12 All the best of the oil and all the best of the wine and of the wheat, the firstfruits of them which they shall offer unto the Lord, them have I given thee.

The best, Heb. the best of the best the fat of wheat is the best of it Deut xxviii 41. Psal lxxviii 16. xlviii 14. The firstfruits of them, i. e. what was which were offered in the name and behalf of the body of the people at the solemn feasts, Lev xxiii 10, 17, as those which were required of particular persons, Exod xxiii 29, xxiii 19; whereof the precise quantity is not determined, but left free to the giver, as an exercise for his piety and charity; only they are enjoined to give the first and the best of them.

13 And whatsoever is first ripe in the land, which they shall bring unto the Lord, shall be thine, every one that is clean in thine house shall eat of it.

i. e. Not only the first-fruits of the oil, and wine, and wheat now mentioned, but all other first-fruits of all other grains, and all fruit-trees, &c. Every one that is clean, and none else, because these were first offered to God, and by consequent given to the priests, but for those which were directly and immediately given to the priests, the clean and unclean might eat of them.

14 Every thing devoted in Israel shall be thine.

Dedicated to God by vow or otherwise, provided it be such a thing as might be eaten or consumed by one; for the vessels or treasures of gold and silver which were devoted or dedicated by Joshua David, or others, were not the priests' but were appropriated to the uses of the temple.

15 Every thing that openeth the matrix in all flesh, which they bring unto the Lord, whether it be of men or beasts, shall be thine nevertheless the firstborn of man shalt thou surely redeem, and the firstling of unclean beasts shalt thou redeem.

Whether it be of men, which were offered to God in his temple Exod xiii 12, Luke ii 22, and to his service and disposal.

16 And those that are to be redeemed from a month old shalt thou redeem, according to thine estimation, for the money of five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary which is twenty gatahs.

Those that are to be redeemed, to wit of men only, not of unclean beasts last mentioned, as is manifest from the time and price of redemption here mentioned, both which agree to men. The time Numb xxviii 16, the price, Numb iii 46-47 but neither agree to unclean beasts, which were to be redeemed with a shekel, Exod xiii 13, and that after it was eight days old. According to thine estimation, thus belongs either 1 To the foregoing clause, to this purpose that whereas women newly delivered of a child contained in their unclean state either a longer or shorter time, according to the quality of the birth as it was male or female. Lev xii 1-5 and the temper of the mother, the priest was to take that time when he judged the mother to be clean that so the mother might be purified and the child redeemed at the same time. Or rather, 2 To the following clause to wit the price which was to be paid, as appears by comparing this place with Lev xxvii 2, 3. And both there and here it is said to be done according to the priest's estimation though a certain rule be added to guide his estimation, and a certain price set, because the priest was to apply that general rule to each person, and to put that price upon him.

17 But the firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem, they are holy thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the Lord.

They are holy, to wit, in a peculiar manner, and higher degree than other beasts consecrated to a holy use, even to be sacrificed unto God, and not to be redeemed appropriated to any other use. Compare Deut xii 19.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the wave breast and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 <sup>a</sup> All the heave offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the Lord, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever. <sup>b</sup> It is a covenant of salt for ever before the Lord unto thee and to thy seed with thee.

Lev. 2. 13.
1. 10. 23. A.

A covenant of salt; i. e. a durable and perpetual covenant, so called here and 2 Chron. xiii. 5, either because salt is a sign of incorruption, as being of singular use to preserve things from corruption, or because it is confirmed and ratified on their part by salt, which is therefore called the salt of the covenant, for which the priests were obliged to take care that it should never be lacking from any meat offering, Lev. ii. 13. And this promise or privilege conferred upon the priests is called a covenant because it is given them conditionally, upon condition of their service and care about the worship of God, and sacrifices, which were commonly accompanied with meat-offerings, and therefore with salt.

Deut. 10. 15.

20 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them. <sup>a</sup> I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

Deut. 10. 15.
1. 10. 15. A.

In their land i. e. in the land of the children of Israel mentioned ver. 13. You shall not have a distinct and separate portion of land, as the other tribes shall. The reason of this law was, partly, because God would have them wholly devoted to and employed in his service, and therefore free from worldly incumbrances and businesses, partly, because God had abundantly provided for them otherwise by tithes and first fruits and oblations of all sorts, partly, because God would have their worldly comfort and happiness depend simply upon him and his service, and so would oblige them to use more zeal and diligence in the advancement of piety, even for their own interest, which was either better or worse as true religion flourished or decayed, see Judg. xvii. 9, 10. xix. 14, 2 Chron. xiii. 9, xxx. 22, xxxi. 4, partly, that this might be a firm bond of hearty love and affection between the people and their teachers the Levites, who, as they performed religious services for the people, so they received their subsistence from them, and partly, that by this means being dispersed among the several tribes, they might have the better opportunity for teaching and watching over the people, which was their duty, Deut. xxxiii. 10, 2 Chron. xxx. 22, Mal. ii. 1, 7. I am thy part i. e. I have appointed thee a liberal maintenance out of my oblations.

Lev. 4. 26.

21 And, behold, <sup>a</sup> I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, <sup>b</sup> even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

Lev. 10.
1. 10. 15. A.

For the tithes were all given to the Levites, and out of their tithes the tenth was given to the priests here ver. 26, see also Neh. x. 37, 38.

Lev. 10.

22 Neither must the children of Israel henceforth come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, lest they bear sin, <sup>a</sup> and die.

Lev. 10.

<sup>b</sup> So nigh as to do any act proper to the priests or Levites.

Lev. 10.

23 <sup>a</sup> But the Levites shall do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: <sup>b</sup> it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance.

Their iniquity, i. e. the punishment due not only for their own, but also for the people's mis carriage, if it be committed through their connivance or negligence. And this was the reason why the priests withstood king Uzziah, when he would have burnt incense to the Lord 2 Chron. xvi. 17, 18.

24 <sup>a</sup> But the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave offering unto the Lord, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, <sup>b</sup> Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

Lev. 10.
1. 10. 15. A.

As an heave-offering unto the Lord, i. e. as a rent charge or an acknowledgment that they have and hold all their lands, and the fruits of it, from God's bounty. Note that the word heave offering, which is for the most part understood of a particular kind of offerings heaved or lifted up to the Lord, is here used for any offering in general, as before, ver. 8.

25 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave offering of it for the Lord, <sup>a</sup> even a tenth part of the tithe.

Lev. 10.

27 <sup>a</sup> And this your heave offering shall be reckoned unto you, as though it were the corn of the threshingfloor, and as the fullness of the winepress.

It shall be accepted of you as much as if you offered it out of your own lands and labours.

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave offering unto the Lord of all your tithes, which ye receive of the children of Israel, and ye shall give thereof the Lord's heave offering to Aaron the priest.

And to his children which were one with him, and were all to have their share herein.

29 Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave offering of the Lord, of all the best thereof, <sup>a</sup> etc. the hallowed part thereof out of it.

Lev. 10.

Out of all your gifts, not only out of your tithes but out of the other gifts which you receive from the people, and out of those fields which shall belong to your cities. Ye shall offer to wit to the priest. Every heave-offering, i. e. many gifts, so many heave offerings, you shall receive out of each of them for the priest. The hallowed part thereof this may describe either, 1. The nature and proportion of this offering, and so peradventure he means the tenth part, which was the part or proportion that God hallowed or sanctified to himself as his proper portion both here and elsewhere, or, 2. The reason or ground of this offering, because it is a thing hallowed or appropriated by God to himself, and given by him to the priest, and because the payment of this due doth hallow all the rest, so as they may use it with comfort and good conscience, as it follows ver. 31, 32.

30 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the threshingfloor, and as the increase of the winepress.

31 And ye shall eat it in every place, ye and your households: for it is your reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation.

Lev. 10.

In every place, i. e. in every clean place and not in the holy place only.

32 And ye shall bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the

Lev. 10.

11:22 best of it: neither shall ye pollute the holy things of the children of Israel, lest ye die

The best of it, implying, that if they neglected this duty they sinned in the use of such unhallowed food. Neither shall ye pollute the holy things, as you will do if you abuse their holy offerings, by reserving that entirely to yourselves which they offer to God to be disposed as he hath appointed, to wit, part to you and part to the priests.

CHAP. XIX.

The manner of making the water of separation, and of what, 1-10. The use of it wherewith the unclean are to be purified 11-13. Laws concerning disposers of cleansing, 14-22.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 This is the ordinance of the law which the Lord hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a red heifer without spot whereon is no blemish, and upon which never came yoke

The ordinance of the law, or, the constitution of the law that which God hath ordained or established by law. That they bring thee, at their common choice, because it was for the common good. Red, a fit colour to shed forth both the bloody nature and complexion of sin, Lev. 1:18, and the human nature, and especially the blood of Christ, from which this water and all other rites had their purifying virtue. Whereon is no blemish, a fit type of Christ, who was such Heb. vii. 26. 1 Pet. i. 19. Upon which never came yoke, whereby may be signified either that Christ in himself was free from all the yokes or obligation of God's command, till for our sakes he took upon himself, and put himself under the law, or that Christ was not drawn or forced to undertake our burden and cross, but that he did voluntarily choose it. See John x. 17-18.

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face

Unto Eleazar, who was the second priest, and, in some cases, the vicegerent or deputy of the high priest. To him, not to Aaron, because this service made him unclean in a season Lev. 7: and consequently unfit for holy ministrations, where the high priest was as far as possibly he could to be preserved from all sorts of defilement and continually fit for his high and holy work. Without the camp, partly because it was reputed an unclean and accursed thing, being even commonly taken with the sins of all the people, and partly to signify that Christ should suffer without the camp, as he did, Heb. xiii. 12 in the place where malefactors suffered, Lev. xxiv. 14. One, a person appointed by Eleazar for this work.

4 And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and sprinkle of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times

Directly before the tabernacle or towards or over against the tabernacle, either 1. Near to it, and so we must suppose that he took some of the blood in a basin, and carried it thence without the camp to the tabernacle, and then returned to the place again, which might be done, though it be not here expressed. And this seems to agree best with other places, where this sprinkling seven times was performed in or near the tabernacle, as Lev. x. 17. Or, 2. Standing at a good distance from it even without the camp, and turning and looking back at it. For here is no intimation that he went into the camp before this work was done, but rather the contrary is implied. And because being defiled by this work he could not come near to the tabernacle, it was sufficient for him to turn and look towards it. Either way this posture signified his presenting of this blood before the Lord by way of atonement and satisfaction for his and the people's sins, and his expectation of acceptance and pardon only from God, and from his mercy-seat in the tabernacle.

5 And one shall burn the heifer in his sight, her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn

To signify the sharp and grievous sufferings of Christ for our sins. Her blood, all of it but what was spent in sprinkling.

6 And the priest shall take cedar wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer

All which are here burnt, and as it were offered to God, that they might be sanctified to this holy use for the future, for of these kinds of things was the sprinkle made wherewith the unclean were sprinkled, Lev. xiv. 4.

7 Then the priest shall wash his clothes, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even

Partly to teach us the imperfection of the Levitical priesthood in which the priest himself was defiled by some part of his work, and the absolute necessity of a better and holier priesthood, and partly to show that Christ himself, though he had no sin of his own, yet was reputed by men and judged by God, as an unclean and sinful person, by reason of our sins, which were laid upon him, Isa. liii. 12, 2 Cor. v. 21.

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even

9 And a man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and lay them up without the camp in a clean place, and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel for a water of separation: it is a purification for sin

For the congregation of the children of Israel, i. e. for their use, and therefore in a fit place or places, whence any of them might easily procure it. For a water, or to the water, i. e. to be put to the water, or mixed with it. Of separation, i. e. appointed for the cleansing of them that are in a state of separation, who for their uncleanness are separated from the congregation. Either the heifer thus managed, or the water thus made and sprinkled is a purification for sin, Heb. x. 22, i. e. a kind of an offering for sin, or rather a mean for the expiation or cleansing of sin. The name of sin is sometimes given to the punishment of sin, and sometimes to the sacrifice or offering for sin.

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even, and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever

The stranger that sojourneth, to wit, a proselyte, not an stranger, as some understand it. For since it is confessed that all the other ceremonial laws do not oblige them, and that where the name of stranger is put, as here it is, it generally speaks of a proselyte, it is more reasonable to take it so here than without any reason or evidence to make this particular exception from the general rule.

11 ¶ He that toucheth the dead body of any man shall be unclean seven days

Whereas the touch of a dead beast made a man unclean only till even, Lev. xi. 24.

12 He shall purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

With it, i. e. with the water of separation On the third day, to typify Christ's resurrection on that day, by which we are cleansed of sin. On the seventh day he shall be clean, to teach us that our purification is this life is gradual, and not perfect till we come to that eternal Sabbath, which the seventh day respected. He shall not be clean, but was first to purify himself, and four days after that to be clean.

13 Whosoever toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, defileth the tabernacle of the Lord, and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him.

Whosoever toucheth, to wit, if this transgression be done presumptuously, for if it was done ignorantly he was only to offer sacrifice Lev. x 3, 6, 17. Defileth the tabernacle of the Lord, by approaching to it in his uncleanness, for holy things or places were ceremonially defiled with the touch of any unclean person or thing. See Lev. xv 31. And he shall be unclean, because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he continues in his guilt and filth, not new to be washed away by this water, but to be punished by cutting off.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent, all that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days.

15 And every open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

Every open vessel, because it receives the use of the tent by which it is ceremonially polluted. Compare Lev. xi 32, 33.

16 And whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

With a word, or by any other violent way.

17 And for an unclean person they shall take of the fishes of the burnt heater of purification for sin, and running water shall be put thereto in a vessel.

Running water, i. e. water flowing from a spring, or river, which is the purest. The command signifies God's Spirit which is oft compared to water. John vi 34, 39. And by which alone true purification is obtained. In a vessel, where they were to be mixed, and then the water was to be strained out and kept for this use.

18 And a clean person shall take hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave.

A clean person, to wit a priest, for to such the work of cleansing was appropriated. See Lev. xxi. Upon all the vessels, even those which were in part purified by the fire. See Num. xxxi. 23.

19 And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day: and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut off from among the congregation, because he hath defiled the sanctuary of the Lord: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him, he is unclean.

21 And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that he that sprinkled the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even.

Shall wash his clothes, because he is unclean as it here follows. It is strange that the same water should cleanse one person, and defile another, but God would have it so, partly, to teach us that it did not cleanse by any virtue in itself or in the work done, but only by virtue of God's appointment; partly, to mind the Jews of the imperfection of their priesthood, and their ritual purifications and expiations, and consequently of the necessity of a better priest and sacrifice and way of purifying, which these outward rites did point at; and partly, to show, that the efficacy of God's ordinances doth not depend upon the person or quality of his minister, because the same person who was polluted himself could and did cleanse others. He that toucheth the water of separation, either by sprinkling of it, or by being sprinkled with it, for even he that was cleansed by it, was not fully cleansed as soon as he was sprinkled, but only at the even of that day, as is said here and above, ver. 19.

22 And whatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean, and the soul that toucheth it shall be unclean until even.

The unclean person, not he who is so only by touching the water of separation, ver. 21, but he who is so by the greater sort of uncleanness, which lasted seven days, of which ver. 11, 16, and which was not removed without the use of this water of purification, as is manifest from the context and other places of scripture, and from the nature of the thing for the lesser sort of uncleanness, mentioned in the foregoing verse, lasted only till even, and was cleansed by the sole washing of his clothes, and then in water, ver. 7, without any use of this water of purification, which if it had been necessary, must have been used on the third and on the seventh day, according to the rule, ver. 19, and so the uncleanness of one day had been made an uncleanness of seven days, which is a tradition. Besides, it is unreasonable that he who immediately touched the defiling thing, should be made no longer unclean than he who touched that person only, and it was contrary to other rules in like cases, as Lev. xi, where the man or woman having an issue, not thereby made unclean for seven days, ver. 13, 25, but if he who toucheth them is made unclean only till even, ver. 7, 27. And therefore this cannot be meant of him who was unclean by touching this water, who himself was unclean only till even, ver. 21, as also he who toucheth him is in this place. Shall be unclean, to signify to us the very infectious nature of sin and of sinful company. Until even, because as his defilement was less, so it was fit the duration of it should be shorter.

CHAP. XX.

The people journey in the wilderness of Zin, they murmur against Moses for want of water, 2—5. God commandeth Moses to speak to the rock, that it might yield water, 7, 8. Moses striking the rock twice, 9—11, displeaseth God, 12. Moses desiring passage through Edom, 14—17, is denied, 18—21. Aaron by God's command delivering up his office to Eleazar his son, death, 21—28. All the congregation between him, 29.

1 Then came the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin in the first month, and the people abode in Kadesh; and Miriam died there, and was buried there.

Then, to wit, after many other stations and long journeys here omitted but particularly described Num. xxxiii. The desert of Zin, a place near the land of Edom, distinct and distant from that Num. i 40, xvi 1. In the first month, to wit, of the fortieth year, as is evident, because the next station to this was in Mount Hor, where Aaron died, ver. 22, 23, &c., who died in the fifth month of the fortieth year, Numb xxxiii, 38. Moses doth not give us an exact journal of all their occurrences in the wilderness, but only of those which were most remarkable, and especially of those which happened in the first and second, and in the fortieth year. Kadesh, whether the same place called Kadesh-barnea, where they were long since Numb. xiii, 26, and to which they now return after thirty-eight years' tedious travels and wanderings in the desert, Deut. ii, 14, or another place more southerly, it is not material. Miriam died four months before Aaron, and but a few more before Moses.

2 <sup>Ex 17, 1</sup> And there was no water for the congregation, and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.

The water having followed them through all their former journey, began now to fail them here, because they were now come near Canaan and other countries, where waters might be had by ordinary means, and therefore God would not use extraordinary, lest he should seem to prostitute the honour of miracles. This story, though like that Exod. xvii, is different from it, as appears by divers circumstances.

3 And the people chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died when our brethren died before the Lord!

4 Suddenly, rather than to die such a lingering and painful death. Their sin was much greater than their parents in like case, because they should have taken warning by their miscarriages, and by the terrible effects of them, which their eyes had seen.

5 And why have ye brought up the congregation of the Lord into this wilderness, that we and our cattle should die there?

6 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? there is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates: neither is there any water to drink.

7 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they fell upon their faces, and the glory of the Lord appeared unto them.

Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly, partly to avoid the rowning of the people for God's sinning a protection of them did not exclude the use of ordinary means, and partly to go to God for relief and redress.

8 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes, and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock, so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

The rod, that rod, which was laid up before the Lord in the tabernacle, as appears from ver. 9. But whether it was Aaron's rod, which was miraculously laid up there Numb. xvi, 10, or Moses's rod, which he wrought so many miracles, it is not considered. For whether it was not one and the same rod, which is commonly called Moses's rod as here, ver. 11 and elsewhere, and sometimes Aaron's rod, as Exod. vii, 12, which is in most most likely. For it is likely, though not related, where in Scripture, that wonder-working rod, called the rod of God, Exod. iv, 20, was laid up in some part of the tabernacle, though not in or near the ark, where Aaron's blossoming rod for a pattern of reason was put, Speak ye unto the rock, which will sooner hear and obey thy commands than these foolish and stubborn people.

9 And Moses took the rod from before the Lord, as he commanded him.

10 Out of the tabernacle.

11 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them, Hear now, ye rebels, must we fetch you water out of this rock?

12 And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

To the men it was a sacrament, 1 Cor. x, 3, 4, but to the beasts it was no holy, but a common thing. So that the elements in the sacraments have no inherent and inseparable holiness, but only a relative holiness with respect to their use, out of which they are unholy and common.

13 And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

Ye believed me not, but showed your infidelity, which they did either by their looks and gestures, or rather by the utter and manner of their expressions and actions, either 1 By smiting the rock, and that twice, which is emphatically noted as if he doubted whether once smiting would have done it, whereas he was not commanded to smite so much as to speak to it, or, 2 By the doubtfulfulness of the words, ver. 10, Must we fetch water out of the rock? which implies a suspicion of it, as the like words do Gen. xviii, 13, where as they should have spoken positively and confidently to the rock to give forth waters. And yet they did not doubt of the power of God, but of his will whether he would gratify these rebels with this further miracle after so many of the like kind. And besides the words themselves, it is considerably, both with what mind they were spoken, which God saw to be distrustful and in what manner they were delivered, which the people might discern to come from mischief or doubt. And there might be divers other undelivered words used by them at this time and place, though they be not here recorded, it being usual in Scripture to give only the sum or principal heads of discourses or events, leaving the rest to be gathered out of them. See Psal. cxi, 32, 33. To sanctify me, to give me glory of my power in doing this miracle, and of my truth in punctually fulfilling my promise so to do, and of my goodness in doing it notwithstanding the people's perverseness. In the eyes of the children of Israel, thus made their sin scandalous to the Israelites, who of themselves were too prone to infidelity, and little needed such an example, to prevent the contagion whereof God has a monument of his great displeasure upon them, and inflicts a punishment as public and manifest as their sin was.

14 This is the water of Meribah, because the children of Israel strove with the Lord, and he was sanctified in them.

Meribah, called Meribah Kadesh, to distinguish it from another Meribah, Exod. xvii, 7. Sanctified in them, or, among them, to wit, the children of Israel last mentioned, by the demonstration of his omnipotency, veracity, and clemency towards the Israelites, and of his impartial holiness and severity against sin even in his greatest friends and favourites, as Moses was.

15 And Moses sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath befallen us.

Moses sent messengers, by God's direction, Deut. ii, 1-3.

They were not Edom (who is Edom, Gen. xxvi. 1) Edom is Edom 1:2 All the Edomites; all the Edomites of our parents, and of us their children, which doubtless have come to thine ears.

15 How our fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers

16 And when we cried unto the Lord, he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt, and behold, we are in Kadesh, a city in the uttermost of thy border

An angel, to wit, the Angel of the covenant, Christ Jesus, who first appeared to Moses in the bush, Exod. iii. 2, and afterward in the cloudy pillar, who conducted Moses and the people out of Egypt, and through the wilderness, as appears from Exod. xiv. 19, xxiii. 20, xxxiii. 11, 1 Cor. x. 4. For though Moses may be called an angel or messenger, a title given to Phineas, Judg. ii. 1, and to the prophets, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16, and to Haggai, Hag. i. 13, yet it is not probable that he is meant, partly, because Moses was the person that sent this message, partly, because there was no reason why he should express himself by such a dark and doubtful title to them, and partly, because another Angel besides and above Moses did conduct them, and the mention hereof to the Edomites was likely to give more authority and efficacy to their present message. In Kadesh, i. e. near the city Kadesh, the pasture in being so used, as we have showed

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, through thy country, we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's high way, we will not turn to the right hand, nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders

It is, or puts, which any of you have digged for your private use, to wit, without paying for it, ver. 19. Deut. ii. 15, but only of the waters of common rivers, which are free to all passengers, and will not be prejudicial to them

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword

19 Through my country, as thou desirest, I will not suffer thee to do so, which was an act of common policy, to secure themselves from so numerous a host

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, We will go by the high way, and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay for it: I will only, without doing any thing else, go through on my feet

Children of Israel said unto him, i. e. their messengers, replied unto them what here follows: I will pay for it, for water was a scarce commodity in those parts

20 And he said, Thou shalt not go through. And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand

21 Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border, wherefore Israel turned away from him

Through his border, but permitted them to go by their border, Deut. ii. 4, 8, Judg. xi. 18, and furnished them with victuals for their money, Deut. ii. 29. Israel turned away, according to God's command, Deut. ii. 5

22 And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, and came unto mount Hor

Whose inhabitants were then called Horims, Deut. ii. 12, and Edom the Horite, Gen. xxxii. 20

23 And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying,

24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the water of Meribah

This was one, but not the only reason. God would not have Moses and Aaron to carry the people into Canaan, for this reason also, to signify the insufficiency of the Mosaic and Aaronical priesthood to make them happy and the necessity of a better, and so to keep the Israelites from resting in them so as to be taken off from their expectation of Christ, and from the enjoyment of him when he should come

25 Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son, and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there

Of his garments, to wit, of his priestly garments, Exod. xxviii. 2, Lev. viii. 7-9, in token of his resignation of his office. See the like Isa. xlii. 15, 19-21. Put them upon Eleazar, by way of admission and immutation of him to his office

27 And Moses did as the Lord commanded, and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation

That their hearts might be more affected with the loss of so great a pillar, and that they all might be witnesses of the translation of the priesthood from Aaron to Eleazar, and therefore might give him the honour due to him

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son, and Aaron died there in the top of the mount, and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount

Aaron died there to wit in Mount Hor. Object, 1. He died in Mount Hor, Deut. x. 6. In Mount Hor was the moral name of the place where his translation was, and Mount Hor is a particular place in which he died, and was buried also. Deut. x. 6

29 And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel

1. When the congregation understood by the relation of Moses and Eleazar, and by other signs. So seeing is used in xlii. 1, Acts vii. 12. Thirty days, the time of public and solemn mourning for great persons. See Deut. xxxiv. 8

CHAP. XXI

The Canaanites fight against Israel, and take some of them prisoners, 1. Through God's assistance they overcome them, as if destroy their cities, 2, 3. The people murmur, 4, 5, are plagued with fiery serpents, 6. Thou serpent, 7. A brazen serpent erected, to which they look, and are healed, 8, 9. They journey, 10-16. Their hymn for water given at Mar, 17. They sue for passage to the Amorites, are denied, fight them, overcome, and dwell in their cities, 18-25. Proverbial saying concerning it, 27-30. Of king of Bashan, his sons, and all his people, are killed by the Israelites, and their land possessed by them, 33-35

AND when king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came by the way of the spurs, then he fought against Israel, and took some of them prisoners

King Arad the Canaanite, or rather the Canaanite king of Arad, for Arad is not the name of a man, but of a city or territory, as may seem from Josh. xv. 11, Judg. i. 16, if at least this was the same place with that Arad he seems to be called a Canaanite in a general sense, as the Amorites and others sometimes are. In the south to wit, of Canaan, as appears from Numb xxiii 10, towards the east and near the Dead Sea. By the way of the spies, not of those spies which Moses sent to spy the land Numb xiii 17 for that was done thirty years before this and they went so privately, that the Canaanites took no notice of them nor knew which way they came or went, but of the spies which he himself sent out to observe the marches and motions of the Israelites. But the words may be otherwise rendered either that in the manner of spies so the sense is, when he had taken divers of the Israelites came into or towards his country in the nature of spies to prepare the way for the rest or thus by the way of Atharim, a place so called in the seventy interpreters here take it, and it seems not improbable. Let some of them prisoners, which God permitted for Israel's humiliation and punishment, and to teach them not to expect the conquest of that land from their own wisdom or valor, but wholly from God's favour and assistance. See Deut ix 1 Ps l xlv 3 1

2 And Israel vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then I will utterly destroy their cities.

Being sensible of their own weakness, they endeavored to engage God to help them in the war, which they intended to renew. I will utterly destroy their cities, I will reserve no part on any thing for my own use, but devote them all to total destruction which was the consequence of such vows. Lev xxv 29, Deut xiii 15.

3 And the Lord hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites, and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place Hormah.

I utterly destroyed them when? Isaiah either 1 Some time after this, under Joshua who subdued among others the King of Canaan. Josh xii 11. And so this is now and hence by interpretation, that the vow being now made and mentioned the effect or performance of it might be recorded though out of its place, and so this verse must be supposed to be added by some of the prophet and inserted into Moses's history, or some other passage seem to be. Ch 2 At this time and so this is not the time And with that Josh xii 11 not this the time Hormah with that there is mentioned but neither of the same name which is not frequent in places and places in Scripture. And thus the more probable reason that Arah and Hormah, Josh xii 11 are two distinct places, and had divers Judges, where is both the same place called both Arah and Hormah, and because that Arah certainly at some good time, but it is not within the country and not more, or this is not my better. From the other places joined with Josh xii where the Arah was near Ed in ver 1, and in the south ver 1. Quest 1 How could this be done in the land of Canaan when Moses neither entered himself nor led the people into that land? Ans Neither Moses nor the whole body of the people did this exploit but select number sent out for the purpose to punish that king and people who were so fierce and malicious that they came out of the power country to fight with the Israelites in the wilderness, and those when they had done this work, returned to their brethren into the wilderness. Quest 2 Why did they not now go into Canaan, when some of them had entered and pursue this victory? Ans Because God would not permit it there being several ways yet to be done other people must be conquered, the Israelites must be further fortified and tried and purified, Moses must die and the people's deliverance and that in a mere glorious manner, even over a land which shall be miraculously dried up and give the message.

4 And they journeyed from mount Hor by the way of the Red Sea to Comor. pass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much discouraged because of the way.

By the way of the Red Sea which is the way to the Red Sea, as they must needs do to compass the land of Edom. Because of the way; by reason of this journey, which was long, and troublesome, and preposterous, for they were now going towards Egypt, and unexpected, either because they doubted not but their brethren the Edomites would grant them their reasonable request of passing through their land, which disappointment made it worse; or because the successful entrance and victorious progress which some of them had made in the borders of Canaan, made them think they might have speedily gone in and taken possession of it, and so have saved their tedious travels and further difficulties, into which Moses had again brought them.

5 And the people spake against God, saying, Wherefore have we brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water, and our soul loatheth this light bread.

Against God, against Christ, their chief Conductor, whom they tempted, 1 Cor x 9. This light bread, 1 c of all substance and virtue. Thus contemptuously do they speak of manna, where as it appears it yielded excellent nourishment because in the strength of it they were able to go so many and such tedious journeys.

6 And the Lord sent fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people, and much people of Israel died.

Such there were many in this wilderness, Deut xvi 15, which having been hitherto restrained by God are now let loose and sent among them. They are called fiery serpents for their effects, because the person caused an intolerable heat, and burning, and thirst in the bodies of the Israelites which was aggravated with this circumstance of the place, that here was no water, ver 5.

7 ¶ Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned, for we have spoken against the Lord, and against thee, pray unto the Lord that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the Lord said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

A fiery serpent is the figure of a serpent in brass, which is of a fiery colour. This would require some time, God would not speedily take off the judgment because he saw they were not thoroughly humbled. Set it upon a pole that the people might see it from all parts of the camp, and therefore the pole must be high, and the serpent large.

This method of cure was prescribed, partly that it might appear to be God's own work, and not the effect of nature or art, and partly that it might be an eminent type of our salvation by Christ. See John iii 14, 15. The serpent signified Christ, who was in the likeness of sinful flesh Rom viii 3, though without sin, as this brazen serpent had the outward shape, but not the inward poison of the other serpents: the pole resembled the cross upon which Christ was lifted up for our salvation, and, looking up to it designed our believing in Christ.

9 And Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole, and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

He was delivered from death, and cured of his disease. 10 ¶ And the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in Obboth.

Not immediately, but after two other stations, mentioned Numb xxxiii.

11 And they journeyed from Obboth, and pitched at Ije-abarim, in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sunrising.

Moab is called the wilderness of Moab, Deut ii 8.

Deut. 2, 12. 12 ¶ From thence they removed, and pitched in the valley of Zared.

Or rather, by the torrent or brook of Zared, as we render it, Deut ii 14; which ran into the Dead Sea, and from which the valley also might be so called.

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coast of the Amorites for Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

On the other side of Arnon, or rather, on this side of Arnon, for so it now was to the Israelites, who had not yet passed over it, as appears from Deut ii 21. But the same words, Judg xi 18 are to be rendered on the other side of Arnon, for so it was to Jephthah, and the same preposition signifies on this side, or beyond, according to the circumstances of the place. Between Moab and the Amorites, i.e. though formerly it and the land beyond it belonged to Moab yet afterwards it had been taken from them by Sihon ver 26. 28 This is added to reconcile two seemingly contrary commands of God the one that of not meddling with the land of the Moabites, Deut ii 9 the other that of going over Arnon and taking possession of the land beyond it, Deut ii 24 because, saith he, it is not now the land of the Moabites, but of the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the book of the wars of the Lord, ¶ What he did in the Red sea, and in the brooks of Arnon.

The book of the wars of the Lord seems to have been some poem or narration of the wars and victories of the Lord, either by or relating to the Israelites, which may be asserted without any prejudice to the integrity of the Holy Scriptures because this book doth not appear to have been written by a prophet or to be designed for a part of the canon but by some other ingenious person who intended only to write an historical relation of these matters, which St Paul might quote, as St Paul doth some of the heathen poets. And as St Luke assures us that many did write a history of the things done and said by Christ Luke i 1, whose writings were never received as canonical the like may be justly conceived concerning this and some few other books mentioned in the Old Testament though the words may be thus rendered ¶ Therefore it shall be said in the relation or narration (for so the Hebrew phrase is construed to signify) of the wars of the Lord. In the Red Sea, or, at Tahab in Suphah, or in the land of Suph. Tahab seems to be the name not of a man but of a city or place, and Suphah the name of the country where it was, and the Hebrew participle is oft rendered at. And when it is so used seems to be imperfect, it must be noted that he quotes only a fragment or piece of the book and that principally to prove the situation of Arnon which he had asserted ver 13, for which end the passage quoted is sufficient. And the sense is easily to be understood, for it is plain enough that this poet or writer is describing the war and works of God by the several places where they were done, and having begun the sentence before and mentioned other places, he comes to these here mentioned at Tahab in Suphah, and at the brooks of Arnon, &c. And it is very probable that the war here designed was that of Sihon against the Moabites, mentioned below ver 21 which is fitly ascribed to the Lord because it was undertaken and perfected by the singular direction and assistance of God, and that for the sake of the Israelites, that by this means that country might be invaded and possessed by them, without taking it away from the Moabites, which they were forbidden to meddle with or to disturb, Deut ii 9, and so their title to it might be more just and unquestionable. See Judg xi 12, 13, 27 In the brooks of Arnon, i.e. the brook, the plural number for the singular, as the plural number rivers is used concerning Jordan, Psal lxxviii 1, and concerning Tigris, Nah ii 6, and concerning Euphrates, Psal cxxxviii 1, and concerning the river in Virgil, all which may be so called because of the several little streams into which they were divided.

15 And at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and Beth upon the border of Moab.

Ar, a chief city in Moab, as appears from Isa xvi 1, of which ver. 28.

16 And from thence they went to Beer that is the well where of the Lord spake unto Moses, Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

Beer and Mattanah, Nahahel, and Bamoth named here, ver 19, are not mentioned among those places where they pitched or encamped, Numb xxxiii. Either therefore they did not pitch or encamp in these places, but only pass by or through them, nor indeed as it here said they pitched or encamped in these places, which is said of those places, Numb xxxiii but only that they went to them, ver 18, or, these are stations omitted there, and to be supplied from hence for though it be there said they went from such a place and pitched in such a place, yet it is not said they went immediately from the one place to the other and therefore they might take these places in their way. Will give them water to wit, in a miraculous manner.

17 ¶ Then Israel sang this song, ¶ Spring up, O well, ¶ sing ye unto it.

Israel sang this song, to praise God for giving them such a reasonable blessing, before they asked it or complained for the want of it. Spring up, give forth thy waters that we may drink. Heb. Ascend, i.e. let thy waters which now lie hid below in the earth, ascend for thy use. It is either a prediction that it should spring up or a prayer that it might or a command in the name of God directed to the well by a usual phrase popular, as when God bids the heavens hear, and the earth give ear, Isa i 2. Any of these ways it shows their faith. Sing ye unto it, or, sing ye of it or answer to it or concerning it. It being the manner of the Jewish singers that one should answer to another of which see 1 Sam xxi 21. 1 Sam xxvii 7.

18 The princes digged the well, the nobles of the people digged it, by the direction of the Lord, with their staves. And from the wilderness they went to Mattanah.

The princes digged, i.e. by themselves, or by others whom they commanded to do it. By the direction of the Lord, i.e. on, with the favour, i.e. Moses they together with Moses or they by Moses direction and appointment which is signified ver 16. Then staves are here mentioned either 1. As the ensigns of their authority, Judg, v 11 by which they gave this command of digging. 2. As the instruments of their work, not that they did formally and effectually dig the well or receptacle for the water, for which spade were more proper than staves but that as Moses smote the rock with his rod, so they struck the earth with their staves making only some small impression for the sake or as a sign that God would cause the water to flow forth out of the earth where they smote it, as he did before out of the rock.

See the notes on ver 16.

20 And from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the country of Moab, to the top of Pisgah, which looketh toward Jerusalem.

In the valley, or, the valley, which might be called Bamoth, not because it was a place naturally high, but from divers other reasons, which may be easily guessed. Or, to the valley, or to that valley, that famous or rather infamous valley, to wit, of Abel shittim, Numb xxxiii 49, where they committed those foul abominations recorded Numb xxxi. Pisgah was the top of those high hills of Abarim, of which see Deut iii 17, 27, xxxv 49, xxxviii 1, 6.

21 ¶ And Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

By God's allowance, that so Sihon's nation might be the more evident and inexcusable and that their title to his country more clear in the judgments of all men is being gotten by a just war, into which they were forced for their own defence

ch 20 12

22 Let me pass through thy land we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards, we will not drink of the waters of the well but we will go along by the king's high way until we be past thy borders

They spake when they rashly intended and would have done, if he had given them quiet passage, but withal they knew that Sihon would not do it and that he would withstand them and that they should smite him and take his land, a God had told them before he sent this message, as appears in Deut ii 21 26 27 and accordingly God hardened his spirit and made his heart obstinate for this end, that he might deliver him into Israel's hand there ver 30 And no wonder for he and his people were Amorites and therefore devoted to destruction as all that people were

23 And Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border but Sihon gathered all his people together and went out against Israel into the wilderness and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel

24 And Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon for the border of the children of Ammon was strong

From Arnon, on which reached from Arnon &c such supplement but very small and so here continued a description or limitation of Sihon's conquest and kingdom that it extended only from Arnon unto the children of Ammon, and then the following word for the border of the children of Ammon was strong come in very fitly not a reason why the Israelite did not or could not conquer the Ammonites for this were absolutely forbidden to meddle with them, Deut iii 8 but is a reason why Sihon could not endure his conquest and empire to the Ammonites as he had done to the Moabites Jabbok, a river by which the countries of Ammon and Moab were in part bounded and divided It was strong either by the advantage of the river or by their strong holds in their frontier

25 And Israel took all these cities and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites in Heshbon, and in all the villages thereof

Having destroyed the ancient inhabitants Deut ii 31

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon

The city of Sihon this is added as a reason why Israel took possession of the land notwithstanding God's prohibition of meddling with them or their land Deut ii 9 because it was not now the land of the Moabites but had been some time since taken from them and in the possession of the Amorites The former king of Moab is the predecessor of Balak who was the present king

27 Wherefore they that speak in proverbs say Come into Heshbon let the city of Sihon be built and prepared

That good men's words be as other ingenious persons, to wit, of the Ammonites and Moabites who made this following song of triumph to the conquest of Moabites, which is here brought in as a proof that this was now Sihon's land and partly as an evidence of the just judgment of God in punishing the speakers in building those who insulted over their conquered enemies Come into Heshbon these are the words either of Sihon speaking thus to his people or of the people exulting one another in come and possess and repair the city which they had taken. The city of Sihon, that which once was the royal city of the king of Moab, but now is the city of Sihon

28 For there is a fire gone out of Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon it hath consumed Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon

A fire is the fury of war, which is oft and fitly compared to fire here as Jer xlviii 14, Amos i 7, 10, 12, 14; ii 2 5 Heshbon, that city which before was a refuge and defence to all the country, now is turned into a great annoyance and a public mischief Ar of Moab, Quere How can this be since it was yet in the hands of the Moabites Deut ii 9 14 29? Answer 1. This may be understood not of the city but of the people or the country subject or belonging to that great and royal city, as the Chaldee understands it 2 Possibly it was taken by Sihon of the Moabites, but afterwards was either recovered by the Moabites or upon the Israelites' approach quitted by Sihon, uniting all his forces together that he might fight with the Israelites and so repossessed by the Moabites 3 This place may be thus rendered, It shall consume Ar of Moab, the past tense being put for the future, as is usual in prophetic passages, and so this may be the Amorites' prediction or promise that having taken Heshbon and its territories they should now extend their victories to Ar of Moab though they fell short of that hope, as ordinarily men do The lords of the high places, either 1 The princes or governors of the strong holds, which were frequently in high places especially in that mountainous country, and which were in divers parts all along the river of Arnon and having taken some of these, they promised to themselves that they should take all the rest, and so proceed further and further till they had taken it itself Or rather 2 The priests and people that worshipped their god in their high places, which may seem more probable, 1 Because as the Israelites worshipped God, so the heathens worshipped Baal in high places Numb xxii 11 and particularly the Moabites are noted for so doing, Jer xlviii 3 2 Because among the eminent places of Moab there is mention of Bamoth baal or of the high places of Baal Jer xlviii 17

29 Woe to thee, Moab! thou art undone, O people of Chemosh he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorites

Alas, poor Moab! thou couldst not save thyself from Sihon's sword People of Chemosh is the worshippers of Chemosh so the god of the Moabites was called 1 Kings xi 7 33 2 Kings xxiii 13, Jer xlviii 46 He is their god hath delivered up his own people to the hands of their enemies he could not defend them, but suffered many of them to be killed, nor could he secure even those that had escaped the sword but suffered them to fall into their enemies' hands and by them to be carried into captivity Unto Sihon king of the Amorites Now the words of this and the following verse seem to be not a part of the triumphant song or poem made, as I suppose by some Amoriteish bard or poet which seems to be concluded ver 28, but of the Israelites making their observation upon it And here they scoff at the impotency not only of the Moabites, but of their god also, who could not save his people from the sword of Sihon and the Amorites

Though you feeble Moabites and your god too, could not resist Sihon, we Israelites by the help of our God have shot, to wit, with success and victory as the following word show, at them, to wit, at Sihon and his Amorites which is easily and plainly understood both from the foregoing and following words Heshbon the royal city of Sihon and by him lately repaired, is perished, is taken away from Sihon, and so is all his territory or country even as far as Dibon which some think, is called Dibon-gad, Numb xxxiii 15 Heshbon reached unto Medeba, i. e. where the which extended to Moab. Or, yea <sup>1</sup> even to Moab, for the Hebrew word asher is sometimes used for yea, or wherever, as 1 Sam. x 20, Psal. x 6, xvi 11. The whole country of Sihon, taken by him from the Amorites, was wasted and perished.

31 ¶ Thus Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moabs sent to spy out <sup>1</sup> Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

Jaazer, one of the cities of Moab, formerly taken from him by Sihon and now taken from him by the Israelites, Numb xxv 1, 3, 35, and after the decay or destruction of the kingdom of the ten tribes, repossessed by the Moabites, Jer xliii 32.

33 ¶ And they turned and went up by the way of Bashan and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he, and all his people, to the battle at Edrei.

Og also was a king of the Amorites of whom see Deut ii 1, 11. And it may seem that Sihon and Og were his leaders or captains of two great colonies which came out of Canaan, and drove out the former inhabitants of these places. Bashan, a rich country, famous for its pastures and breed of cattle, Deut xxxi 11, Psal. xlii 12. Jer 19, and for its oaks, Ezek xxxv 6.

34 And the Lord said unto Moses, Fear him not for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people and his land, and thou shalt do to him as thou dost unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

Fear him not, a necessary caution, for he was a great giant Deut ii 11, likely to strike them with terror.

35 So they smote him and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive and they possessed his land.

CHAP XXII

The Israelites pitch in the plains of Moab. Balak the king sends for Balaam to curse Israel. He inquires of the Lord who forbids him to go. He goes not. Balak sends again. The Lord permits Balaam to go. An angel stands in the way, which has eyes for eyes. His eyes are at length opened to see the angel and rebukes him 22-33. He confesses his fault and offers to go back, he is commanded to go on and speak as should be revealed to him 31-35. Balak comes to meet him, receives him, and converses with him, he declares he has no power but to speak the word which God should put into his mouth 36-41.

AND the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab on this side Jordan by Jericho.

The plains of Moab still retained their ancient title though they had been taken away from the Moabites by Sihon, and from him by the Israelites. By Jericho, i. e. near Jericho, or near the passage over Jordan to Jericho, or its territories.

2 ¶ And Balak the son of Zippor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

Balak, the son or successor of him whom Sihon had expelled of part of his kingdom, Numb xvi 26. Of him see Judg xi 25, Micah vi 5.

3 And Moab was sore afraid of the people, because there were many and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

As it was foretold both in general of all nations Deut ii 25, and particularly concerning Moab, Exod vi 13.

1 And Moab said unto the elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

The elders of Midian, called the kings of Midian, Numb xxxi 8, and princes of Midian, Josh xii 21, who though divided into their kingdoms, yet were now united upon the approach of the Israelites their common enemy, and being, as it seems a potent and crafty people and neighbours to the Moabites, these seek confederacy with them. We read of Midianites near Mount Sinai, Exod ii, iii, which seem to have been a part or colony of this people that went out to seek new quarters in the manner of those times was but the body of that people were scattered in those parts as is evident from many scriptures. I cut up the corn and utterly destroy in which sense the fire is said to cut up the water and sacrifices, 1 Kings, xviii 38. The meaning is we can expect no mercy from them, they will utterly root us out as they did the Amorites. If we do not make a stout and timely opposition. All that are round about us, i. e. all our people, who lived in the country and territory adjoining to each city, where the princes resided.

5 He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beer to Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt behold they cover the face of the earth, and they abide over against me.

Balaam is called a prophet, 2 Pet ii 16 because God was pleased to inspire and direct him to speak the following prophecy as he did inspire Amos to speak those words. John xi 51, 52, and as sometimes he did for a time inspire other wicked men, but in truth he was a soothsayer, as he is called, Josh xii 22. See Numb xxiv 1. He, or Balaam 2 Pet ii 15 for he had two names, many others had. Pethor, a city in Mesopotamia on the river Euphrates, which is called the river by way of eminency is Gen. xv 15. Josh xiv 2, 15, and here the river of Balaam's land or country, i. e. of Mesopotamia or Aram Numb xii 7. They abide over against me, they are encamped in my neighbourhood, ready to invade my kingdom.

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people, for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.

Curse me this people, i. e. curse them for my sake and benefit, use thy utmost power, which thou hast with thy gods or infernal spirits, to blast and ruin them. That we may smite them, that by thy magical imprecations, and I by my sword joined with thine. He had some experience of, or at least, a great confidence in, Balaam's skill and power in these matters.

7 And the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with the rewards of divination in their hand, and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

With the rewards of divination, Heb. with divinations, which he understands not the instruments of divination, which it was needless and absurd to bring to so eminent a person who doubtless was thoroughly furnished in his own trade but the rewards of it, as it is expressed 2 Pet ii 15. It is in the Hebrew 2 Sam. iv 10 and tidings is put for the reward of good tidings. No man could expect to prevail with such a person, especially being noted for his covetousness, as appears from the story, without that powerful engine, 18 And he said unto them, 'Lodge here this night, and I will bring you word again, as the Lord shall speak unto me, and the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

The night was the time when God used to reveal his mind by dreams. Here is the first discovery of his wickedness that he takes time to consider and doth his endeavour to effect that wicked motion of cursing the Israelites, which he should have rejected and abhorred at the first mention of it. Is the Lord shut speak, Heb. Jehovah, the true God, whom he here mentions either for his own greater reputation, as if he consulted not with inferior spirits, as other soothsayers did but with the supreme God, or rather because this was Israel's God and the only possible way of running the way by engaging them God, as first then as the known way of the Romans and other heathens, when they went to besiege any city, they used enchantments, to all forth that god under whose peculiar protection they were. The princes of Moab, and of Midian too, as is in ver 19 and ver 20, which was needful to repeat here.

19 And God came unto Balaam, and said, What men are these with thee?

God came unto Balaam not to gratify his covetous desire, but to advance his own honour and service even by the counsel of his enemies. He asketh not for his own information, but partly that Balaam by revealing the truth in fact's presence might be convinced and hindered in his mind folly in offering his service in such a cursed business, and partly for a foundation to the following answer.

20 And Balaam said unto God, Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me saying, 21 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt which covereth the face of the earth, come now curse me then, peradventure I shall be able to overcome them, and drive them out.

22 And God said unto Balaam, Thou shalt not go with them, thou shalt not curse the people, for they are blessed.

God reveals his mind to Balaam, not for any love to him but for the sake of his people concerned in it, as he did to Pharaoh Gen. 25, and to Nebuchadnezzar Dan. 4. They are blessed by my inevitable decree and sentence, and therefore it is vain for men to curse them.

23 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land, for the Lord refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

He reveals the principal things to wit, the reason of God's prohibition which he had given a stop to their further course, and counsels in this matter and secretly intimates his own good will and readiness to comply with them, if God had otherwise ordered them.

24 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.

Thus they lay the blame upon Balaam which he imputed to God.

25 And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than the first.

26 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, Let nothing hinder thee from coming unto me.

No counsel nor suggestion of the wicked Balaam.

27 For I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou shalt say unto me. Therefore, I pray thee, come with me.

Before he wrought upon his covetousness, now upon his ambition.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do less or more.

You desire and expect that from me which is out of my power, to resist the will of the great God. He is by inclination, that he wanted not will, but power only. The Lord my God, so he calls him, partly, to magnify himself as the servant of the great Jehovah, partly that by professing this respect unto God he might the sooner induce him to grant his desire, and partly, because he worshipped the true God, together with idols, as many in those times and places did.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the Lord will say unto me more.

Possibly he may change his mind, or yield to any renewed suit. Thus he sought to make God and his conscience stoop to the service of his pride and covetousness, which was abominable.

20 And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them, but yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

As with them since this is thy great desire and purpose as far as thou canst take thy course, I will, according to thy wish withdraw my restraint, and leave thee to thyself and thy own choice. Compare Psal. lxxxi. 11. 12. That shalt thou do, these words signify not so much his duty as the event and his disappointment. Thou shalt not do what thou dost to wit, curse my people, and so much and advance thyself, but I will overcome thy mind, and make thee to say that thou shalt speak nothing but what is contrary to thy desire and interest, and therefore though I permit thee to go, thou shalt lose thy design in it.

22 And God's anger was kindled because he went, and the angel of the Lord stood in the way for an adversary against him. Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.

God's anger was kindled, either 1 Because he went of his own accord with the princes of Moab, and did not wait till they came to call him, or 2 urged him to go, which was the sign and condition of God's permission, ver 20, but rather him self rose and called them as it may seem from ver 21. Or, 2 Because those words, ver 20, did contain no approbation nor licence, but a bare permission, and that in anger as Balaam might easily have understood if he had considered his own heart, or the circumstances of his conversation. This was no more an approbation than that passage of Christ to Judas, John xiii. 27, That thou doest do quod vis. Or, 3 Because he went with ill design and design to do contrary to what God had charged him, to wit, to curse the people, as plainly appears from the following story and from Deut. xxxii. 5, for God hath been often justly angry with those who have done what God bade them, when they did it in evil manner or for evil ends as appears from Isa. x. 6, 7 and many other places. The Lord stood in the way to oppose and testify, it not to kill him. The two servants were with him, the rest of the company being probably gone before then. For in those ancient times there was more of simplicity, and less of ceremony, and therefore it is not strange that Balaam came at some distance after the rest, and attended only by his own servants.

23 And the ass saw the angel of the Lord standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand, and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field: and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

Balaam saw not the angel because God withheld his eyes, as he did the eyes of Daniel's companions Dan 2 7. It is a truth, which more philosophers own, that when God withdraws his concurrence or help from any of his creatures, they cannot perform their natural acts and offices, the eye cannot see, as Gen. xiv, nor the ear hear, nor the fire burn, as Dan. iii.

24 And the angel of the Lord stood in a path of the vineyard, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side.

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the Lord, she thrust herself unto the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall, and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the Lord went further, and stood in a narrow place, where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the ass saw the angel of the Lord, she fell down under Balaam, and Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the Lord opened the mouth of the ass, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

Le The Lord conferred upon these the power of speech and reasoning for that time. Impudent are those heathens that disbelieve and scoff at the Scripture for this and some such relations contained in it, when there are examples of the same kind of prodigies, to wit, of oxen and other brute creatures speaking some few words, in the greatest and most approved writers of the Roman history, as Plutarch Polybus, Livy, and others. See the particulars in my Latin Synopsis on this place.

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me, I would there were a sword in mine hand, for now would I kill thee.

Balaam is not much terrified with the ass speaking, because he was much accustomed to converse with evil spirits, which did appear to him and discourt with him in the shape of such creatures.

30 And the ass said unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, upon which thou hast ridden ever since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay.

31 Then the Lord opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the Lord standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand, and he bowed down his head, and fell flat on his face.

In token of reverence and submission.

32 And the angel of the Lord said unto him, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out to withstand thee, because thy way is perverse before me.

However thou mayest deceive thyself or others, I see the perverseness of thy heart and way, the wickedness of thy design and desires in this journey, which thou hast undertaken, not to please me, but to gratify Balak, and, if it be possible, to curse my people.

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times, unless she had turned from me, surely now also I had slain thee, and saved her alive.

I had slain thee alone, and not her, and therefore her turning aside and falling down was wholly for thy sake and benefit, not for her own, and thy anger against her was unjust and unreasonable.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the Lord, I have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me. Now therefore, if it displease thee, I will get me back again.

A frivolous supposition, for it was apparently displeasing to God, who had now said that his way was perverse, and had therefore opposed him and sought to slay him, but hereby he shows how loth he was to go back and lose the hopes he had conceived, and besides he speaks of dissenting from the outward action, but shows no sense of the perverseness of his heart, his vile affections, which were the root of this ill designed journey.

35 And the angel of the Lord said unto Balaam, Go with the men, but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

Go with the men this may be either, 1 A mere permission, since neither the convictions of his own conscience, nor the experience of the danger, have warned thee from thy base designs and inclinations, I shall no further restrain thee: my angel shall give thee no more disturbance, go on and prosper. Or, 2 A concession. I allow thee to go upon the following terms, for the words here are more absolute and unconditional than those ver 20. That thou shalt speak these words may express either, 1 The event, or, 2 His duty. See above on ver 20.

36 And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, he went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, which is in the border of Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

That by this great honour he might give him a taste and earnest of those great rewards he designed him, and thereby oblige him to use his utmost skill and interest for him. The utmost coast, not far from the camp of the Israelites, whom he desired him to curse.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore comest thou not unto me? am I not able indeed to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee, have I now any power at all to say any thing? the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

Any thing to wit agreeable to thy expectation or my own inclination. That shall I speak, I am forced to do so by his superior power, and therefore he not offended with me if I speak things displeasing to thee.

39 And Balaam went with Balak, and they came unto Kirjath-huzoth.

40 And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

Or killed, either for sacrifice, or rather for a feast, for the sacrifices were offered after this Num 22 12. Sent to Balaam, to invite him to the feast. The king had left the princes to accompany him and attend upon him.

41 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the high places of Baal, that thence he might see the utmost part of the people.

The high places of Baal, i.e. consecrated to the worship of Baal, i.e. of Baal pen, who was then Baal or god Num 22 2, 3, or of Chemosh. The utmost part of the people, i.e. all that people, even to the utmost and remotest of them, as appears by comparing this with Numb xxiii 13. He hoped that the sight of such a numerous host ready to break in upon his country would stir up his passion and further his charms.

CHAP XXIII

Balak and Balaam sacrifice. God meets him, and he blesses Israel, 1-10. Balak is troubled, they go to another place to curse them, they sacrifice again. Balaam consults God, who meets him, and he again blesses Israel, 11-24. They go to a third place, and sacrifice again, 27-30.

AND Balaam said unto Balak, <sup>a</sup> Build me here seven altars and prepare me here seven oxen and seven rams.

The altars were either 1. To Baal in whose high places this was done, and to whom alone Balak used to sacrifice. Or rather 2. To the true God, otherwise he would not have mentioned it to God as an instrument which he should grant his requests as he doth ver. 1. And though Balak was averse from God and his worship, yet he would be easily overruled by Balaam, who doubtless told him that it was in vain to make an address to any other than the God of Israel who alone was able either to bless or curse them, as he pleases 1. And therefore when Balaam lost his design this way, he tried it another way with greater success, but still used the same method in provoking their own God to destroy them, as he doth Numb xvi. But though he direct his sacrifices to a right object, he chooseth a wrong place, and, to comply with Balak's desire, makes use of the high places of Baal for this end and mingle his own superstition with the worship of God in erecting divers altars according to the manner of heathen and idolaters, 2 Kings xiii 22. Isa xvi 8, Jer xlvi 15. Hos viii 11, xlii 11, where is God appointed and holy men called but one altar though many sacrifices were to be offered upon it. Gen xiii 20. Exod xviii 15. xxiv 1. Seven was the solemn and usual number in sacrifice, 1 Chron xvi 26. 2 Chron xxix 21, Job xlii 8.

2 And Balak did as Balaam had spoken, and Balak and Balaam offered on every altar a bullock and a ram.

Balak by procuring them and Balaam by offering them, though in ancient times kings were priests also, and so might perform a priestly work as this was.

3 And Balaam said unto Balak, Stand by thy burnt offering, and I will go, peradventure the Lord will come to meet me, and whatsoever he sheweth me I will tell thee. And he went to an high place.

By the burnt offering as in God's presence is one that offers thy duty as well as thy sacrifices to obtain his favour. I will go to some solitary and convenient place where I may by my continual prayer prevail with God to appear to me and to answer my and my desires in cursing this people. Whatsoever he sheweth me reveals to me, either by word or deed. I will place me into the plain as that word properly signifies, but he was now in a high place, Numb xxi 11. But this is not material, it was doubtless some solitary place where he might use some gestures and ceremonies which he would not have others see and where he might conceivably expect to meet with God, for both good and evil spirits are commonly applied to persons in such places.

4 And God met Balaam, and he said unto him, I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

God met Balaam, not to comply with Balaam's charms, nor to gratify, but to oppose his wicked desires and to force him against his own inclination and interest to utter the following words. A bullock and a ram which I pray thee accept, and give me leave to curse thy people, as thou abundantly wickedly deserve.

5 And the Lord put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

He suggested what he should say, even those words, ver. 8-10.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt sacrifice, he, and all the princes of Moab.

7 And he took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, Come, curse me Jacob, and come, defy Israel.

He took up to wit, into his mouth, he expressed or spoke his parable, i. e. his oracular and prophetic speech, which he calls a parable, because of the weightiness of the matter, and the majesty and smartness of the expressions which is usual in parables. From Aram, from Aram, Nabunaim, or Mesopotamia, Deut. xxxii 1. See Gen x 22. Aram lay towards the mountains of the east, the east was famous for charmers or soothsayers, Isa ii 6. Jacob, the posterity of Jacob, i. e. Israel, as it here follows.

8 How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the Lord hath not defied?

God hath not cursed, but blessed Israel, and therefore it is a vain and ridiculous attempt for me to curse them in spite of God.

9 For from the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him: lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

From the top of the rocks, upon which I now stand, I see the people according to thy desire, chap xxii 41, but I cannot improve but send him to the end for which thou didst send him to wit, to curse them. This people are of a distinct kind from others, God's peculiar people, separated from all other nations, as in their laws, so also in Divine protection, and therefore my enchantments cannot have the power against them which they have against other persons and people. See Exod xix 5, Lev xx 21, 26.

10 Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!

The dust of Jacob is the numberless people of Jacob or Israel who, according to God's promise, Gen xlii 16, xxviii 14, are now become as the dust of the earth. Of the fourth part of Israel i. e. of out of the camps of Israel for they were divided into four camps. Numb ii which Balaam from this height could easily discover, much less can any man number all their host. Of the righteous i. e. of this righteous and holy people the Israelites, called 1. shayim Deut xxxii 15, which word signifies upright or righteous. The sense is, they are not only happy above other nations in this life, as I have said, and therefore in vain should I curse them, but they have this peculiar privilege that they are happy after death, their happiness begins where the happiness of other people ends, and therefore I heartily wish that my soul may have its portion with theirs when I die. But it is a vain wish for as he would not live as God's people did, so he did by the sword, as others of God's enemies did, Numb xxi 4. Josh xiii 22. My last end, i. e. my death, as the word is used. Or my posterity, as this Hebrew word signifies. Psal cix 13; Dan xi 4, Amos iv 2. And as the covenant and blessing of God given to Abraham did reach to his posterity, so this might not be unknown to Balaam which might give him occasion for this wish. Or my reward, as the word is taken Prov xxii 19, xxiv 20. But the first sense seems the most true, because it agrees best with the usage of Scripture to repeat the same thing in other words, and thus includes the third sense, to wit the reward, which is here supposed to follow death for posterity, if doth not appear that he had any, or, if he had, that he was so very solicitous for them; or that he knew the tenor of God's covenant with Abraham and his posterity. Nay, he rather seems to have had some hopes of ruining Abraham's posterity, which he attempted both here and afterwards.

11 And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? I took thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

12 And he answered and said, Must I not take heed to speak that which the Lord hath put in my mouth?

I speak not these words by my own choice, but by the constraint of a higher power, which I cannot resist.

13 And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see but the utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all, and curse me them from thence.

He thought the sight of the people necessary both to excite Balaam's passions, and to strengthen and direct his conjurations; but he would now have him see but a part of the people, and not all because the sight of all of them might dismay and discourage him, and as it did before, raise his fancy to an admiration of the multitude and of the felicity of the people, ver. 9, 10.

14 ¶ And he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of Pisgah, and built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

Zophim, a place so called from the spies and watches which were kept there. Pisgah, a high hill in the land of Moab, so called Deut. iii. 27, xxxiv. 1.

15 And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt offering, while I meet the LORD yonder.

To consult him, and to receive an answer from him, if peradventure those renewed sacrifices will melt him into some compliance with our desire.

16 And the Lord met Balaam, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.

See above on ver. 4, and Numb. xxii. 33.

17 And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his burnt offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken?

18 And he took up his parable, and said, Rise up, Balak, and hear, hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor.

Rise up this word implies either, 1. The reverence wherewith he should hear and receive God's message, as Eglon did, Judg. iii. 20, which might have been probable, if Balak had been now sitting, as I had there was, but he was standing, ver. 15. or rather, 2. The diligent attention required, Rouse up thyself, and carefully heed what I say.

19 ¶ God is not a man, that he should he, neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

That he should he, i. e. break his faith and promises made to his people for their preservation and benediction. That he should repent, i. e. change his counsel on purposes which men do, either because they are not able to execute them, or because they are better informed and their minds changed by some unexpected accident or by their fears and passions, none of which have place in God. And therefore I plainly see that all our endeavours and repeated sacrifices are to no purpose, and can make no impression on God, nor induce him to curse those whom he hath purposed, and solemnly and frequently promised, to bless. Shall he not do it? is he like a man that oft speaks and promises what he either never intends, or cannot or will not perform?

20 Behold, I have received commandment to bless, and he hath blessed, and I cannot reverse it.

Or, I have received a blessing to wit a watchword of blessing, which God hath put into my mind and mouth, and which I cannot forbear to utter. Heb. I have received to bless. The infinitive put for the noun, as is frequent.

21 He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel: the LORD his God is with him, and the shout of a king is among them.

He is first understood ver. 20, and expressed ver. 19. hath not or doth not behold iniquity or perverseness, i. e. any sin, in Jacob or Israel, which cannot be meant of a simple seeing or knowing of him for so God did see and observe yea, and chastise their sins, as is manifest 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. Deut. ix. 13. but of such a sight of their sins as would provoke God utterly to forsake and curse and destroy them which was Balak's desire, and Balaam's hope and design. For as Balaam knew that none but Israel's God could curse or destroy Israel, so he knew that nothing but the sin could move him so to do, and therefore he took a right though wicked course afterwards to tempt them to sin and thereby to expose them to ruin, Numb. xxi. And Balaam had now hoped that God was incensed against Israel for their sin and therefore would be prevailed with to give them up to the curse and spoil. But, saith he, I was mistaken. I see God hath a singular favour to this people and though he sees and punisheth sin in other persons and people with utter destruction, as he hath now done in Sihon and Og and the Amorites, yet he will not do so with Israel, he winketh at their sins, forgets and forgives them and will not punish them as their iniquities deserve. In this sense God is said not to see sins elsewhere he is said to forget them, Isa. xlii. 25, Jer. xxxi. 34 and to cover them, Psal. cxxxv. 1 which keeps them out of sight and so out of mind, and to blot them out Psal. li. 1, 9 and to cast them behind his back, Isa. xxxviii. 17 or into the depth of the sea, Mic. vi. 19, in which case they come to be seen not read. A sin which we oft said not to know, i. e. see those sins in their children or others which they do not take notice of so as to punish them. And this sense he agrees with the context, God hath decreed and promised to bless this people and he hath blessed them and I cannot reverse it, ver. 20, and he will not reverse it, though provoked to do so by their sins, which he will take no notice of. Others thus. He hath not beheld, is hitherto he hath not so far for the future he will not behold, i. e. so as to approve it as that word is oft used is Gen. viii. 1, Isa. lxxv. 2, Hab. i. 13 or so as to utter it, injury against Jacob, &c. For again, here rendered iniquity, is oft used in that sense, as Job v. 6, 7, Prov. xi. 21, xxii. 8. And the other word amal, rendered perverseness, oft notes vexation and trouble, as Job v. 6, 7, Psal. xlv. 17, xxxvi. 4, and the participle behi, rendered in it oft used for against, as Exod. xiv. 25, xx. 16, Numb. xxi. 1. So the sense is, God will not see anything wrong or framed by any of their adversaries, whereof the following words may be a good reason, for God is with him &c. The Lord has God on with him, i. e. he hath a favour for this people, and will defend and save them. So the phrase of God's being with a person or people signifies as Jude vi. 13, Psal. xlii. 7, Isa. xlii. 10. The shout of a king is among them, i. e. such joyful and triumphant shouts as those where with a people congratulate the approach and presence of their king when he appears among them upon some solemn occasion, or when he returns home with victory and spoils. The expression implies God's being their King and Ruler, and their abundant security and confidence in him as such. And here is an allusion to the silver trumpets which were made by God's command and used upon great solemnities, in which God then is always present in a special manner, Numb. x. 9, Josh. i. 10, 20. 1 Sam. iii. 5, 2 Chron. xiii. 12.

*God brought them out of Egypt, to wit, by a strong hand, and in spite of all the enmities, and therefore it is in vain to seek of hope to overcome them. He, either 1. God first mentioned. But to the comparison is man and unbecoming. Or rather 2. Israel, whom God brought out of Egypt; such children of blemishes being very common in the Hebrew language. The sense is Israel is not now what he was in Egypt upon whom we depicted painted people but high, and strong and terrible. The great strength and therefore of a unicorn is contained in Scripture, Numb xxiv 8, Deut xxxiv 17. 1. 9. xxv 9. Psal xxi 21, xxi 10. But I thought a unicorn or a rhinoceros or a strong and fierce and evil foot, which is here called reem, it is not so useful here to determine.*

23 See here there is no enchantment against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel according to this time it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel. What hath God wrought?

I find by experience and serious consideration that all mine and thine endeavours to enchant Israel are in vain being frustrated by their omnipotent God. I can do thee no service by my art against them. According to this time, not only in succeeding times and ages of which he speaks chap xxiv 17, &c. but even now in this time and age, and so forward. What hath God wrought? i. e. how wonderful and glorious in those works which God is now about to do for Israel by drying up Jordan by abiding the Canaanites, &c. These things will be matter of discourse and admiration to all ages.

24 Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion. He shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

As a lion noweth up himself to lie down, so will the people, as shall Israel, lie up themselves to warlike attempt against all their enemies. Therefore will others lie. He shall not lie down until he eat of the prey from his lion, and put him.

25 And Balak and unto Balaam, Neither curse them if all nor bless them at all.

26 But Balaam answered and said unto Balak, Told not I thee, saying, All that the Lord speaketh that I must do?

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, Come I pray thee I will bring thee unto another place, peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me abominably thence.

28 And Balak brought Balaam unto the top of Peor that looketh toward Jerusalem.

Peor which place called Bal peor Deut iii 29 i. e. the house of the pe of Peor Peors, there they worshipped Baal peor.

29 And Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven stables and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams.

30 And Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

CHAP XXIV

Balaam lays such his eyes on the Spirit of God, as he sees upon him, as he sees the Spirit of God, and sees the Spirit of the Lord, i. e. the Spirit of Israel's presence. 10-11. He prophesies of Israel's future, his power. 10-11. He prophesies of the Messias the King and of the destruction of the nations. 15-24. He returns to his place, and Balak goes his way.

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the Lord to bless Israel, he went not, as at other times, to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.

To seek for enchantments, i. e. to use enchantments which he is said to have done, either because when he consulted and sacrificed to God, he did also use enchantments and consult with the devil, that if one would not the other might help him; or because he consulted God in a magical and superstitious way by using such postures or instruments or forms of words as enchanters used. 2. toward the wilderness, where Israel lay encamped, rather with intent to curse Israel without God's leave, or rather expecting what God of his own accord would suggest to him concerning this matter.

2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel tabling in his tents according to their tribes; and the spirit of God came upon him.

According to their tribes, in the order appointed, Numb ii. Came upon him, i. e. inspired him to speak the following words and so constrained him again to bless those whom he desired to curse.

3 And he took up his parable, and said Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said.

*His eyes, either, 1. Of his body, as in the following verse or 2. Of his mind, which God had opened in a peculiar and prophetic manner, whence prophets are called seers 1 Sam ix 9. He implies that before he was blind and stupid having eyes, but not seeing nor understanding. Some render the words having his eyes shut i. e. the Hebrew verb sham signifying the letters sham and much being frequently so used, and so the meaning is that he received this revelation either in a dream when men's eyes are simply shut or in an ecstasy a trance, when men's eyes though open in a manner shut, to wit as to the use and exercise of them.*

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty falling into a trance, but having his eyes open.

*His vision, so called either strictly and properly i. e. because he was awake when the vision was revealed to him, or loosely and improperly for any extraordinary discovery God's mind to him, whether sleeping or waking. 1. trance or ecstasy a trance, and falling upon the ground as the prophets used to do. See 1 Sam xix 24, Jerk i 28, 29. 2. sham, i. e. in a manner shut, to wit as to the use and exercise of them.*

5 How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel!

6 As the valleys are they spread forth, as gardens by the river's side, as the trees of lign aloes which the Lord hath planted, and as cedar trees beside the waters.

*Valleys oftentimes from a small beginning are spread forth far and wide. Others, as the brooks, or rivers, as the word signifies, which stretch out and disperse their waters into several channels, and sometimes farther. As they spread forth, i. e. the Israelites last mentioned. As cedars by the river's side, pleasant, and fruitful, and surrounded by a hedge. Trees of lign-aloes, an Arabian and Indian tree, of a sweet smell, yielding good shade and labour to man and beast, such as Israel, famous among the nations, and not only safe the themselves, but yield shade to all that join themselves to them. Which the Lord hath planted, which are the best of the kind, such as a man, but God, might seem to have planted, as the best of men are ascribed to God, as the trees, hills, cities of God &c. Compare Psal cix 16. As cedar trees, which are time* for growth, and height, and strength and durability, whence Solomon's temple was built of this wood, 1 Kings vi 9, 10. Beside the waters, where trees thrive best.

17 He shall pour the water out of his buckets, and his seed shall be in many waters, and his king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted.

He 1 e God, will abundantly water the valleys, gardens, and trees, which represent the Israelites, ver. 6, 1 e he will wonderfully bless his people, not only with outward blessings, of which a chief one in those parts was plenty of water, but also with higher gifts and graces, with his word and Spirit, which are often signified by water John iii 5, iv 10. ver. 38, 39 and at last with eternal life the contemplation whereof made Balaam desire to die the death of the righteous. Others thus, God shall make his posterity numerous, for the procreation of children is oft signified by waters fountains, cisterns, &c. as Psal lxxvi 26 Prov v 15 18, ix 17, Isa xlviii 1. But there is no necessity of flying to metaphors here, and therefore the other being the literal and proper sense, is by the laws of good interpretation to be preferred before it. In many waters this also may be literally understood of their seed, which shall be sown in watery ground and therefore bring forth a better increase, Isa xxxiii 20. Others thus. This seed shall be so numerous, that it shall branch forth into many people, the several tribes being reckoned and sometimes called several people. Or, his seed shall rule over many people or nations, which are sometimes signified by many waters, as Psal cxlvii 7, Isa lvi 20, Jer xlviii 2, Rev xvi 15. But here also the literal sense seems best. This king 1 e the king of Israel, either God, who was in peculiar manner their king or ruler, Numb xxiii 21. Judg vi 13, 1 Sam viii 7, Isa xxxiii 22, or then chief governor or governor, whether king, or other, as for Moses is called such king, Dent xxxiii 7, and the judges were in various kings. Thou Agag, 1 e than the king of the Amalekites, which king and people were famous and potent in that age, ver. 20, as may be guessed by their bold attempt upon so numerous a people as Israel was. And it is probably thought by the Jewish and other interpreters, that Agag was the common name of the Amalekites, as Abimelech was of the Philistines, and Pharaoh of the Egyptians, and Caesar of the Romans. But though this king only be mentioned in yet other kings to wit such as did or should border upon the Israelites, it doubtless is to be understood, above whom the Jews and people of Israel sometime were advanced and others should have been, if they had not been their own hindrance by their sins. Some make this a prophecy of Saul's conquering Agag and his people 1 Sam xv 7 8. But the words seem to be more general and to signify a greater honour and sanctification to Israel than that was.

18 God brought him forth out of Egypt he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn he shall eat up the nations his enemies, and shall break their bones and pierce them through with his arrows.

Shall break their bones, or, embone or, take out i e will eat the flesh to the very bones and then break them all.

19 He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion who shall stir him up? Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

Having conquered his enemies the Canaanites and then land, he shall quietly and securely rest and settle himself there. Stir him up, 1 e awake or provoke him.

20 And Balaak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and he smote his hands together, and Balaak said unto Balaam, I called thee to curse mine enemies, and behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

He smote his hands together, a sign of great anger, Ezech xxi 17; xxi 18.

21 Therefore now flee thou to thy place. I thought to promote thee unto great honour: but, lo, the Lord hath kept thee back from honour.

Flee thou to thy place, whence I sent for thee, Numb. xxi 5, The Lord, whose commandment thou hast preferred before my desires and interest; and therefore seek thy recompence from him, and not from me.

22 And Balaam said unto Balak. Spake I not also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying,

23 If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the Lord, to do either good or bad of mine own mind, but what the Lord saith, that will I speak.

24 And now, behold, I go unto my people, come therefore, and I will advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people in the latter days.

Advise thee or inform thee to wit, concerning future things, as it here follows, for this word seems inseparably joined with the following. Others, give thee counsel and tell thee what this people &c. So it may be a bad and defective speech such as we have 1 Cor ii 5 9. And by counsel they understand that which is called Num. xxi 12, which was done by Balaam's counsel Num. xxi 16, Rev ii 14. But the former seems more enforced and agreeable to the following words as the in the latter days, not in this time therefore thou hast no reason to fear but in succeeding ages, is 2 Sam viii 2 &c.

25 And he took up his parable and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said.

26 He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, full into a trance, but having his eyes open.

27 I shall see him, but not now. I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth.

I shall see him, I have seen, or do see, for the future I shall put for either future or present, he speaks of a prophetic sight like that of Abraham's who saw Christ day, John viii 56. How to wit, the Star and Sceptre, as it here follows, 1 e a great and eminent prince, which was to come out of Israel's lines, either, 1 David who first did the things here spoken of, 2 Sam viii 2, Psal lxv, cviii 9, and some of the kings of Judah and Israel after him, for it is not more easily understood of one particular person, or, 2 The Messiah, as both Jewish and Christian interpreters expand it, who not only eminently and fully performed what is here said in destroying the enemies of Israel, or of God's church who is here described under the names of the most ancient enemies of Israel, which he doth partly by himself by his word and Spirit and printed plagues, and partly by his mouth the prince whom he makes arising, led out to his church, and some of his enemies. And to him alone is given the honour very properly, I shall see him, I will, in my own person, or with the eyes of my own body, is every eye shall see him, Rev i 7, when he comes to judgment. Nor can it seem strange that Balaam should speak of such high and strange things, seeing he foresaw and foretold these things by the revelation of the Spirit of God, by which he foretold the great plenty of good men, and the incredible multitude of bad men, after death and judgment, Numb xxi 10. But not now, not yet, but after many ages. A Star, a title oft given to princes and eminent and illustrious persons, and particu-

To his place, i. e. to Mesopotamia. Offer He went only to Midian, where he was slain, Numb xxii 8. Answer 1 He said to return home because he intended and began to do so, though he was diverted by the Midianites, for men of Scripture are oft said to do what they design or attempt to do, as Exod. xii 18, Numb xii 40. Answer 2 He did so for a first, though afterwards he returned to the Midianites either because they sent for him, or to recover his lost credit, and to do that by policy which he could not do by charms to which purpose he gave them that devilish counsel which was put in practice, Numb xxv, and that by his advice, Numb xxxi 16, Rev ii 14.

CHAP XXV

The Israelites whoredom and idolatry. God commands the guilty to be put to death, 1-5. A plague. Phinehas's zeal, for which God promises him the priesthood 6-15. God commands the Midianites to be slain for their treachery in drawing the people to sin, 16-18.

AND Israel abode in 'Shittim, and the people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.

Shittim, a place called more largely the shittim Numb xxiii 49, it being usual with the Hebrews to abbreviate proper names, as Hermon is put for Baal hermon, Judg. iii 3 Tholai for Phtholai Josh xix 1 Arimai, i. e. 11, for Beth narim, Numb xxiii 36. And this is then 1st station, from whence they passed immediately into Canaan. So this is here noted as a great aggravation of their sin, that they committed it when God was going to put them into the possession of their long-expected and even de trod land. The people, not all, but many of them, appears from Deut 3, 1, 1 Cor x 8. To commit whoredom, both corporally and spiritually, either because they prostituted themselves to them upon condition of worshipping their god, or because their filthy god was worshipped by such filthy acts, as Priapus and Venus were at Moab, and of Midian too as is evident from ver 6, 17, Numb xxii 16, for both these people being consociated in this wicked design, the one is put for the other, and the daughters of Moab may be named either because they began the transgression, or because they were the chief persons, possibly, the relations or courtiers of Balak king of Moab.

2 And they called the people unto the sacrifices of their gods: and the people did eat, and bowed down to their gods.

They called the people this may be noted, either 1 As the consequence of their whoredom, an invitation to further society in their sacred feasts, or rather, 2 As the cause or occasion of their whoredom the Hebrew tau hein signifies for, as it oft doth. The Moabites being now neighbours to the Israelites, and finding themselves unable to effect their design against Israel by war and witchcraft they now fell another way to work, by contracting familiarity with them, and perceiving their evil and lustful inclinations, they called their daughters last mentioned invited them to their feasts. Unto the sacrifices, i. e. unto the feasts which were made of their parts of their sacrifices after the manner of the Jews and Gentiles too, the participation whereof was reckoned a participation in the worship of that god to whom the sacrifices were offered, 1 Cor x 18, and therefore was forbidden to the Israelites when such feasts and sacrifices belonged to a false god, Exod xxix 16. Yet this was a less and more modest kind of idol try, and therefore fitly used to usher in what was more gross and impious of their gods, i. e. of their god, Baal-peor, the plural elohim being here used, as commonly it is for one god. Bowed down, which properly notes the outward act of worship, which here consisting in or being accompanied with filthy actions, may either signify or connote them. To their gods, before their gods, or, to the honour and worship of their gods.

3 And Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor;

and the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel.

Joined himself, the word implies a forsaking of God, to whom they were and should have been joined, and a turning to, embracing of strict conjunction with, and fervent affection after, this false god. Compare Hos ii 10, 2 Cor vi 14. Baal-peor, called Baal by the name common to many false gods, and especially to those that represented any of the heavenly bodies, and Peor, either from the hill Peor, where he was worshipped Numb xxiii 28, or rather from a verb signifying to open and uncover either because of the obscene posture in which possibly the idol was set as Priapus was, or because of the filthiness which was exercised in his worship. Was kindled, i. e. discovered itself in a dreadful plague, Psal cxi 29.

4 And the Lord said unto Moses, 'Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the Lord against the sun, that the fierce anger of the Lord may be turned away from Israel.

The sense is rather, I take, to wit to thyself and thy assistants, all the heads, i. e. the judges as they are called ver 5 or rulers of the people, and in their presence, and by their help hang the heads of the people, then mentioned, to wit such of them as were guilty, as was said ver 1. And this sense seems to be favoured by the next verse where the execution of this command is mentioned, Moses said unto the judges of Israel, whom he had taken to himself and called together. Slay every one his man, i. e. each of you execute this command of God and hang up the delinquents under your several jurisdictions. Or 2 Take apprehend all the heads, i. e. the chief of the people, such as were chief, either in this tininess or in their place and power, who are singled out to this exemplary punishment either for their neglect in not preventing it by duty, or punishing the offenders according to their power and duty, or for their concurrence with others in this wickedness, which was more odious and malicious in them than in others. And then this must be necessarily limited to such heads as were guilty, which is evident from the nature of the thing and from the words of the verse. As so these heads of the people differ, as in name and title in place and dignity, from the heads of the people, such as which may seem to note the inferior magistrates even the seventy elders, which have some of great worth and piety chosen by God and endowed with his Spirit must probably kept themselves from this contagion, and therefore were fitter to punish others, and the heads of the people seem to be the inferior magistrates the rulers of tens or hundreds or the like, who as they did many of them consort with the people in other rebellions so probably were involved in this guilt. Now these are to be hanged as other malefactors and condemned persons were Deut x 23 2 Sam xxi 6. Before the Lord, to the vindication of God's honour and justice. Against the sun, i. e. publicly, as their sin was public and scandalous and specially, before the sun go down. But wistful this phrase may signify, that these also must be taken down about sun-setting, as other malefactors were, Deut xxi 23.

5 And Moses said unto the judges of Israel, 'Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

Slay one his man, i. e. those under his charge for as these seventy were chosen to assist Moses in the government, so doubtless the care and management of the people was distributed among them by just and equal proportions.

6 And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, who were weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

This was done, either 1 Before God's command to Moses, and by him to the judges ver 1, or such compositions and disorders being not unusual in sacred story. Or rather, 2 In the order it is related, to wit when Moses had given the charge to the judges, and, as it may seem before the execution of it, although it is probable he would not have been so bold and bold to have run upon present and certain ruin when the examples were fresh and frequent before his eyes. 3 In his brethren's case into the camp of the Israelites, or to his friends and relations in his tent, whether he carried her out, or for his or their fleshly satisfaction. In the midst of Moses, in argument of intolerable impudence, a continued of God and of Moses. All the congregation of the children of the congregation with divers of the people, sleeping, bewailing the abominable wickedness of the people, and the dreadful judgments of God and imploring God's mercy and favour.

7 And when Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand,

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

Into the tent or into the house, for surely we have way to such lewd practices no doubt they angled out convenient places for their wickedness. Thence both of them through, which is no warrant for private persons to take upon them the execution of justice upon any, though the great multitude has become Phinehas with him, a man in great authority and power, and did this after the command given by Moses to the rulers to slay these transgressors, and in the very sight, and no doubt by the consent of Moses himself, and also by the special instruction and direction of God. Spirit. Through her belly, or a her brother's house, for the word is the same before used, and translated to it, and it may be called her. Because he chose or not that place for her wicked purpose, is the real doubt, she did offer a place of his name. The plague, either the plague of some other nation and various mortality.

9 And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

Of them were but 23,000. For the same time. The odd thousand here added were slain by the judges according to the order of Moses, the rest by the immediate hand of God. But both sorts died of the plague, the word being used as it is for the word of God or stroke of God.

10 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Phinehas, the son of Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous for my sake among them, that I consumed not the children of Israel in my jealousy.

He does have an end and resolute and violent, for my sake for my satisfaction and vindication.

12 Wherefore say, Behold I give unto him my covenant of peace.

13 The covenant of an everlasting priesthood as it is expounded ver 1, which is called a covenant of peace, partly with respect to the happy effect of this historical action of his, whereby he made peace between God and his people, and partly with respect to the principal end and use of the priestly office, which was continually to do that which Phinehas now did even to mediate between God and men, to offend and preserve his own and Israel's peace and reconciliation with God by his own sacrifices and incense and prayers to God on their behalf, Numb xvi 17-18, as also by his own example to his people, which is the only peace breaker, and by exhorting and pressing the observation of the law, which is the only bond of their peace, Mal ii 5-7.

13 And he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood, because he was zealous for his God, and made an atonement for the children of Israel.

And his seed after him. What advantage had he by this promise, seeing the thing here promised was due to him by birth? Answer 1 The same blessing, which was sometimes promised, as the kingdom was to David, and the renewing of this promise might seem convenient here, to signify that bloodshed was so far from polluting him, and thereby casting him out of the priesthood, that it was a mean to confirm him in it. This promise secured him and his against divers contingences, which otherwise might have befallen him or them, as that he should live longer than his father, else he could not have been the high priest, that he should be preserved from those blemishes which might have rendered him incapable of the priesthood, which were many, that he should have a seed, and they such as were fit for that office. An everlasting priesthood, is to continue as long as the law and commonwealth of the Jews did. Quest How was this verified, seeing the priesthood went from Eleazar's to Ithamar's line in Eli and thence or four of his successors? Answer 1. This promise, as others of the like nature, was conditional, and therefore might be made void, and of none effect, by the misarranges of Phinehas's sons, as it seemed it was, and thereupon a like promise was made to Eli of the line of Ithamar that he and his should walk before the Lord to wit in the office of high priest for ever, which also for him and their sons was made void, 1 Sam ii 30. There is that was but a short interruption and not considerable in so long a succession for the priesthood returned to Phinehas's line in the time of Solomon 1 Kings ii 26, 27, 35, 1 Chron xxv 3, and continued in that line till the captivity of Babylon is evident, and afterward too 1 Chron i 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman was Zimri, the son of Salu, a prince of a chief house among the Simeonites.

A prince. This is added as a proof of Phinehas's zeal that he durst venture upon so great a person who was likely to have many avengers of his blood. Of a chief house. Heb of the house of his father. Every tribe was divided into great households, called the houses of their fathers. Numb i 2 and he was the prince or chief of one of these, though not of the whole tribe. Among the Simeonites. Of the tribe of Simeon which seems to have been too much influenced by his and other such examples so that for 50,300, which were numbered, Numb i 22, 23, there were now only 22,200, Numb xxi 11.

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cozbi, the daughter of Zur. He was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

Zur. One of the kings or princes of Midian, Numb xxxi 8, Josh xiii 21. Of a chief house, or, and over her father's house.

16 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

17 Vex the Midianites, and smite them.

And why not the Moabites, who were as guilty, ver 1? Answer 1 Because God will reserve to himself a liberty of punishing or sparing, according to his own good pleasure. 2 God had a kindness for the Moabites for Lot's sake. Deut ii 9. 3 God punished the Moabites in another manner, partly, by his own immediate hand, whereby it is probable he cut off those Moabitish women that were guilty of this fact, partly, by a particular and dreadful judgment of excommunication, Deut xxi 3, and partly, by impurity, which in its consequences is commonly worse and more pernicious than any or all temporal punishments, ver 1.

none that condemn the crime can deny 4 It is probable the Midianites were most guilty, as in persuading Balak to send for Balaam, as may be gathered from Numb xxii 4 7, so in the reception of Balaam after Balak had dismissed him, Numb. xxv 8, and in further consultation with him, and in contriving the means for the executing of this wicked plot. Smile thou, i. e. kill them, in which words, as there is a command to war against them so there is a promise of success

18 For they vex you with their *wives, wherewith they have beguiled you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, their sister, which was slain in the day of the plague for Peor's sake

For under pretence of kindred, and friendship, and leagues, yea, and marriages, which they offered to them instead of that war which the Israelites expected from them, they sought only an opportunity to inure them in elvies into their familiarity, and execute their hellish plot of burning that curse upon the Israelites, which they had in vain attempted to bring another way. In the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, by drawing you both to spiritual and corporal whoredom. Their sister in crime means, to wit, their country women

CHAP XXVI

Israel numbered, such as we see fit for us of every tribe, I am excepted their number, 1-51. The tent to be distributed according to their number, 52-56. The Levites numbered by themselves, because they had no inheritance 57-62. All that were numbered by Moses and Aaron at Sinai, save only Caleb and Joshua, died in the wilderness, 63-65

AND it came to pass after the plague, that the Lord spake unto Moses and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying,

After the plague last mentioned, chap xxv 8, 9 Eleazar, the father being dead, was high priest

2 Take the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, from twenty years old and upward, throughout their fathers house, all that are able to go to war in Israel

They were numbered twice before Exod xxx 11, 12, and Numb 1, 2. Now they are numbered a third time, partly to demonstrate the faithfulness of God, both in cutting all those off whom he had threatened to cut off Numb xiv 29, and in a stupendous increase and multiplication of the people according to his promise notwithstanding all their sins, and the sweeping judgments inflicted upon them, and partly to prepare the way for the equal division of the land which they were now going to possess

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

In the plains of Moab see Numb xxii 1, xxxiii 18

4 Take the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward, as the Lord commanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt

Take the sum of the people these words are easily supplied and necessarily to be understood from ver 2

5 ¶ Reuben, the eldest son of Israel the children of Reuben Henoch, of whom cometh the family of the Henochites of Pallu, the family of the Palluites

6 Of Hebron, the family of the Hebronites of Carmi, the family of the Carmites.

7 These are the families of the Reubenites and they that were numbered of them were forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty

The families, i. e. the chief houses which were subdivided into divers lesser families. Forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty, which is in their best number i. e. they were 16,500. Numb i 21, for Korah's conspiracy, as well as other provocations of theirs, had cut off many of them.

8 And the sons of Pallu; Eliab

Sons for sons, of which change of the number see Gen xxi 7, xlii 7.

9 And the sons of Eliab, Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram, which were famous in the congregation, who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the Lord

10 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men and they became a sign

Swallowed them up together with Korah according to this translation Korah was not consumed by fire with his two hundred and fifty men. Numb xvi 31. But swallowed up by the earth. But others rather think he was devoured by the fire, of which see on Numb xvi 35, and under these words and the sons of Korah or before we to Korah, to wit his tent and, good and family children excepted, as here follow, which interpretation receives strength by comparing this place with Numb xvi 33, And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them (to wit, Dathan and Abiram as is manifest from ver 24 25, 27) in an instant, and all the men that appertained to Korah, which variation of the place plainly shows that Korah himself was not swallowed up with them, but only his men and his tabernacle, which is mentioned together with the tabernacles of Dathan and Abiram ver 21 27, but his person is not there mentioned with their persons. Nor is it unusual both in sacred and profane authors, by the name of a man who is the head of a family to understand only his house and family though he himself be not included. But this difficulty may be cleared another way. The Hebrew participle at may be here in the sense of a nominative case, as it is 2 Km vi 5, Neh ix 19, Jer xxxviii 16, Luke xxxix 11 xlii 7, and there may be a defect of a verb which is most frequent, and so the place may be rendered thus, and the earth opened her mouth and swallowed them up to wit Dathan and Abiram, ver 9 and Korah, or, and for Korah, he died (which verb is easily understood out of the following noun, of which ellipsis there are many instances in Scripture, some whereof have been given before and more will follow in their places) in the death of that company, or when that company died what time the fire devoured the two hundred and fifty men. And so this place, and Numb xvi 35 explain one another and where as there is mention only of two hundred and fifty men consumed by that fire, Korah is here added to the number. They became a sign, i. e. God made them a monument or example to warn others not to rebel against God nor against magistrates nor to usurp the priestly office

11 Notwithstanding the children of Korah died not

God being pleased to spare them, either because they disowned their father's fact, and thereupon separated themselves both from his tent and company, or because Moses interceded for them, or because God would glorify his own free mercy in sparing some, while he punished others according to his declaration in a like case, Exod xxxiii 19 Hence the sons of Korah are mentioned 1 Ch iii vi 22, 37, and oft in the book of Psalms

Gilead is here mentioned as Machir's only son, and therefore some conceive that the family of the Machirites, and of the Gileadites, are one and the same family only called by two names first Machirites but afterwards Gileadites Others make them distinct families because Machir had other children Gen i 23, 1 Chron vi 14-16, which are called by their father's name, Machirites, whereas the children of his eldest son Gilead are called by his name Gilead-

Shulaim, called, by transposition Shulaim Gen xlii 23 After their families, the several families subdivided into several tribes

43 All the families of the Shulaimites according to those that were numbered of them, were threescore and four thousand and four hundred

All from one son and family, where as of Benjamin, who had ten sons, and here five families there were only 15,600, to show that the increase of families dependeth solely upon God's blessing and good pleasure

1 Chron. vi. 15.
Asher

44 ¶ Of the children of Asher after their families of Imma, the family of the Immites of Jesur the family of the Jesurites of Beriah, the family of the Berites

Of Jesur, called Jesur, Gen. xlii 14, where it is there another son of Asher named to wit Jehaziel who's family seems now to be lost

45 Of the sons of Beriah of Heber the family of the Heberites of Malchiel, the family of the Malchielites

46 And the name of the daughter of Asher was Sarah

Who seems to be here mentioned because she was a woman of masculine wisdom or courage, or other virtue

47 These are the families of the sons of Asher according to those that were numbered of them who were fifty and three thousand and four hundred

Whereas they were only 11,500 in Numb. i. 41

1 Chron. vi. 15.
Naphthali

48 ¶ Of the sons of Naphthali after their families of Jahzeel, the family of the Jahzeelites of Guni, the family of the Gunites;

49 Of Jezer, the family of the Jezerites of Shulkim the family of the Shulkimites

50 These are the families of Naphthali according to those that were numbered of them were forty and five thousand and four hundred

51 These were the numbered of the children of Israel six hundred thousand and a thousand seven hundred and thirty very much as many as there were before, Numb. i. 46

So wisely and mysteriously did God at the same time manifest his justice in cutting off so vast a number, and his mercy in giving such a speedy and numerous supply, and his truth in both

52 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

53 ¶ Unto these the land shall be divided for an inheritance according to the number of names

Unto these, to these families now mentioned The land shall be divided, by lot ver 55 The land was divided into nine parts and a half respect being had in such division to the goodness as well as to the unevenness of the several portions, and the lot gave each tribe their part Of names, i. e. of the persons names being set out for persons, as Acts i. 15, Phil ii. 9 Item, in d. xi. 14, The meaning is that the share of each tribe was divided among the several families to some more, to some less according to the number of the persons of each family, Numb. xxxiii. 54 And withal if one of the lots or portions, proved too large or too little for all the families and persons of that tribe in the case that you, let them give part of their portion to another tribe as Simon and Dan had parts of Judah's share, Josh. xix. 1-10 or take away a part from the portion belonging to another tribe

54 ¶ To many thou shalt give the more inheritance, and to few thou shalt give the less inheritance to every one shall his inheritance be given according to those that were numbered of him

Thou shalt give, thou Moses partly by thyself, for he divided the land beyond Jordan to the two tribes and a half and partly by thy successor Joshua whom thou shalt empower and command to do it According to those that were numbered of him, according to the number of the families and persons now numbered, and being twenty years old, no age and long to be had either to the increase of the number by those who came up to that age between this time and the division of the land, or to the diminution of the number by the sword of Canaanites or otherwise

55 Notwithstanding the land shall be divided by lot according to the number of the tribes of them others they shall inherit

By lot which lot seems to have been cast only for the tribes not as some would have it for the several families for the distribution of it to them was left to the inheritance according to the rule now given, ver 54 Yet if the lot was too large for the tribe, they might give up part of it to others with the ruler's consent, as Judah gave a part to Simeon and to Dan within his lot According to the names of the tribes i. e. the lot shall go under the names of each tribe or each patriarch

56 According to the lot shall the possession of be divided between many and few

The share which shall by lot fall to each tribe, shall be distributed to the several families and persons in such proportions as their numbers shall require

57 ¶ And these are they that were numbered of the Levites after their families of Gershon, the family of the Gershonites of Kohath, the family of the Kohathites of Merari, the family of the Merarites

58 These are the families of the Levites the family of the Labutes, the family of the Hebronites, the family of the Mahlites, the family of the Mahlites, the family of the Korathites And Kohath begat Amram

The families of the Levites are here numbered by themselves, because they were not to have a distinct lot of the land where as it is that they are so distinctly and exactly mentioned as the other tribes, but confusedly and imperfectly, out of them being wholly omitted here See Exod. vi. 17-19

50 And the name of Amram's wife was Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi in Egypt: and she bare unto Amram Aaron and Moses, and Miriam their sister.

Her mother, to it, Levi's wife which must necessarily be understood.

60 And unto Aaron was born Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

61 And Nadab and Abihu died, when they offered strange fire before the Lord.

62 And those that were numbered of them were twenty and three thousand, all male from a month old and upward.

For they were not numbered among the children of Israel, because there was no inheritance given them among the children of Israel.

Twenty and three thousand, one thousand more than they were numbered in 10. The reason of which different way of numbering seen in Numbers 15.

63 ¶ These are they that were numbered by Moses and Eleazar the priest, who numbered the children of Israel in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

64 But among these there was not a man of them whom Moses and Aaron the priest numbered, when they numbered the children of Israel in the wilderness of Sin.

65 For the Lord had said of them, They shall surely die in the wilderness. And there was not left a man of them, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

There was not left a man of the twelve of those who then murmured and rebelled against God: a plainly appears both because this threatening and punishment is confined to those transgressors, and because otherwise that did not bear true. For of those that were then numbered there were now left Eleazar and Ithamar, and possibly many of the Levites and some others, who being not guilty of that sin, did not partake of the judgment. Caleb and Joshua are mentioned here as also Numbers xv. not by way of exception, as these were unworthy, which is entirely denied Numbers xvi. 21 but by way of opposition to shew that they thought they were free of the sin, and companions of them who were the chief authors and ringleaders of that mutiny, yet they kept themselves from sinning, and therefore God kept them from their punishment, and he also he did some other for the same reason.

CHAP. XXVII.

The law of inheritance for daughters or defect of sons, and on what father's side, and if they be none to the next kin male. ¶ The commandment Moses to go up into a mountain to bless the land of Canaan and die there. ¶ Moses prays to the Lord to appoint a successor. ¶ The Lord shows and commands the appointment of judges before all the people.

Ex. 16. 37
Lev. 11. 11
Josh. 13. 9

THESE came the daughters of Zelophehad, the son of Hephai, the son of Gilead, the son of Manasseh, the son of Manasseh, the son of Joseph: and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, Phoebe, and Hoglah, and Mileah, and Tirzah.

Perceiving that the males only were numbered, and that the land was to be divided to them only, they put in their claim for a share in their father's inheritance.

2 And they stood before Moses, and before Eleazar the priest, and before the princes and all the congregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation saying,

Nigh unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation it seems was the place where Moses and the chief rulers assembled for the administration of public affairs which also was very convenient, because they had frequent occasion of recourse to God for his assistance and direction therein.

3 Our father died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the Lord in the company of Korah, but died in his own sin, and had no sons.

He was not in the company of Korah nor in any other rebellion of the people, which must be understood, because all of them are opposed to his own sin, in which alone he is said to die. But they mention this only either, 1 Because he might possibly be accused to be guilty of this. Or 2 Because he being an eminent person, might be thought guilty of that rather than of any other, because the great and famous men were more concerned in that rebellion than others. Or 3 To put in the favour of Moses against whom that rebellion was more particularly directed, and more desperately prosecuted than any other. Or 4 Because peradventure he died about that time, and therefore might be presumed guilty of that crime. Or 5 Because that in and as it may seem that only of all the sin committed in the wilderness, was of such a flagitious nature that God thought fit to extend the punishment not only to the person of those rebels but to their children and families. Numbers xvi. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

1 Because peradventure he died about that time, and therefore might be presumed guilty of that crime. Or 5 Because that in and as it may seem that only of all the sin committed in the wilderness, was of such a flagitious nature that God thought fit to extend the punishment not only to the person of those rebels but to their children and families. Numbers xvi. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

And this makes their argument here more powerful, that he did not die in that sin for which he possibly were to be cut off and to lose either their lives or their inheritance, and therefore their claim was more just. In his own sin, either 1 For that sin might be Numbers xvi. which they call his own sin in opposition to the rest of the people, for it was a common sin, but of his children and the sin for which he alone was to suffer in his person and not in his posterity, as God had appointed Numbers xvi. 33. Or rather, 2 For his own personal sin, for 1 These were more properly his own sins. 2 They were a truth, and that believed by the Jews that death was a punishment in men's own sins. 3 The punishment of that common sin was not directly and properly death, but exclusion from the land of Canaan, and death only by way of consequence upon that.

4 Why should the name of our father be done away from among his family, because he hath no son? Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.

He came away, as it will be if it be not preserved by an inheritance given to us in his name and for his sake. Hence some gather that the first son of each of these houses was called by their father's name by virtue of that law Deut. xxi. 6 whereby the brother's first son was to bear the name of his elder brother, whose widow he married. 1 possession in the land of Canaan upon the division of it, which, though not yet conquered, they concluded would certainly be so, and thereby gave glory to God by believing.

5 And Moses brought their cause before the Lord.

Into the tabernacle, where God was pleased to speak with Moses upon occasions, Exod. xxx. 22, Numbers xli. 89. For it was a hard case, and though their plea seemed reasonable yet Moses showed his humility and modesty that he would not determine it himself without God's particular direction

6 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

7 The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren, and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them

Give them in Hebrew it is of the masculine gender to show that women in this case should enjoy the man's privilege and that the heavenly Canaan, whereof this was a type, did belong no less to women than to men. God in 26 The inheritance of their fathers, i. e. which belonged to their fathers in case they had lived

8 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter

9 And if he have no daughter then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren

10 And if he have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren

No brethren, not sisters as appears from ver. 5

11 And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his kinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel: a statute of judgment, as the Lord commanded Moses

A statute of judgment, a statute or rule by which the magistrate shall give judgment in such cases

12 ¶ And the Lord said unto Moses, Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel

The whole tract of mountains was called Abarim Num. xxvii. 17, whereof one of the highest was called Nebo Deut. xxxii. 19, and the top of that Pisgah Deut. xxxiv. 1

13 And when thou hast seen it thou shalt also be gathered unto thy people, as Aaron thy brother was gathered

Gathered unto thy people, of which phrase see Gen. x. 14. xxx. 5

14 For ye rebelled against my commandment in the desert of Zin in the strife of the congregation, to sanctify me at the water before their eyes: that is the water of Meribah in Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin

In Kadesh this is added to distinguish this murmuring of Moses from that of the people in Rephidim, Exod. xvi. 7

15 ¶ And Moses spake unto the Lord, saying, The words here following, and others to, which are recorded, Deut. in 21, 25

16 Let the Lord, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation,

All flesh, i. e. of all men, the Searcher of spirit that knowest who is fit for this great employment, the Father, and Giver, and Governor of spirits, who enust rise and suit the spirits of men to the light and hardest works as thou didst those Num. xi. 16, 17 See Num. xvi. 22

17 ¶ Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep which have no shepherd

18 ¶ Which may wisely conduct them in all their affairs, both when they go forth to war, or upon other occasions, and when they return home and live in peace. A metaphor from shepherds, as it here follows, which in those places used not to go behind their sheep, as ours now do, but before them, and to lead them forth to their pasture, and in due time to lead them home again. Of this phrase see Deut. xxviii. 8; Acts. 21

18 ¶ And the Lord said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him,

The spirit, the spirit of government, of wisdom, and of the fear of the Lord, &c. Lay thine hand upon him, by which ceremony Moses did both design the person and confer the power, and by his prayers which accompanied that he obtain from God all the spiritual gifts and graces necessary for his future employment, as appears from Deut. xxxiv. 9. See of this custom Gen. xlviii. 14, Lev. i. 4, Num. viii. 10, 1 Tim. i. 11

19 And set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation, and give him a charge in their sight,

That they may be witnesses of the whole action and may acknowledge him for their supreme ruler. Give him a charge thou shalt command him in my name to undertake the government of my people which otherwise he will be afraid and unwilling to do, and thou shalt give him counsels and instructions for the right management of that great trust

20 And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, that all the congregation of the children of Israel may be obedient

Thou shalt not now use him as a servant as thou hast done, but as a brother and thy partner in the government showing respect to him, and causing others to do so, and thou shalt impart to him the reasons and evidences of the own authority whosoever they be. Some understand the honour of the spiritual endowments which did adorn Moses, which Moses was now to confer upon him. But this I did before for whom was I said ver. 18, and he received a further measure of the spirit by Moses's laying on of hands. him both which in honour is distinguished, and, his being on this he would not have expressed it in so dark and doubtful a phrase. But have called it a putting not of honour but of the spirit upon him as it is called Num. xi. 17. And seeing the word honour here may very well be properly understood, why should we run to figurative significations?

21 ¶ And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the Lord: but his word shall they go out, and it his word they shall come in, both he and all the children of Israel with him, even all the congregation

Who had ask counsel for him, when he requires him to do an important and difficult matter. See Josh. ix. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100. After the judgment, or by the judgment, i. e. by seeking and receiving and communicating to him the judgment or sentence thereby given, or by the judgment is here put delectively for by the breast plate of judgment as it is called Exod. xxviii. 30, as the testimony is it put for the ark of the testimony. On concerning the judgment, i. e. what the mind will will for of it is the matter. Or, after the manner or rite for so the Hebrew word meshpat here used oft signifies Urim and Thummim, for these two generally go together, only Urim is also called Sam xxviii. 6. Urim is a word commonly put for both Urim and Thummim. For the manner of this inquiry and answer, see on Exod. xxviii. 30. 15 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering unto the Lord shall be offered, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

One kid of the goats, a he-goat. See Numb xi 21 for the Lord, not unto the moon, to which the Gentiles offered it.

16 And in the fourteenth day of the first month is the passover of the Lord.

Instituted by him and to his honour and service. See on Lev xxiii 5.

17 And in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast: seven days shall unleavened bread be eaten.

The feast to wit, of unleavened bread, of which see on Lev xxiii 6.

18 In the first day shall be an holy convocation, ye shall do no manner of servile work therein.

19 But ye shall offer a sacrifice made by fire for a burnt offering unto the Lord, two young bullocks, and one ram, and seven lambs of the first year: they shall be unto you without blemish.

20 And then meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals shall ye offer for a bullock, and two tenth deals for a ram.

21 A several tenth deal shalt thou offer for every lamb, throughout the seven lambs.

22 And one goat for a sin offering to make an atonement for you.

23 Ye shall offer these beside the burnt offering in the morning, which is for a continual burnt offering.

And that in the evening too as is evident from the nature of the thing, and from other scriptures, but the morning sacrifice alone is mentioned, partly because the celebration of the feast begin with it and principally because it is alone was doubtful whether this might not be omitted when so many other sacrifices were offered in it morning: where is there was no question but the evening sacrifice should be offered, when there were none other besides it to be offered.

24 After this manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven days: the meat of the sacrifice made by fire of a sweet savour unto the Lord: it shall be offered beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

The sacrifice made by fire which is it were my meat or food: for as God is said to smell the sacrifices, so we metaphorically take to accept of them, so as he said to eat them, so as to devour or consume them and to be satisfied with them: such things spoken of God after the manner of men are to be understood so as to agree with the majesty of God.

25 And on the seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation, ye shall do no servile work.

26 Also in the day of the firstfruits, when ye bring a new meat offering unto the Lord, after your weeks be out, ye shall have an holy convocation, ye shall do no servile work.

In the day of the first fruits, in the feast of pentecost Acts ii 1. A new meat-offering, new fruits, two loaves made of your new corn, Lev xxiii 16. Your weeks are the seven weeks which you are to number from the passover, Lev xxiii 15. Heb in the weeks meaning put for after, as it is Lev xx 1, Luke ix 36, xi 37.

27 But ye shall offer the burnt offering for a sweet savour unto the Lord, two young bullocks, one ram, seven lambs of the first year.

The burnt offering for the celebration of the feast, over and besides that other offering which was joined with the first fruits, Lev xxiii 18. So here is a new addition of sacrifice prescribed, which doth not destroy the former.

28 And then meat offering of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals unto one bullock, two tenth deals unto one ram.

29 A several tenth deal unto one lamb, throughout the seven lambs.

30 And one kid of the goats, to make an atonement for you.

31 Ye shall offer them beside the continual burnt offering and his meat offering, (they shall be unto you without blemish) and then drink offerings.

CHAP. XXIX.

The sacrifice at the feast of the trumpets, its burnt offering and sin offering, 1-4. Of the feast of atonement, its offerings, 5-11. Of the feast of tabernacles, during seven days, their offerings, the eighth day a great holocaust, 12-35.

AND in the seventh month, on the first day of the month, ye shall have an holy convocation, ye shall do no servile work.

It is a day of blowing the trumpets unto you.

In the seventh month so it was in their ecclesiastical account in which the month thib was the first, but as to civil matters this was the first month: A day of blowing the trumpets, whereby the people were admonished solemnly to prepare themselves for the feasts which were to come in the month as in all the year besides.

2 And ye shall offer a burnt offering for a sweet savour unto the Lord: one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year without blemish.

A burnt offering besides the offerings of every month in day was expressed ver 6.

3 And then meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals for a bullock, and two tenth deals for a ram.

4 And one tenth deal for one lamb, throughout the seven lambs.

5 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering, to make an atonement for you.

6 Beside the burnt offering of the first month, and his meat offering and the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and their drink offerings, according to that manner, for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the Lord.

Of the month, beginning to every new moon, of which Num xxviii 11, 12, 2 Chron ii 1. According to that manner, according to the order, rites, and ceremonies appointed by God.

7 And ye shall have on the tenth day of this seventh month an holy convocation, and ye shall afflict your souls: ye shall not do any work therein.

Your souls, i.e. yourselves by fasting and abstinence from all delightful things, and by compunction and intercession for your sins, and the judgments of God either deserved by you or inflicted upon you for your sins. See Lev xxi 29, 30, xxiii 27.

8 But ye shall offer a burnt offering unto the Lord for a sweet savour, one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year, <sup>Lev 28:19</sup> they shall be unto you without blemish

9 And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals to a bullock, and two tenth deals to one ram

10 A several tenth deal for one lamb, throughout the seven lambs

11 One kid of the goats for a sin offering, beside the sin offering of atonement, and the continual burnt offering, and the meat offering of it, and their drink offerings

• The sin offering of atonement by which the high priest made atonement of which see Lev xvi 9 29 30

12 ¶ And on the fifth day of the seventh month ye shall have an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work, and ye shall keep a feast unto the Lord seven days

The feast of booths of which see Lev xiii 31 32 Dent xxi 13 Seven days not by abstaining so long from all servile works but by offering extraordinary sacrifices each day

13 And ye shall offer a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the Lord: thirteen young bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year: they shall be without blemish

Thirteen young bullocks a more sacrifice than it is, other feasts partly because this feast was in the case of the year when it was need to apply the defects of the year past and when they had other afflictions Dent xxi 13 14 and therefore ought to make the sacrifices and thanksgiving to God for the year in which it was God's pleasure to order it for their sake with himself in whose will we ought to acquiesce And the same reason holds why the sacrifices grow fewer and fewer every way

14 And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil three tenth deals unto every bullock of the thirteen bullocks, two tenth deals to each ram of the two rams,

15 And a several tenth deal to each lamb of the fourteen lambs

16 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering

17 ¶ And on the second day ye shall offer twelve young bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without spot

18 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner

On which see for meat offerings Lev 3 1 9, 10, and for drink offerings Num xxviii 7 11

19 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, and the meat offering thereof, and its drink offerings

20 ¶ And on the third day eleven bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish

21 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks for the rams, and for the lambs shall be according to their number, after the manner

22 And one goat for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering

23 ¶ And on the fourth day ten bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish

24 Their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner

25 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering

26 ¶ And on the fifth day nine bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without spot

27 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs shall be according to their number, after the manner

28 And one goat for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering

29 ¶ And on the sixth day eight bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish

30 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner

31 And one goat for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering

32 ¶ And on the seventh day seven bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish

33 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner

34 And one goat for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering

35 ¶ On the eighth day ye shall have a solemn assembly: ye shall do no servile work therein

36 But ye shall offer a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the Lord: one bullock, one ram, seven lambs of the first year without blemish

This was the last and greatest day of the feast, as it is called John viii 37 and yet the sacrifices were fewer than any other day, to teach them not to trust to the multitude of their sacrifices, nor to expect remission of sins from them but from the one and only sacrifice of Christ

37 Their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullock, for the ram, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner

38 And one goat for a sin offering, beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering and his drink offering

39 These things ye shall do unto the Lord in your set feasts, beside your vows, and your freewill offerings, for your burnt offerings, and for your meat offerings, and for your drink offerings, and for your peace offerings

ye in free will offerings, your ordinary sacrifices shall not be committed because of the extraordinary, which ye offer on special occasions and she was again brought by it but being now freed from her husband, and returned to her father, it is doubtful whether she was not returned to the same state of suggestion in which he is before and consequently inclined to malice or perhaps to give without further conclusion. She was before, when he heard of me.

19 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath,

In her husband's house she felt that now she was a widow or divorced, made that vow whilst her husband lived with her on supposition she viewed that if he was a widow, she would not see such a proportion of her title to pious or charitable acts of which now she might repent when she came to be a widow and in his belief very pretend she was free from it because that vow was made in her husband's lifetime which she here repented in case her husband then disapproved it but denied, in case by silence or otherwise he consented to it. And thus this law is sufficiently distinguished from the foregoing, viz. 6.

11 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her and disallowed her not: then all her vow shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul shall not stand: her husband hath made them void: and the Lord shall forgive her

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, her husband may establish it: or her husband may make it void.

14 But she put a hedge about her self by fasting, which she kept until that time a Lev. vi. 20. 1 Sam. 27. 5. I have been fasting by watching on the hills. And the words are added not for him that is fast it is manifest I am very 8. 10. 12. (1) the power of prayer, and his bond is a very general one, and every man for amplification, I have that the husband had his power not only in those vows which concerned his life, but in his title for also in those which might seem not to concern his wife, nor his body. And the reason hereof is, because the wife's prison or body being the husband's right she might not do any thing to the injury of her self, only with his consent.

11 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day, that he establisheth all her vows, or all her bond, which are upon her, he confirmeth them, because he holdeth his peace at her in the day, but he heard them.

13. Let it be said any ways make them void after that he hath heard them then he shall bear her iniquity.

After that he had heard this, and approved them by his silence from day to day: now after that time spent, he shall appoint thee his clerk, and underwrite, which he ought not to do: for thy nonperformance of his service, shall be imputed to him, not to thee.

16 These are the statutes which the Lord commanded Moses between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, being yet in her youth in her father's house.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 <sup>2</sup> Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou be gathered unto thy people.

Of the Midianites for their malicious designs and practices against Israel both by hiring Balaam to curse them, and by sending their women to seduce them. The Moabites also were guilty but God out of his own good pleasure and in kindness to Lot, was pleased to spare them, the latter, because the measure of their iniquity was not yet full.

3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Am some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the Lord of Midian.

1 For every tribe a thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war

5 So there were delivered out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

... to prevent emulations of
... and would not be more, though it is apparent of the Midant ... and strong, because he would ... of their ...

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand. chap 10 6

Phylus had the charge not of the army as general (in office never committed to any post in all the Old Testament) but of the holy instruments &c., as is here expressed and was absent to encourage and quicken, and confirm them in the good course. It is not as mentioned who was the general whether Joshua, as some think, because he is not named amongst those who went out to meet the returning host though that might be for other reasons or some other purpose, nor is it worth while to determine. The holy instruments either, 1 The ark, with the Urim belonging to it which bore the building of the temple they did sometimes carry into the war for the encouragement of their army. See Numb xiv 11 Josh vi 9 1 Sam xiv 4 xii 19 But why then is it thus ambiguous is expressed seeing in all the other places it is called by its proper name? Not in the 1st verse so called in Scripture. Or, 2 The trumpets, as it here follows, the words long thus to be read the holy instruments that is 2<sup>d</sup> trumpets, for and is oftentimes put equivocally for that is or it is as Gen xii 15, 1 Chron xxi 12 computed with 2 Sam xii 13, 2ich i 4 ix 9 &c. Or rather, 3 The holy breastplate, wherein was the Urim and Thummim, which was easily carried and used, and very useful in war upon many emergent occasions. See 1 Sam xxiii 9, xxx 7 And the trumpets, which were to be used in war as well as in the service of the tabernacle. See Numb x 2. 2 Chron xii 22

ites, as the Lord commanded Moses, and they slew all the males Namely, all whom they took in that war, or lived in those parts, for it is probable (and was then very usual) some colonies of them were sent forth to remoter places, which therefore had no hand either in their former sin, or in this present ruin of whom we read after this. Judg 11 And here they did according to God's own order concerning such people, Deut xx 13, only their fault was, that they did not consider the special reason and the obligation which they had to involve the women in the destruction for which reason Moses blames them afterward, ver 15 16.

8 And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain, namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur and Rebi, five kings of Midian. 9 Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

The Kings, called dukes or princes of Sihon, Josh xiv 21, because they were subject to him while he lived, but upon his death they resumed their kingly power. Zoa, the father of Corbi, Numb xvi 15. Balaam also. Object He was gone and returned to his own place, Numb xxv 2, which was Aram in Mesopotamia, Numb xxv 7. Anno Either he did go thitherward, but in his journey made some stay in Midian, where he was overtaken by Divine vengeance, or understanding the success of his wicked counsel left with Balaam, in the sin and laughter of the Israelites he returned partly to enjoy the reputation and reward of his counsel which he had lost before, and partly to employ his belated arts against Israel, now they were, as he thought forsaken by their God, and exposed to his malice. Here Balaam dies the death of the wicked, and not of the righteous, as he deserved Numb xxv 10.

9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

Partly, to blot out the name and memory of a wicked and vile people, partly, lest any of the Israelites should be tempted to settle there, and so be discouraged in the prosecution of their duty, and partly, lest they should be possessed by other people who might prove as bad neighbours to them as these would have been.

11 And they took all the spoil and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, went forth to meet them without the camp.

Partly to put respect upon them and congratulate with them for their happy success, and partly to prevent the pollution of the camp by the untimely entrance of the war into it.

14 And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the battle.

Because they had spared those who were most criminal, and who by the law of God and of nature were worthy of death.

15 And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved all the women alive?

16 Behold, these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the Lord in the matter of Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the Lord.

17 Now therefore kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.

Among the little ones, which they were forbidden to do to other people, Deut xx 11, except the Canaanites, to whom this people had equalled themselves by their horrid crimes, and therefore it is not strange nor unjust, that God, the supreme Lord of all men's lives, who as he gives them, so may take them away when he pleaseth, did equal them in the punishment. Every woman that hath known man, partly for punishment, because the guilt was general, and though some of them only did prostitute themselves to the Israelites, yet the rest made themselves accursed by their consent, or concurrence, or approbation, and partly for prevention of the like mischief from such an adulterous generation.

18 But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

Let known a man, to wit, carnally, see on Gen iv 1 ver 9, Lev xxv 22. Respect for yourselves, either to sell them as slaves to others, or to use them as servants to yourselves, or to marry them, when you have prepared to instruct them.

19 And do so abide without the camp seven day, whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

Second days, according to the law Lev xv 13. Numb xix 11, 12. Purify with the water of sprinkling, Numb xix 9.

20 And purify all your raiment, and all that is made of skins, and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

Purify your raiment, to wit, your spoil and prey. See Lev xvi 15 ver 19. All these things had contracted some ceremonial uncleanness, either from the dead bodies which were upon them, or from the tents or houses where they were, in which such dead bodies lay, or from the touch of the unclean bodies, who were lawfully defiled by the slain, their uncleanness.

21 And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the Lord commanded Moses.

22 Only the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead, 23 Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean: nevertheless it shall be purified with the water of separation, and all that abideth not the fire ye shall make go through the water.

24 And ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey that was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation.

27 And divide the prey into two parts, between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation.

The congregation hath some share, because the reward was of the name of all, and because all had a concern in it by the divine rules, all were to have some part in the spoils, but the warrior, who was but a private soldier, for a greater share than others, of the spoils, because they underwent greater pains and dangers.

28 And levy a tribute unto the Lord of the men of war which went out to battle. One soul of five hundred both of the persons, and of the beees, and of the asses, and of the sheep.

1 See ver 30
47 & ch 18

One soul of five hundred persons as it follows here and ver 30

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for an heave offering of the Lord. In the acknowledg-ment for their preservation and good success.

30 And of the children of Israel's half, thou shalt take 'our portion of fifty, of the person of the beees, of the asses, and of the flocks of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, which keep the charge of the tabernacle of the Lord.

One part of fifty, where the former part was one of five hundred: the reason of the difference is partly because this was taken out of the people's portion whose hereditary it was, that the other was taken out of all that were not hereditary, partly because this was to be distributed into more hands, the Levites being now numerous when the priests were but few.

31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the Lord commanded Moses.

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand and seventy thousand and five thousand sheep.

The rest of the prey, all which was a sixth of the prey that so captured because they took more than some cities could contain. And ver 17 we saw that the cattle was put for the portion of the men.

33 And three score and twelve thousand beees,

34 And three score and eight thousand asses,

35 And thirty and two thousand persons of all of women that had not known man by lying with him.

36 And the half, which was the portion of the man that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and six hundred sheep.

37 And the Lord's tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen.

38 And the beees was thirty and six thousand, of which the Lord's tribute was threescore and twenty.

39 And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred, of which the Lord's tribute was threescore and one.

40 And the persons were sixteen thousand of which the Lord's tribute was thirty and two persons.

41 And Moses gave the tribute which was the Lord's heave offering, unto Eleazar the priest, as the Lord commanded Moses.

Either now or here, as it may be seen in the case of formerly in general rules and laws for such occasions, such as Numb xvi 8.

42 And of the children of Israel's half, which Moses divided from the men that warred, 43 (Now the half that was aimed upon the congregation was three hundred thousand and thirty thousand and seven thousand and five hundred sheep,

44 And thirty and six thousand beees,

45 And thirty thousand and asses and six hundred,

46 And sixteen thousand persons.)

47 Even of the children of Israel's half, Moses took our portion of fifty, both of man and of beast, and gave them unto the Levites, which kept the charge of the tabernacle of the Lord, as the Lord commanded Moses.

48 ¶ And the officers which were over thousands of the host, the captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds, came near unto Moses.

49 And they said unto Moses, Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war which are under our charge, and there lacked not one man of us.

50 We have therefore brought an oblation for the Lord, what every man hath gotten, of jewels of gold, chains, and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets, to make an atonement for our souls before the Lord.

Let them be noted, ver 11-16 and withal for a memorial as it is said ver 51 or by way of gratitude for such a stupendous assistance and deliverance, as appears from the word therefor in the beginning of this verse, and from ver 19.

51 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold on them even all wrought jewels.

52 And all the gold of the offering that they offered up to the Lord, of the captains of thousands, and of the captains of hundreds, was sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.

53 For the men of war had taken the spoil, every man for himself.

54 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and brought it into the tabernacle of the congregation, for a memorial for the children of Israel before the Lord.

CHAP XXXII

The Reubenites and Gaddites sue for their inheritance on the east side Jordan, as being fit for cattle 1-5. Moses rebuketh them as being against the proph, and herein following their fathers all exclaim 6-15. They promise to have their children and cattle there and go armed before them, though the Canaan shall be subdued, 16-19. On which condition they together with the half tribe of Manasse obtain their desire, 20-42.

NOW the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of Jazer and the land of Gilead, that, behold, the place was a place for cattle, Jazer, a city and country taken from the Amorites Numb xvi 22. Gilead, a mountainous country fit for pasturage, Jer 1 19, Micah vi 14.

2 The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses, and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 Ataroth, and Dibon, and Jazer, and Nimrah, and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Shebam, and Nebo, and Beon, Ataroth, different from that Ataroth, Josh xvi 2, which was on the other side of Jordan. Nimrah, a city

Beth-nimrah, ver 36, Josh xii 27, and the waters of Nimrim, Jos xv 6. Saonim called Saubmah, ver 38. Beon, which is thought to be the same place called Beel-meon, ver 38 and Beth-meon Jos xviii 23.

4 Ere the country which the Lord smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle.

Which the Lord smote before the congregation, and gave to them for a possession, in the same manner as he will give the land of Canaan.

5 Wherefore, said they, if we have found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and bring us not over Jordan.

To wit, to give us our possession there: but let this land on this side Jordan be our whole possession.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall ye sit here?

In case and peace whilst your brethren are engaged in a bloody war. Then words were ambiguous and Moses thought this to be an act of unbelief and sloth and self-love and policy.

7 And wherefore I discourage ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the Lord hath given them?

8 Thus did your fathers, when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea to see the land.

9 For when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the Lord had given them.

That they should not attempt to go, but rather return to Egypt, Num xiv 4.

10 And the Lord's anger was kindled the same time, and he swore, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that come up out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I swore unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, because they have not wholly followed me.

12 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun: for they have wholly followed the Lord.

The Kenezite, so called from Kenez his grandfather, one of his eminent ancestors, Josh xv 17, 1 Chron iv 13-15.

13 And the Lord's anger was kindled against Israel, and he said, I will wander in the wilderness forty years, until all the generation, that had done evil in the sight of the Lord, was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, an increase of sinful men, to augment yet the fierce anger of the Lord toward Israel.

Succeeding your fathers, as in their places and estates, so also in their sins.

15 For if ye turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness, and ye shall destroy all this people.

Who being moved by your counsel and example will refuse to go over Jordan, and to possess the land of Canaan.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones.

17 But we ourselves will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place, and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities because of the inhabitants of the land.

We ourselves, either all or as many of us as shall be thought necessary, leaving only so many as may be necessary to provide for the sustenance and defence of our wives and children here. See Josh iv 12-13. The inhabitants of the land, the Moabites and Edomites, or other bordering people.

18 We will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance.

19 For ye will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward, because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

20 ¶ And Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the Lord to war, before the Lord, either 1. sincerely and heartily as in God's presence. Or rather 2. before the ark, which was the token of God's presence. He divides them to the order of the tribes, in their march, whereby Reuben and Gad marched next and immediately before the ark, as appears from Num ii 10-11, 16, 17, or to the number of their passage over Jordan, whereby the ark went first into Jordan, and stood there whilst all the tribes marched over Jordan by and before it. Josh iii iv, and the number of the tribes is expressed in the very words, that they passed over before the Lord. Josh iv 13.

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the Lord, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him, 22 And the land subdued before the Lord, then after and ye shall return, and be guiltless before the Lord, and before Israel: and this land shall be your possession before the Lord.

Before the Lord, that is by his presence, and gracious and powerful assistance.

23 But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the Lord: and because your sin will find you out, the punishment of your sin, as that word is very often used.

24 Build you cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep, and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

Which you have uttered and promised to do. See this in the first place Num xxx 2, Matt xv 18.

25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

26 Our little ones, our wives, our cattle, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of the land.

Largely, so called as that word is often used, for that whole country beyond Jordan, as in other places it is taken more strictly for a part of it, as here below, ver 29, 30, and elsewhere.

27 But thy servants will pass over, every man armed for war, before the Lord to battle, as my lord saith.

1 John 1:15

28 So *concerning them Moses commanded Phazai the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle, before the Lord, and the land shall be subdued before you: then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession.

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

They had therefore taken possessions in Gilead, and had returned to go over Jordan, and to seek possession before their brethren.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the Lord hath said unto thy servants, so will we do.

32 We will pass over armed before the Lord into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be ours.

33 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

35 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

37 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

39 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

41 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

42 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

44 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

45 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

46 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

47 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

48 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

49 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manassah the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land with the cities thereof in the coast, even to the cities of the country round about.

son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

10 And Moses gave Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh, and he dwelt there.

11 And Jan the son of Manasseh went and took the small towns thereof, and called them Havoth-jair.

12 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

13 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

14 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

15 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

19 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

20 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

21 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

22 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

23 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

24 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

25 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

26 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

27 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

28 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

29 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

30 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

31 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

32 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

- 6 And they departed from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness.
- 7 And they removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baal-zephon, and they pitched before Migdol.
- 8 And they departed from before Pi-hahiroth, and passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham, and pitched in Marah.
- 9 And they removed from Marah, and came unto Elim, and in Elim were twelve fountains of water, and three score and ten palm trees, and they pitched there.
- 10 And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red sea.
- 11 By another part of that sea which they passed over.
- 12 And they removed from the Red sea, and encamped in the wilderness of Sin.
- 13 And they took their journey out of the wilderness of Sin, and encamped in Dophkah.
- 14 And they departed from Dophkah, and encamped in Alush.
- 15 And they removed from Alush, and encamped at Rephidim, where was no water for the people to drink.
- 16 And they departed from Rephidim, and pitched in the wilderness of Sin.
- 17 And they removed from the desert of Sin, and pitched at Kibroth-hataavah.
- 18 And they departed from Kibroth-hataavah, and encamped at Hazeroth.
- 19 And they departed from Hazeroth, and pitched in Rithmah.
- 20 Rithmah, a place in the wilderness of Paran near Kadesh-barnea.
- 21 And they departed from Rithmah, and pitched at Rimmon-parez.
- 22 And they departed from Rimmon-parez, and pitched in Libnah.
- 23 And they removed from Libnah, and pitched at Rissah.
- 24 And they journeyed from Rissah, and pitched in Kehelathah.
- 25 And they went from Kehelathah, and pitched in mount Shapher.
- 26 And they removed from mount Shapher, and encamped in Haradah.
- 27 And they removed from Haradah, and pitched in Makheloth.
- 28 And they removed from Makheloth, and encamped at Tahath.
- 29 And they departed from Tahath, and pitched at Tarah.
- 30 And they removed from Tarah, and pitched in Mithcah.
- 31 And they went from Mithcah, and pitched in Hashmonah.
- 32 And they departed from Hashmonah, and encamped at Moseroth.
- 33 And they departed from Moseroth, and pitched in Bene-jaakan.
- 34 And they removed from Bene-jaakan, and pitched in Jaazer.
- 35 And they removed from Jaazer, and pitched in Kedesh.
- 36 And they removed from Kedesh, and pitched in mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.
- 37 And Aaron the priest went up into mount Hor at the commandment of the Lord, and died there in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first day of the fifth month.
- 38 And Aaron was in hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in mount Hor.
- 39 And king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.
- 40 And they departed from mount Hor, and pitched in Zalmonah.
- 41 And they departed from Zalmonah, and pitched in Punon.
- 42 And they departed from Punon, and pitched in Obeth.

- 44 And they departed from Ije-abaraim, and pitched in Dibon-gad.
- 45 And they removed from Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon-diblathaim.
- 46 And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, and pitched in the mountains of Abarim, before Nebo.
- 47 And they departed from the mountains of Abarim, and pitched in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.
- 48 And they pitched by Jordan from Beth-jesimoth even unto Abel-shittim in the plains of Moab.
- 49 And the Lord spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, and say

Down to Jordan, i. e. all along the river of Jordan, even to the end of it, which is the eastern border

13 And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, "This is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the Lord commanded to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half tribe

14 "For the tribe of the children of Reuben according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance and half the tribe of Manasse have received their inheritance

15 The two tribes and the half tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sunrising

16 And the Lord spake unto Moses saying

17 These are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you

18 Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun

Eleazar was to act in God's name to cast lot to prevent differences and contentions; to consult with God in cases of difficulty, to transact the whole business in a solemn and religious manner

18 And ye shall take one prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance

19 And the names of the men are these Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh

The order of the tribes is here differing from that Numbers 7-9 and in other places being here also Joshua's name is sixfold according to the order of their several inheritances, which downward fall to them by lot, which is evident demonstration of the infinite wisdom of God's providence, and of his exact and peculiar care over his people

20 And of the tribe of the children of Simeon, Shemuel the son of Ammihud

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Iddai the son of Chushan

22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bakki the son of Jogli

23 The prince of the children of Joseph for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hamelei the son of Iphoi

24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel the son of Shiphtan

25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zabulon, Thizpahan the son of Parnach

26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahikud the son of Sheloni

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud

29 These are they whom the Lord commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan

CHAP XXXV

Eight and forty cities given to the Levites together with their suburbs, among which six cities of refuge, for an Israelite or stranger who had killed another unawares, 1-15. Wilful murder decided, and the murderers to be put to death, 16-21. The man slayer must abide in the city of refuge till the death of the high priest, and if caught out of it, might be killed, 25-29. Two witnesses required to condemn a man to die, 30. No satisfaction to be taken for the life of a murderer, 31, nor that any one might return from a city of refuge before the time, 32, that the land be not defiled and polluted, and not cleansed of the blood shed in it, 33, 34

AND THE LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 "Command the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession cities to dwell in and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in, and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts

For their cattle for pasture for their cattle, where they might not build houses nor plant gardens, orchards or vineyards, nor sow corn for which they were abundantly provided out of the fat fruits and tithes. And these suburbs did not belong to the Levites in common, but were distributed to them in convenient proportions as may appear from Josh xvi 15. 1 Chron vi 60

4 And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits round about

*Object. In the next verse it is two thousand. How do these agree? Answer. 1. LXX interpreters read both here and yet 5 two thousand cubits, whence some suppose this to be an error in the Hebrew text which being in a matter neither concerning faith nor good manners is not prejudicial to the authority of the Holy Scriptures. Answer 2. The one thousand cubits may be in length from the city, and the two thousand cubits in breadth on each side of the city and so they well agree for a line of a thousand cubits being drawn in the eastward and another westward and another southward and another southward drawn at a right angle and cubits taken from the city on each to west, must needs be two thousand and cubits and must the same line from the south and on every side of the city there must be two thousand cubits. Answer 3. The verse in the next text speaks to the same thing, thus speaks of the place or place from whence the suburbs shall be measured the next verse speaks of the space unto which the line shall be extended, and the words may very well be read thus *And the suburbs shall be (out as it is in English of the city) cubits, which is not far from the wall of the city, and from (that particle being supplied is understood from the foregoing words, which is very usual) without it, or, from the outward parts of it (which be as proper and indefinite expression is limited and explained by the following words) even from a thousand cubits round about which are mentioned not as the thing measured for as yet there is not a word of measuring, but of the term or space from which the measuring line should begin. And then it follows, ver 5. And ye shall measure from without the city (not from the wall of the city) a thousand cubits, and before, ver 4. but from without it, i. e. from the outward part or space of a thousand cubits, without the wall of the city round about) on the east side two thousand cubits, &c. So in truth there were three thousand cubits from the wall of the city whereof one thousand probably were for out houses, still for cattle, gardens vineyards, and olive yards, and the like and the other two thousand for pasture, which are therefore called the field of the suburbs, Lev xxv 31, by way of distinction from the suburbs themselves which consist of the fat fruits and cubits from the wall of the city

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits, and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites, there shall be six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to them ye shall add yet more two cities.

For the purpose of the cities of refuge, the law is given that the cities shall be in the midst of the suburbs, and the cities shall be for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to them ye shall add yet more two cities.

7 So all the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites shall be forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs.

8 And the cities which ye shall give shall be of the possession of the children of Israel: from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities according to his inheritance.

9 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

10 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

11 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

12 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

13 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

14 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

15 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

16 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

17 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

18 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

19 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

20 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

21 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

22 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

23 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

24 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

25 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

26 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

27 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

28 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

29 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

30 And the Levite that killeth a man shall flee unto one of these cities.

judgment, or, for judgment 18 to receive sentence there according to the nature of the fact

13 And of these cities which ye shall give six cities shall ye have for refuge

14 Ye shall give three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge

On the side Jordan because that land was as long as Canaan then it was so broad and besides these might be convenient for many of them that lived in Canaan

15 These six cities shall be a refuge, both for the children of Israel and for the stranger and for the sojourner among them: that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither

For the stranger, not the proselyte only, but all strangers, this being no matter of religious privilege, but of common right and agreeable to the law of nature and practice of all nations

16 And if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death

If he smite him willingly and wilfully, though not with premeditated malice or design, it appears by comparison with ver 20-23, that he doth to wit, suddenly, not with malice aforethought, and if he doth so, he is a murderer, and shall be put to death, yet though he were fled unto the city of refuge

17 And if he smite him with fluorene, or a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death

If he smite him with a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer, and shall be put to death

18 Or if he smite him with a hand weapon, so that he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death

19 The revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer, when he meeteth him: he shall slay him

Either he himself, as the Hebrew word sheweth, or his kinsman, as the law may do it without effect of God's duty to himself. Or 2 Psalms, he that smite him shall demand justice, or it is a commandment to appear by comparing this with ver 31. But it is not to be taken literally

20 But if he thrust him of hatred, or he thrust him by laying of wait, that he die

21 Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death, for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer, when he meeteth him

22 But if he thrust him suddenly without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait,

Suddenly, through sudden passion or provocation. Or by chance or unawares

23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and he was not his enemy, neither sought his harm

24 Then the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood according to these judgments

If the man smite him to the city of refuge

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest, which was anointed with the holy oil.

He shall abide in it, he confined to it, partly to show the heinousness of wilful murder in God's account by no severe punishment, as this in many cases might prove, inflicted upon the very appearance of it: and partly for the security of the man slayer, lest the presence of such a person, and conversation among the kindred of the deceased might excite reproach and bloodshed. Unto the death of the high priest, partly because the public grief for the death of a public person was likely to assuage the private griefs and passions of men, the rather, because by this example they were minded of their own mortality, and thereby withheld from taking vengeance, and principally to show that the death of Christ (the true High Priest, whom the others did evidently and eminently represent and typify) is the only means whereby sins are pardoned, and sinners are set at liberty.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whether he was fled,

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer, he shall not be guilty of blood. Not liable to punishment from men, though not free from guilt before God, because he kills an innocent person, as appears from Deut. xix. 10. The God ordained to oblige a man slayer to abide in his city of refuge. See ver. 32.

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest, but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return unto the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for a statute of judgment unto you throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die.

No judge shall condemn any man to death upon a single testimony.

31 Moreover ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer which is guilty of death: but he shall be surety put to death.

No satisfaction nor ransom shall be accepted to save his life, nor procure him a pardon.

32 And ye shall take no satisfaction for him that is fled to the city of his refuge, that he should come again to dwell in the land, until the death of the priest.

Whereby God would signify the absolute and irremediable necessity of Christ's death to expiate sin, and to cleanse the sinner.

33 So ye shall not pollute the land, wherein ye are, for blood: but the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but by the blood of him that shed it.

The words are added as a reason of the last verse—32. For until it ease the land was cleansed without the death of the murderer, but of the law next foregoing that in which cannot hold, and the sense is, If you shall spare the murderer, or take any satisfaction for him, you do so with yourselves involve your land and people in guilt, and will certainly bring down God's vengeance upon yourselves and them.

34 "Defile not therefore the land which ye shall inhabit, wherein I dwell: for the Lord dwell among the children of Israel."

Be not cruel to your own land by making it a den of murderers.

CHAP. XXXVI

The inheritance of daughters inheriting is remedied by a general command that all such marry in the tribe of their fathers, which of them they shall think best. 1-9. See chap. 10-12. These commands God gave by Moses to Israel in the plains of Moab, 13.

AND the chief fathers of the families of the children of Gilead, the son of Manassah, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel.

The chief fathers of the families, who had the care and management of the public affairs of that tribe committed to them.

2 And they said, The Lord commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and my lord was commanded by the Lord to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

Our brother Zelophehad, one of our tribe. Josh. 17. 2.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe wherunto they are received: so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

Their inheritance will pass to their children, who will be of another tribe by their father's side, which alone is decided in this place.

4 And when the jubile of the children of Israel shall be, then shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe wherunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

Which God appointed principally for this end, to preserve the inheritance in the hands of the tribes and families to which it was first given.

5 And Moses commanded the children of Israel according to the word of the Lord, saying, The tribe of the sons of Joseph hath said well.

Then pleads just and reasonable—God did not take away the inheritance from every occurrence that happened, or might happen, but left divers things to be found out by human prudence, which being his own gift, it is comely that he should be obeyed unto it for the exercise of it, and God should be approved and satisfy the prudent and pious intention of men by his own law or sanction. See the case of Zelophehad's daughters, of Zelophehad's daughters, Num. xxvii. and here of their brethren. But it is to be noted that God showed this only in civil affairs, but never in the matters of his worship, where he utterly forbiddeth

6 This is the thing which the Lord doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them marry to whom they think best, only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry.

They seem hereby to be confined not only to the same tribe, but also to the family of their tribe, as appears from the reason of the law, for God would have the inheritance of families as well as tribes kept entire and unmixed, and thus was one reason of that law of marrying the brother's wife, Deut. xxv. And although the next verse may seem to thwart this interpretation, the reason of this law being there given that inheritances might not go from tribe to tribe, yet ver. 8 confirms it where the very same phrase is repeated, and that more emphatically, that each shall marry one of the family of the tribe of her father, and this further reason and restriction is added, that they may enjoy every man the inheritance (not only of his tribe, but) of his fathers, to wit, belonging to his father's family.

7 So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe for every one of the children of Israel shall keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers.

8 And every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.

By which clause it seems that this law was not general to forbid every woman to marry into another tribe (as may be reasonably concluded from the practice of so many patriarchs, kings, priests, and other holy men, who have married women of other tribes, yea, sometimes of other nations, which it is not likely they would have done, if this had been a transgression of God's law,) but restrained to heresses, or such as were likely to be so. See 1 Chron. xxi. 22. But if they had brethren, it is probable they were free to marry into any tribe, yet so that, if their brethren died, their punishment was, that the inheritance went from them to the next akin of their father's tribe and family. And the principal reason why God was solicitous to preserve tribes and families unmixed was, that the tribe and family too out of which the Messiah was to come, and by which he should be known, might be evident and unquestionable.

9 Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe, but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance.

10 Even as the Lord commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad.

11 For Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Noah, the daughters of Zelophehad, were married unto their father's brothers' sons.

It is uncertain whether brothers or sons be taken strictly and properly, or more large, as those words are oft used in Scripture.

12 And they were married into the families of the sons of Manassah the son of Joseph, and their inheritance remained in the tribe of the family of their father.

13 These are the commandments and the judgments, which the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses unto the children of Israel in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES,

DEUTERONOMY.

THE ARGUMENT

Moses in the two last months of his life rehearseth what God had done for them, and their frequent murmuring, rebellious, and constant murmurings. He begs to enter into the land, but is permitted only to see it. He forbiddeth any communion with the nations for several reasons: chap. vii. He gives a short repetition of those sundry laws, moral, ceremonial, judicial, and military, which he had given them from whence this book is called DEUTERONOMY. Then, after many exhortations, he prophesieth of Christ, afterwards he shows how matters of war are to be managed, and gives many other particular directions with reference to duties, conditions, and persons of both sexes, he pronounceth blessings on the obedient and curses on the disobedient. He then gives a charge for laying up and reading of the law at certain times, and every seven years to be solemnly read before all the people, he composeth a song for common use, comprising the wonderful things here mentioned. He prophesieth of Christ's coming, and the calling of the Gentiles, seeth the land and dieth, leaving Joshua, after he had consecrated him, to succeed.

CHAP. I.

A rehearsal of what God had done for Israel in their forty years' wanderings, as God's command to depart 1-8. Moses' inability to judge alone 9-12. Other judges and officers appointed 13-15. Christ's coming in the judges, 17, 19. Their passage to Jericho 20-21. Spies sent to search the land of the Amorites 22-24. Their return and report 25. The disobedience of the people 26-33. God's wrath 34-40. They smite the Amorites 41. Their complaint to God, which he doth not regard 42-45.

THESE be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel on this side Jordan in the wilderness, in the plain over against the Red sea, between Paran, and Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizahab.

These are the laws, counsels, and admonitions delivered by Moses from God to Israel, which are here repeated for the instruction and obligation of those who by reason of their tender years were incapable either of understanding them, or of entering into covenant with God. Unto all

*Israel, to wit, by the heads or elders of the several tribes, or officers, who were to communicate these discourses to all the people in several assemblies. In the plain; either, 1 In the vast desert of Arabia. But that is no where called a plain. Or rather, 2 In the plain of Moab, as may appear by comparing this with ver 5, Numb. xxi 1, Deut. xxxiv. 8. Object. That was far from the Red Sea here mentioned. Answer. The word soph here used doth not signify the Red Sea, which is commonly called jam soph, and which was at too great a distance, but some other place now unknown to us, (as also most of the following places are,) so called from the seeds or flags, or rushes (which that word signifies) that grew in or near it, which reason of the name being common to other places with the Red Sea, it is not strange if they got the same name. Compare Numb. xxi 14 Paran, not that Numb. x 12 which there and elsewhere is called the wilderness of Paran, and which was too remote, but some other place called by the same name, than which nothing more usual Tophal and Leban, places not mentioned elsewhere. Hazezoth, of which see Numb. xi 35, xxxiii 17, 18. And these places seem to be the several bounds and limits not of the whole country of Moab, but of the plain of Moab, where Moses now was, and spake these words.*

2 (There are eleven days' journey from Horeb by the way of mount Seir unto Kadesh-barnea)

This is added to show that the reason why the Israelites in so many years were advanced no further from Horeb than to these plains, was not the great distance of the places, or length of the way, which was but a journey of seven days at most, but because of their rebellious, as is mentioned before and repeated in this book. Horeb, or Sinai the place where the law was given, which is promiscuously called by both those names. Mount Seir, or Mount Edom, i. e. the mountainous country of Seir, which was first possessed by the Horims and afterwards by the Edomites, Deut. ii 12. Kadesh-barnea was not far from the borders of Canaan, See Gen. xvi 14. Numb. xiii 26.

3 And it came to pass in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spake unto the children of Israel, according unto all that the Lord had given him in commandment unto them,

This was but a little before his death.
4 After he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth in Edrei.

His palace or mansion-house was at Astaroth and he was slain at Edrei, Numb. xxi 31, of both these places see Gen. xiv 5, Josh. xiii 31.

5 On this side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying

6 The Lord our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount

Of Horeb, where they continued about 40 years, see Exod. xix 1; Numb. x 11, 12.

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

To the mount of the Amorites, i. e. to the mountainous country where the Amorites dwell, which is opposed to the plain here following, where others of them dwelt. And this is the first mentioned, because it was in the borders of the land, see below, ver. 19, 20. The divers parts or bounds of the land are here mentioned.

8 Behold, I have set the land before you; go in and possess the land which the Lord swore unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them.

Before you Horeb before your faces, it is open to your view, and to your possession there is no impediment in the way. See of this phrase Gen. xiii 9, xxxiv. 16.

9 ¶ And I spake unto you at that time, saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone:

At that time, i. e. about that time, to wit, a little before their coming to Horeb, Exod. xxi 18.

10 The Lord your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The Lord God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, as he hath promised you.)

12 How can I myself alone bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife?

Your burden; the trouble of ruling and managing so perverse a people. Your strife, either your quarrellings with God; or rather your contentions among yourselves, for the determination whereof the elders were appointed.

13 ¶ Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

Persons of knowledge, wisdom, and experience, men famous, and had in reputation, for ability and integrity, for to such they would more readily submit.

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

15 So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and made them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

The chief, not in authority, which yet they had not but in endowments for good government. And officers, inferior officers, that were to attend upon the superior magistrates, and to execute their decrees.

16 And I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him.

That converseth or dwelleth with him. To such God would have justice equally administered as to his own people, partly for the honour of religion and partly for the interest which every man hath in matters of common right.

17 Ye shall not respect persons in judgment, but ye shall hear the small as well as the great, ye shall not be afraid of the face of man, for the judgment is God's, and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.

Not respect persons, Heb. not know or acknowledge faces, i. e. not give sentence according to the outward qualities of the person as he is poor or rich, your friend or enemy, but purely according to the merits of the cause. For which reason some of the Grecian lawgivers ordered that the judges should give sentence in the dark, where they could not see men's faces. See the same or the like phrase Deut. x 17, 2 Chron. xix 6, Job xiii 8, James i. 1. The small, persons of the meanest rank. The judgment is God's, i. e. it is passed in the name of God, and by commission from him, by you as representing his person, and doing his work, who therefore will own and defend on therein against all your enemies, and to whom you must give an exact account

18 And I commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do

I delivered unto you, and especially unto your judges, all the laws, statutes, and judgments revealed unto me by the Lord in Horeb

19 ¶ And when we departed from Horeb, we went through all that great and terrible wilderness, which ye saw by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, as the Lord our God commanded us, and we came to Kadesh-barnea

20 And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the mountain of the Amorites, which the Lord our God doth give unto us

21 Behold the Lord thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the Lord God of thy fathers hath said unto thee: fear not, neither be discouraged

22 ¶ And ye came near unto me every one of you, and said, We will send men before us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again by what way we must go up, and into what cities we shall come

23 And the saying pleased me well: and I took twelve men of you: one of a tribe

The saying pleased me well: for there seemed to be some prudence and good policy in it: but Moses could not see into their hearts, nor from what root this desire grew, but God saw it, and therefore he did not permit them to do so: their faith and courage, Numb xiv 1-3

24 And they turned and went up into the mountain, and came unto the valley of Eschol, and searched it out

The valley or the brook: the word signifies both for brooks commonly run in valleys. Of Eschol, i.e. of grapes, so called from the goodly cluster of grapes which they brought from thence, Numb xiv 23

25 And they took of the fruit of the land in their hands, and brought it down unto us, and brought us word again and said, It is a good land which the Lord our God doth give us

The fruit grape, pomegranate, and figs Numb xiv 23: it is a good land, which acknowledge me, coming from its enemies, should have provided with you (go) more than their discouraging words should have beat you off, because the Lord who had given you this land was unquestionably able to settle you in it in spite of all opposition

26 Notwithstanding ye would not go up, but rebelled against the commandment of the Lord your God

27 And ye murmured in your tents, and said: Because the Lord hath hated us, he hath brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us

Because the Lord hateth us: therefore designed to destroy us

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have discouraged our heart, saying, The people are greater and taller than we: the cities are great and walled up to heaven; and moreover we have seen the signs of the Anakims there

7. ye say we are greater in number and strength as I value

Up to heaven, i.e. to a great height. A common hyperbole, as Gen xi 4, Psal cxi 26. The Anakims, the children of Anak or Enak. See Judg i 10, 20

29 Then I said unto you, Dread not, neither be afraid of them

30 The Lord your God which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, according to all that he did for you in Egypt before your eyes

Where you were weak, dispirited, divided, raw, and inexperienced, and in a great measure unarmed, and able to do nothing against your numerous, potent, united enemies, but to stand still and see the salvation of God. And therefore now your distrust is highly unreasonable, when you have been hardened and fitted for military service by your travels, disciplined and experienced in some degree as to martial affairs, encouraged by frequent and glorious miracles for forty years together, and you are going into a country divided into several nations and kingdoms

31 And in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the Lord thy God bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place

God bare thee, or carried thee, as a father carries his weak and tender child in his arms, as Isa xlv 22, or as upon eagle's wings, as it is Exod xix 4, through difficulties and dangers, gently leading you according as you were able to go, and supporting you by his power and goodness. See of this or the like phrase Numb xi 12, Deut xxxiii 10, 11, Psal xxi 12, Isa xlii 3, 4

32 Yet in this thing ye did not believe: the Lord your God

In this matter which God commanded and encouraged you to do to wit in going confidently to possess the land (ye) in this way: which by God promised to fight for you and assured you of good success

33 Who went in the way before you, to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to show you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day

34 And the Lord heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, and swore, saying,

The voice of your words, to wit, your murmurings, your unthankful impatient, distrustful, and rebellious speech and carriages

35 Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I swear to give unto your fathers

36 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh: he shall see it, and to him will I give the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because he hath wholly followed the Lord

Caleb under whom Joshua is comprehended, as is manifest 1st Tim i ver 38, and Numb xiv 30, though not here expressed, because he was not now to be one of the people, but to be set over them as chief governor. The land, that particular part of the land. Compare Josh. xiv. 9.

37 Also the Lord was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither

For your sakes, upon occasion of your wickedness, your perverseness, by which you provoked me to speak thus freely, Psal cxi 32, 33

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, which standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: encourage him, for he shall cause Israel to inherit it

High state hath before thee, i. e. who is now thy minister and what, for such are oft described by this phrase, as I

we said should be a prey, and your chil- dren, which in that day had no know- go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it.

Had no knowledge between good and evil, a common de- scription of the state of childhood, as Jeremiah 11.

40 But as for you, turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea

41 Then ye answered and said unto me, We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us
And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill

Or, ye offered yourselves, or you began, or you earnestly resolved and attempted

42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, Go not up, neither fight, for I am not among you, lest ye be smit-

I am not among you, with my powerful presence and

43 So I spake unto you, and ye would not hear, but rebelled against the com-

44 And the Amorites, which dwell in that mountain, came out against you and

As bees do, as bees which being provoked come out of their hives in great numbers, and with great fury pursue

45 And ye returned and wept before the LORD, but the LORD would not hearken to your voice,
nor give ear unto you

46 So ye abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode
there

i. e. As you abode in Kadesh many, even forty days, until the space which you sent is turned to give you an account,

CHAP II

Thy march, from Kadesh-Barnea, 1—3 A charge that they trouble not the Edomites, 4, 5, nor the Moabites, nor the Amorites, 19 But are encouraged to fight the Amorites, they put them to flight, and take possession of their lands, 24—37

THEN we turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, as the LORD spake unto me and we compassed mount Seir many days

The mountainous country of Seir or Edom Many days, or, many years, even for thirty eight years

2 And the LORD spake unto me, saying,

3 Ye have compassed this mountain long enough turn you northward,

Towards the land of the Amorites and Canaanites,

4 And command thou the people, saying, Ye are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, and they shall be afraid of you; take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore:

Through the coast, or, by or near the coast or border, for they did not pass through their borders, as it is said, Numbers 21 21. And the particle both doth oft signify by or near, as Gen xxviii 13, Josh 1 13, Judge 5 5, Jer xxiii 7 Thus that difference may be reconciled, which others reconcile thus, that they at first denied it, but afterwards granted it. What dwell in Seir; these words restrain the prohibition to these particular children of Esau, for there were another sort or branch of Esau's children, which were to be meddled with and destroyed, even the Amalekites, Esau xvii 14; Deut xxv 17, who were Esau's posterity, Gen xxvi 12 They shall be afraid of you, but I charge you take no advantage of their fears, which you will be very apt to do

5 Meddle not with them, for I will not give you of their land, no, not so much as a foot breadth, because I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession

Meddle not with them, to war in battle at this time,

6 Ye shall buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat, and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink

Buy meat of them; for though the manner did yet run upon them they were not forbidden to buy their meats when they had opportunity, but only were forbidden arrogantly to hunger after them when they could not obtain them Buy water of them, for water in those parts was scarce, and therefore private persons did secretly dig pits for their particular use See Gen xxvi 18, Numbers 21 18

7 For the LORD thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand, thy wilderness these forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee, thou hast lacked nothing

By God's blessing thou art able to buy thy conveniences, and therefore thy theft and rapine will be unnecessary, be- cause without any pretence of necessity He knoweth, thou hast known, and observed or regarded with care and kindness, which that word oft note as Paul 1 6, xxvi 7, which experience of God's singular goodness to thee, should make thee trust him still, and not use any indirect and unjust practices to procure what thou wantest or desirest

8 And when we passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, through the way of the plain from Elath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab

Elath-gaber, of which see Numbers xxviii 15, which is either that place upon the Red Sea 1 Kings ix 26, or another of the same name We turned, to wit, from our direct road which lay through Edom's land

9 And the LORD said unto me, Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in battle, for I will not give thee of their land for a possession, because I have given Ar unto the children of Lot for a possession

Ar, the chief city of the Moabites, Numbers xxi 15, 28, here put for the whole country, which depended upon it.
The children of Lot, so called to signify that this provi- sion was not for their sakes, for they were a wicked people;
but for Lot's sake, whose memory God yet honours

10 The Emims dwell therein in times past, a people great, and many, and till, as the Anakims,

Phrase, much terrible for stature and strength is their name imports, see Gen xiv 5, whose expulsion by the Moabites is here noted as a great encouragement to the Israelites, for whose sake he would much more drive out the wicked and accursed Canaanites.

11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims, but the Moabites call them Emims

12 The Horims also dwell in Seir beforetime, but the children of Esau I succeeded them, when they had destroyed them from before them, and dwell in their stead, as Israel did unto the land of his possession which the Lord gave unto them

Object God had not yet given it unto them. Answer 1. The justness is here put for the future will give, after the manner of the prophet. 2. Things are said to be done when they are only resolved or decreed or attempted to be done, in which sense Reuben is said to deliver Joseph Gen xxxv 21, Balaak to fight against Israel, Josh xxiv 9. Abraham to have offered Isaac, Heb xi 17. 3. God may well be said to have given it, not only because he had purposed and promised to give it, but also because he was now about to give it, and had already given them some part of it, and that as an earnest of the whole. 4. This may be particularly understood of that part of Israel's possession which was to and for the which God had actually given to them that is to say the land of Canaan, even the land of Canaan on this side Jordan was not given to all of them but only to some of the tribes.

Of the Horims see Gen xiv 6. xxxv 20.

13 Now rise up, said I, and get you over the brook Zered. And we went over the brook Zered.

14 And the space in which we came from Kadesh barnea until we were come over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years, until all the generation of the men of war were wasted out from among the host, as the Lord swore unto them.

15 For indeed the hand of the Lord was against them to destroy them from among the host until they were consumed.

16 So it came to pass when all the men of war were consumed and died from among the people.

17 That the Lord spake unto me saying

18 Thou art to pass over through Ar, the coast of Moab, this day.

Or to cross the border of Moab by it.

19 And when thou comest nigh over against the children of Ammon distress them not, nor meddle with them, for I will not give thee of the land of the children of Ammon any possession, because I have given it to the children of Lot for a possession.

20 That also was recounted a land of giants, giants dwell therein in old time, and the Ammonites call them Zamzummims.

Which signifies men not to be overcome, or most preumptuous, or a curse.

21 A people great, and many, and tall, as the Anakims. But the Lord destroyed them before them, and they succeeded them, and dwell in their stead.

The Lord therefore will certainly do as much for his own people.

22 As he did to the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, when he destroyed the Horims from before them, and they succeeded them, and dwell in their stead even unto this day.

23 And the Avims which dwell in Hazerim, even unto Arzah, the Caphtorims, which came forth out of Caphtor, destroyed them, and dwell in their stead.

Caphtorims, a people akin to the Philistines, Gen x 14, and confederate with them in this enterprise, and so dwelling together, and by degrees were probably united together by marriages or other ways, and became one people, the Caphtorims being at last swallowed up in the Philistines. See Jer xlviii 4, Amos ix 7. Caphtor is by the learned thought to be Cappadocia, whither these people might make an expedition out of Egypt either because of the report of the great riches of part of that country which drew others thither from places equally remote, or after the manner of those ancient times or for some other reason now unknown.

24 Rise ye up, take your journey, and pass over the river Arnon, behold, I have given unto thine hand Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land begin to possess it, and contend with him in battle.

25 This day will I begin to put the dread of thee and the fear of thee upon the nations that are under the whole heaven, who shall hear report of thee, and shall tremble and be in anguish because of thee.

Under the whole heaven, which is a synecdoche and an hyperbole, but is explained by the following words, which mean that he sent men to those nations that he had of them.

26 And I sent messengers out of the wilderness of Kedemoth unto Sihon king of Heshbon, with words of peace, saying,

Kedemoth, so called from a city of that name Josh xiii 18, and called leshmon Numb xxi 20. With words of peace, with offers of peace, which they refusing, their destruction was highly just and reasonable.

27 Let me pass through thy land, I will go along by the high way, I will neither turn unto the right hand nor to the left.

In my direct road to Canaan, from which I will not turn into thy fields, or vineyards, or houses.

28 Thou shalt sell me meat for money, that I may eat, and give me water for money, that I may drink, only I will pass through on my feet.

Or, with my foot men, or with my company which are on foot, which is added significantly, because if their army had consisted as much of horsemen as many others did, their passage through his land might have been more mischievous and dangerous, but they were generally on foot.

29 As the children of Esau which dwell in Seir, and the Moabites which dwell in Ar, did unto me, until I shall pass over Jordan into the land which the Lord our God giveth us.

Object The king of Edom, 1. of the children of Esau did not grant them passage, Numb xx. These they did permit them to pass quietly by the borders, though not through the heart of their land, and in their passage the people sold them meat and drink, being, it seems, more kind to them than their king would have had them, and the report they here ascribe thus favours not to the king, though they

By God's command, these being a part of the people who were devoted by the Lord of life and death to utter destruction for their abominable wickedness. See Deut vi 2, vi 16

35 Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took

36 'From Arcoi, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead there was not one city too strong for us

Arcoi was in the border of Moab, but now in the hands of the Amorites. By the river Heb on the river where with it was compassed Num xvi 15, 28, Josh vi 2. Am 9. He speaks exclusively for this was Ar which now was in the Moabites' jurisdiction above, vi 9

37 Only unto the land of the children of Ammon thou earnest not, nor unto any place of the river Jabbok, nor unto the cities in the mountains, nor unto whatsoever the I own our God forbid us

Of the river Jabbok, i.e. beyond Jabbok, for that was the border of the Ammonites Josh vi 2. Object Half the land of the Ammonites is said to be given to the tribe of Gad Josh xiii 25. Answer This is true of that half of it which the Ammonites had taken from them, but not of the other half, which yet was in the possession of the Ammonites in the mountains, the mountainous country of the Ammonites. Forbad us, Heb commanded us commanding is put for forbidding here, as Gen ii 16, in 11, Ec vi 2, Deut iv 23. The word, may be thus rendered concerning which the Lord gave us command or charge, to wit that we should not meddle with them, as was said before. So it is only an ellipsis of the preposition, which is very frequent

CHAP III

Then march to Bashan, 1 Og its king is put to flight; they possess his land, 2-11, which is distributed to two tribes and half, 12-17, who are commanded to assist their brethren to possess the land beyond Jordan, 18-20. Moses encourages Joshua 21-22. His prayer to go into the promised land 23-25. God grants not his request, 26. He gives him a prospect of it, 27, and bids him encourage Joshua, 28

THEN we turned, and went up the way to Bashan, and Og the king of Bashan came out against us, he and all his people, to battle at Edrei.

2 And the Lord said unto me, Fear him not for I will deliver him, and all his people, and his land, into thy hand; and thou shalt do unto him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon

Fear him not, though he be of so frightful a look and stature, ver 11

3 So the Lord our God delivered into our hands Og also, the king of Bashan, and all his people, and we smote him until none was left to him remaining

4 And we took all his cities at that time, there was not a city which we took not from them, threescore cities, all the region of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Bashan

Argob a province within Bashan, or at least subject and belonging to Bashan, as appears from ver 13, 1 Kings iv 13, called Argob possibly from the name of a man, its former lord and owner

5 All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates, and bars, beside unwalled towns, great many

High wall gates, and bars, which may encourage you in your attempt upon Canaan notwithstanding the fenced cities which the spies told you of, and you must expect to find

6 And we utterly destroyed them, as we did unto Sihon king of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children, of every city

7 But all the cattle, and the spoil of the cities, we took for a prey to ourselves

8 And we took at that time out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorites the land that was on this side Jordan, from the river of Arnon unto mount Hermon

On this side Jordan it was when Moses wrote this book, but afterward when Israel passed over Jordan it was called the land beyond Jordan

9 (H hach Hermon the Sidonians call it, and the Amorites call it Shenu)

Elsewhere called Mount Gilead, and Libanus or Lebanon, and here Shenu and Sonon, and, by abbreviation Sun. Deut iv 48 which several names are given to this mountain partly by several people and partly in regard of several tops and parts of it, whence Shenu and Hermon are mentioned as distinct places Cant iv 8

10 'All the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and all Bashan, unto Salehah and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan

Gilead is sometimes taken largely for all the Israelites' possessions beyond Jordan, and so it comprehends Bashan, but here more strictly for that part of it which lies in and near Mount Gilead, and so it is distinguished from Bashan and Argob

11 For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of giants, he held, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron, is it not in Rathbath of the children of Ammon? nine cubits was the length the reed, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man

The other giants of Bashan were destroyed before, and the only when Og was killed, the Israelites' work was done. In Rathbath of the children of Ammon, where it might now be called because the Ammonites in some former battle with Og, had taken it as a spoil, or because after Og's death the Ammonites desired to have this monument of his greatness, and the Israelites permitted them to carry it pire as habitation for God, Exod. xv 2, and knew very well that God would choose a certain place for his habitation and to put his name there, Deut. xii 5; so he also knew that it was the manner both of the true worshippers of God and of idolaters to worship their God in high places, and particularly, that Abraham did worship God in the mount of Moriah, Gen. xxi 2, and therefore did either reasonably conjecture that God would choose some certain mountain for the place of his habitation, or possibly understood by revelation that in that very mount of Moriah, where Abraham performed that eminent and glorious act of worship there also the children of Abraham should have their place of constant and settled worship. Thus he seems to call that mountain, emphatically and eminently, that which was much in Moses's thoughts, though not in his eye, and the blessed (as the Hebrew tab ot signifies) or the goodly mountain. Or the mountain may be here put for the mountainous countries, as that word is oft used, is Gen. xxi 9, Numb. xii 29, xxiii 7, Deut. i 7, Josh. x 6, xi 16, 21, &c. And it is known that a great part of the glory and beauty and profit of this country lay in its hills or mountains. See Deut. xi 11, xxiii 15. And that a goodly mountain may by an enallage of the number be put for those goodly mountains in Canaan which were many. Thus also he proceeds gradually in this discourse and description, and prays that he may see in general the good land that is beyond Jordan, and then particularly the goodly mountains of it and especially that famous mount of Lebanon, which was so celebrated for its tall and large cedars and other trees and excellent plants. See Psal. xxix 5, civ 16, Isa. ii 13, xiv 8.

20 But the LORD was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me; and the LORD said unto me, Let it suffice thee, speak no more unto me of this matter.

For your sakes, by occasion of your sins, which provoked me to unadvised words and carriages, Psal. cxi 32, 33. See Numb. xx 12, Deut. xxxi 2, xxxiv 1. Let it suffice thee, that it thus is my pleasure and unalterable resolution. Compare 2 Cor. xii 9.

27 Get thee up into the top of Pisgah and lift up thine eyes westward and northward and southward and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

Pisgah, of which see on Numb. xxxii 12. Lift up thine eyes towards the land of Canaan and its several quarters.

28 But charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him for he shall go over before this people and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see.

Charge Joshua, give him commission and authority, and command to execute his trust and conduct the people. Strengthen him with exhortations and promises, it is assurance of my presence and help, and of good success. He shall go over: it was not Moses but Joshua or Jesus, that was to give the people rest. Heb. iv 8.

29 So we abode in the valley over against Beth-peor.

The house or temple of Peor, or of Baal-peor, of which see Numb. xxv 3, whence this place or city had its name.

CHAP. IV.

An exhortation to obey the law, 1—13, and warning against idolatry, 14—24, from the mischief of it upon themselves and children, 25—28, God's promise upon their repentance, 29—31, and from God's witnesses towards them, 32—40. Cities of refuge are appointed, 41—43.

NOW therefore hearken, O Israel, unto the statutes and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

The statutes, the laws which concern the worship and service of God. The judgments, the laws concerning your duties to men. So these two comprehend both tables, and the whole law of God.

2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

Ye shall not add, by devising other doctrines or ways of worship than what I have taught or prescribed. Numb. xv 39, 40, Deut. xii 8, 32, 1 Kings vii 35, Prov. xxx 6, Math. xx 9, for this were to accuse me of want of wisdom or care or faithfulness in not giving you sufficient instructions for my own service. Neither shall ye diminish, by rejecting or neglecting any thing which I have commanded, though it seem never so small.

3 Your eyes have seen what the LORD did because of Baal-peor for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

4 But ye that did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

For though the generosity of heathen people, the latter and degenerate age, the world did, through inveterate prejudices, and for their own lusts and interest, condemn the laws of the Hebrews foolish and absurd, yet it is most certain that divers of the wisest heathens did highly approve of them, so far that they made use of divers of them, and then led them into their own laws and constitutions. And Moses, the giver of these laws, hath been intimated with great honour for his wisdom and learning. And particularly, the old heathen oracles expressly said, that the Chaldeans or Hebrews, who worshipped the uncreated God, were the only wise men.

7 For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?

God nigh unto them, by glorious miracle, by the presence of his special presence, by the operations of his grace, and particularly, as it here follows, by his readiness to hear our prayers, and to give us those succours which we call upon him for.

8 And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law which I set before you this day?

Whereby he implies that the true greatness of a nation doth not consist in pomp or power, or largeness of empire, as commonly men think, but in the righteousness of its law.

9 Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons;

<sup>Ex 19: 10, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100</sup>
 10 Specially the day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

Some of them stood in Horeb in their own persons, though then they were but young: the rest stood then in the loins of their parents in whom they may well be said to stand there, because they are said to have entered into covenant with God, because their parents did so in their name and for their use.

11 And ye came near and stood under the mountain, and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst of heaven with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

Turning up into the heaven, which is oft called heaven, and the midst of the heart of it is not only that which is strictly and properly the middle part but that which is within it, though but a little way in which sense places or persons or things are said to be in the heart of the sea, Exod. xv. 8, Prov. xxiii. 31. Ezek. xxxiii. 2. and Christ in the heart of the earth Matt. xii. 40.

12 And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude, only ye heard a voice.

No resemblance or representation of God, whereby either his person or properties or actions were represented, such as were usual among the heathen.

13 And he declared unto you his covenant which he commanded you to perform even ten commandments, and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

Statutes and judgments are the ceremonial and political laws which are here distinguished from the moral or the ten commandments.

15 Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves, for ye saw no manner of similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire.

By which came out the promises made in a promise to the worship of images.

God who is other places and times do appear in similitude in the fashion of men, now in the most common appearance, when he comes to give of his law, for the reason of the direction of the Israelites in the worship of God, in the day to men he expressly records all such representations, to show that he disallows all worship of images, and himself declares of what kind sever as it here follows ver. 16. 17. because he is the invisible God, and cannot be represented by any visible image. See Isa. xl. 18. Act. xvii. 29.

16 Lest ye corrupt yourselves, and make you graven image, the similitude of any beast, the likeness of male or female.

Lest ye corrupt your mind with men's old carnal thoughts of God. Or, lest ye come by or courses by worshipping God in a carnal manner or by falling into idolatry of graven images, whether for worship, or for the representation of God, as it is expressed ver. 19. for either way it was not simple unlawful, but a picture or mark, a figure of a man, or a beast.

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

Whereby the heathen nations did represent and worship God, some by an ox, some by a goat, or a lion, or a serpent, or a fish, &c.

18 The likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth.

19 And lest thou lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldst be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath divided unto all nations under the whole heaven.

Driven to worship them, i. e. strongly inclined, and in a manner constrained, partly by the glory of these heavenly bodies which may seem to be made for higher purposes, than to enlighten this lump of earth, partly from that natural propensity which is in men to idolatry. Or shouldst be driven or thrust to wit out of the way of the Lord (as it is more fully expressed, Deut. xiii. 6) or be seduced or led aside, as silly sheep easily are, and worship them. Or shouldst be cast down, or throw down thyself and worship them, i. e. worship them by falling down before them, unto all nations, which are not gods, but creatures, made not for the worship, but for the use of men, yea of the meanest and most barbarous people under heaven, and therefore cannot without great absurdity be worshipped, especially by you who are so much advanced above other nations in wisdom and knowledge, and in this, that ye are my peculiar people.

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of the iron furnace, even out of Egypt, to be unto him a people of inheritance, as ye are this day.

The furnace where iron and other metals are melted to which Egypt is fully compared, not only for its heat and misery which they there endured, but also because they were thoroughly tried and purged thereby as metals are by the fire. People of inheritance, his peculiar possession from generation to generation. See Exod. xvi. Deut. vi. 6, 17. And therefore for you to forsake God and worship idols will be not only wickedness, but most abominable ingratitude.

21 Furthermore the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, and said that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

God hath intended you the favour which he denied to me, which are daily increasing your obligation to God.

22 But I must die in this land, I must not go over Jordan, but ye shall go over and possess that good land.

23 Take heed unto yourselves, lest ye to get the covenant of the LORD your God, which he made with you, and make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee.

Or, commanded thee, to wit, not to do, which is easily understood by comparing this place with Exod. xx. 1, 2, and with Gen. iii. 11, where this phrase is fully expressed. See more on Lev. xv. 2, Deut. ii. 37.

24 For the LORD thy God is a consuming fire, even a jealous God.

A consuming fire, a just and terrible God, who notwithstanding his special relation to thee, will severely punish, and destroy thee if thou provokest him by idolatry, or other ways. A jealous God, who being exposed to thee will be highly incensed against thee, (if thou followest after other lovers, or committest whoredom with idols,) and will bear no rival or partner.

25 ¶ When thou shalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and 'shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and 'shall do evil in the sight of the Lord thy God, to provoke him to anger.

In the sight of the Lord these words are here added, either, 1 As a caution Your idolatry though possibly secretly and cunningly managed, will not be hid from him, he sees it, and he will punish it. Or 2 To aggravate their spiritual whoredom as being committed in the sight and presence of their Lord and Husband, whose eye is more particularly upon them in all their ways, than it is upon other people. Or 3 By way of opposition unto men's judgment idolatry oftentimes seems good, and reasonable, and religious in the eyes of men, but, saith he, it is evil in the eyes of the Lord, whose judgment is most considerable.

26 ¶ I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it, ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed.

Heaven and earth, either, 1 Figuratively i.e. God and angels, and men. Or either, 2 Properly, it being usual in Scripture to call in the senseless creatures as witnesses in such cases, as Deut xxxi 1, Isa i 2, Jer ii 12.

27 And the Lord shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the Lord shall lead you.

28 And there ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

I.e. Idols. You shall be compelled by men and give up by you to idolatry. So that very thing which was your choice shall be your punishment, it being just and usual for God to punish one sin by giving them up to another, as is witnessed from Rom i 21-23.

29 ¶ But if from thence thou shalt seek the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul.

If thou seek him, if thou desirest his help and favour. See Deut xxx 2, Isa lv 6. With all thy heart, i.e. sincerely and fervently.

30 When thou art in tribulation, and all these things fall upon thee, 'even in the latter days, if thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice,

In the latter days either in general, in succeeding ages and generations, or particularly in the days of the Messias which are commonly called in Scripture the latter, or last days, as Isa ii 2, Hos v 5, Mich ii 1, Dan ii 41, Heb i 2, x 26. And so this may respect the conversion and redemption of the Jewish nation even in those times when their case seems most desperate, when they have forsaken their God and rejected their Messias for many ages, to wit towards the end of the world.

31 (For the Lord thy God is a merciful God,) he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he swore unto them.

Made with thy fathers, including their posterity, as Gen. xlvii. 7.

32 For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it?

From the one side of heaven i.e. of the earth under heaven. Ask all the inhabitants of the world. Compare Matt xii 31, with Mark xiii 27.

33 ¶ Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?

i.e. And was not overwhelmed and consumed by such a glorious appearance. See Exod xxxi 11, xxxiii 20.

34 Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the Lord your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

By temptations by tribulations and persecutions, which are commonly called temptations, which are here fully mentioned as one great occasion first of their cries unto God, and then of God's coming for their rescue. Or temptation is the general title which is explained by the following particulars signs and wonders &c., which are called temptations because they were trials both to the Egyptians and Israelites whether thereby they would be induced to believe and obey God or no. Great terrors, raised in the minds of the Egyptians, as the history sheweth, compare Deut ii 23 xxxv 12, or by terrible things done among them.

35 Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the Lord he is God, there is none else beside him.

36 ¶ Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee: and upon earth he shewed thee his great fire, and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire.

Out of heaven, i.e. out of the air, above Mount Sinai. See Exod xix 9, xx 18, 22. Upon earth, at the top of Mount Sinai.

37 And because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose thee out after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt.

In his sight, keeping his eye fixed upon him, as the father doth on his beloved child. Or with his presence, i.e. he did not send them forth by Moses but he himself was present with them, and as it were marched along with them in the pillar of cloud and fire.

38 ¶ To drive out nations from before thee greater and mightier than thou art, to bring them in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

39 Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else.

40 ¶ Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, for ever.

11 ¶ Then Moses severed the cities on this side Jordan toward the sun rising
As God had commanded him, Num<sup>b</sup> xxx. 6. 11

12 ¶ That the slayer might flee thither, which should kill his neighbour unawares, and hated him not in times past and that fleeing unto one of these cities he might live

13 Namely, Bezer in the wilderness, in the plain country, of the Reubenites, and Ramoth in Gilead, of the Gadites, and Golan in Bashan of the Manassites

14 And this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel

Which had been already intimated already but is more particularly and positively expressed in the following chapters, to which these words are a preface

15 These are the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which Moses spake unto the children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt

16 On this side Jordan, in the valley over against Beth-peor in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel smote, after they were come forth out of Egypt

17 And they possessed his land and the land of Og king of Bashan, two kings of the Amorites, which were on this side Jordan toward the sun rising

18 From Atree, which is by the bank of the river Arnon even unto mount Sion which is Hermon

19 And all the plain on this side Jordan eastward, even unto the sea of the plain, under the springs of Pisgah

CHAP. V

God upon Mount Horeb makes a covenant with Israel
The covenant of ten commandments is ascribed to Moses in two tables 6. 22 The Israelites desire that not God but Moses may speak to them 23. 24. which he opposes at 28. V. Moses when set in obedience, with the people at 32. 33

AND Moses called all Israel and said unto them, Hear O Israel the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day that ye may learn them, and keep, and do them

Moses called all Israel to wit his hearers who were to make it to be done

2 The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb

3 The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers but with us, even us, who are all here alive this day

4 Not only with the fathers but with us, even us, who are all here alive this day
The covenant being heretofore as it is Gen. xxii. 28, xxx. 10. I Sam. xii. 15. Gen. xxi. 31, Matt. ix. 17. On 2. Not as of old with the fathers but with us, even us, who are all here alive this day
But then the word covenant is a word of promise, the covenant of grace in general to us, and the covenant of grace in particular to this people, and in special designation of the covenant of Sinai, as appears by the foregoing words
The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers but with us, even us, who are all here alive this day
The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers but with us, even us, who are all here alive this day

made with all that are now alive, which is most true, for it was made with the elder sort of them in their own persons and with the rest in their parents, who did covenant for them for this phrase, with us is put exclusively as to their fathers but not as to their posterity, as is evident from the nature of the covenant, Acts ii. 39, and course of the story

4 The Lord talked with you face to face in the mount out of the midst of the fire,

Not in a visible shape, which was utterly denied, Deut. iv. 12, 15, but personally and immediately, not by the mouth or ministry of Moses, plainly and certainly, as when two men talk face to face, freely and familiarly, so as not to overwhelm and confound you Compare Exod. xxxiii. 11 Num. xii. 8

5 I stood between the Lord and you at that time to show you the word of the Lord for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount saying,

As a mediator or messenger between you, according to your desire below, ver. 27 Compare Exod. xxx. 10 & xx. 19 Gal. iii. 19 The word of the Lord not the commandments, which God himself uttered, but the statutes and judgments

6 I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt from the house of bondage

The ten commandments, delivered Exod. xx. are here repeated with some small difference of words, but the substance is perfectly the same and therefore the explanation of it is not to be fetched there

7 Thou shalt have none other gods before me

8 Thou shalt not make thee any graven image or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth

9 Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them nor serve them for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

10 And showing mercy unto thousand of them that love me and keep my commandments

11 Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain

12 Keep the sabbath day to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee

Keep the sabbath day, to wit, in mind and memory as Exod. xx. 8 is God hath commanded thee, to wit, Exod. xx, whether he directs them, and therefore he omits the argument of the creation, which is used in the

13 Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work

14 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates, that thy manservant and thy maidservant may rest as well as thou.

15 And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day.

Remember that thou wast a servant, and therefore art highly obliged both to serve that God who redeemed thee, especially upon his own day, and not to grudge thy servants their rest upon that day.

16 Honour thy father and thy mother, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee, that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

17 Thou shalt not kill.

18 Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

19 Neither shalt thou steal.

20 Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

21 Neither shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife, neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field, or his manservant, or his maid-servant, his ox, or his ass, or any thing that is thy neighbour's.

In Lev. xx. the order is contrary, and thy neighbour's house is put before his wife, whereby it is evident that Moses intended this but for one commandment, whereas in the order of the words was an inconsiderable circumstance, if there were two commandments, as some would have it, it would be altogether uncertain which is the ninth, and which the tenth commandment, seeing the one is first, Lev. xx., and the other here.

22 ¶ These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice: and he added no more. And he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

He added no more, he ceased for that time to speak immediately, and with that loud voice unto the people, for the tables were delivered to Moses, and by him communicated to the people. Thus he did to show the pre-eminence of that law above the rest, and its everlasting obligation.

23 And it came to pass, when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the heads of your tribes, and your elders,

24 And ye said, Behold, the Lord our God hath shewed us his glory, and his greatness, and we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth.

25 Now therefore why should we die? for this great fire will consume us, if we hear the voice of the Lord our God any more, then we shall die.

Why should we die? for though God hath for this reason respect to our admiration, yet we shall never be able to endure any further discourse from him in such a terrible manner, but shall certainly sink under the burden of it. Compare Gen. xxi. 13, Judg. vi. 22.

26 For who is there of all flesh, that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

There is here, not for man in his frail, corruptible, and mortal state, as Matt. xv. 17, 1 Cor. xv. 50, Eph. vi. 12, Heb. ii. 14.

27 Go thou near, and hear all that the Lord our God shall say, and speak thou unto us all that the Lord our God shall speak unto thee, and we will hear it, and do it.

28 And the Lord heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me, and the Lord said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: they have well said all that they have spoken.

29 O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!

Heb. Who will give them such an heart? This is spoken of God after the manner of men, to show that such a heart is desirable to him, and required by him: otherwise it is certain that God can give such a heart, and hath promised to give it, Jer. xxxii. 10, Ezek. xxxvi. 27. And if God will work, who can hinder him? Job xi. 10.

30 Go say to them, Get you into your tents again.

31 But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will speak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it.

32 Ye shall observe to do therefore as the Lord your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

Neither by superstitious additions to God's commands, nor by a bold or profane rejection or contempt of any one of them.

33 Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may go well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.

CHAP. VI.

The end of the commandment, obedience, 1, 2. He exhorts them thereto, 3. The unity of the Divine essence asserted, 4. The duty required of the Israelites, 5, to love God, 5, 6, and teach their children, 7, to use signs, as monuments of it, 8, 9. Not to forget God in prosperity, 10—12. Not to worship other gods, 13—15. Not to tempt God, 16, but keep his commandments, 17, and to train up the knowledge of God's works to their posterity, 20—22.

NOW these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land which ye go to possess it.

1 That thou mightest fear the Lord thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee, thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that thy days may be prolonged

That thou mightest fear the Lord which he hearkeneth unto, to be the first principle of true obedience.

3 ¶ Hear therefore, O Israel and observe to do it that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, for is the Lord God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey

4 ¶ Hear, O Israel The Lord our God is one Lord

One in essence and the only object of our worship

5 And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might

Now he shows another spring or principle of sincere obedience to God even hearty love to God which will make his work and service easy, and that the fear he mentioned before ver 2, was such as would consist with love to God and not that slavish fear and honour which produce hypocrisy

6 And these words which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart

7 In thy mind to remember them, and meditate upon them and in thy affection to love and pursue them

7 And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up

Teach them diligently Heb what or see peritua is they may put it up at their heart The metaphor signifies the manner of instructing them that it is to be done diligently, unto thy frequent thoughts and devotion

8 And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes

Thou shalt use all diligence and use all means to keep them in thy remembrance as men of time bind some thing upon their hands or put it before their eyes to prevent forgetfulness of a thing which they much desire to remember compare Prov iii 5, vi 21, vii 3 See the note on Exod xii 16

9 And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates

10 And it shall be, when the Lord thy God shall have brought thee into the land which he swore unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities which thou buildedst not

11 And houses full of all good things, which thou buildedst not, and wells digged, which thou diggedst not, vineyards and olive trees which thou plantedst not, when thou shalt have eaten and be full

12 Then beware lest thou forget the Lord which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage

13 Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and give him a true heart, and shalt swear by his name

Where thou hast a calf and just sworn by his name, understand not, as Deut 32 not by idols, or any creature

14 Ye shall not go after other gods, of the gods of the people which are round about you,

15 (For the Lord thy God is a jealous God among you) lest the anger of the Lord thy God be kindled against thee, and destroy thee from off the face of the earth

Among you, Heb in the midst of you, to see and observe all your ways and your turnings aside to other gods

16 ¶ Ye shall not tempt the Lord your God, as ye tempted him in Massah.

16 Not provoke him as the following instance explains sinners, especially presumptuous sinners, are oft said to tempt God, i.e. to make a trial of God, whether he be what he pretends to be, so wise as to see their sins, so just and true and powerful as to take vengeance on them for their sins concerning which they are very apt to doubt because of the present impunity and prosperity of many such persons See Numb xiv 22, Psal lxxviii 18, Matt iv 7, Acts v 9

17 Ye shall diligently keep the commandments of the Lord your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes, which he hath commanded thee

18 And thou shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the Lord that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the good land which the Lord swore unto thy fathers,

Not that which is right in thine own eyes as many persons and unful practices seem right and good to our unaided men Let God's will and word and not thine own fancy or invention be the rule in God's service God is often said to be right in God's right as he xxxv 15 Acts iv 19, and evil actions are oft said to be right in our own eyes 1 Deut xii 5 Judg xvii 6

19 To cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the Lord hath spoken

20 And when thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying, What mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord our God hath commanded you?

21 Then thou shalt say unto thy son, We were Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt, and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand

22 And the Lord shewed signs and wonders, great and fierce, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, before our eyes

23 And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he swore unto our fathers

24 And the Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, for our good always, that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day

The benefit of obedience is ours, not God's, Job xxxv 7, and therefore our obedience is highly reasonable, and absolutely necessary

25 And it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us and pronounced by God to be truly righteous and holy persons if we sincerely obey him, otherwise we shall be declared to be unrighteous and ungodly persons and all our profession of religion will appear to be an hypocrisy. Or, mercy shall be to us, or with us for as the Hebrew word rendered righteousness is very oft put for mercy, as Psal. cxv. 5, xxxvi. 10, h. 11, Prov. x. 2, xi. 1, Dan. ix. 16, &c., so this sense seems best to agree both with the scripture use of this phrase, in which righteousness seldom or never, to my remembrance, but grace or mercy frequently, is said to be to us or with us, as 2 Sam. xv. 20, Psal. lxxviii. 24, Prov. xiv. 22; Gal. vi. 16, 2 John 3, and with the foregoing verse and argument, God, saith he, ver. 21, commanded these things for our good, that he might preserve us alive, as it is this day. And, saith he in this verse this is not all, for as he hath done us good, so he will go on to do us more and more good, and God's mercy shall be to us with us, in the remainder of our lives and for ever, if we observe, &c.

Heb righteousness shall be to us We shall be counted

CHAP. VII.

Israel is commanded to cast out the Hittites the Perizzites, &c. 1 All communion with them forbidden. 2, 3 for fear of idolatry. 4 They must ruin the places of idolatry. 5 The Israelites' holiness and relation to God. 6 His faithfulness to the obedient. 7 and vengeance on them that hate him. 8 The advantages of obedience. 9 God encourages them, and promises to drive out the nations before them. 10-21 They are commanded to destroy their images, &c., and keep themselves clean from their cursed things, &c.

WHEN the Lord thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou.

There were ten in Gen. xxi. 19-21, but this being some hundreds of years after that it is not strange if three of them were either destroyed by foreign or domestic wars or by cohabitation and marriage united with and swallowed up in some of the rest.

2 And when the Lord thy God shall deliver them before thee, thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them: thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them.

To covenant with them, to spare them or permit them to dwell with thee in the land. Other nations had more favour but these were for their great wickedness and for the good of Israel, devoted to utter destruction.

3 Neither shalt thou make marriages with them, thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

There is manifest danger of apostasy and idolatry from such matches, which reason doth both limit the law to such of these as were unconverted, otherwise Salmon married Rahab, Matt. i. 5, and enlarge it to other idolatrous nations, as appears from 1 Kings xi. 2, Ezra ix. 2. Neh. xii. 23.

5 But thus shall ye deal with them, ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire.

Idolaters planted groves about the temples and altars of their gods. Hereby God designed to take away whatsoever might bring their idolatry to remembrance or occasion the reviving of it.

6 For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God: the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The Lord did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people: for ye were the fewest of all people.

To wit, at that time when God first declared his love to you, and choice of you for his peculiar people, which was done to Abraham. For Abraham had but one son concerned in this choice and covenant, to wit, Isaac, and that was in his hundredth year, and Isaac was sixty years old ere he had a child, and then they had only two children, and though Jacob had twelve sons, yet it was a long time ere they made any considerable increase. Nor do we read of any great multiplication of them till after Joseph's death, 1 Gen. xvi. 7.

8 But because the Lord loved you, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the Lord brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

Because the Lord loved you, &c. because it pleased him to love you, it was his free choice without any cause or motive on your part. Compare Deut. x. 15, 1 Sam. xii. 22, Psal. xlv. 3.

9 Know therefore that the Lord thy God, he is God: the faithful God, which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him, and keep his commandments to a thousand generations.

The faithful God, true to his word, and constant in performing all his promises.

10 And to repay them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

Them that hate him, not only those who hate him directly and properly, (as so did few or none of the Israelites, to whom he here speaks, but those who hate him by construction and consequence: those who hate and oppose his people and word and image: those who pre-emptuously and wilfully persist in the breach of God's commandments, as appears from ver. 9 where the love of God, to which the hatred is opposite, is described and expressed by the keeping of his commandments. To their face, is openly, and so as they shall see it, and not be able to avoid it. He will not be slack, to wit, so as some men count slackness, 2 Pet. iii. 9, so as to delay it beyond the fit time or so as to forget mercy, yet withal he is long-suffering, and slow to anger, as that and other places inform us.

11 Thou shalt therefore keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 Wherefore it shall come to pass, if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep, and do them, that the Lord thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he swore unto thy fathers.

The covenant of mercy or grace which he out of know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live

1 e By every or any thing which God appoints for this end, how unlikely soever it may seem to be for nourishment as appears in the manna, seeing it is not the creature, but only God's command and blessing upon it, that makes it sufficient for the support of life.

4 Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years

Thy raiment did not wear away through age which thy feet need not have done without a miracle, neither did thy foot swell, notwithstanding thy long and hard travels which also was miraculous

5 Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, as a man chasteneth his son, so the Lord thy God chasteneth thee

1 e Unwillingly, being constrained by thy necessity, moderately, in judgment remembering mercy and for thy reformation, not for thy destruction. Compute Prov iii 11 12, Heb xii 5 &c

6 Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, and to fear him

7 For the Lord thy God bringeth thee into a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills

Depths, 1 e deep wells, or springs or lakes, which were rivers and fountains

8 A land of wheat, and barley and vines, and fig trees and pomegranates, a land of oil olive, and honey

Of olive oil, Heb of the olive tree of oil 1 e not of wild olive but of fruitful olive trees, which yield plenty of oil

9 A land where in thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack any thing in it, a land whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayst dig brass

Where are mines of iron in a mountain, and upon which travellers must tread, and where they dig upon stones, and out of whose hill thou mayst dig brass to wit iron plentifully. These are mentioned, because they had none such in Egypt where they were

10 When thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the Lord thy God for the good land which he hath given thee

1 e Solemnly praise him for thy food, which is a debt of gratitude and justice, because it is from his providence and favour that thou receivest both thy food and thy sustenance and strength by it. The more a man is bound to that too common pretences of duty, who professing to believe in God and his providence from whom all their comforts come, grudge to own him at their need either by desiring his blessing before them, or by offering him praise to God after them

11 Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day

12 Lest when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein

13 And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied,

14 Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage

Thine heart be lifted up, as if thou didst receive and enjoy these things either by thy own wisdom, and valour, and industry ver 17 or for thy own merit, Deut ix 4 See Hos xiii 6, 1 Cor iv 7

15 Who led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water, who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint,

16 Who led thee in the wilderness with a manna, which thy fathers knew not, that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end

That he might humble thee, by keeping thee in a constant dependence upon him for every day's food, and convincing thee what an impotent helpless and beggarly creature thou art in thyself having nothing whereon to subsist, but from him to mouth, and being supported wholly by the alms of Divine goodness given to thee from day to day. The mercies of God if duly considered, are as powerful an argument or mean to humble us as the greatest afflictions because they increase our debt to God, and manifest our dependence upon him, and insufficiency without him, and by making God great they make us little in our own eyes though this clause as well as that which follows, may have respect to their afflictions mentioned ver 15. At thy latter end, 1 e that after he hath purged and prepared thee by afflictions he may give thee, and thou mayst receive and enjoy his blessings with less disadvantage whilst by the remembrance of former afflictions thou art made thankful for them and more cautious not to abuse and forget them again

17 And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth

18 But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he swore unto thy fathers as it is this day

To a Curat in this word is used, Numb xxx 19, Job xx 18. Prov xxx 20

19 And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the Lord thy God, and walk after thine gods and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish

20 As the nations which the Lord destroyed before your face, so shall ye perish because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the Lord your God

Israel's march over Jordan to possess Canaan 1-5 But must not avert it to their own righteousness 1-6 1 rehearsal of their manifold provocations at Horeb, 8, at Iamoth, 22, and at Kadesh-barnea, 23

III AR, O Israel Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, cities great and fenced up to heaven,

And thou shalt do so shortly, within a little time the word day being put for time, as Job viii 56, 1 Cor x 11, Rev x 11 within two months, for Moses spoke thus on the third day of the eleventh month, Deut i 1 and it passed over Jordan on the tenth day of the first month, Josh. iv. 19. Nations, i. e. the land of those nations, for that only they were to possess, but as for the nations or people they were not to possess, but to destroy them. Thus they are said to inherit God. Jer. xix. 1, i. e. the country and cities of God, as it is there explained. Greater and mightier than thyself, thus he adds, partly that they might not be surprised when they find them to be such, partly that they might not trust to their own strength but wholly rely upon God. Help, for the destroying of them, and after the work was done might ascribe the praise and glory of it to God alone and not to themselves. I ended up to heaven, is the phrase used, Deut. i. 28. See on Gen. xi. 4.

2 A people great and tall, the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard and say, Who can stand before the children of Anak?

Either from the size, or rather from common fame, for this seems to be a proverb used in those times.

3 Understand therefore this day, that the Lord thy God is he which goeth over before thee, as a consuming fire he shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face. So shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the Lord hath said unto thee.

Quickly, without great difficulty or long wars.

4 Speak not thou in thine heart, after that the Lord thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness the Lord hath brought me in to possess this land; but for the wickedness of these nations the Lord doth drive them out from before thee.

5 Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess this land; but for the wickedness of these nations the Lord thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that he may perform the word which the Lord swore unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Neither for thy upright heart nor holy life, which are the two things which God above all things regards. 1 Chron. xxix. 17, Ps. lxxv. 1, 2, and consequently he excludes all merit. And yet they who did not deserve this earthly inheritance could not merit the kingdom of glory. That he saffes from the word which he swore, to show my faithfulness in accomplishing the promise which I gratuitously made and confirmed with my oath. By which words it is implied that this land was not given to them for the righteousness of their fathers though they were righteous and holy persons and much less for their own righteousness which they had not, as it follows.

6 Understand therefore, that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness, for thou art a stiffnecked people.

Rebellious and perverse, and a disservice of all pretence of righteousness, such were the people but there were divers particular persons in them truly righteous and holy, and yet even their righteousness is denied to be the reason of their inheritance.

7 Remember and forget not, how thou provokest the Lord thy God to wrath, not with witness from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt until thou camest unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the Lord.

8 Also thou hast provoked the Lord to wrath, so that the Lord was angry with you to have destroyed you.

When your miraculous deliverance out of Egypt was fresh in memory, when God had but newly manifested himself to you in so stupendous and dreadful a manner and had taken you into covenant with himself, when God was actually conferring further mercies upon you.

9 When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the Lord made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights, I neither did eat bread nor drink water.

I wholly abstained from all meat and drink. Compare 1 Kings xiii. 8, 9, 17, 2 Kings vi. 22.

10 And the Lord delivered unto me two tables of stone written with the finger of God, and on them was written according to all the words, which the Lord spake with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly.

Immediately and miraculously, which was done not only to procure the greater reverence to the law, but also to signify that it was the work of God alone to write this law upon the tables of men's hearts. See Jer. xxxi. 33, 2 Cor. iii. 7. In the day of the assembly, i. e. when the people were gathered by God's command to the bottom of Mount Sinai, to hear and receive God's ten commandments from his own mouth.

11 And it came to pass at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the Lord gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant.

12 And the Lord said unto me, Arise, get thee down quickly from hence, for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them, they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore the Lord spake unto me, saying, I have seen this people, and behold, it is a stiffnecked people.

14 Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

Let me alone, stop not the course of my fury by thy intercession.

15 So I turned and came down from the mount, and the mount burned with fire, and the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the Lord your God, and had made you a molten calf; ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the Lord had commanded you.

17 And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.

Not by an unbridled passion, but in zeal for God's honour, and by the direction of God's Spirit, to signify to the people that the covenant between God and them contained in those tables was broken and made void, and they were now quite cast out of God's favour, and could expect nothing from him but fiery indignation and severe punishment. See on 1 Cor. xxi. 14.

18 And I fell down before the Lord, as at the first, forty days and forty nights. I did neither eat bread, nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the Lord to provoke him to anger

I full deprec. in way of humiliation and supplication, on your behalf.

19 <sup>Ex 32 10, 11</sup> For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure, wherewith the Lord was wroth against you to destroy you <sup>Ex 32 14, 35 17, 38 10 16, 18 106 25</sup> But the Lord hearkened unto me at that time also

20 And the Lord was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him and I prayed for Aaron also the same time

The Lord was very angry with Aaron though he was only accessory, as being persuaded, and in a manner compelled, to comply with your desire

21 And <sup>Ex 32 17, 18 31 7</sup> I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount

Your sin, i. e. the object and matter of your sin as sin taken for xxxi 7 I cast the dust thereof into the brook that there might be no monument or remembrance of it left

22 And at <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> Taberah, and at <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> Massah, and at <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> Kibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the Lord to wrath

23 Likewise <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> when the Lord sent you from Kadesh-barnea, saying, Go up and possess the land which I have given you then ye rebelled against the commandment of the Lord your God, and ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice

24 <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> We have been rebellious against the Lord from the day that I knew you

25 Thus I fell down before the Lord forty days and forty nights, as I tell down at the first because the Lord had said he would destroy you

Forty days and forty nights the same mentioned before ver 18 as appears, 1 By comparing this with Exodus where this history is more fully related and where this said to be done twice only 2 By the occasion and matter of Moses's prayer here following which is the same with the former 3 By the words here following, as I fell down at first which show that this was the second time of his so doing

26 <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> I prayed therefore unto the Lord and said, O Lord God, destroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand

Through thy greatness, i. e. through the greatness of thy power, which appeared most eminently in that work as noted, ver. 29

27 Remember thy servants, Abraham Isaac and Jacob, look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin

Thy servants, i. e. the promise made and sworn to thy servants, which was mentioned above, ver 5

28 <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> Lost the land whence thou broughtest us out say <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> Because the Lord is not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness

29 <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> Yet they are thy people and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power and by thy stretched out arm

The people whom thou hast chosen to thyself out of all mankind, and publicly owned them for thine, and hast purchased and redeemed them from the Egyptians

CHAP. X.

Moses repeats God's mercies in restoring the two tables, 1-5 Aaron's death, Eleazar his son officiates in his stead, 6 The tribe of Levi is separated for the priesthood, 8-9 God hearkening to Moses not to destroy them, 10, he is commanded to lead them towards Canaan, 11 God requires their obedience 12-15 To circumcise their hearts, 16, 17 To help the fatherless and widow 18 To love strangers 19 To fear and serve the Lord for his mercies towards them 20-22

AT that time the Lord said unto me, <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood

At that time when God was newly appeased by my intercession An ark of wood, either a temporary ark for this use till the other was finished, or the firm ark as may seem by comparing this with ver 5 It is not evident in what order these things were done nor is it strange if Moses in this short and general relation neglect the order of time as being nothing to his present purpose

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables which thou brakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark

3 And I made an ark of shittim wood, and hewed two tables of stone like unto the first, and went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand

4 And he wrote on the tables according to the first writing ten commandments which the Lord spake unto you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly and the Lord gave them unto me

5 And I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made and there they be, as the Lord commanded me

6 And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Ekan to Mosera <sup>Ex 32 11, 12 31 17 7</sup> where Aaron died, and there he was buried, and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead

The following history comes in manifestly by way of parenthesis as may appear from ver 10, where he returns to his former discourse, and it seems to be here inserted, either 1 Because the priests and Levites here mentioned were the founders and keepers of the ark and tables here mentioned Or rather, 2 As an evidence of God's gracious answer to Moses's prayers, and of his reconciliation to the people notwithstanding their life and great provocation to him with it after this they proceeded by God's guidance in their journey, some eminent places whereof he names for all and though Aaron died in one of them yet God made up that blemish, and Eleazar came in his place, and made up as priest, one branch of which office was to minister for the people Then with him, God brought them from the barren parts of the wilderness to a land of rivers of waters, ver 7 a pleasant and fruitful soil Then he adds God separated the Levites &c, ver 8 Mosera Object This place seems directly contrary to that, Numb xxxiii of heavens is the LORD thy God, & the earth also, with all that therein is

The heaven, the airy and starry heaven. The heaven of heavens, the highest or third heaven, 1 Kings viii 27, 2 Cor xii 2, called the heaven of heavens for its eminency, as the song of songs, king of kings, holy of holies &c. The earth also, with all creatures and all men, which being all his, he might have chosen what nation he pleased to be his people

15 Only the LORD had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day

He shows that God had no particular reason nor obligation to their fathers any more than to other persons or people, all being equally his creatures, and that his choice of them out of and above all others proceeded only from God's good pleasure and free love

16 Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more stiffnecked

Rest not in your bodily circumcision, but seriously set upon that substantial work which is signified and designed thereby: cleanse your hearts from all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, which is fitly compared to the foreskin which if not cut off made persons profane, unclean, and odious in the sight of God. Conput Deut xxx 6, 10, 11, 14, 15, 25, Rom ii 28, 29, Col ii 11

17 For the LORD your God is God of gods, and Lord of lords, a great God, a mighty, and a terrible, which regardeth not persons, nor taketh reward

Regardeth not persons, whether Jews or Gentiles, but deals justly and equally with all sorts of men, and whatsoever fears and obeys him shall be accepted of him: so all miserable transgressors shall be severely punished, and you no less than other people, therefore do not flatter yourselves as if God would be to you with your sins because of his particular kindness to you or to your fathers

18 He doth execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment

Executeth the judgment: i.e. plead their cause and give them right against their more potent adversaries: and therefore he expecteth you should do so too

19 Love ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt

20 Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God, him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou cleave, and swear by his name

To him shalt thou cleave with firm confidence, true affection, and constant attendance and obedience

21 He is thy praise, and he is thy God, that hath done for thee these great and terrible things, which thine eyes have seen

Thy praise, either, 1 The object and matter of thy praise is God xv 2, whom thou shouldst ever praise. Or rather, 2 The ground of thy praise, i.e. of thy praise-worthiness, he who makes thee honourable and glorious above those people whom God be is not

22 Thy fathers went down into Egypt with threescore and ten persons, and now the LORD thy God hath made thee as the stars of heaven for multitude their children, 19 and keep memories of it, 20 for their own benefit, 21 God promises again upon their obedience, to drive out the nations, 22-25 a blessing and a curse is set before them, 26-29 They are but to bless on Mount Gerizim, but curse on Mount Ibal 29

THEREFORE thou shalt love the LORD thy God, and keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, alway

2 And know ye this day: for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen the chastisement of the LORD your God, his greatness, his mighty hand, and his stretched out arm,

Know ye, i.e. acknowledge and consider it with diligence and thankfulness

3 And his miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land,

4 And what he did unto the army of Egypt unto their horses, and to their chariots: how he made the water of the Red sea to overflow them as they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day,

The effect of which destruction continueth to this day in their weakness and fear, and our safety from all their further attempts against us

5 And what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place,

6 And what he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Ishab, the son of Reuben: how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the substance that they had in their possession, in the midst of all Israel

In their possession, i.e. at their feet ye see and their power: Psal viii 6, which followed them on helmed to them

7 But your eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did

All of them he had seen: some and some of them had seen: all the great things done in Egypt, and at the Red Sea, and in the wilderness

8 Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may be strong, and go in and possess the land, whither ye go to possess it

9 And that ye may prolong your days in the land, which the LORD swore unto your fathers to give unto them and to their seed, a land that floweth with milk and honey

10 For the land, whither thou goest to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out: where thou sowedst thy seed, and watered it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs

With great pains and labour of thy feet partly by digging up and down to fetch water and disperse it, and partly by digging furrows with thy foot and using engines for distributing the water, which manner they thought with their feet: For though the river Nile did once in a year overflow the grounds, and made them fruitful yet oftentimes it failed and left them, and then they were put to great pains about their ground, and when it did overflow still

CHAP XI

Moses exhorts them to obedience by rehearsing God's works 1-9, and by the excellency of the land they were to possess, 10-12. A promise of blessings to their obedience 13-15. They are warned against idolatry, 16-17. In which fully, and left its mud upon the earth: yet that mud was in a little time hardened, and needed another watering and much digging and labour both of the hands and feet especially in place something higher or more remote from that river, which inconvenience Cain was free from.

11 <sup>Lev 25: 37</sup> But the land, whither ye go to possess it as a land of hills and valleys, and drunketh water of the rain of heaven.

A land of hills and valleys—and therefore much more fruitful than Egypt was, which as it was enriched so it was removed with Nile, which overflowed the land in summer time, and thereby made the country both unpleasurful and which is much worse, unfruitful. And health being the greatest advantage here, as in Canaan must be, because it is a more desirable habitation than Egypt, which is the thing here implied. Drunketh water of the rain of heaven, which is more honourable, because this comes not from man's art or industry, but immediately from God's power and goodness, more easily being given thee without thy charge or pain, more sweet and pleasant, not hindering thy outward occupations, is the overflow of Nile did, whereby the Egyptians were confined in a great measure to their several houses, more safe and healthful than from that mud which attends upon the waters of Nile, and more certain too, the former, and the latter rain being promised to be given to them in their several seasons upon condition of their obedience, which condition though it may seem a clog and inconvenience, yet indeed was a great benefit that by their own necessities and worldly interest they should be obliged to that obedience upon which their happiness depended both for this life and for the next.

12 A land which the Lord thy God hath for thee: the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.

A land which the Lord careth for to wit in respect of his waterings, it immediately sent were by his own hand without man's help, and giving peculiar blessing to it, which Egypt enjoys not. The eyes of the Lord are always upon it, to give it the rain and other blessings proper to the several seasons. But all the advantages, and the fruitfulness of the land consequent upon the same were impeded upon their disobedience at their fallow. And therefore to meet it all franks that some later writers derive the land of Canaan as in great part a barren soil, which is far from absolving any ground to question the Divine authority of the Holy Scriptures, in which its fruitfulness is declared, that it doth much more confirm it, being but in effect that thenceforth that God would turn it fruitful land into barrenness for the wickedness of those that dwelt in it. <sup>Lev 26: 34</sup> and the wickedness of the Canaanites in so continuing long notorious it is but just and fair that the barrenness of their land should be as evident and infamous.

13 <sup>Lev 22: 31</sup> And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, to love the Lord your God, and to serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul.

14 That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

The rain of your land, i. e. which is needful and sufficient for you fruit, or which is put to your land not common to Egypt, where as it is water, there is little or no rain. The first rain and the latter rain, the first fell in seed time, to make the corn sown, the other a little before harvest, to ripen it. See <sup>Lev 26: 21</sup> Lev 26: 21, Joel 2: 23, Amos 4: 7, James 5: 7.

15 And I will send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full.

16 Take heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them,

That your heart be not deceived by the specious pretences of idolaters, who will plead the general consent of all nations except yours, in the worship of creatures, and that they worship the creature only for God's sake, and as they are glorious works of God, whom they worship in and by them which, and the like arguments, being commonly alleged by heathens for their idolatries, is their own writers declare might possibly seduce an unwary Israelite, and therefore they are here cautioned against such deceit, and withal it is implied, that if a man's mind be corrupted and deceived, so as he believes idolatry to be lawful, this will not excuse him in the sight of God.

17 And then the Lord's wrath be kindled against you, and he shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit, and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the Lord giveth you.

Heaven is compared sometimes to a bottle, Job xxxviii 3, which may be either stopped or opened, sometimes to a great storehouse, where God lays up his treasures of rain, Job xxxviii 22, Ps lxxxvii 7, the doors whereof God is said to open when he gives rain, and to shut when he withholdeth it. See 1 Kings viii 35, 2 Chron vi 26, viii 13.

18 Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates.

21 That your days may be multiplied; and the days of your children, in the land which the Lord sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth.

As long as this visible world lasts, whilst the heaven keeps its place, and continues its influence upon earth, until all these things be dissolved. Compare Paul Ixxxi 5, Ixxxi 15, Ixxxi 29, Jer xxxiii 25.

22 For if ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you to do them, to love the Lord your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him, 23 Then will the Lord drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

24 Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours, from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost, as shall your coast be.

Every place, not absolutely, as if the Jews should be lords of all the world, as the rabbins fondly conceit, but in the Promised Land, as it is restrained in the following words. Shall be yours, either by possession, or by dominion, to wit, upon condition of your obedience. From the to wit of Sin, on the south side And Lebanon, <sup>1</sup> and to Lebanon, or and to Lebanon, which was the <sup>2</sup> border. The river Euphrates on the east. So the right of dominion extended, but that their sin cut it off, and so far Solomon extended his dominion to the uttermost sea, the western or midland sea, Heb. <sup>3</sup> under the sea, for the eastern part of the world being only esteemed the farthest, and the southern on the left hand, the western part must needs be behind these bounds of the land see Gen x 19, xi 18, Exod xxviii 1 Josh 1 3 4

25 There shall no man be able to stand before you for the Lord your God shall lay the fear of you and the dread of you upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, as he hath said unto you

26 Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse,

I propose them to your minds and to your choice

27 A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the Lord your God, which I command you this day

28 And a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the Lord your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day to go after other gods, which ye have not known

Which you have no acquaintance with nor experience of their power or wisdom or goodness as you have had of mine

29 And it shall come to pass, when the Lord thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal

Thou shalt put the blessing, Heb. thou shalt give a speak or pronounce or curse to be pronounced. So the word to give is used Deut xii 1, 2, Job xxxvi 3, Prov ix 9. This is more particularly expressed Deut xxvii 12 13, Josh viii 33, whether I refer the reader

30 Are they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down in the land of the Canaanites which dwell in the campaign over against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh

Over against Gilgal, looking towards Gilgal though at some considerable distance from it, is this particl. is sometimes used

31 Or ye shall pass over Jordan to go in to possess the land which the Lord your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein

32 And ye shall observe to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day

CHAP XI.

They are commanded to destroy all the places of idolatry 1-3, and must worship God in his own place and after his will, 4-15. The eating of blood is prohibited 16. Where and how they should eat the tithe, 17-19. The Levites not to be forced, 19. They may eat flesh of an or shew any where, 20-22, but not the blood 23. Holy things to be eaten at the altar of the Lord 24. They are forbidden to inquire after the heathen worship 25, 26, or to worship the true God as they, 31, but to keep to the law in their worship, 32.

THESE are the statutes and judgments, which ye shall observe to do in the land, which the Lord God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, all the days that ye live upon the earth

2 Ye shall utterly destroy all the places, wherein the nations which ye shall possess served their gods, upon the high mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree

All the places, temples, chapels, altars, groves as appears from other scriptures. The Gentiles used to employ the high mountains for their idolatry, (see Isa lvi 5 7, Ezek xi 13, Hos iv 13) and as they considered divers trees to their false gods, so they worshipped these under them

3 And ye shall overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire, and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, and destroy the names of them out of that place

Then pillars upon which their images were set. The names of them, i. e. all the memorials of them and the very names given to the places from the idols

4 Ye shall not do so unto the Lord your God

Not worship him in several places mountains, moor, &c. which sense is evident from the following opposition

5 But unto the place which the Lord your God shall choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his habitation shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come

To put his name there, i. e. to set up his worship there or which he shall call by his name as his house, or dwell in place, &c. to wit, where the ark should be the tabernacle, or temple, which was first Shiloh Josh xviii 1 next and especially Jerusalem

6 And thither ye shall bring your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, and your tithes, and heave offerings of your hand and your vows, and your freewill offerings, and the firstlings of your herds and of your flocks

The sacrifices were wisely appropriated to that one and public place, partly for the security of the true religion, and for the prevention of idolatry and superstition, which otherwise might more easily have crept in, and partly to signify that their sacrifices were not accepted for their own worth but by God's gracious appointment, and for the sake of God's altar, by which they were sanctified, and for the sake of Christ whom the altar did manifestly represent. Of these see below on ver 17. Heave offerings, i. e. your first fruits, to wit, of the earth, as of corn and wine and oil and other fruits as plainly appears by comparing this place with Deut xviii 1, xxvi 2, where these are commanded to be brought thither, and seeing here is in exact and particular enumeration of all such things, and these cannot be put under any of the other branches, these must needs be intended here, the rather because the other kind of first fruits to wit, of the herds and flocks are here expressly mentioned. And these are called here the heave offerings of their hand, because this offering was first to take these into his hands, and to leave them in before the Lord, (as other places tell us,) and then to give them to the priest as appears from Deut xviii 3, 4, xxvi 4. Your freewill offerings, even for your voluntary oblations, which were not due by any prescription, but only by your own choice and voluntary engagement you may choose what kind of offering you please to vow and offer but not the place where you are to offer them. The firstlings of your herds and of your flocks, either, 1. the holy firstlings or first born as appears by Numb xviii, where they are commanded to be brought to this one place here declared and to be offered upon God's altar, ver 17. It is objected by some, that those were given to the priests, Numb xviii 15 but these were to be eaten by the people here ver 7. But that the next verse doth not say, but only in general there shall ye eat to wit, such of the offerings mentioned ver 6 as they were allowed to eat, but not such as were the priest's peculiar for these they might not eat nor all that is expressed for it is evident they might not eat any of the burnt offerings, nor some parts of the other sacrifices, which are here mentioned. Or, 2 The second births which were the people's first born, or the first which they could eat of, which the Levites were to eat before the Lord by way of acknowledgment of his favour in giving them to them and all their succeeding births. See margin on ver 17.

17 And there ye shall eat before the Lord your God, and ye shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the Lord thy God hath blessed thee.

There not in the most holy place wherein only the priests might eat Numb xviii 10, but more generally in places allowed to the people for this end in the holy city. Ye shall eat to wit your part of the things mentioned ver 6. Before the Lord i.e. in the place of God's presence where God's sanctuary shall be. All that ye put your hand unto, either to be to your pains and labour upon it or to take and to enjoy it. The sense is, You thus doing shall be blessed and enabled to rejoice, or to take comfort in all your labours and enjoyments which other wise would be accused to you. We have the same phrase below, ver 18, Deut x 10.

8 Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes.

Here, where the inconvenience of the place and the uncertainty of our abode in and removal from several places would not permit exact order in sacrifices and ceremonies which therefore God was pleased then to direct with but such he will not do so there. Every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes not that every man's liberty was given to all persons to worship whom and how they listed but that in many things their unsettled condition gave every man opportunity to do as he thought good.

9 For ye are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance, which the Lord your God giveth you.

10 But when ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the Lord your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that ye dwell in safety,

11 Then there shall be a place which the Lord your God shall choose to cause his name to dwell there thither shall ye bring all that I command you your burnt offerings and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave offering of your hand, and all your choice vows which ye vow unto the Lord.

His name i.e. his majesty and glory, his worship and service his special and gracious presence and the tokens of it. All what ye choose i.e. Heb the choice of your voices i.e. your select and chosen vows, so called because things offered for vows were to be perfect whereas superfluous or defective sacrifices were accepted in free will offerings, as appears from Lev xxi 20.

12 And ye shall rejoice before the Lord your God ye and your sons, and your daughters, and your menservants, and your maidservants, and the Levite that is within your gates, forasmuch as the Lord your God hath said unto you.

Hence it appears, that though the male only were obliged to appear before God in the sanctuary, yet the 17, yet the women also were permitted to come, as they did See Judg xxi 19, 21, 1 Sam i. 3, 7, 21-23.

13 Take heed to thyself that thou offer not thy burnt offerings in every place that thou seest.

Nor the other things mentioned above, this one and most eminent kind being put for all the rest, as is usual; for being all expressed before, it was needless to repeat them again. In every place that thou seest, to wit, with complacency and approbation, which thou thinkest very fit and proper for such a work, as one might possibly judge of some high places, or groves, or gardens.

14 But in the place which the Lord shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee.

15 Notwithstanding thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, as of the roebuck, and as of the hart.

Thou mayest kill and eat flesh, to wit, for thy common use and food. In all thy gates, i.e. thy cities or dwellings. Whosoever thy soul lusteth after, what you shall desire either for quantity or quality, provided always you observe the laws given you elsewhere about avoiding excess and uncleanness in the things you eat. Which he hath given thee according to thy quality and estate, whereby he manifestly condescends to those who profusely and riotously spend other men's money and live at a rate which their consciences know to be much above their ability, which certainly is unbecomingly and unrighteous, though too common practice. The unclean who is forbidden to eat of holy meat Lev xvi 20. Whosoever thereof to wit, of any sort of creature even of those which are offered to God in sacrifice which are as free to your use as the roebuck and the hart, which were not accepted in sacrifice Lev xxi 17 yet were clean beasts, Deut xiv 5, and therefore had no strict exception of unclean beasts.

16 Only ye shall not eat the blood, ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

17 Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe of thy corn or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy free will offerings, or heave offering of thine hand.

Here, either 1 Thou O Israelite, or rather, 2 Thou O Israelite, whom he distinguishes from the Levite, ver 18, accordingly as the following particulars agree to the one or to the other of you. Within thy gates i.e. in your private habitations here opposed to the place of God's worship ver 18. The tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil. Here seems to be a great difficulty not yet sufficiently observed nor cleared by interpreters. There were divers kinds of tithes. 1 The tithes given to the Levites out of all of which Numb xviii 21, 24, Deut xiv 22 Neh x 37. 2 The tithe of those tithes, which were to be given by the Levites to the priests, of which Numb xviii 26, 28, Neh x 38. 3 The third year's tithe, of which Deut xiv 28. To which some add another tithe, when they call the second tithe, which they say was taken after the Levites' tithe was laid by. Now each of these hath its difficulty. It seems this place cannot be understood, 1 Of the Levites' tithe, partly, because it might seem a great and wholly superfluous trouble to carry all their tithes up to Jerusalem, and to carry them back to the several habitations for their use, partly, because those were holy to the Lord Lev xxvii 30, and not to be eaten by the people, ver 31, whereas those belonged principally to the people, the Levites being only taken in as accessories to eat with them, as it is here, ver 16; and partly, because those might be eaten in every place, as it is expressly affirmed, Numb xxvi 31. Nor, 2. Of the tithe of the tithe, which was the priest's, and neither Levites nor others might eat of it, except they were of, or in the priest's household. Nor 3. Of the third year's tithe, because that was to be eaten within their gates, Deut xiv 22, 29, as this was not I do therefore humbly conceive that this is meant of the second tithe, spoken of Deut xiv 22, and that this was the very same tithe with that third year's tithe, with this only difference, that in the third year they were to eat them together with the Levites within their gates, Deut xiv 22, 29, but in the two first years they were to eat them, together with the Levites also, in the place of God's worship, as it is prescribed here and Deut xiv 23. And that it is one and the same tithe which is spoken of Deut xiv 22 and ver 28, seems more than probable both because they are called by the same name, all the tithe of their increase, and because that ver 28 manifestly looks back to that ver 22, and because otherwise every third year the Levites were to pay three several tithes one after another which Scripture no where affirms, and it seems to make the people's burdens and the Levites' provisions too great. For the objection taken from Deut xxvi 12, 13, it shall be considered in its place. And the reason of that difference of place, and why the same tithes were eaten for two years together in Jerusalem, and the third in their own gates, seems to be this, that in the two first years there was a more special regard had to the Levites who were very much conversant in Jerusalem, where those tithes were then eaten, and in the third year there is a respect had to the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, who are mentioned as joint sharers with the Levites in this third year's tithe, whose occasions and obligations of coming to Jerusalem were not so many nor strong as those of the Levites, and therefore they were to be found generally within their gates, where these were to be eaten. And whereas the objection made before against the chargeable and useless carrying of the first tithes to Jerusalem might be applied here, it is answered there, and it is provided, that when they lived at a great distance from Jerusalem they might turn it into money and bestow it there. Deut xiv 24-26, which both confirms the obligation as to the first tithe, for which no such provision was made, and answers it as to this, where such a remedy is expressed. And whereas it may be pleaded on the behalf of the first or the Levitical tithe, that those tithes were brought to Jerusalem and that there were store houses or chambers in the temple appointed for the receiving of the tithes, 2 Chron xxxi 5, 6, 11, 12, Neh x 37-38. xii 14 it may be answered, that these chambers, being only thirty eight in number and each of them, except two but six cubits broad and twelve cubits long, were altogether incapable of all those tithes and seem principally, if not solely appointed for the priests' tithes, and not for all them neither, but only for so much of them as would serve for the use and necessity of those priests and Levites too that were in the actual administration. The firstlings of thy herds, or of thy flock. A. the tithes now mentioned were not the Levitical but second tithes, as hath been discoursed, so these firstlings do not seem to be the first firstlings, which being appropriated to the Levites were not to be eaten by any of the people except those of or in the Levites' families, but the second firstlings, which were the first which the owner could dispose of and which, in conformity to the second tithe, he is required to set apart for this use.

rob the Levites of their dues, as afterwards the ungodly Jews did. See Mat iii 8.

When the Lord shall enlarge thy border, which will make it inconvenient and impossible to do what now thou dost, and because of the narrow bounds of thy camp thou canst conveniently do, to wit, to bring all the cattle thou usest to the tabernacle, which it seems probable they did, to prevent their eating of blood. Compare Lev xvi 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100

21 If the place which the Lord thy God hath chosen to put his name there be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the Lord hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

Be too far from thee, in which case, being obliged to carry their sacrifices to the place of worship, that the blood might be there poured forth, &c., they might think themselves obliged for the same reason, to carry the other cattle thither to be killed. They are therefore relieved from all such obligations and left at liberty to kill them at home, whether they lived nearer to that place or further from it, only the latter is here mentioned as being the matter of the scruple and as containing the former in it. As I have commanded thee, in such manner as the blood may be poured forth, &c. above, ver 16, and below, ver 21.

As the roebuck and the hart, as common or unhallowed food, though they be of the same kind with the sacrifices which are offered to God. The unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike because there was no holiness in such meat for which the unclean should be excluded from it.

23 <sup>1 ver 11, 12, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100</sup> Only I besure thee thou eat not the blood for the blood is the life, and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh.

The blood is the life, of which see on Gen ix 1, Lev xvi 11. The animal life depends upon the blood.

24 Thou shalt not eat it, thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water.

25 Thou shalt not eat it, that it may be well with thee, and with thy children after thee when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the Lord.

26 Only thy holy things which thou hast, and thy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the Lord shall choose.

The holy things, mentioned before, ver 6, 11, 17, which thou hast consecrated to God.

27 And thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, the flesh and the blood upon the altar of the Lord thy God and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the Lord thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.

Excepting what shall be burned to God's honour, and given to the priest according to his appointment.

28 Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the Lord thy God.

29 ¶ When the LORD thy God shall cut off the nations from before thee, which thou goest to possess them, and thou shalt succeed them, and dwellest in their land,

Whether thou goest to possess them, of which phrase see Deut 16 1, 21 23

30 Take heed to thyself that thou be not snared by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee, and that thou enquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods? even so will I do likewise.

Snared, drawn into their snare and ruin. After that they be destroyed, i.e. by following the example they left, when their persons are destroyed. That thou inquire not after their gods, though curiosity to know their gods, and the manner of the worship, lest thy vain and foolish mind be seduced by its speciousness or iniquity.

31 Thou shalt not do so unto the LORD thy God: for every abomination to the LORD, which he hateth, have they done unto their gods; for even their sons and their daughters they have burnt in the fire to their gods.

Shalt not do so unto the LORD, either 1 Not offer him that indignity and injury to worship other gods together with him. Or rather 2 Not worship him in such manner as they worshipped their gods, to wit by offering thy children to him, as they did to their gods, as it here follows, i.e. by their own devices or superstitions, as is implied ver 32.

32 What thing so ever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it.

Doctors to idolatry being permitted by God to the Israelites to be stoned to death 1-5. The signs of a false prophet 6-12. The signs of a false prophet 13-18.

1 A city found guilty of idolatry to be burnt and utterly destroyed 12-16. The signs of a false prophet 17-18.

17 If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder,

But if a sign or wonder come to thee, which thou hast not known, and thou shalt see that thou shalt not do it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee, thou shalt not do it. See Deut 18 10-12. The signs of a false prophet 17-18.

2 And if the sign or the wonder come to thee, which thou shalt see that thou shalt not do it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee, thou shalt not do it. See Deut 18 10-12.

And the sign or the wonder come to thee, which thou shalt see that thou shalt not do it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee, thou shalt not do it. See Deut 18 10-12.

3 Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the LORD thy God proveth you, to know what he loveth thee, and what he hateth thee: to continue his doctrine, such transgressions are frequent.

Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, nor receive his doctrine, though the sign or wonder come to thee. For although when such a sign or wonder foretold did not follow, nor come to pass, it was a sign of a false prophet, as it said, Deut xviii 22, yet when it did come to pass, it was no sufficient or infallible sign of a true one, especially in such a case when he brings in new gods. The reason of the difference is, because many causes must concur to make a thing good and true, but any one failure is sufficient to make a thing bad or false. And particularly there are many signs, such as men may think to be wonders, which may be wrought by evil spirits, God so permitting, for divers wise and just reasons, not only for the trial of the good, as it here follows, but also for the punishment of ungodly men, who would not receive Divine truths, though attended by many evident and unquestionable miracles, and therefore are most justly exposed to these temptations to believe lies. Provehth you, i.e. trieth your faith, and love, and obedience, examineth your sincerity by your constancy. See Matt xxiv 24, 2 Thes ii 11, Rev xiii 14. See on Gen xxii 1, Deut xii 2, 7. To know, that he may know it to wit, judiciously, or in a public manner so as both you and others may know and see it, that so the justice of his judgments upon you may be more evident and glorious.

4 Ye shall walk after the LORD your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and cleave unto him.

Ye shall serve him, to wit, only as appears from the opposition. Compare Deut vi 13 with Matt iv 10.

5 And that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, shall be put to death, because he hath spoken to turn you away from the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you out of the house of bondage, to thrust thee out of the way which the LORD thy God commanded thee to walk in. So shall thou put the evil away from the midst of thee.

He hath spoken to turn you away from the LORD, to forsake God and his worship. He shows that the chiefest and most certain character of a true prophet is to be taken from his doctrine rather than from his miracles. To thrust thee out of the way, this phrase denote the great force and power of seduction to corrupt men's minds. Compare Deut iv 19, 2 Kings xxi 21, Matt xxiv 24. The evil, either 1 That evil, i.e. that wicked doctrine and practice. Or 2 That wicked and scandalous man, that idolater and seducer.

6 ¶ If thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or the wife of thy bosom, or thy friend, which is as thine own soul, entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which thou hast not known, thou, nor thy fathers,

The son of thy mother, this is added to restrain the significance of the word brother, which is oft used generally for one's own kin, and to express the nearness of the relation, the mother's side being the surest, and usually the ground of the truest and most fervent affection. See Gen xx 22. Or thy daughter, thy pity must overcome both the affection to thy nearest relation, and thy compassion to the weaker sex. The wife of thy bosom, either, 1 That is near to thy heart, that hath thy dearest love. Or rather, 2 That lieth in thy bosom, as it is expressed, Mich vii 5. Compare Gen xvi 5, Prov v 20, Deut xxviii 34. So were all of the husband of her bosom, Deut xxviii 36. As thine own soul, as dear to thee as thyself. The father and mother are heremitted, not, as some have, because children might not in the nor in any case accuse their parents for cert only they owe more reverence and duty to God, who is injured in the case than to their parents, and Levi is commanded for rejecting his father and mother in this case. But let us see that sufficiently contained in the former examples, for such men's love doth, usually descend more strongly than to ascend, and the relation of a wife is and ought to be nearer and dearer than of a parent, that favour which is due to wives and children cannot be thought fit to be allowed to parent. Enter thou, though it be without success, because the very attempt of such an abominable crime deserved death, as it is judged in case of treason. Other gods, unknown and obscure and new gods, which greatly aggravates the crime, to forsake a God whom thou and thy fathers have long known, and had great and good experience of, for such upstarts.

7 Namely, of the gods of the people which are round about you, nigh unto thee, or far off from thee, from the one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth,

He aims against the pretence of the universality of this idol worship, wherewith they were like to be oft assaulted in Prov 1.

8 Thou shalt not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him, neither shall thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him

1. e. smother his fault, hide or protect his person, but shalt accuse him to the magistrate, and demand justice upon him which was not to be done in most other criminal causes, and no wonder, this crime being of a far higher nature than others

9 But thou shalt surely kill him: thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people

Thou shalt surely kill him, not privately, which pretence would have opened the door to innumerable murders: but by procuring his death by the sentence of the magistrate, and thou shalt cast the first stone at him, as the witness was to do. See Deut xvi 7, Acts vii 58

10 And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die, because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage

11 And all Israel shall hear and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you

12 ¶ If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the Lord thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying,

13 Certain men, the children of Belial, are gone out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known

The children of Belial, a title oft used in Scripture. Judg xix 22, 1 Sam i 16, xxv 25, 2 Sam xvi 7. It signifies properly persons without yoke, vile and wicked men, servants, lawless and rebellious, that will suffer no restraint, that neither fear God nor reverence man. From among you, i. e. from your church and religion. It notes a separation or departure from them, not in place, (as appears by their partnership with their fellow citizens both in the sin and punishment, as it here follows,) but in heart doctrine, and worship, as the same phrase is used, 1 John ii 19.

14 Then shalt thou enquire, and make search, and ask diligently, and, behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you,

Then shalt thou enquire, this is meant of the magistrate, to whose office this properly belongs, and of whom he continues to speak in the same manner, thou, ver 15, 16

15 Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword.

The inhabitants of that city, to wit all that are guilty, not the innocent part, such as disowned this apostate, who doubtless by choice and interest, at least upon warning, would come out of so wicked and cursed a place. Destroy it utterly, the very same punishment which was inflicted upon the cities of the cursed Canaanites, to whom having made themselves equal in sin, it is but fit and just that God should equal them in punishment.

16 And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shalt burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the Lord thy God: and it shall be an heap for ever, it shall not be built again

For the Lord thy God, i. e. for the satisfaction of God's justice the maintenance of his honour and authority and laws, and the purification of his offended majesty. It shall be an heap for ever, it shall be an eternal monument of God's justice, and terror to after-ages, who may be tempted to like practices.

17 And there shall cleave nought of the cursed thing to thine hand: that the Lord may turn from the fierceness of his anger, and shew thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers,

Of the cursed thing, i. e. of the goods of that accursed city. And multiply thee, so thou shalt have no loss of thy numbers by cutting off so many people.

18 When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the Lord thy God

Latin Synopsis For others, they may well enough want the knowledge of them both because these are the smaller matters of the law, and because this distinction of clean and unclean beasts is now out of date.

5 The hart, and the roebuck and the fallow deer, and the wild goat, and the pygarg, and the wild ox, and the chamois.

6 And every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleft into two claws, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that ye shall eat.

7 Nevertheless these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof: as the camel and the hare, and the coney: for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you.

8 And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, nor touch their dead carcase.

9 ¶ These ye shall eat of all that are in the waters: all that have fins and scales shall ye eat.

10 And whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat: it is unclean unto you.

11 ¶ Of all clean birds ye shall eat.

12 But these are they of which ye shall not eat: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the osprey,

13 And the glede, and the kite, and the vulture after his kind,

14 And every raven after his kind,

15 And the owl and the night hawk, and the cuckoo, and the hawk after his kind,

16 The little owl, and the great owl, and the swan,

17 And the pelican, and the great eagle, and the cormorant,

18 And the stork, and the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

19 And every creeping thing that flieth is unclean unto you: they shall not be eaten.

20 But of all clean fowls ye may eat.

21 ¶ Ye shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself: thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it: or thou mayest sell it unto an alien: for thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God. Thou shalt not seeth a kid in his mother's milk.

Unto the stranger is not to the proselyte for such were obliged by this law Lev. xxi. 15 but to such as were strangers in judgment as well as in nation.

22 ¶ Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year.

It is to be under stood of the second tithe which should be the same with the tithes of the third year mentioned here below xvi. 22 and Deut. xxi. 12 on which is seen above on chap. xii. 17. And to confirm this opinion, (though I would not lay a great stress upon conjectures) yet I cannot but observe that this tithe is spoken of only as the people's and not as the Levites', and Deut. xxi. 12, that the Levites are not at all mentioned in either place as receivers or takers of the tithe but only as partakers of them together with the owners, and therefore they are so severely charged upon their consciences, thou shalt truly tithe all thine increase because the execution of this was left wholly to themselves whereas the first tithes were received by the Levites, who therefore are said to take or receive those tithes, Numb. xxi. 26, Neh. x. 38, Heb. vii. 5.

23 ¶ And thou shalt eat before the Lord thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithe of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the firstlings of thy herds and of thy flocks, that thou mayest learn to fear the Lord thy God always.

See on Deut. xii. 6, 17.

24 And if the way be too long for thee, so that thou art not able to carry it, or if the place be too far from thee, which the Lord thy God shall choose to set his name there, when the Lord thy God hath blessed thee.

25 Then shalt thou turn it into money, and bind up the money in thine hand, and shalt go unto the place which the Lord thy God shall choose.

Bind up the money in thine hand, i. e. in a bag to be taken into thy hand and carried with thee.

26 And thou shalt bestow that money for whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, for oxen, or for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul desireth: and thou shalt eat there before the Lord thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou, and thine household.

27 And the Levite that is within thy gates thou shalt not forsake him, for he hath no part nor inheritance with thee.

Thou shalt not forsake him, thou shalt give him a share in such tithes, or in the product of them.

28 ¶ At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates.

At the end of three years i. e. in the third year, as it is expressed, Deut. xvi. 12. So, in the end of three years or of seven years is the same with the third or seventh year as appears by comparing Deut. xxi. 10, Josh. ix. 16, 17, 2 Kings xvi. 9, 10, xxi. 6. All the tithe of thine increase. I join with those expositors who make this the same tithe with the former ver. 22 as being called by the same title without any distinction between them save only as to the place of eating them. See above on ver. 22 and Deut. xii. 17. The same year this is added to show that he speaks of the third year, and not of the fifth year as some might conjecture from the phrase, at the end of three years.

29 ¶ And the Levite, (because he hath no part nor inheritance with thee,) and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come and shall eat and be satisfied, that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hand which thou doest.

CHAP. XV

The seventh year a year of release, 1, to their brethren only, 2, 3. God promiseth to bless them in the land of Canaan 4-6 and commandeth them to lend freely to the poor 7-18. The firstlings to be sanctified and eaten before the Lord, 19-23.

AT the end of <sup>every</sup> seven years thou shalt make a release

In the last year of the seven, as is most evident from Exod xvi 2, Jer xxiii 14. So the like phrase is oft used, as Deut xiv 28; Josh iii 2, Jer xxi 12; Luke ii 21, Acts ii 1. And this year of release, as it is called by law, ver 9, is the same with the sabbatical year Exod xxiii 11, Lev xxv 4.

2 And this is the manner of the release. Every creditor that lendeth ought unto his neighbour shall release it: he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother, because it is called the LORD's release.

Shall release it, not absolutely and finally forgive it, but forbear it for that year as may appear, 1. Because the word doth not signify a total dismissal or acquitting, but an intermission for a time, as Exod xxiii 11. He shall not exact it, as it here follows, i. e. force it from him by course of law or otherwise, to wit, that year, which is easily understood out of the whole context. 2. Because the person releasing is called a creditor, and his communicating to him what he desires and needs is called lending (see ver. 8, whereas it were giving, and the person giving it were no creditor, but a donor if it were to be wholly forgiven to him). 3. Because the reason of this law is temporary and peculiar to that year, wherein there being no sowing nor reaping, they were not in a capacity to pay their debts. 4. Because it is thus unjust and unreasonable, and contrary to other scriptures, which require men to pay what they borrow, as Psal xxxiii 21. Yet I deny not that in case of poverty the debt was to be forgiven, but that was not by virtue of this law, but of other commands of God. Or of his brother: this is added to explain and limit the word neighbour, which is more general unto a brother, to wit, in nation and religion, to an Israelite, who is opposed to a foreigner, ver. 3. It is added a brother, for that is a brother, the particle and being oft so used, as Gen xii 15, &c. The LORD's release, or a release to me for the LORD, in obedience to his command, for his honour, and as in acknowledgment of his right in your estates, and of his kindness in giving and continuing them to you. If you are unwilling to release this for your brother's sake, yet do it for God's sake, your LORD and the chief creditor.

3 Of a foreigner thou mayest exact it again: but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release.

4 Foreigner or stranger, yet, though a proselyte. For, 1. They are oft called by this name, as Gen xxi 12, Ruth ii 10. 2. Though proselytes were admitted to the church privileges of the Israelites, yet they were not admitted to all their civil immunities or privileges. See 1 Chron xxi 2, 2 Chron ii 17. 3. Such were not then freed from their personal debt, to wit, of their service, Lev xvi 41. Deut xv 12, Jer xxxiv 11: therefore not from their civil debt. That which is thine, to wit, by right, though lent to him.

4 ¶ Save when there shall be no poor among you, for the LORD shall greatly bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it.

When there shall be no poor: so the words are in exception to the foregoing clause, which they restrain to the poor, and imply that if his brother was rich, he might exact his debt of him in that year. And indeed this law seems to be chiefly, if not wholly, designed and given in favour to the poor and to the borrower, as is manifest from ver. 11. But the words are and may be rendered thus: as in the margin of our Bibles, To the end that there be no poor among you. And so they contain a reason of this law: to wit, that none be impoverished and ruined by a rigid and unreasonable exaction of debts. They may also be translated thus, Nevertheless of a truth, or assuredly, (as the particle and is oft used,) there shall be no poor among you, and the sense may be this, Though I impose this law upon you, which may seem hard and grievous, yet the truth is, supposing your performance of the conditions of God's covenant, you shall not have any great occasion to exercise your charity and kindness in this matter, for God will greatly bless you &c. so as you shall be in a capacity of lending, and few or none of you will have need to borrow, and thereby to expose his brethren to the inconvenience and burden of this law. Thus the connection is plain and easy, both with the foregoing and following words. Object. It is said, the poor should never cease, ver. 11. Answer. That also is true, and affirmed by God, because he foresaw they would not perform their duty, and therefore would hereby themselves of the promised blessing. The LORD shall greatly bless thee, and therefore this will be no great inconvenience nor burden to thee.

5 Only if thou carefully hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all these commandments which I command thee this day.

6 For the LORD thy God blesseth thee, as he promised thee: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow, and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.

Thou shalt lend unto many, thou shalt be rich and able to lend not only to thy poor brother, but even to strangers of other nations: yet to many of them.

7 ¶ If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother.

8 But thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.

Open thine hand wide unto him, i. e. deal bountifully and liberally with him, giving him as if were by handful.

9 Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart, saying, The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand, and thine eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought, and he cry unto the LORD against thee, and it be sin unto thee.

Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart, suppress the first rising and inward motions of such uncharitableness. Thine eye be evil, i. e. cautious, unmerciful, unkind, as this phrase is used, Prov xxiii 6, Mitt xx 13: as a good eye note the contrary disposition, Prov xxii 9. It be sin, i. e. it be charged upon thee as a sin, and as a great sin, as the word sin sometimes signifies, 1 Prov xxiv 9. John xv 21, James iv 17.

10 Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.

Thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him, i. e. thou shalt give not only with an open hand but with a willing and cheerful mind and heart. Rom xii 8. 2 Cor ix 7. with out which thy very charity is uncharitable and not accepted by God, who requires the heart in all his service. In all that thou puttest thine hand unto, i. e. in all the works, is before, for the hand is the first in the intent of action.

11 For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land

The poor shall never cease out of the land, God by his providence will so order it, partly for the punishment of your disobedience, and partly for the trial and exercise of your obedience to me, and charity to your brother, both which are best discovered by your performance of costly duties

12 ¶ And if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years, then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee

If thy brother be sold unto thee See on Exod xiii 3 Six years to be computed either, 1 From the year of release, as they gather from hence that personal and real debts were both released together. But that seems to be supposed rather than proved. Nay, there is a manifest difference between them, for the release of real debts is expressly mentioned and required in the year of release, but so is not the release of the personal debt of servitude either here or elsewhere. Or rather 2 From the beginning of this servitude, which is every where limited unto the space of six years, as here and below ver 18 Exod xxi 2 Jer xxxv 14. And it seems a strange and forced exposition to take these six years for so much of the six years as remains until the year of release, which possibly might not be one quarter of a year, whereas a hired servant serves for a full longer time and this is said to be worth a double hired servant in regard of the longer time of his service ver 18. Add to this, that it is mentioned as the peculiar privilege of the year of jubilee, that such servants were then freed, though their six years of service were not expired.

13 And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty

14 Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy floor, and out of thy winepress: of that where with the Lord thy God hath blessed thee thou shalt give unto him

15 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt, and the Lord thy God redeemed thee: therefore I command thee this thing to day

And the Lord thy God redeemed thee and brought thee out with triumph and with riches, which he ever they would not let I did give to thee as a just recompence for thy service, and therefore thou shalt follow his example and send out thy servant furnished with all convenient provisions

16 And it shall be, if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee, because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee,

Because he is sensible that he fares well with thee. Or because it is more acceptable in his eyes, or pleasing to him to be with thee

17 Then thou shalt take an aul, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant for ever. And also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise

For ever, i. e. all the time of his life, or at least till the year of jubilee. ¶ 18 And thou shalt not (into thy maid-servant) either dismiss her honourably, and with plenty of provisions, or engage her to perpetual servitude in the same manner and by the same rites, whence it appears that this ear differs from that Exod xxi 7, and that the ear servant there was taken in upon other and better terms than the here

18 It shall not seem hard unto thee, when thou sendest him away free from thee, for he hath been worth a double hired servant to thee in serving thee six years: and the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest

He hath been worth a double-hired servant to thee, or, i. e. deserves double wages to an hired servant, because he served thee upon better terms, both without wages, which hired servants require, and for a longer time even for six years, as it here follows, whereas servants were ordinarily hired but from year to year, Lev xxv 53, or at most but for three years as they gather from this place and Lev xvi 14

19 ¶ All the firstling males that come of thy herd and of thy flock thou shalt sanctify unto the Lord thy God: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep

With the firstling of thy bullock this is meant, either, 1 Of the male firstlings, which, they say, is forbidden here, because some did plough with the firstlings of their oxen and shear the firstlings of their sheep, before they were offered. But this seems absurd and incredible, because they were to be offered on the eighth day, Exod xxiii 30, when they were very unfit for such uses. Or rather 2 The second firstlings, of which see on Deut xii 17

20 Thou shalt eat it before the Lord thy God year by year in the place which the Lord shall choose, thou and thy household

Thou shalt eat, either, 1 Thou O priest. Or rather 2 Thou O Israelite. For it is evident that the same person who was forbidden to work with these, ver 19, is here commanded to eat them &c. Thou shalt eat it, together with the Levites as it is to be understood from Deut xii 18 ver 27-29 where that is expressed in like cases year by year to wait in the solemn feasts which returned upon them every year. See Deut xvi 11-14

21 And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the Lord thy God

22 Thou shalt eat it within thy gates: the unclean and the clean person shall eat it alike, as the roebuck, and as the hart

23 Only thou shalt not eat the blood thereof, thou shalt pour it upon the ground as water

CHAP. XVI.

Then feast of the passover to be kept, 1-7, and to eat unleavened bread, 8. The seven weeks and their feasts, 9-12. The feast of tabernacles to be observed by them and their family, seven days 13-15. All the males to appear before the Lord three times a year, and at these three feasts 16-17. Judges and officers are appointed 18-20 and are prohibited to set up idolatry, 21, 22

1 OBSERVE the month of Abib, and keep the passover unto the Lord thy God: for in the month of Abib the Lord thy God brought thee forth out of Egypt by night

Object They came out of Egypt by day, and in the morning as appears from Exod xii 22, xiii 3, Numb xxxiii 3. Answer They are said to be brought out by night because in the night Pharaoh was forced to give them leave to depart, and accordingly they made preparation for their departure and in the morning they perfected the work

2 Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the passover unto the Lord thy God, of the flock and of the herd, in the place which the Lord shall choose to place his name there

The passover, i. e. either, 1 Properly and strictly so called which was the paschal lamb, and so the sheep and oxen which here follow, are mentioned only as additional sacrifices, which were to be offered in the seven days of the paschal solemnity, Numb xxviii 18, 19, &c Or 2 Largely, to wit, for the passover-offerings to wit which were offered after the lamb in the seven days, and so this word is used 2 Chron xxxv 8 9 And this signification seems necessary here, partly because it is here said to consist of the flock and of the herd or of sheep and oxen, and partly because it follows, ver 3, Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it, seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread thereunto, i. e. with the passover, which could not be done with the passover strictly so called, which was to be wholly spent in one day Or 3 The feast of the passover and so the place may be rendered Thou shalt therefore observe or keep the feast of the passover (as those same Hebrew words are taken Numb ix 5 Josh x 10, 2 Chron xxxv 1, 17, 18, 19) unto the Lord thy God, with sheep and with oxen, as is prescribed, Numb xxviii 18, &c

With it, to wit with the passover in the sense of leavened or, in it, i. e. during the time of the feast of the passover. The bread of affliction i. e. bread which is not usual nor pleasant, but unsavoury and unwholesome, to put thee in mind both of thy miseries endured in Egypt and of thy hasty coming out of it which allowed thee no time to leaven or to prepare this bread

3 <sup>Ex 13 7</sup> And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee in all thy coast seven days: neither shall there any thing of the flesh, which thou sacrificedst the first day, it even remain all night until the morning

At even, i. e. of the passover properly so called, and by those words plainly described which circumlocution may seem to insinuate that the word passover ver 1 was improperly used and therefore he chose rather to describe it than to name it, lest the ambiguity of the word should occasion some mistake

4 <sup>Ex 13 10</sup> Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, which the Lord thy God giveth thee

Within any of thy gates i. e. of thy cities as that word is oft used, as Gen xii 17 xxiv 60, Deut xvi 2 Ruth iv 10

5 But at the place which the Lord thy God shall choose to place his name in there thou shalt sacrifice the passover: at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt

There thou shalt sacrifice the passover to wit, in the court of the tabernacle or temple Thus he prescribed, partly that this great work might be done with more solemnity and care in such manner as God required, partly, because it was not only a sacrament but also a sacrifice, as appears because it is so called, Exod xii 27, xxiii 18, xxiv 25, Numb ix 7, and because there was the sprinkling of blood, which is the essential part and character of a sacrifice, and partly, to design the place where Christ, the true Passover or Lamb of God, was to be slain At the season, understand this with some latitude, as such phrases are commonly taken, about that season, when you had received command from me to go out of Egypt, and were preparing yourselves for the journey

in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose: and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go unto thy tents

Thou shalt roast; so that word is used also 2 Chron xxxv 13 In the morning, either 1 The morning after the seventh day, as appears partly by the following verse, which is added to explain and limit this ambiguous word, partly, by the express command of God that the people should come to Jerusalem to keep this feast, which by God's appointment lasted for seven days, partly, from the examples of the people staying there the whole time of the feast, 2 Chron xxx 21, xxxv 17, and partly from the nature and business of this feast, wherein there being so many extraordinary sacrifices to be offered, and feasts made by the people upon the sacrifices, and two days of solemn assemblies it is not probable that they would absent themselves from these solemn services, for the performance whereof they came purposely to Jerusalem Or 2 The morning after the first day, and so they were permitted to go thence and possibly some that lived near Jerusalem might go and return again to the last day of the solemn assembly But the former seems more probable Thy tents, i. e. thy dwellings which he calls tents, as respecting their present state and whilst to put them in mind afterwards when they were settled in better habitations, that there was a time when they dwelt in tents

7 Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread: and on the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly to the Lord thy God: thou shalt do no work therein

Six days to wit besides the first day, on which the passover was killed, or rather besides the seventh and the first day, which is here mentioned apart, not as if leavened bread might be eaten then for the contrary was evident from many places but because there was something more to be done, to wit, a solemn assembly to be kept So in all there were seven days as it is said, Exod xii 15, Lev xxiii 6, Numb xxviii 17

8 Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn

Seven weeks, of which see on Exod xxxiv 22 Lev xxiii 10 15 To put the sickle to the corn, i. e. to reap thy corn thy barley, when the first-fruits were offered, Lev xxiii 10 11

9 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the Lord thy God with a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the Lord thy God, according as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee

The feast of weeks, i. e. of pentecost, Acts ii 1 Which thou shalt give to the Lord thy God, according as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee

10 And thou shalt rejoice before the Lord thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are among you, in the place which the Lord thy God hath chosen to place his name there

11 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt: and thou shalt observe and do these statutes

12 Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine Of the feast of tabernacles, see on Exod xxiii 16, Lev xxiii 34, Numb xxix 12

13 And thou shalt rejoice in thy first-fruits

thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates

15 Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the Lord thy God in the place which the Lord shall choose because the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice

To wit, in God and the effects of his favour praising him with glad heart

16 ¶ Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord thy God in the place which he shall choose, in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles and they shall not appear before the Lord empty

All thy males not the women partly because of the multitude and untidiness for many journeys, partly because the care of their children and families lay upon them, and partly, because they were sufficiently represented in the men

17 Every man shall give as he is able according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee

18 ¶ Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribe and they shall judge the people with just judgment

Judges, chief magistrates to examine and determine causes and differences. Officers who were inferior and subordinate to the other to bring causes and persons before them to requant people with the mind and conscience of the ruler and to execute their sentence Deut xx 19. 10. 11. in 2, 3. In all thy gates i.e. thy cities which he hath given thee because there were seats of judgment. Compare 1 Chron xxiii 4

19 ¶ Thou shalt not wrest judgment, thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise and pervert the words of the righteous

Not wrest judgment, i.e. not to pervert or forced and unjust sentence. See on Exod xiii 8. Not respect persons i.e. to give sentence according to the quality of the person his riches or poverty friendship or enmity but according to the justice of the cause. I gift doth blind the eyes of the wise i.e. corrupts and biases his mind that is he will not so oftentimes he cannot discern between right and wrong. The words of the righteous either 1. The words of the sequence of his audience who are informed and ordered to bring him on this and have the reputation of his wisdom it makes them give with judgment. Or 2. The words of the matters because they are not of his mind but of his persons, or of the things which are just 20 ¶ That which is altogether just shalt thou follow that thou mayest live and inherit the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee

That which is altogether just i.e. with righteousness rightness i.e. nothing but righteousness in all causes and things and to all persons equally. Compare 1 Cor xvi 7

21 ¶ Thou shalt not plant thee a grove of any trees near unto the altar of the Lord thy God which thou shalt make thee

Forasmuch as this was the practice of idolaters, 1 Kings x

13 and might be an occasion of reviving idolatry. See Judg iii 7, 1 Kings xiv 23, xvi 33, xviii 19

22 Neither shalt thou set thee up any image, which the Lord thy God

Hath statue whether with a picture or representation, or without it, as the idolaters used to worship smoothed and polished stones or pillars without any image upon them

CHAP XVII

They are not to offer blemished sacrifices 1 Idolaters are to be put to death, 2-7 Doubts in difficult matters to be resolved by priests and judges, 8-13 To choose a king of their own brethren, and not a stranger, 14, 15, The duty of their king, 16-20

THOU shalt not sacrifice unto the Lord thy God any bullock, or sheep, wherein is blemish or any evilfavouredness for that is an abomination unto the Lord thy God

Any bullock or sheep, i.e. either greater or smaller sacrifices all being comprehended under the two most eminent kind. See Lev xxi 20, 21 An abomination, i.e. abominable as Deut xvi 12

2 ¶ It there be found among you, within any of thy gates which the Lord thy God giveth thee, man or woman, that hath wrought wickedness in the sight of the Lord thy God, in transgressing his covenant,

Men or women the weakness and tenderness of that sex will not excuse their sin nor prevent their punishment. In transgressing his covenant i.e. in idolatry as it is explained ver 3 which is called a transgression of God's covenant with Israel partly because it is a breach of their faith given to God and of that law which they covenant to keep and principally because it is a dissolution of their eternal covenant with God a renouncing of God as his worship and service and choosing other gods

3 And hath gone and served other gods, and worshipped them, either the sun, or moon, or any of the host of heaven, which I have not commanded

Those glorious creatures, which are to be admired in the wonderful works of God, but not to be set up in God's stead, nor worshipped as gods. See Job xxi 26. By condemning the most specious and reasonable of all idolaters he intimates how absurd a thing it is to worship stocks and stones the works of men's hands. Which I have not commanded i.e. I have forbidden, to wit, Exod xx Such negative expressions are oft emphatical, and imply the contrary as Prov x 2, xvii 21, xxv 23

4 And it be told thee, and thou hast heard of it, and enquired diligently, and behold, it be true, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought in Israel

Told thee by any person, thou shalt not slight so much as a rumour or flying report of so gross a crime. Enquire diligently by sending messengers, examining witnesses, &c

5 Then shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, unto thy gates, even that man or that woman, and shalt stone them with stones, till they die

6 At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death, but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death

At the mouth, i.e. upon the testimony delivered upon oath before the magistrates. Three witnesses, to wit credible and competent witnesses. The Jews rejected the testimonies of madmen, children, women, servants, familiar friends, or enemies, persons of dissolute lives and evil fame.

7 The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterward the hands of all the people. So thou shalt put the evil away from among you.

Shall be first upon him, i.e. laid upon his head to design the person or stretched out to throw the first stone at him. God thus ordered it, partly for the caution of witnesses, that if they had through malice or with accused him falsely they might now be afraid to imbrue their hands in innocent blood, partly for the security and satisfaction of the people in the execution of this punishment. The hands of all the people who, being all highly and patiently obliged to God, are bound to express their zeal for his honour and service, and their detestation of criminals and their heinously dishonourable and abominable crime.

8 If there arise a matter too hard for thee in judgment, between blood and blood, between plea and plea, and between stroke and stroke, being matters of controversy within thy gates, then shalt thou arise, and set thee up unto the place which the Lord thy God shall choose.

For that, he speaks to the inferior magistrates, who were erected in several cities, appears by the opposition of these to them that join them. If with him thou art of skull or confidence to determine a weighty and difficult cause. Between blood and blood, i.e. in capital cases, in matters of blood shed, whether it be wilful or accidental, whether a punishment or pardonably by the laws. Ver. 13, 20, 22, 28. Ver. 2. Numb. xxxv. 11, 16. Deut. xix. 1, 10. Between plea and plea, i.e. in civil suits between plaintiff and defendant, concerning estates, between stroke and stroke, i.e. concerning criminal cases, between plea and plea, i.e. concerning the true leprosy, which is confirmed, between plea and plea, i.e. concerning the second, and confirmed leprosy, when we are bound to determine. And under the name of coming of the kind may seem to be contained other moral determinations. But the sense not probable. I because the determination of the matter of leprosy is not referred to any particular priest, Lev. xiii. xv. Because a person suspected of leprosy was not to be brought to him, but to be tried there, but we are to lay upon him, Lev. xiii. 45, and the images it refers to, neither could he would determine his case without consulting the person. 3. Because the cure of leprosy is not hard or difficult, as the crime is not to be but plain and evident, and so particularly and punctually described, that the priest needed only eyes to decide it. Or rather, 2. In criminal cases concerning life or wound, offered by one man upon another, and to be rewarded by the sentence of the magistrate according to that we read, xxi. 23-25, when there is no other remedy, is of great difficulty, and doubt about which, as the magistrates there. Matters of controversy, i.e. such things as matters of blood and plea and stroke. Ver. 10, that the magistrates divided in their opinions about it. In that way a clear case, this was not to be done. Some use this an additional clause to impede these and other things, thus, as if he had said, and in general, Ver. 10, or matters of stripes or contumelies. Ver. 10, shall choose, to wit, to set up in wordage and take care of temple there, because there was the whole body of them, sanhedrim or chief council, which was constituted of priests, not civil magistrates, who were not able to determine all controversies, and of the high priest, who was consulted God by Urim, Numb. xxxv. 21 in great matters, which could not be decided otherwise.

9 And thou shalt come unto the priests, the Levites, and unto the judge that shall be in those days, and enquire, and they shall show thee the sentence of judgment.

Unto the priests, the Levites, i.e. unto the great council, which it is here denominated from, because it consisted chiefly of the priests and Levites, as being the best expounders of the laws of God, by which all those controversies mentioned ver. 8 were to be decided. And the high priest was commonly one of that number, and may seem to be understood here under the priests, whereof he was the chief. Unto the judge, this judge, here is either, 1. The supreme civil magistrate, who was made by God the keeper of both tables, and was by his office to take care of the right administration both of justice and of religion, who was to determine causes and suits by his own skill and authority in civil matters, and by the priests' direction in spiritual or sacred causes. But this seems obvious to some difficulties, because, 1. The judge was obliged to dwell in the place of God's worship, which the civil magistrate was not, and oftentimes did not. 2. The judge was one whose office it was to expound and teach other the law of God, as it here follows. Or, 2. The judge was one who was obliged to live in this place, to whom it belonged to determine some at least of those controversies mentioned ver. 8, and to teach and expound the law of God. And he may be distinctly named, though he be one of the priests, partly because of his eminency and superiority over the rest of them, as after Psalm's exemies, Sadai is particularly mentioned, Psalm xviii title, and partly to show that among the priests he especially was to be consulted in such cases. But this also seems liable to objection. 1. That he seems to be included under that general expression of the priests and Levites. 2. That the high priest is never in all the Scripture called simply the judge, but generally called the priest or the high priest, or chief priest, or the like, and it is most probable if Moses had named him here, he would have expressed him by some of his usual names and titles, and not by a strange title, which was not likely to be understood. 3. That divers controversies, between blood and blood, plea and plea, stroke and stroke, were not to be determined by the high priest, but by other persons, as appears by Lev. xxi. 22, Deut. xix. 16, 17, Chap. 2. The ordination of supreme civil judges is versed and before, cited partly of priests, and partly of wise and learned men of other tribes, as is confirmed by all the Jewish and other writers. And so it is added by way of satisfaction, partly to show that the priests and Levites were not named, as the persons to whom all controversies were to be referred, were not all the priests and Levites, which should be made in Jerusalem, but only a select of them, who were to be members of that synod, Chap. 11, whom, together with their fellow members, Lev. xxi. 22, the cause were to be decided, partly to show that that select council, which had the chief and final determination of all the above said controversies, was composed chiefly of wise and good men, some civil and some secular, as it was most meet it should be, because many of the causes which were brought unto them were mixed cases. 4. For the comparative particle, and, that may be taken either disjunctively, for or, as it is Lev. xxi. 15, 17, compared with Matt. xv. 1, and Numb. xxxv. 6, compared with Matt. xii. 37, and Lev. xxi. 3, 5, 2 Sam. ii. 19, 21, or even by for that is, or to wit, as Judg. vi. 21, 1 Sam. xvi. 10, xxviii. 3, 2 Chron. xxxv. 11, and so the sense may be, the priest, the Levites, or the judge, as it is ver. 12, or the priests, the Levites, that is, the judge, in the judges appointed in this work. And though the word judge be in the singular number, and may seem to denote one person, it is only a challenge or change of the number, the singular for the plural judges, which is not to be noted, Gen. ii. 7, xlix. 6, 1 Sam. xxxi. 1, 1 Kings xv. 22, 2 Kings xi. 10, compared with 2 Chron. ix. 21, xviii. 9, and in the Hebrew, 1 Chron. ix. 42, where divers which are called one head. And so it is in Psalm lxxviii. 1. Because the following words, which belong to the next verse, they in plural number, they they they, &c. ver. 10, 11. 2. Because here is the uncertainty in the other branch, the same person or persons here called the priests here, and the priest ver. 12, 3. Because for the

Neither shall he multiply wives as the manner of other kings was: that his heart turn not away, to wit from God and his law, either, 1. To idolatry and superstition to which women are oftentimes prone and especially such women as he was likely to choose, even the daughters of neighbouring and idolatrous kings and princes as Solomon did, or, 2. To other manifold sins and violations of his duty to his people either by neglect and contempt of his business through effeminacy and sloth or by oppressing his people, and perverting justice, to comply with the vast and exorbitant desires of his wives. Neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold lest this should lift up his heart in confidence and pride which God abhors and respect in him a contempt of his people and lest it should incline or engage, or enable him to burden his people with immoderate exactions. They are not simply forbidden to be rich if God made them so either by the voluntary gifts of their subjects or by the spoils of their enemies which was the case of David and Solomon, and Ishaphat &c. but they are forbidden either importunately to desire or industriously to procure great riches by grinding the faces of their poor people or by other wicked arts and courses as the manner of their neighbouring kings was.

18<sup>f</sup> And it shall be when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book out of that which is before the priests the Levites.

He shall write, either with his own hand as the Jews say or at least by his command and procurement. Out of that which is before the priests the Levites i.e. out of the original which was carefully kept by the priests in the sanctuary. Deut. xxxi. 26. 2 Kings xxii. 8 partly that it might be a true and perfect copy and partly that it might have the greater authority and influence upon him coming to him from the hand and presence of God.

19 And it shall be with him and he shall read therein in all the days of his life that he may learn to fear the Lord his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them.

All the days of his life i.e. diligently and constantly without the greatness of his place and the weight and multitude of his business shall excuse or hinder him.

20 That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren and that he turn not aside from the commandment to the right hand or to the left to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel.

That his heart be not lifted up, he intimates that the scriptures, diligently read and studied, are a powerful and probable means to keep him humble because they show him that though a king, he is subject to a higher Monarch to whom he must give an account of all his administration and actions and receive from him his sentence and doom agreeable to their quality which is sufficient to subvert the pride of the haughtiest person in the world, if he dares contradict it.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Lord is the priests and Levites' inheritance 1. 2. Then due from the people 3-5. A Levite's portion that came to serve voluntarily 6. 8. All unlawful arts prohibited 9.

11. Christ is promised whom they must believe to 11. 19. False prophets threatened, 20. The cost of a false prophet 21, 22.

THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they shall eat the offerings of the Lord made by fire and his inheritance.

The offerings of the Lord made by fire, by which phrase we here manifestly see that he means not burnt-offerings, which were wholly consumed by fire and no part of them eaten by the priests, but other sacrifices, which I put was offered to the Lord by fire, and part was allotted to the priests for their food. His inheritance i.e. the Lord's portion or inheritance which God had reserved to himself, as tithes and first-fruits, and other oblations distinct from those which were made by fire, and so these two branches make up the whole of that which belonged to God, and was by him given to the Levites.

2 Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren: the Lord is their inheritance as he hath said unto them.

1. The Lord's part and right, as was now said.

3 ¶ And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a sacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep, and they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw.

A sacrifice to wit a sacrifice of thanksgiving, or a peace-offering, as appears from Lev. vii. 31, 33 which is oftentimes called simply a sacrifice as Exod. xxix. 12. Lev. xvi. 5. 8. Numb. xv. 3. Deut. xv. 27. The shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw. Quiet How doth this agree with other texts in which the shoulder and the breast, and these parts only are the priest's due, not the cheeks and maw? Answer 1. Who shall it? God shall do it: what if he now makes an addition to the priest's due? Nothing more usual than for one scripture to supply what is lacking in another, and for a latter law of God to add to a former. 2. The breast may be here omitted because it is comprehended under the shoulder to which it is commonly joined and with which it was waved before the Lord. 3. The Hebrew word here rendered maw or stomach which was reckoned among dainties by the ancients is not to my remembrance used elsewhere and therefore it may have another signification and some render it for the best others take it for the uppermost part of the stomach which lies under the breast.

4 The firstfruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil and the first of the fleece of thy sheep shalt thou give him.

5 For the Lord thy God hath chosen him out of all thy tribes, to stand to minister in the name of the Lord, him and his sons for ever.

Minister in the name of the Lord i.e. either by authority and commission from him or for his honour and worship of others.

6 ¶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel where he sojourned, and come with all the desire of his mind unto the place which the Lord shall choose,

Then for any private occasions or to sojourn there for a season or rather with full purpose to fix his abode and to spend his whole time and strength in the service of God, as appears by the sale of his patrimony mentioned ver. 8. It seems probable that the several priests were to come from the tribes to the temple by turns before David's time and to serve in them did so after it. But if any of them were not contented with this solemn attendance upon God in his tabernacle or temple, and desired more entirely and constantly to devote himself to God's service there he was permitted so to do because this was an eminent act of piety joined with self-denial to part with those great conveniences which he could and did enjoy in the city of his possession and to oblige himself to more constant and laborious work about the sacrifices, &c.

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the Lord his God, as all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the Lord.

8 They shall have like portions to eat, beside that which cometh of the sale of his patrimony.

5. Take portions, to wit, with their brethren who were in actual ministrations, as they share with them in the work so shall they also in the encouragements. Beside that which cometh of the sale of his patrimony, though he have an estate wherewith he may subsist by the sale of his house in his city, and his cattle and other movables, yet you shall not upon this ground either deny or diminish their part of your maintenance. The reason of this law was, partly because he that waited on the altar ought to live by the altar, and partly because it was fit he should keep his money where he might discern what he sold it after words he saw occasion for it. Heb besides his sale by the fathers i.e. of that which came to him by his fathers or according to his father or his father's house and these words may be joined with the word immediately foregoing, but with the former part of the verse, the next word coming in by a kind of parenthesis in the manner and order. Besides that which cometh by the sale of their goods they shall have like portions to eat to what their brethren have, each of them according to his father's house i.e. a Genealogy shall eat with his brethren the Levites who are then ministering and commune with the Meats &c. and so there shall be no disturbance nor change of the appointed comes by then access to the number.

9 ¶ When thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations.

10 There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch.

To pass through the fire either by a superstitious tradition or punishment or by a cruel sacrifice of them. See Lev xxv 21, 22 and xxi 17, xxii 10. 2 Chron xxxiii 7. Psal cxi 37. Jer viii 34. xix 5. Ezek xvi 21. xxiii 20. That useth divination i.e. foretelleth things secret or to come. Much in II by unlawful arts and practices. An observer of times superstitiously pronouncing some days good and lucky, and others unlucky for such a such action. Or, an observer of the clouds or heaven, i.e. one that divineth by the motions of the clouds by the stars or by the flying or chattering of birds, all which heathens used to observe. An enchanter or a conjuror that discovers hidden things by a superstitious use of words or ceremonies, by observation of water or smoke, or any contingence, as the mingling of herbs &c. See on Lev xix 26. A witch one that is in covenant with the devil, and by his help deludes their senses, or hurts their persons. See Exod vii 11, xxii 18.

11 Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer.

A charmer one that charmeth serpents or other cattle. Plal lvi 3. or a fortune teller that foretelleth the events of men's lives by the conjunctions of the stars &c. See note on Lev xix 26. A consulter with familiar spirits, whom they call upon by certain words or rites to engage them in evil designs. A wizard Heb knowing of cunning men who by superstitious or forbidden ways undertake to reveal secret things. Necromancer one that trafficketh and inquireth of the dead. 1 Sam xxviii 8. Isa viii 19.

12 For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord, and because of these abominations the Lord thy God doth drive thee out from before thee.

The people of the land with thee are coming to possess mentioned above ver 9.

13 Thou shalt be perfect with the Lord thy God.

Sincerely and wholly he seeks him and cleaving to him and to his word alone, and therefore abhorring all commerce and conversations with devils or other agents, such as were now mentioned.

14 For these nations, which thou shalt possess, hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners, but as for thee, the Lord thy God hath not suffered thee so to do.

Hath not suffered thee to follow thy own vain mind, and these superstitious and diabolical practices, as he hath suffered other nations to do, Acts xiv 16 but hath instructed thee better by his word and Spirit and thereby kept thee from such courses and will more fully instruct thee by a great Prophet &c. Or, hath not given to thee to wit such persons to consult with, but hath given thee prophets to instruct thee and will in due time give thee an eminent Prophet as it here follows.

15 ¶ The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me, unto him ye shall hearken.

Will raise up i.e. will produce and send into the world in due time. A Prophet these words may be understood secondarily concerning the succession of prophets which God would raise for the instruction of his church both because this is alleged as an argument why they need not consult with diviners &c. because they should have prophets at hand whomsoever it was needful to advise them, and because this Prophet is opposed to the false prophet, and a general rule is hereupon given for the discovery of all succeeding prophets, whether they be true or false ver 20—22 but they are chiefly to be understood of Christ, as the following words show which do not truly and fully agree to any other particularly where he is said to be like unto Moses which is simply denied concerning all other prophets Dent xxxiv 10 and therefore it is not probable that it should be simply affirmed concerning all true prophets succeeding him. But Christ was true and in all commended his points like him in being both a Prophet and a King, and a Priest and Mediator as Moses was in the excellency of his ministry and work in the glory of his miracles, in his familiar and intimate converse with God &c. And this place is expounded of Christ done by God him. It in the New Testament Acts iii 22. xiv 37. See also John i 15, vi 14.

16 According to all that thou desiredst of the Lord thy God in Horeb in the day of the assembly saying, Let me not hear again the voice of the Lord my God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not.

In the day of the assembly i.e. of that great and general congregation of all the people together.

17 And the Lord said unto me, They have well spoken that which they have spoken.

18 ¶ I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.

Will put my words in his mouth, will instruct him what to say, reveal myself and my will to him. He shall speak unto them all that I shall command him, he will faithfully execute the office and trust I commit him.

19 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.

I will require it of him as this phrase is taken Gen ix 5. xii 22. The sad effect of this threatning the few have felt for above sixteen hundred years together.

20 But the prophet, which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, I will require it of him.

21 And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the Lord hath not spoken?

22 When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

If the thing follow not, which he gives as a sign of the truth of his prophecy. He means the prediction of some strange and wonderful event, as appears by comparison with Deut. xiii. 1, 2. The Lord hath not spoken: the falsehood of his prediction shows him to be a false prophet, though the truth and accomplishment of his prediction had not proved him to be a true prophet as is evident from Deut. xiii. 2, 3. Presumptuously: impudently ascribing his own vain and lying fancies to the God of truth. Thou shalt not be afraid of him: i. e. of his predictions or threatenings, so as to be scared from doing thy duty in bringing him to deserved punishment.

CHAP. XIX.

The rehearsal of the cities of refuge for him that killeth his neighbour ignorantly: 1-10. But he that hateth and killeth his neighbour, though fled into one of these cities, must die: 11-13. No removing of old land marks: 14. The number of witnesses, 15. The punishment of false witnesses: 16-21.

1 When the Lord thy God hath cut off the nations whose land the Lord thy God giveth thee, and thou succeedest them, and dwellest in their cities, and in their houses,

2 Thou shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee to possess it.

In the midst of thy land to wit beyond Jordan: as there were three cities appointed on this side Jordan: Numb. xxxv. 14. Half a league in the midst of the land, either for the land as in the midst of the city, Lev. xix. 24, is the same with that in the city: 2 Kings xxv. 19. or to design the places that they should be situated in the midst of the several parts of their land, to which they might conveniently fly from all the parts of the land.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way, and divide the coasts of thy land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither.

Thou shalt prepare thee a way, distinguish it by evident marks, and make it plain and convenient to prevent mistakes and delays. Into three parts, not into more, because it was fit that the places should, as far as it was possible, be at some considerable distance from the hands of the person lest the sight of the manslayer might have provoked their passion, and occasioned his ruin.

4 ¶ And this is the case of the slayer which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not in time past,

5 As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the ax to cut down the tree, and the head slippeth from the fellee, and he lighteth upon his neighbour, that he die: he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live.

6 Last the avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and slay him, whereas he was not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not in time past.

This verse is to be joined with ver. 3 as is evident the 4th and 5th verses coming in as a parenthesis which is usual in Scripture and other authors. And slay him which is supposed, but not allowed, as appears from the following words. But the avenger of blood is not to be punished with death for killing the manslayer, in case he found him without the borders of the city of refuge after he had been received there, Numb. xxxv. 26, 27 because then he was guilty of a new crime to wit a contempt of God's ordinance and a gross neglect of the duty of self preservation, and therefore deserved death from God, who might permit it to be inflicted by the avenger of blood.

7 Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

8 And if the Lord thy God enlarge thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers, Enlarge thy coast as far as Ephraim: See Gen. xv. 18, 19. and xxiii. 34. Deut. i. 7.

9 If thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the Lord thy God, and to walk ever in his ways: then shalt thou add three cities more for thee, beside these three.

10 That innocent blood be not shed in thy land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

11 ¶ But if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him mortally that he die, and flee into one of these cities.

12 Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die.

The elders of his city: either of the slain person who were most likely to prosecute the murderer, or of the murderer because God would oblige even his own fellow citizens to prosecute him to death that it might appear how heinous murder and the murderer is to God, and ought to be so to all men. Fetch him thence: demand him of the elders of the city of refuge who upon the hearing of the cause and the evidence of the murder were obliged to deliver the offender to justice.

13 ¶ Thine eye shall not pity him, but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee.

14 ¶ Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the Lord thy God giveth thee to possess it.

Thy neighbour's land-mark, (by which the several portions of land distributed to several families were distinguished one from another. See Job xxiv. 2. Prov. xxv. 28, Hos. x. 10.)

15 ¶ One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.

shall not rise up, or, not stand, or, not be established, ucepted owned as sufficient it is the same word which in the end of the verse is rendered be established

16 ¶ If a false witness "rise up against any man to testify against him that which is wrong

A single witness though he speak truth is not to be accepted for the condemnation of another man, but if he be convicted of false witness this is sufficient for his own condemnation

17 Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand before the Lord, "before the priests and the judges, which shall be in those days

See on Deut xix 9-12 and observe that the controversies both here and there referred to and to be determined by the priests and judges are only between man and man and not doctrines of faith and manners as the papists for their own advantage pretend

18 And the judges shall make diligent inquisition, and behold, if the witness be a false witness, and hath testified falsely against his brother

19 "Then shall ye do unto him, as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so "shalt thou put the evil way from among you

20 "And those which remain shall hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you

Those which remain are the rest of the people See Deut xiii 11, xiv 13

21 "And thine eye shall not pity: but "life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot

What punishment he intended of the law allotted to the accused if he had been convicted of the same shall the false accuser bear Of this law see on Exod xxi 24 Lev xxiv 20

CHAP XX

The most exhortation to encourage the people to fight their enemies 1-4 The officers' proclamation who are to be dismissed from the war 5-9 A proclamation of peace to be made to besuaged cities 10, and to deal with them as they accept or refuse it, 11-18 What trees were to be cut down for the siege and what not 19, 20

WHEN thou goest out to battle against thine enemies, and seest "horses, and chariots, and a people more than thou, be not afraid of them: for the Lord thy God is "with thee, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt

When thou goest out to battle upon a just and necessary cause as upon great provocation, or for thy own defence

2 And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the priest shall approach and speak unto the people

The priest, an eminent priest appointed for this work and to blow with the holy trumpet Num x 9, xxxi 6. Speak unto the people "after the assembly to one regiment of the army after another, or to some by himself, to others by his brethren or deputies which accompanied him for that end

3 And shall say unto them, Hear, O Israel: ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts faint: fear not, and do not tremble, neither be ye terrified because of them

Faint, Heb. be soft or feeble. Softness or tenderness of heart towards God is condemned 2 Kings xxi 19 but towards enemies it is commended 1 Sam viii 1, 10 2 Chron xii 7, 18 vii 1

4 For the Lord your God is he that goeth with you, "to fight for you against your enemies, to save you

5 ¶ And the officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not "dedicated it? let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man dedicate it

Houses were dedicated by feasting and thanksgiving to God See the title of Psal xxx, and Neh xii 27 Heb hath initiated it i.e. entered upon it, taken possession of it dwell in it Let him return to his house, lest his heart be set upon it and thereby he be negligent or timorous in the battle to the scandal and prejudice of others Another man dedicate it, and so he should lose and another get the fruit of his labours, which might seem unjust or hard And God provides even for men's infirmities But this and the following exceptions are to be understood only of a war allowed by God not of a war commanded by God not in the approaching war with the Canaanites from which even the bridegroom was not exempted, is the Jewish writers note

6 And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet "reaped of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it

This and the former dispensation were generally convenient but more necessary in the beginning of their settlement in Canaan for the encouragement of those who should build houses or plant vineyards, which was chargeable to them and beneficial to the commonwealth Taken of it He made it common to wit for the use of himself and his family and which it was not till the fifth year Lev xx 2, xxxi 5

7 "And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her

Betrothing was done by a solemn and mutual promise but not by an actual contract See Gen xiv 11, Deut xxi 23

8 And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, "What man is there that is fearful and fainthearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart faint as well as his heart

9 And it shall be, when the officers have made an end of speaking unto the people, that they shall make captains of the armies "to lead the people

Or rather, as the Hebrew hath it they shall set or place the captains of the armies in the head or front of the people under their charge that they may conduct and manage them, and by their example encourage their soldiers But it is not likely they had the captains to make or choose when they were just going to battle

10 ¶ When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, "then proclaim peace unto it

This seems to be understood not of the cities of the Canaanites, as is manifest from ver 16-18, who were under an absolute sentence of utter destruction 1 xod xxi 23 Deut vii 1, 2, whence they are blamed that made any league or peace with them Judges 2, but of the cities either of other nations who invited or disturbed them, or commenced war against them, or aided their enemies, or oppressed their friends and allies, or of the Hebrews themselves if they were guilty of abettors of idolatry or apostasy from God, or of sedition or rebellion against authority, or of giving protection and defence to capital offenders. See Gen xiv, Judg xx, 2 Sam xv, &c.

11 And it shall be, if it make thee answer of peace and open unto thee, then it shall be, that all the people that is found therein shall be tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee.

By their purses and by their labours too, as appears from 1 Kings ix 15, 2 Chron viii 7, 8.

12 And if it will make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it.

13 And when the Lord thy God hath delivered it into thine hands, thou shalt smite every male thereof with the edge of the sword.

A just punishment of their obstinate refusal of peace offered.

14 But the women, and the little ones, and the cattle, and all that is in the city, even all the spoil thereof, shalt thou take unto thyself, and thou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the Lord thy God hath given thee.

The little ones excused by their sex or age as not involved in the guilt, nor being likely to revenge their quarrel.

15 Thus shalt thou do unto all the cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the cities of these nations.

16 But of the cities of these people, which the Lord thy God doth give thee for an inheritance, thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth.

Heb. no soul, i. e. no man is that word is oft used. Compare Josh x 10, with xi 11. For the beasts, some were excepted as being under a special curse were given man for a prey.

17 But thou shalt utterly destroy them, namely, the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee.

18 That they teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods, so should ye sin against the Lord your God.

19 ¶ When thou shalt besiege a city a long time in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an axe against them: for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down (for the tree of the field is man's life) to employ them in the siege.

The trees thereof, to wit, the fruit trees, as appears from the following words, which is to be understood of a general destruction of them not of the cutting down of a few of them as the convenience of the siege might require. Man's life, i. e. the sustenance or support of his life is life taken Deut xxiv 6. But this place may be otherwise translated as it is in the margin of our English Bibles. For O man (the Hebrew letter he being the note of a vocative case as it is Psal ix 7) the tree (for tree the singular number for the plural, as is common) of the field is (or ought, as the Hebrew is used Luth ix 1, Psal lxx 10) to be employed in the siege, or as it is in the Hebrew to go before thy face, i. e. to be taken care for thy security in the siege. The trees of the field. I here understand not its general signification of all trees including fruit-bearing trees as this phrase is commonly used but its more special and distinct signification, for unfruitful trees, as it is taken Isai lv 12, or such as grow only in open fields, such as are elsewhere called the trees of the wood, 1 Chron xvi 33, Isa vii 2, or the trees of the forest, Cant ii 3, Isa x 19, which are opposed to the trees of the gardens Gen iii 2 8, Eccl ii 5, Luth xxvi 9, as the flowers of the field, Psal ciii 15, Isa xl 6, and the lilies of the field, Matt vi 28 are opposed to those that grow in gardens, and are preserved and cultivated by the gardener's art and care. And so it is a very proper argument to dissuade from the destroying of fruit trees, because the wild and unfruitful trees were sufficient for the use of the siege. And this sense fully agrees with the following words, where the concession or grant which here is delivered in more ambiguous terms, of the tree of the field, is repeated and explained concerning the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat.

20 Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat, thou shalt destroy and cut them down, and thou shalt build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee, until it be subdued.

CHAP XXI

How to expiate an uncertain murder, 1-9. The usage of a captive taken to wife, 10-11. The first born, though the son of the hated is not to be disinherited, 15-17. The punishment of a stubborn son, viz death, 18-21. The cruel death of them that are hanged, 22, 23.

IF one be found slain in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath slain him.

In the field, or in the city or any place, only the field is named, as the place where such murders are most commonly committed, and most easily concealed.

2 Then thy elders and thy judges shall come forth, and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain.

Thy elders and thy judges, those of thy elders who are judges, for the latter word explains and restricts the former the judges or rulers of all the neighboring cities who were all concerned in this inquiry. They I mean, unless it be evident and confessed which city is nearest for then measuring was unnecessary.

3 And it shall be, that the city which is next unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke.

A fit innocent and representative of the murderer, in whose stead it was killed who by this act hath shown himself to be a son of Belial who would not bear the yoke of God's law. A type also of Christ, who was obliged to no work, and under no yoke, but what he had voluntarily taken up in himself.

4 And the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a rough valley, which is neither sown nor sown, and shall strike off the heifer's neck there in the valley.

Neither sown nor sown, partly to represent the hard and unprofitable and untimely heart of the murderer, and partly that such a desert and horrid place might bring a horror of murder and of the murderer. Strike off the heifer's neck, to show what they would and should have done to the murderer if they had found him.

5 And the priests the sons of Levi shall come near, for them the Lord thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the Lord, and by their word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried.

The priests shall come near both to direct them in all the circumstances of action and to see that the law was observed, and to bless them in God's name by praying for them and absolving or pronouncing them guiltless in this matter. Every controversy, not absolutely all manner of cent overages that could possibly arise as if their word were to determine whether there were a God or providence or no, whether God should be worshipped and his commands observed, or no, whether Moses was a true prophet or an impostor, whether apostate and idolatrous Israelites should be punished or no, which is apparently absurd and ridiculous, but every such controversy is might arise about the matter here spoken of, nothing being more usual than to understand universal expressions in a limited sense, and indeed this is limited and explained by the following words, and every stroke the particle and being put expositively, of which instances have been formerly given, i.e. every controversy which shall arise about its stroke, whether such a mortal stroke as is here spoken of, a murder which may well be called a stroke is to smite is oft used for to kill as Gen. iv. 10, Job xxv. 17 &c. or any other stroke or wound given by one man to another.

6 And all the elders of that city, that are next unto the slain man, shall wash their hands over the heifer that is beheld in the valley.

In testimony of their innocence. See on Matt. xxv. 21.

7 And they shall answer and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it.

They shall answer to wit to the priests who shall examine them and determine the controversy. This blood about which the present inquiry is made, or this which is here present, for it is thought the corpse of the slain man was hurled into the same place where the heifer was slain. Neither have our eyes seen it nor have we seen or understood how or by whom this was done.

8 Be merciful, O Lord, unto thy people Israel whom thou hast redeemed, and lay not innocent blood unto thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them.

Not imputed to them nor punished in them. In God's some times, and to forget when he doth not punish the guilt of Israel. 38. Be merciful, though there was no mortal guilt in this people, yet there was a criminal uncleanness in the land, which was to be expiated and forgiven.

9 So shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the Lord.

10 ¶ When thou goest forth to war against thine enemies and the Lord thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive.

Thou shalt take of other nations, but not of the Canaanites for they must not spare their women and much less marry them. Gen. xxxiv. 16. Deut. vii. 3.

11 And shalt among the captives a beautiful woman and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldst have her to thy wife.

Hast a desire i.e. thou or, hast cleaved to her to wit in love, or hast a delight in her which may be a modest expression of thou lovest her and seems probable because it is said ver. 11 that he had humbled her, to wit by military means when he took her captive, not after he had married her for then he would have expressed it thus, because thou hast married her which had been more emphatical than thou hast humbled her. And here seem to be two cases supposed, and direction given what to do in both of them. 1 That he did desire to marry her of which he spake ver. 11. 2 That he did not desire this or not delight in her of which he spake ver. 11.

12 Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house, and thou shalt shave her head, and thou shalt pare her nails.

Either 1 To take off his affections from her by rendering her unclovely and defamed, but the last words must not be rendered shall pare her nails, but shall pare or trim.

her, or suffer them to grow, as the Chaldee, Arabic, and divers of the learned Jews and other interpreters render it. Or, 2 To express her sorrow for the loss of her father and mother, as it follows ver. 13, it being the ancient custom of mourners in most nations to shave themselves and in some to pare their nails, in others to suffer them to grow. Or rather, 3 In token of her renouncing her heathenish idolatry and superstition and of her becoming a new woman, and embracing the true religion, which her captive condition and subjection to his will would make her inclinable to do in profession.

13 And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and bewail her father and her mother a full month; and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife.

The raiment of her captivity, i.e. either, 1 Those goodly raiments in which she was when she was taken captive, i.e. of which she now must put on a servile habit, as this is generally understood, or rather 2 Those servile and sorrowful raiments which were put upon her when she was taken captive, in the manner was to do with captives, as the phrase itself seems to intimate, i.e. prison garments (Jer. li. 5) are such garments as prisoners use to wear, and garments of praise are prize-worthy or glorious garments, and it seems harsh to call those garments of captivity which are made for and generally worn by free persons only, and which are usually taken away from persons when they come into captivity. Add that this doth not seem to be any part or token of her sorrow but rather a mending of her condition and exchanging her servile habit for a better and more decent one which might be thought this were a mourning habit. Her father and mother, either their death, or which was the effect of the same her separation from them. What she signified her alienation from them or from the heathenism and idolatrous courses and her liberation to live from all other persons to her husband and to the true religion. Compare Psal. xiv. 11. She shall be thy wife supposing what might very reasonably be supposed of her in her circumstance, and what she signified by the foregoing, that she should submit to her husband's religion in which case the marriage might be tolerable. Or this was a permission and indulgence given to them for the anguish of their hearts, as in the case of divorce. Deut. xxiv. 1. Matt. xix. 8.

14 And it shall be if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money; thou shalt not make merchandise of her, because thou hast humbled her.

If thou have no delight in her, either 1 After thou hast married her, and so this is a permission of a divorce, which being indulged towards an Israelish woman, was not likely to be denied towards a stranger. Or rather 2 Before thy marriage for it is not probable that God having given him competent time for the trial of his affection to her before he was permitted to marry her would suffer him upon so slight an occasion, within a day or two after so solemn a contract to send her away nor is there a word spoken here of any divorce. If he shall not make merchandise of her i.e. make gain of her either by assigning her to his own servile works or by prostituting her to the lusts or to the service of others. Humbled her, i.e. humbled her as this phrase is oft used as Gen. xxxiv. 2, Deut. xxi. 21, 29, Judg. xiv. 21, 1 Sam. xxi. 10, 11.

15 ¶ If a man have two wives, one beloved and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated, and if the firstborn son be hers that was hated.

Two wives, either, 1 Both together, which practice though tolerated is not hereby made lawful but only provision is made for the children in that case. Or 2 One after another. Hated, comparatively, i.e. less loved, as Gen. xxix. 31, Matt. vi. 24, Luke xiv. 26.

16 Then it shall be, when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved firstborn before the son of the hated, which is indeed the firstborn.

He may not, it is not lawful because contrary to the rights and law of nature. Before the son, or, before the face of the son, i. e. in his lifetime as this phrase is understood, Gen. xi 28 xvi 12 xvi 18. And when this phrase is rendered before another, it signifies only in the presence of another, but never notes the preference of one person to another, which the Hebrews express in another manner. And this may be added to intimate that if the eldest son were dead and had left a child the father was free to give the right of his firstborn unto his second son, rather than to the child of the eldest. On this phrase may be an aggravation of the fact, whereby his father did in a manner spit in his face and fasten a reproach upon him in his very sight and presence.

17 But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the firstborn, by giving him a double portion of all that he hath, for he is the beginning of his strength, in the right of the firstborn is his.

Acknowledge i. e. make it appear that he owns him double portion, for the phrase see 2 Kings ii 9 Zech xiii 6, and for the thing see Gen xvi 31, 1 Chron v 1. The beginning of his strength, i. e. the first evidence of his manly strength and ability for procreation.

18 ¶ If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that when thy have chastened him, will not hearken unto them.

19 Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out unto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place,

The consent of both father and mother is required to prevent the abuse of this law to cruelty. And it cannot reasonably be supposed that both would agree without much necessity, and the son is stubborn and incorrigible wickedness in which case it seems right and righteous law because the crime of rebellion against his own parents was so high in itself and did so fully signify what a pernicious member and son of Israel he would be in the commonwealth of Israel who had disobeyed all his natural obligations. Yet the Jews say this law was never put in practice, and therefore it might be made for terror and prevention and to render the authority of parents more revered and powerful. Bring him out unto the elders of his city, who was a sufficient caution to preserve children from the rule of any hard-hearted parents, because these elders were first to examine the cause with all exactness, and then to pronounce the sentence.

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious he will not obey our voice, he is a glutton, and a drunkard.

Stubborn and rebellious adds incorrigible to all his wickednesses. A glutton and a drunkard, under which two offences others of a like or worse nature are comprehended by a synecdoche.

21 And all the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die. So shalt thou put evil away from among you, and all Israel shall be in fear.

Stoning was the punishment appointed for idolaters and idolatry, which if it seem severe it is to be considered that parents are in God's stead and intrusted in God's measure with his authority over their children, and that families are the matter and foundation of the church and commonwealth, and they who are naughty members and rebellious children in them, do commonly prove the bane and plague of these, and therefore no wonder if they are 22 ¶ And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree.

Which was done after the malefactor was put to death some other way, this public shame being added to his former punishment. See Josh vii 25, viii 29, x 26, 2 Sam iv 12.

23 His body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day, (for he that is hanged is accursed of God,) that thy land be not defiled, which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

Is accursed of God i. e. he is in a singular manner cursed and punished by God's appointment with a most shameful kind of punishment as this was held among the Jews and all nations, and therefore this punishment may suffice for him and there shall not be added to it that of being buried which was another great calamity. For xvi 1. And this curse is here appropriated to those that are hanged partly because this punishment was inflicted only upon the most notorious and public offenders, and such brought the curse of God upon the community as Num xvi 1. 2 Sam xxi 6. and principally to forewarn that Christ should undergo this execrable punishment and made a curse for us Gal iii 13 which though it was not to come in respect to men yet was present unto God and in his eye at the same time. And so this is delivered with respect unto Christ as many other passages of Scripture manifestly are. Be not defiled to wit morally either by inhumanity against the dead or rather by suffering the most unbecoming view of the man's great wickedness and of God's curse to remain public and visible a longer time than God would have it whereas it should be put out of sight, and buried in oblivion.

CHAP XXII

1. About stray cattle. 1-3. About thy neighbor's ass fallen in the way. 4. Woman's securing of a child snatched from man's arms. 5. Of birds caught by 7. Of temptations for houses. 8. Of dairy seeds sown. 9. Of ploughing with an ox. 10. Of garments of divers colours. 11. Of fruit upon four quarters of a garment. 12. The punishment of him that slandereth his wife. 13-19. Her punishment for the scandal he has. 20-21. The punishment of adultery. 22-24. Of rape. 25-27. Of fornication. 28-29. Against incest. 30.

THOU shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt in any case bring them again unto thy brother.

Thy brother, i. e. called by communion not of religion, but of nature, as having one Father even God, Mat iii 10, as appears. 1. Because the same law is given about them as my ox &c. Levod xxiii 1. 2. Because each obligation of this law had been uncertain, seeing men could not certainly tell whether the straying ox or sheep belonged to a Jew or to a stranger. 3. Because this was a duty of common justice and charity, which the law of nature taught even heathens, and it is absurd to think that the law of God delivered to the Jews should have been strict in it than the law of nature given to the Gentiles. Hide thyself from them i. e. do not seem to pretend that thou dost not see them, or neglect or pass them by as if thou hadst not seen them.

2 And if thy brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not, then thou shalt bring it unto thine own house, and it shall be with thee until thy brother seek after it, and thou shalt restore it to him again.

If thy brother be not nigh unto thee, which may mean duty more trouble some or chargeable. If thou know him not which implies, that if they did know the owner they should restore it to him. Thou shalt bring it thine own house, to be used like thine own cattle. Thou shalt restore it to him again, the owner as it may be presumed, paying the charges.

3 In like manner shalt thou do with his ass, and so shalt thou do with his raiment: and with all lost thing of thy brother's, which he hath lost, and thou hast found, shalt thou do likewise: thou mayest not hide thyself.

1 c. Presumable that thou hast found it. Or, hide it, 1 c. conceal the thing lost.

Deut. 23: 5. 1 ¶ Thou shalt not see thy brother's ass or his ox fall down by the way, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt surely help him to lift them up again.

Help him 1 c. thy brother, the owner. Compare Exod. xxiii: 5.

5 ¶ The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord thy God.

This shall not be done ordinarily or unnecessarily for in some case it may be lawful, as to make an escape for one's life. Now this is forbidden partly for decency sake that men might not be confounded nor seem to confound those who which God hath distinguished: that all appearance of evil might be avoided: such change of garments carrying a mixture of ambiguity or sign of softness and effeminacy in the nature of intemperance and impudency in the woman of lightness and petulancy in both: and partly to cut off all suspicion and occasions of evil which this practice opens a wide door unto.

6 ¶ If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in my tree, or on the ground: whether they be young ones or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young.

7 But thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days.

Let the dam go partly for the bird's sake which suffers much by the loss of its young, for God would not have cruelty exercised toward the brute creatures: and partly for man's sake, to refrain their passions and covetousness: that they should not monopolize all to the mischief but might leave the hopes of a future seed for others.

8 ¶ When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof: that thou bring not blood upon thine house: if any man fall from thence.

Let the battlement be a low wall or a work because the roofs of their houses were made flat or plain that in a night wind or rain they might be blown off or plumed. See Jer. xvi: 27. 1 Sam. ix: 25. 2 Sam. x: 2, 8. Lev. 16. Matt. x: 27. Blood is the guilt of blood by a man's fall from the top of thy house, through the want of the necessary provision.

9 ¶ Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds: lest the fruit of thy seed which thou hast sown, and the fruit of thy vineyard be defiled.

With divers seeds 1 c. 1. With divers kinds of seed mixed and sown together between the rows of vines in thy vineyard which was to be done in the field. Lev. xix: 19, and Lev. xix: 27. Or 2. With any kind of seed differing from that of the vine which would produce either herbage or corn: fruits of trees whose fruit might be mixed with the fruit of the vine. Now this and the two following precepts are given in verses 9, 10, and 11 and are given according to the time and state of the church for documents or instruction in greater matters, and particularly to commend their simplicity and sincerity in all their carriage towards God and man, and to forbid all mixture of their inventions with God's institutions, in doctrine or worship. The fruit of thy seed 1 c. Heb. the fulness of thy seed 1 c. that seed when it is ripe and full. See Exod. xxii: 29, Numb. xviii: 27. Defiled, either, 1. Naturally corrupted or marred whilst one seed draws away the fat and nourishment of the other from the other, and so both are starved and spoiled. Or rather 2. Legally and morally, as being prohibited by God's law and thereby made unclean: as on the contrary, things are sanctified by God's word allowing and approving them. 1. Fin. iv: 5. Heb. be sanctified or, be as a sanctified thing, by an ellipsis of the particle as, 1 c. unlawful for the owner's use, as things sanctified were. Or, sanctifying is put for polluting, by a figure called euphemism, which is frequent in Scripture: as when blessing is put for cursing as, Job ii: 9, and in other authors, as when they use sacred for execrable.

10 ¶ Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together.

1. Either 1. Because the one was a clean beast the other unclean: whereby God would teach men to avoid polluting themselves by the touch of unclean persons or things. 2. Or 2. 11. Or, 2. Because of their unequal strength, whereby the weaker the ass would be oppressed and overwrought. Or 3. 1. or mystical reasons, of which see on ver. 9. Lev. xix: 19.

11 ¶ Thou shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts, as of woollen and linen together.

12 ¶ Thou shalt make thee fringes upon the four quarters of thy vesture, wherewith thou coverest thyself.

Fringes or lace or strings partly to bring the command of God to their remembrance, as it is expressed Numb. xv: 38. and partly as a public profession of their nation and religion: whereby they might be discerned and distinguished from strangers: that so they might be more careful to observe themselves as become the people of God: and that they should not be a hindrance to own their God and religion before all the world. Wherewith thou coverest thyself these words are either restrictive to the upper garment where with the Jews were covered: or again a precept why they should use these things because here we do not suppose they fasten their garment: and prevent the uncovering themselves as might easily happen, when they wore no breeches: but only loose garments.

13 ¶ If any man take a wife, and go in unto her, and hate her, because unto her he hath had carnal knowledge of her.

14 And give occasions of speech against her, and bring up an evil name upon her, and say: I took this woman, and when I came to her, I found her not a maid.

Of speech Heb. of words, 1 c. of discourses or detractions.

15 Then shall the father of the damsel, and her mother take and bring forth the tokens of the damsel's virginity unto the elders of the city in the gate.

1 c. The linen cloth or sheet as is expressed, ver. 17 which in the first congress was infected with blood, as a token and usual. But because this is not now constant the enemies of Scripture take occasion to quarrel with the law as unreasonable and unjust: and such is might oppress the innocent and hence take occasion to reject the Holy Scriptures. It were much more reasonable for them men either to expound this place metaphorically, of producing the proofs and testimonies of her virginity which should be a satisfactory as if that cloth were produced: or if the Jews understood it, as modestly to acknowledge their own ignorance in this: as they are forced to do in many other things, and not injudiciously to censure it as a law: because they cannot resolve it. But it is not needful to get over these many things may be particularly said for the vindication of this law. 1. That it was necessary for that people because of their hardness of heart towards their wives: and their envy and desire of change of wives. 2 That either this trial or at least the proof of her virginity, was to be taken presently after the day of marriage, and that proof was to be admitted afterwards upon occasion. 3 That this law was seldom or never put in execution as the Jews note and seems to be made for terror and caution to husbands and wives, as many other laws have been in like cases. 4 That that God who gave this law did by his providence govern all affairs, and rule the tongues and hearts of men, and therefore would doubtless take care so to order matters that the innocent should not suffer by this means which he could prevent many ways. 5 That there is a great difference in times and climates. Who knows not that there are many things now by our moderns thought uncertain or false which by the ancient physicians were thought and affirmed to be true, and certain in their times and countries and that many signs of diseases and other things do generally hold true in those more southerly and warmer parts of the world which are many times deceitful in our northern and colder climates? 6 That this very way of trial of virginity hath been used not only by the Jews but also by the Arabians and Egyptians as is affirmed by divers learned writers, among whom yet it was more doubtful and less used than among the Jews who might promise to themselves that God would guide the execution of his own law to a just and good issue. 7 That this sign, if it were uncertain in persons of ripe years yet it may be reasonably thought certain and constant in virgins or young and tender age, and that the Jews did ordinarily marry their daughters when they were about twelve or thirteen years old as is confessed as making haste to roll away that reproach which they thought to be in an unmarried state.

16 And the damsel's father, shall say unto the elders, I gave my daughter unto this man to wife, and he hateth her, 17 And, lo, he hath given occasions of speech against her, saying, I found not thy daughter a maid, and yet these are the tokens of my daughter's virginity. And they shall spread the cloth before the elders of the city.

18 And the elders of that city shall take that man and chastise him, Euler 1 By the following mulct. Or, 2 By severe reproof, which that word oft signifies. Or, 3 By stripes, as is expressed Deut. xxv. 2, 3. Which is not strange considering how precious a thing one's good name is, of which he endeavoured to deprive his wife.

19 And they shall utter him in an hundred shekels of silver, and give them unto the father of the damsel, because he hath brought up a evil name upon a virgin of Israel: and she shall be his wife, he may not put her away all his days.

Into the father of the damsel, because this was a reproach to his family, and to himself, because such a miscarriage of his daughter would have been ascribed to his evil education. He may not put her away all his days, which seems to have been his design in this false accusation, and therefore that liberty of a divorce which is permitted to others Deut. xxiv. 1, shall be denied to him.

20 But if this thing be true, and the tokens of virginity be not found for the damsel.

21 Then they shall bring out the damsel to the door of her father's house, and the men of her city shall stone her with stones that she die, because she hath wrought folly in Israel, to play the whore in her father's house: so shalt thou put evil away from among you.

Quest. Why should she die when her crime was only fornication, which was not punished in a woman with death Exod. xxii. 16, 17? Answer. Because there was not only fornication in this case, as Exod. xxii. 16, but this was accompanied with deep dissimulation and injury to her husband in the false profession of virginity and it might be presumed that she committed this folly after she was betrothed to him and therefore so obstinately denied it as knowing the danger of it in that case. or God ordered it thus for the honour and custody of the matrimonial bed from all defilement, that she who being defiled before she was married or betrothed and therefore not punishable by death yet if she should presume to carry her defilement into the married estate with a pretence of virginity, she should then be put to death.

22 ¶ If a man be found lying with a woman married to an husband, then they shall both of them die, both the man that lay with the woman, and the woman: so shalt thou put away evil from Israel.

If a man be found, if he be convicted of this fault, though not taken in the very act.

23 ¶ If a damsel that is a virgin be betrothed unto an husband, and a man find her in the city, and he with her,

By this betrothing she had actually engaged herself to another man and was in some sort his wife and therefore is sometimes so called as Gen. xxiv. 21, Matt. 10.

24 Then ye shall bring them both out unto the gate of that city, and ye shall stone them with stones that they die, the damsel, because she cried not, being in the city: and the man, because he hath humbled his neighbour's wife: so thou shalt put away evil from among you.

Because she could not and therefore justly presumed to have consented to it.

25 ¶ But if a man find a betrothed damsel in the field, and the man force her, and he with her: then the man only that lay with her shall die.

The man force her, which was to be examined and determined by the consideration of all the circumstances.

26 But unto the damsel thou shalt do nothing, there is in the damsel no sin worthy of death for as when a man riseth against his neighbour, and slayeth him, even so is this matter.

Not an act of choice of force and constraint.

27 For he found her in the field, and the betrothed damsel cried, and there was none to save her.

The damsel cried, which is in that case to be presumed, charity obliging us to believe the best till the contrary be manifest.

28 ¶ If a man find a damsel that is a virgin, which is not betrothed, and lay hold on her, and he with her, and they be found,

1. An unmarried man, as appears 1. From his obligation to marry the person he abused which it is not probable would have been imposed upon him had he been married. 2. Because if the man had been married, this had been adultery, and so had been punished with death. Lay hold on her, which notes some kind of force or artifice, whereby she was overpowered, whereas Exod. xxii. 16 she was enticed which implies consent, and therefore the man doth here receive a greater punishment because he used hostile violence towards her, which was the greater sin.

29 Then the man that lay with her shall give unto the damsel's father fifty shekels of silver, and she shall be his wife, because he hath humbled her, he may not put her away all his days.

Fifty shekels of silver, besides the dowry. A Philo the learned Jew notes, which is here omitted, because it was common and customary and because it might easily be gathered out of Exod. xxii. 16, it being sufficient here to mention what was peculiar to this case. She shall be his wife to wit, if her father consent to it which is to be supposed out of Exod. xxii. 16, it being not likely that the father should lose his paternal right of disposing, his child when she was in some sort forced rather than when she was enticed. He may not put her away all his days which others were suffered to do, Deut. xxix. 1. and he who enticed the maid (Exod. xxii. 16) was not prohibited to do so. 30 ¶ A man shall not take his father's wife, nor discover his father's shirt

Shall not take to wife So this respects the state, and the next branch speaks of the act only. His father's wife, his mother-in-law. See Lev. xxi. 10. 11. 1 Cor. v. 1. His father's shirt, i. e. the skirt of the mother's garment, i. e. the adultery which is here called his father's shirt, because his father and mother were one flesh or because his father alone had the right to uncover it. The phrase is taken from the ancient custom or ceremony of the bridegroom uncovering the skirt of his garment over the bride to signify his right to her and authority over her and his obligation to the marriage duty. See Ruth. ii. 9. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

CHAP. XXIII

Who are to be excluded from the congregation 1. 6. In Idumea and Egyptian not to be abhorred and why 7. 8. No uncircumcised to be in the camp 9. 11. No idolatry 17. No abominable sacrifices must be 18. No usury but to strangers 19. 20. Tows must be kept 21. 22. The liberty that was lawful in their neighbour's field or vineyard 23. 25.

III. that is wounded in the stones, or hath his privy member cut off, shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord

Heb. wounded by compulsion or affliction or contention to wit of the stones which was the course the Gentiles took with infants to make them uncircumcised. And these uncircumcised and heathen ver. 2. seem to be not only the rest of other nations, but some under-tinted it without any foundation for such a fiction, but also of the Egyptians, the Egyptians of the Hebrews, the same in all to wit that God would bring into disgrace these heathenish practices of making uncircumcised and getting bastard which heathen would proudly do among his own people. Shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord which heathen could be understood that they might not come into the church nor into holy communion to worship God, to pray or hear &c. because proximity of any nation being admitted to communion church privileges, no less than the Jews (see evidence from Exod. xvi. 18. Lev. xxiv. 18. Num. ix. 14. xv. 15.) it were not to think that any of the Israelites, or such a natural or involuntary defect, should be shut out from all God's communion, nor so that they were to be put out of the fellowship of God's people, to lose the privilege of communion and rights to wit the benefit of the year of jubilee, or jubilee, which it is not probable the Israelites were to be shut merely for this monstrous imperfection, but even if that they should not be incorporated into the body of the church, for so the phrase may seem to have been taken, and by the whole congregation of Israel. Neh. x. 1. 23. 24. although at that time the government was put in the hands of such persons as were heathen, or of 3. or of their children, seeing it is apparent that many that many priests and Levites and other of the children of Israel were married to strange women who were excluded by this law excluded from all share in the covenant and too that among other reasons Nehemiah gave forth in Israel by virtue of the law here following. Or 2. They should not be admitted to honour and offices of the church or communion of Israel and so the congregation of the Lord doth not here signify a community of doers, i. e. body of the people but the society of the elders or rulers of the people who as they represent the whole congregation and act in their name and for their society &c. &c. they use some names called by the name of the church as Num. xxi. 12. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

seeing they are oft called the congregation, they may very well be called in a special manner the congregation of the Lord, because they were appointed by God, and act in his name and stead, and for his work and service, and did also oft assemble near the tabernacle where God was eminently present. Add to this, that the Hebrew word kahal generally signifies a congregation or company of men met together, and therefore this cannot so conveniently be meant of all the body of the people, which could never meet in one place, but of the chief rulers, which frequently did so. Nor is it strange that uncircumcised are excluded from government partly because such persons are commonly observed to want that courage which is necessary for a governor, Exod. xviii. 21. and partly because as such persons ordinarily were despicable so the office and authority in their hands was likely to be exposed to the same contempt.

2. A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord, even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the Lord

A bastard so the word is commonly rendered and so it notes a person base born, or born in fornication or adultery or by incestuous or any prohibited mixtures of man and woman. Object 1 This law seems harsh and too severe for the innocent bastard. Answer 1 It was only an exclusion from government which was a tolerable burden. 2. It was a necessary caution to prevent and brand the sin of incestuousness to which the Jews were more than ordinarily prone. Object 2 I have and Jephthah were both bastards yet advanced to great honour and authority. Answer God gives laws to us and not to himself, and therefore he might when he saw fit confer what favour or power he pleased upon any such person, as he did to these. But so we add that the Hebrew word mamezer signifies not every bastard but a bastard born of any strange woman, as the word may seem to intimate, and as such persons generally seem to have been because of that special provision, that there should be no inheritance of the daughters of Israel as it is here below ver. 17. To his tenth generation, or his tenth generation as it is in the Hebrew and so in the following verses.

3. An Ammonite or Moabite shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord, even to their tenth generation shall they not enter into the congregation of the Lord for ever

This may be understood either 1. Of the males only, or the children of such fathers, as interpreters commonly take it. Or rather 2. Of females also, or of all that were born of such fathers or mothers as may be gathered from Lev. xxi. 7. Neh. xiii. where the children of strange women were proscribed from Israel no less than the children of such fathers. And it is in all well known, that the birth follows the blood. And where is the children of Rahab or Ruth are produced to the contrary it may be said that it were before that these were extraordinary instances, and that God when he pleased might exempt any particular person from them from this curse though the Israelites much misdo so. For ever so it is easy to note the immutability and perpetuity of this law that it should be inviolably observed in all succeeding ages and not dispensed with for any one in the persons or any particular whatsoever. But why then should this clause be added only here, seeing the force of a law is inviolable is this? It seems therefore to extend the duration of this exclusion of them from the congregation of the Lord beyond what was said at first and to be added by way of aggravation even to their tenth generation shall they not enter yet even for ever, i. e. they shall never enter as it is expressed, without any mention of the tenth generation. Neh. xiii. 1. that they shall not come into the congregation of God for ever

4. Because they met you not with bread and with water in the way, when ye came forth out of Egypt and because they hired against thee Balaam the son of Beor of Pethor of Mesopotamia, to curse thee

They met you not, as the manner of those times was to wait and provide for strangers and travellers, see Gen. xiv. 17, xxiii. 2, 3, xix. 1, 2, Judg. xix. 17-21, which was the more necessary, because in those times and countries there were no such public houses of entertainment, as now there are among us. Their fault then was unmercifulness to strangers and pilgrims, and afflicted persons, which was aggravated both by their relation to the Israelites, as being the children of Lot, and by the special kindness of God and of the Israelites to them in not fighting against them, as they had just occasion to do and as they did by others, Deut. ii. Object Quest How doth this agree with Deut. ii. 29, where the Moabites which dwell in Ar are said to have sold them meat and drink? Answer 1 It is one thing voluntarily to meet them and kindly to relieve them with bread and water which they are here denied to have done, and quite differing thing to sell them bread and water when they are upon their very borders, and their own interest forced them to do so. 2 It may seem that it was only those Moabites that dwell in Ar did so as is said Deut. ii. 29, and that all the rest of the people neglected or refused to do it, and therefore the sin being so general and national, no wonder if the punishment be so too. 3 These and the following words, both here and Neh. xiii. 1 are to be taken distributively, and this first member of the verse belongs to the Ammonites, who did not meet them with bread &c., and the latter part to the Moabites who together with the Midianites, but not with the Ammonites, hated Balaam &c.

5 Nevertheless the Lord thy God would not hearken unto Balaam but the Lord thy God turned the curse into a blessing unto thee, because the Lord thy God loved thee.

6 Forced Balaam to bless thee who was hired and intended to curse thee, if possibly he could.

7 Thou shalt not seek their peace nor their good their prosperity all thy days for ever.

8 Make no contracts either by marriages, or leagues, or commerce with them, but rather shalt constantly keep a jealous eye over them, as enemies who will seize every opportunity to insnare or destroy thee. The counsel was now the more necessary because it is that part of the Israelites lived beyond Jordan in the borders of those people, and therefore God sets up this wall of partition betwixt them, as well knowing the mischief of bad neighbours, and Israel's propensity to receive infection from them. Each particular Israelite is not hereby forbidden to perform an office of humanity to them, but the body of the nation is forbidden all friendly and familiar conversation with them.

9 Thou shalt not abhor in Edomite for he is thy brother thou shalt not abhor in Egyptian because thou wast stranger in his land.

In Edomite the children of Edom only the Amalekites are excepted by God's particular order and upon special reason Deut. xxv. 17-19 Thy brother by J in Jacob's blessing Thou wast a stranger in his land and didst receive habitation protection and provision from them and in time, which kindness thou must not forget for their following persecution. It is ordinary with great men and others that on injury or offence blot out the remembrance of twenty courtesies, but God doth not deal so with us nor will he live us to deal so with others but commands us to overlook and forget injuries and to remember kindnesses.

10 The children that are begotten of them shall enter into the congregation of the Lord in their third generation.

Supposing the grandfather or great grandfather turned proselyte, and the children continue in that faith received by such ancestors.

11 When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing.

Then especially take heed, because that is a time and state of confusion and licentiousness when is one said, the laws of God and man cannot be heard for the noise of arms, and because the success of thy arms and enterprises depends upon God's blessing, which wicked men have no reason to expect and because they do not then carry thy life in their hand, and therefore have need to be well prepared for death and judgment.

12 If there be among you any person unclean, that is not clean by reason of uncleanness that chanceth him by night, then shall he go abroad out of the camp, he shall not come within the camp.

Of which uncleanness see Lev. xv. 4, 16, 17, or by uncleanness of any like kind, one kind being here as oft put for all. He shall go out of the camp Quest Why doth this uncleanness oblige a man to go out of the camp when it did not oblige him to such a removal, Lev. xv. 2, 16, 17? Answer 1 It is not unreasonable if they were obliged to greater strictness and purity when they were undertaking so difficult and dangerous work. 2 There is a manifest reason of the difference because in their houses they had private chambers, where they could in such cases keep themselves from converse with others, whereas in the camp their conveniences were so small and their occasions of action so many, that it was very hard for his fellow soldiers that continued with him in the same tent or part of the camp to avoid the touching of him which yet was infectious, Lev. xv. 7, 22.

13 But it shall be, when evening cometh on, he shall wash himself with water and when the sun is down, he shall come into the camp again.

14 Thou shalt have a place also without the camp, whither thou shalt go forth abroad.

To wit to ease thyself, as it follows ver. 15.

15 And thou shalt have a paddle upon thy weapon, and it shall be, when thou shalt ease thyself abroad, thou shalt dig therewith, and shalt turn back and cover that which cometh from thee.

A paddle the nature of which may be known from the use which here follows. Cover that which cometh from thee partly to prevent the annoyance of ourselves or others, partly to preserve and exercise modesty and natural honesty, and principally that by such outward care they might be reminded to the greater reverence of the Divine Majesty and the greater caution to avoid all real and moral uncleanness, especially now when it is most necessary so to do.

16 For the Lord thy God walketh in the midst of thy camp, to deliver thee, and to give up thine enemies before thee, therefore shall thy camp be holy that he see no uncleanness in thee, and turn away from thee.

In the midst of thy camp either because the ark was continually present with them, or at least some of the holy instrument which were pledges of God's presence, or because God had promised to go forth with them when they engaged in a just and necessary war.

17 Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant which is escaped from his master unto thee.

This is not to be understood universally as if all servants that flee from their masters though without any sufficient cause or colour of justice, might be detained from them by any person to whom they fled for refuge, for this is apparently contrary to all the laws of religion and justice, and charity and would open a door to infinite disorders and mischief. But it is to be understood 1 Of the servants of foreigners, because it follows ver. 16, he shall dig with thee even among you, which shows that he had not yet with and belonged to another people. 2 Of such as belonged to the Canaanites or other neighbouring nations because it he had lived in remote countries it is not probable that he would flee so far to avoid his master, or that his master would follow him so far to recover him. And for the Canaanites this sentence was not put because they were and there were all devoted to God and to Israel and whatsoever they did or said was blessed and approved. And for the other neighbours it was put also partly because some of them were within the larger limits of the land belonging to Israel by God's grant or deed of gift, Gen. xv 18, Josh. i 1, partly, because by their hostile carriages they had given Israel a right to much more of them than a few servants that might possibly run away from their masters, and especially, because both masters and servants of these and other nations are unquestionably at the dispose of the Lord their Maker and sovereign ruler. 3 Of such as upon inquiry appear to have been unjustly oppressed by their masters, as implied by that phrase of his making an escape which supposes a deliverance from danger or vexation. Now it is not strange nor unjust at the great God, who hates all tyranny and styles himself the refuge of the oppressed, doth not restore his authority and help to rescue such persons from their cruel masters, who otherwise would be too strong for them. 4 Of such as came to them out of a desire to embrace the true religion, which possibly his master perceiving, and, moved by force to restrain him from, as it may be probably thought from his choosing and liking to have much the Levites expressed ver 16. Now if this great and supreme Master, to whom all other masters are but vassals, and they and theirs are absolutely in his power, will receive and protect one that gives up himself to his service against the will of the under master, who in this case holds against his sovereign Lord, what shadow is there of injustice in the case?

16 He shall dwell with thee, even among you, in that place which he shall choose in one of thy gates where it liketh him best. Thou shalt not oppress him.

4 That is, as good for him.

Taking advantage from his low and afflicted condition to be unmerciful or injurious to him.

17 ¶ There shall be no whore of the daughters of Israel, nor a sodomite of the sons of Israel.

No contemptible such as were tolerated and encouraged by the Gentile, and even in their religious worship, the daughters of Israel, not that such practices were allowed to them or more than a punishment from mercy, captivity, and reproof, but that it was an especially heinous and unpardonable offence to the Lord, and that he would punish them more than their strangers, though the word may be rendered among the daughters and among the sons, among the sons for the Hebrew word is used in that sense, Numb. xxxv 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, and so it notes that none of that sort should be permitted among them, whether Jews or strangers. For he who defileth or suffereth himself to be defiled with them, shall be cut off, See Gen. xix 9, Lev. xviii 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27.

18 Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore, or the price of a dog, into the house of the Lord thy God for a vow: for even both these are an abomination unto the Lord thy God.

This is opposed to the practice of the Gentiles, who allowed both men and women their obligations they made out of their wicked and infamous gains, and some of them kept lewd women who prostituted themselves in the temples, and to the Jews, who used dogs, and offered part of their profit to them, See Mithr. 7, Banch. vi 15, Herodotus in the 2<sup>d</sup> of his first book, and Strabo in his eighth book. The price of a whore, either 1 Properly the dog being a vile and contemptible creature, in those eastern parts, 1 Sam. xxi 13, xxv 11, 2 Sam. vi 8, Eccles. ix 1, and such an by words designation, which yet should have been disclaimed by virtue of that law, Numb. xviii 15, and it not been for this prohibition. And this may be here prohibited, either 1 That the one instance put for all others, of the like kind, they might not be thought not to offer to God what cost them nothing, as is worth nothing. Or 2 To bring contempt upon the Jews, which divers of the Gentiles offered up to their gods, and the Egyptians worshipped as gods. Or 3 That by comparing whores and dogs together, and equalling the price of them, he might expose whores to the highest disgrace and infamy. Or, II Metaphorically, as that word is oft used in Scripture as

1 Sam. xxiv 14, Psal. xxii 16, 20, Isa. lvi 10, 11, Matt. vii 6, Phil. ii 2, and particularly it is used for unclean or filthy persons, 2 Pet. ii 22, Rev. xxi 15, as Mor, also calls whores bitches, which name doth most properly agree to them in respect of that impudence, and fineness and insatiableness, for which both of them are branded. And this sense may seem most proper in this place, because it agrees with all the other expressions, and is the hire of a whore answers to the whore, ver 17, so the price of a dog may seem to answer to the sodomite, ver 17 and so all concern the same thing, whereas the price of a dog, properly so called, may seem to be quite incongruous, and foreign to the place. It is true which is objected, that law gives use to deliver their laws in proper, and not in metaphorical terms, to prevent mistake and ambiguity, but there seems to be no great danger of mistake here, where the metaphors so clearly explained and determined by so many words joined with it. For any one, and much less in other sacrifices, which being of a higher nature, and prescribed by God, must needs require more exactness than those which depended much upon a man's will and choice, as vows and free will offerings did. Both these, i.e. the whore and the dog, and therefore the price of either of them cannot be acceptable. And this may seem to favour the latter opinion that the dog is here taken metaphorically rather than properly, because there is no mention in the law (save in this place which is in question) of any abominableness of a dog unto God more than of an ass or any other unclean creature, but how abominable sodomites are to God is sufficiently evident from other scriptures, and from undeniable reason.

19 ¶ Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother: usury of money, usury of vitals, usury of any thing that is lent upon usury.

o Ex. 22-23
Lev. 25-26
Deut. 22-23

The So is to receive the principal money or thing lent with such increase or improvement of it as was usual and allowed in the Gentiles. But whether all usury be unlawful, Christian is too apt to question to be determined in the work of this nature. See Lev. xxv 25, Deut. xv 5, P. I. xv 5, Numb. 2, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

20 Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury: but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all that thou doest, thou hast time to lend to him in the land, when thou goest to possess it.

The stranger is to a person of any other nation for so that world is generally used, and therefore they who restrain it to the cursed Canaanish nations seem to do so without any solid or sufficient grounds. And though the word rather is sometimes used in a general sense for every one, yet I think I may affirm that where-soever the words brother and stranger are opposed in the Jewish law, the not signifies the Israelite only, and the stranger signifies any person of what nation or religion soever, whether proscribed to the Jewish religion or not, and so it seems to be meant here. And the reason why usury is permitted to a stranger, not to an Israelite, may seem to be thus, because the Israelites generally employed themselves in the managing of land and cattle, and therefore could not make any advantage of borrowed money to balance the use they should pay for it, and consequently it may be presumed that they would not borrow money upon use, but for want and poverty, and in that case, and principally for that reason usury seems to be forbidden to them, as may be thought from Lev. xxv 35, 36. But the strangers made use of their money in way of trade and traffic with the Israelites, which was more gainful and could much better be the burden of usury, and reap advantage from money so borrowed, and these strangers here spoken of are supposed to be competently rich, and not poor as may plainly appear by comparing this place with Lev. xxv 35, 36, where they are no less forbidden to take usury of a stranger than of a brother in case of poverty.

21 ¶ When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the Lord thy God will surely require it of thee, and it would be sin in thee.

Thou shalt not slack to pay it to wit, if the matter of it be lawful and in thy own power. See Num. xxx. 2. Not slack or delay, because delays may make thee both unable to pay it and unwilling too the sense of one's obligation growing every day weaker than other's. It would be sin in thee i. e. it would be laid to thy charge as a sin, and bring judgment upon thee.

22 But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee.

23 That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform, even a freewill offering, according as thou hast vowed unto the Lord thy God which thou hast promised with thy mouth.

A free will offering, which though thou didst freely make, yet being made, thou art no longer free but obliged to perform it.

24 ¶ When thou comest into thy neighbour's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill at thine own pleasure, but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel.

Thou mayest eat grapes thy fill which was allowed in those parts because of the great plenty and fruitfulness of vines there.

25 When thou comest unto the treading corn of thy neighbour, then thou mayest pluck the ears with thine hand; but thou shalt not move a sickle unto thy neighbour's standing corn.

CHAP. XXIV.

Of the woman that is divorced by her husband with a bill of divorcement 1. A The bill of the new married man 5. Pawns and pledges 6. After dealers 7. Leprosy 8. And again of pawns or pledges 10-13. Of adulterers 14-15. None to be punished for evil or softness 16. Of justice and love to carvers 17-22.

1 *W*HEN a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes because he hath found some uncleanness in her, then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house.

That she find no favour in his eyes i. e. he dislike or loathe her. It is a term used in law which by more understood than is expressed in Prov. 2, xxv. 21. xxv. 23. Uncleanness Heb. mal'edness or shamefulness or filthiness of a thing, i. e. some filthy or hateful thing, some loathsomeness either of body or quality of mind, not observed before marriage, or some blighted and unchristian rage, as this or the like phrase commonly signifies but not amounting to adultery, which was not punished with divorce, but with death. Send her out of his house which is not a command to divorce her, is some of the few understood it, nor an allowance and approbation is plainly appears, not only from the New Testament Matt. v. 31-32. vi. 8, 9 but also from the Old Testament Gen. ii. 24. Mal. ii. 16, but merely a permission or toleration of that practice for prevention of greater evils and cruelties of that hard minded people towards their wives and this only for a season, even until the time of reformation, as it is called Heb. ix. 10, i. e. till the coming of the Messiah, when things were to return to their first institution and purest condition. The husband is not here commanded to put her away but if he do put her away, he is commanded to write and give her a bill of divorcement before he send her out of his house. And though it be true, as our Saviour observes, that Moses did suffer the Jews divorces, to wit, without punishing them which also is here implied, yet it must be acknowledged, that if we consult the Hebrew words, those three first verses may seem to be only a supposition and the words rendered, then let him write her in the Hebrew run thus, and hath written her, and so it follows ver. 2. And she be departed out of his house and be gone and become another man's wife, then follows ver. 3, which even according to our translation carries on the supposition. And if the latter husband hate her, &c. Then follows the position or prohibition, ver. 4.

2 And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife.

1 or although he could not causeless put her away with out sin, yet he being put away and forsaken by her husband might marry another without sin as is determined in the same or a like case, 1 Cor. vii. 15.

3 And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife,

1 Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled for that is abomination before the Lord and thou shalt not cause the land to sin, which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

This is the punishment of his lusty and injustice in putting her away without sufficient cause which by this offer he now acknowledge. After that she is defiled, not simply and absolutely, as if her second marriage were sinful but respectively, or as to her first husband to whom she is defiled or uncleanness which is forbidden for the forbidden are accounted and called unclean. Judg. vii. 7 because they may no more be touched or used than an unclean thing. Thou shalt not cause the land to sin i. e. thou shalt not suffer such abominable business and lewdness to be practised before the people be polluted and the land defiled and accursed by that means.

5 ¶ When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business, but he shall be free some one year and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

Any business i. e. any public office or employment which may cause his absence from or neglect of his wife. He shall be free at home one year that their affections newly engaged may be firmly settled or as there may be no occasion for the divorce last mentioned.

6 ¶ No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge for he taketh a man's life to pledge.

The nether or the upper millstone used in their hand mills of which see Exod. xi. 5. Num. xi. 8, for xxx. 10. Under this one kind he understands all other things necessary to get a livelihood, the taking away whereof is against the laws both of charity and prudence, seeing by the things alone he can be enabled both to subsist and to pay his debts. A man's life, i. e. his livelihood, or the necessary support of his life.

7 ¶ If a man be found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel, and maketh merchandise of him, or selleth him, then that thief shall die, and thou shalt put evil away from among you.

See on Exod. xxi. 16.

8 ¶ Take heed in the plague of leprosy, that thou observe diligently, and do according to all that the priests the Levites shall teach you as I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do.

By which words he plainly intimates that they were not only to have an eye to the Levitical instructions, but also red especially unto the word and command of God, and that if the Levites' sentence were manifestly contrary to the command of God, it were not to be obeyed. As now if a Levite or priest should, for fear, or favour or gain, pronounce a person to be clean who were really and manifestly unclean, and had the unique noble marks of leprosy upon him, I suppose no man in his wits will question but every man that saw and knew this were bound to avoid the touching of him: and that if he did touch him he should be defiled by it.

9th Remember what the Lord thy God did unto Miriam by the way, after that ye were come forth out of Egypt

God smote Miriam with leprosy for her contempt of Moses, and therefore thou must respect the name or lust punishment if they do discipline the counsel and direction of the Levites which I have set over thee and commanded thee to observe in this and the like matters.

10 ¶ When thou dost lend thy brother any thing, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge.

To prevent both the poor man's reproach, by having him wants exposed to view and the creditor's insolence and neediness which might be occasioned by the sight of one dum which he desired and the debt a could not spare.

11 Thou shalt stand abroad, and the man to whom thou dost lend shall bring out the pledge abroad unto thee.

I shall check what pled,<sup>8</sup> but please provide only sufficient for the purpose.

12 And if the man be poor, thou shalt not deal with his pledge.

Put restore it before night, which intimate that he had no such thing for pledge without which he could not sleep since it were in his things, to the it and never see day. Exodus 22: 26-27

11 In any case thou shalt deliver him
12 the pledge again when the sun goeth
13 down, that he may sleep in his own
14 garment, and I will bless thee, and it shall be 15 righteous before thee before the Lord thy God.

11 ¶ Thou shalt not <sup>a</sup> oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy wha her be be of thy brethren or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates.

Father by law, to remove your burdens of work upon him or by withholding his wages from him, as it follows:

15 At his day thou shalt give him his hire: neither shall the sun go down upon it: for he is poor, and setteth his heart upon it: lest he cry against thee unto the Lord, and it be sin unto thee.

For the father shall not be put to death for the children: but the children shall be put to death for the fathers.
Every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

Understand it well, if the one be free from the guilt of his father's sin, and except in those cases where the severe reign of sin and death, before whom none is exempt, hath commanded it, as Deut. xxi. 18, 19, 21. For thus it is given to men not to God; and though God be visit the father's sin upon the children, Exod. x. 6, 7. He will not punish men to do so. For his own sin, understand only, and not for any other man's sin.

17 ¶ Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger, nor of the fatherless: nor take the widow's raiment to pledge:

20) of the fatherless, nor of the widow, which is to be applied out of the last member, nor indeed of any other person, but he particularly mentions these, partly because man is more apt to wrong such helpless persons, and partly because God is pleased especially to cherish himself, and to charge others with the care of those who have no other refuge. See Isa i 23, Jer v 28. The widow's want to wit, such a one as the law itself did not necessitate use of as being poor, as may appear by comparing ch. with ver 12, 13, and with other places. But the poor, not rich persons, nor superfluous raiment

18 But thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt and the Lord thy God redeemed thee thence therefore I command thee to do this thing

*Thou shalt remember, to wit, affectionately and practically, and by the compassionate sense of others' miseries, thou shalt make it evident that thou hast not forgotten thy exonerated and deliverers. 19<sup>c</sup> When thou cuttest down the harvest in thy field and hast it home, thou shalt not go again to glean in the field, then shalt not go again to glean in the field, for the fatherless, and for the widow, that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hands.

2) When thou be at thine olive tree, thou shalt not go over the boughs again: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

When they matured them olive trees with staves, as they used to do to fetch down the olives.

21 When thou gatherest the grapes of thy vineyard, thou shalt not glean it afterward: it shall be for the stranger, <sup>and for the fatherless</sup> <sup>and for the widow</sup>

22 And thou shalt remember that <sup>year is</sup> thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

11 If there be a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them, then they shall justify the righteous, and condemn the wicked.

A controversy about criminal matters, as it follows
They shall justly acquit him from guilt and false ac nations, and free him from punishment. Condemn him and declare him guilty and the punishment of condemnation shall be upon him.

2 And it shall be, if the wicked man be worthy to be beaten, that the judge shall cause him to be down, and to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number.

It is to be observed, which the Jews say was the case of all those crimes which the law commands to be punished, without expressing the kind or degree of the punishment Before his face; that the punishment may be duly inflicted, without excess or defect, which otherwise might easily happen through the executioner's passion or partiality.

40 stripes he may give him, and not exceed lest, if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many stripes, then thy brother should seem vile unto thee.

Not exceed, it seems not supererogation, but prudent caution, when the Jews would not exceed thirty-nine stripes, 2 Cor. xi. 21 lest through mistake or forgetfulness or eagerness they should go beyond their bounds, which they were commanded to keep; but they were not obliged to go to the utmost extent of them. Thy brother, who, though guilty and chastised yet still is thy brother by nation, and probably by religion too. Should seem vile unto thee, i.e. should be made contemptible to his brethren, either by the cruel name of him, as if he were a slave or brute beast, or by the deformity or infirmity of body, which excessive beating might produce.

As the Gentiles used to do, having divers devices to keep them from eating when they trod out the corn, which they did in three parts, and twice by oxen. Hos. x. 11 either immediately by their hoofs, Lev. xxviii. 28, Matt. ix. 9, by drawing carts or other instrument over the corn, Lev. xxi. 10, xxviii. 27, xli. 1. Amos i. 3. Hearty God might them humanity and kindness even to their beast that served them, Prov. xii. 10 and much more to their servants or other men who laboured for them, and especially to their ministers, 1 Cor. ix. 9.

5 ¶ If brethren dwell together and one of them die and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger: her husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her.

brethren, strictly so called, as is evident from ver. 7, Gen. xxviii. 8, Ruth i. 13, Matt. xxii. 24, 25. Dwell together, either 1. Strictly, in the same house or family, which is not probable, because the married brother may be presumed to have left his father's house, and set up a family of his own. Or 2. More largely, in the same town or city, or, at least, country. This is added for a relief of their consciences, that if the next brother be not removed his habitation into remote parts, or were carried thither into captivity, which God fore-saw would be then the wife of the dead had her liberty to marry to the next kin, in that lived in the same place with her. One of them, i.e. the first and eldest of them, as it was practised Gen. xxviii. 6, &c., and expounded, Matt. xxii. 25. one being set out for the first, as Gen. i. 5, ii. 11. Hag. i. 13.

¶ And the chief care was about the first born, who were invested with singular privilege, and were type of Christ. ¶ 2 Any of them, for the words are general, and so the practice may seem to have been. Ruth iii. and the reason of the law may seem to be in a great measure to keep up the distinction as of tribes and families, that as the Mevias might be discovered by inquiry from which he was appointed to proceed, so also the first born, which were divided among all the brethren, first born having only a double portion. Have no child, but son is set out for any child, male or female, by scripture and other authors, and therefore the Hebrew son is rendered no child here, as it is in Gen. xxi. 21; Mark xii. 19, Luke xx. 28. And indeed this provision was not necessary when there was a daughter, whose child might be adopted into the name and family of the grandfather. Thus a stranger, i.e. to one of another family, as that word is oft used. His husband's brother shall go in unto her, except he was married himself, as may appear by other scriptures, and by the reason of the thing, and, as some add, from the phrase of availing to gether to wit, in their father's family.

6 And it shall be, that the firstborn which she beareth shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not put out of Israel.

In the name of his brother, shall be called and reputed his son. See Ruth i. 17. That his name be not put out of Israel, that a family be not lost. So this was a provision that the number of their families might not be diminished.

7 And if the man like not to take his brother's wife, then let his brother's wife go up to the gate unto the elders, and say, My husband's brother refuseth to raise up unto his brother a name in Israel: he will not perform the duty of my husband's brother.

To raise up unto his brother a name, to revive his brother's name and memory.

8 Then the elders of his city shall call him, and speak unto him: and if he stand to it, and say, I like not to take her,

Speak unto him to convince him of the duty, and persuade him to it. If he stand to it, if he obstinately refuse it.

9 Then shall his brother's wife come unto him in the presence of the elders, and loose his shoe from off his foot, and spit in his face: and shall answer and say, So shall it be done unto that man that will not build up his brother's house.

To loose his shoe, partly a sign of his renouncing of all his right to the woman, to her husband's inheritance, for the shoe was a sign of one's power and right. Psal. lxxviii. 9. so the putting with the shoe was a token of the alienation of such right, and that he would not aid her forth might not enter upon his brother's land, and partly is a note of infamy, to signify that by this unbecoming and dishonourable action he was unworthy to be amongst free men, and fit to be reduced to the condition of the meanest servants or captives, who used to go bare foot. Isa. lv. 2. Spit in his face, as a return of his contempt upon him. See Numb. xii. 11. Isa. l. 6, Matt. xxvi. 67. xxvi. 67 This was not done, Ruth iv., either because he was not a brother, but a remote kinsman, and so deserved less shame, or because Ruth did not prosecute him to the utmost, but freely consented to this exchange. Build up, a phrase oft used for the procreation of children, and the increase of a family. See Gen. xvi. 2, Exod. i. 21, 1. King. xi. 38, 1. Chron. xii. 25.

10 And his name shall be called in Israel: The house of him that hath his shoe loosed.

His person, names being oft put for persons, and his posterity also. So it was a lasting blot.

11 ¶ When men strive together one with another, and the wife of the one draweth near to deliver her husband out of the hand of him that smiteth him, and putteth forth her hand, and taketh him by the secrets,

12 Then thou shalt cut off her hand, thou shalt not pity her.

Partly because of the great mischief he did to him both to his person and posterity, and partly to deter women from all modest and unbecoming carriage, and to cure that modesty which is imputed to the female sex, by virtue of a modesty is an art to be used in the presence of ience of this degenerate age shows, and therefore it is not strange that it is so severely restrained and punished. Thine eye shall not pity her, which thou wilt be very apt to do because of the infirmity of her sex, and the urgency of her occasion, this being done for the necessary preservation of her husband.

Heb the year of that tithes, so called, either 1 Because these tithes were gathered only in that year. Or rather, 2 Because then only they were so bestowed or used, and whereas these second tithes for two years together were eaten only by the owners and Levites, and that in Jerusalem, in the third year they were eaten also by the strangers, fatherless, and widows, and that in their own dwellings. The LXX join these words with the following, and for shenath, the year, read shenath, the second and take you for redundant, as sometimes it is, and read the place thus, The second tithes thou shalt give to the Levite, &c.

13 Then thou shalt say before the Lord thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, to the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me. I have not transgressed thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them.

Mat. 23, 27.

Before the Lord, i. e. either before the tabernacle or temple, or rather, in thy private and domestic address to God, for this is to be said presently upon the distribution of these tithes, which was not done at Jerusalem but in their own private gates or dwellings, except we will suppose that after he had given away these tithes at home he should go up to Jerusalem merely to make this acknowledgment, which seems improbable. And this is to be spoken before the Lord i. e. solemnly seriously and in a religious manner, with due respect to God's presence and will and glory, which is a sufficient ground for that phrase. I have brought away, or separated or removed to wit from my own proper and private fruits. The hallowed things i. e. the tithes which have been sanctified and set apart for these uses.

14 I have not eaten thereof in my mourning neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead: but I have hearkened to the voice of the Lord my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me.

In my mourning i. e. either 1 In my funeral solemnities for the dead. But this falls in with the first branch. Or 2 In my distress or poverty, or upon pretence of my own want, in which case men are tempted and inclined to fall upon sacred or forbidden things. Or 3 In sorrow or grieving that I was to give away so much of my profit to the poor, but I have cheerfully eaten and feasted with them as I was obliged to do. For though it be taken for granted by some learned expositors from Deut. xv. 28, 29 that the owner was not to eat any part of the third year's tithes, but to give it all away to the stranger and fatherless &c., the contrary seems to me more probable from that very place where it is said thou shalt lay it up within thy gates, and then it follows, that the Levite, stranger, &c. shall come to wit, to thy gates, and shall eat to wit there as is expressed ver. 12, that they may eat within thy gates and be filled, which implies that these tithes or some part of them, were eaten in the owner's gates or dwelling with holy rejoicing and feasting, wherein it is most probable the owner had his share, though it be not there expressed, because it was evident in itself from the foregoing passage Deut. xiv. 23, &c., where the owner is allowed and commanded to eat those tithes together with the Levites. And how or for some think the third year's tithes ver. 28, were not the same with those ver. 23, yet it cannot with any colour of reason be thought that those tithes which were to be eaten, not only by the Levites, but also by the strangers ver. 29, were more sacred than those that were to be eaten by none but the Levites and the owners, ver. 23, 27 or that the owner might eat of the one, and not of the other. For any unclean use, i. e. for any common use, the words common and unclean being oft indifferently used one for the other, or for any other use than that which thou hast appointed which would have been a pollution of them. For the dead,

i. e. for any funeral pomp, or service, or feast, for the Jews used to send in provisions to feast with the nearest relations of the party deceased, of which see Jer. xvi. 7, 1zek. xiv. 17; Hos. ix. 4, and in that case both the guests and food were legally polluted, Num. xix. 11, 14, and therefore the use of these tithes in such cases had been a double fault, both the defiling of sacred food, and the employing of those provisions upon sorrowful occasions which by God's express command were to be eaten with rejoicing. Deut. xiv. 26, xxvi. 11.

15 Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

After that solemn profession of their obedience to God's commands, they are taught to pray for God's blessing upon their land whereby they are instructed how vain and ineffectual the prayers of unrighteous or disobedient persons are.

16 ¶ This day the Lord thy God hath commanded thee to do these statutes and judgments thou shalt therefore keep and do them with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

17 Thou hast avouched the Lord thy God to be thy God, and to walk in his ways, and to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice.

Avouched or declared or professed, or owned. This day i. e. at this time in this wilderness, where thou hast accepted and ratified God's covenant.

18 And the Lord hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar people as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldst keep all his commandments.

He hath owned thee for such before all the world by eminent and glorious communications and manifestations of his power and grace and favour in thee and for thee by a solemn entering into covenant with thee and giving a peculiar law, promises, and privileges to thee above all men. And that thou shouldst keep all his commandments, which is here mentioned as an act of God, because though the he hath avouched thee to be his peculiar people, that he will vouchsafe to give us such commands that he doth require and will accept of our obedience to them and that we have no power or will to obey him, 1zek. xxxvi. 26, 27.

19 And to make thee a high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honour, and that thou mayest be a holy people unto the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 Commandment to set up stones for a remembrance, and to write the law upon them. They must build the altar of the Lord with whole stones, 1-8. To pronounce the blessing on Gerizim, and the curse on Ebal, 9-26.

AND Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day.

2 And it shall be on the day when ye shall pass over Jordan unto the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, that thou shalt set thee up great stones, and plaster them with plaster.

On that day, i. e. about that time, for it was not done till some days after their passing over. Days is oft put for time as hath been noted before. Plaster them with plaster for convenience of writing upon them.

3 And thou shalt write upon them all the words of this law, when thou art passed over, that thou mayest go in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee

hath promised thee

All the words of this law, either, 1 All the words of this Book of Deuteronomy But that seems too large for this place Or, 2 The blessings and curses here following But they are mentioned as a different thing Or, 3 The law properly so called, i. e. the sum and substance of the precepts or laws of Moses, especially such as were moral and general, as may be guessed from the following part of the chapter, where the curses pronounced against all that confirm not all the words of this law to do them are particularly applied unto the true transgressors of moral laws only, ver 15, 16, &c And especially the decalogue, which oft goes under that name Compare Josh viii 32, &c

1 Therefore it shall be when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I commaund you this day, 'in mount I bal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster

Mount Sinai, the mount of cursing. Here the law is written, to signify that a curse was due to the violators of it and that no man could expect justification or blessing from the works of the law by the sentence whereof all men are justly accursed, is being all guilty of the transgression of it in one kind and degree or other. Here the sacrifices are to be offered, to show that there is no way to be delivered from this curse but by the blood of Christ, which all these sacrifices did typify and by Christ's being made a curse for us (Gal. iii. 13).

5 And there shalt thou build an altar unto the Lord thy God an altar of stones: <sup>118 20</sup> thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them: <sup>119 4</sup>

6 Thou shalt build the altar of the Lord thy God of whole stones: and thou shalt offer burnt offerings thereon unto the Lord thy God.
It whole stone, i. e. rough, not hewed nor polished

7 And thou shalt offer peace offerings, and shalt eat there, and rejoyce before the Lord thy God.

8 And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law very plunly
So as to be easily read by all

9 ¶ And Moses and the priests the Levites spake unto all Israel, saying, Take heed, and hearken, O Israel, this day thou art become the people of the LORD thy God.

By thy solemn renewing of thy covenant with him

10 Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the Lord thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes which I command thee this day

11 ¶ And Moses charged the people the same day, saying,

12 These shall stand upon mount Gertizim to bless the people, when ye are come over Jordan, Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin.

Against In Joshua 5 they stood ~~over~~ <sup>against</sup> Against Gergizim In Joshua 5 Both armies they stood upon the one mount stood over ~~against~~ the other 2 Those words may be rendered ~~base~~ <sup>base</sup> or ~~near~~ <sup>near</sup> (as the Hebrew al oft signifies) Mount ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~near~~ <sup>near</sup> which might be over against and Judah, and Benjamin, and Joseph, and Benjamin well the children of the free women, Leah and Rachel, to show both the dignity of the blessing, and the curse, and that the blessings belong only to the free women, emphatically such as this is expounded upon these words, &c., even to those that receive the Spirit, and the liberty Joseph is here put for both Ephraim and Manasseh and Ephraim, which are here put for the tribes of Manasseh and Levi is here numbered, and the tribe of Manasseh is omitted, as it is where the division of the land is made, and the tribes of Ephraim pass for two tribes.

13 And there shall stand upon Mount Ebal ¶ to curse; Reuben, Gad, and Asher, and Zabulon, Dan, and Naphtali:

In curse, he saith to bless the people, and to curse only to curse, not expressing whom, either those who were loth to mention the people as objects of the curse, or because he presumed and hoped that though some particular persons might deserve the curse, yet the generalities of the people would keep out of the reach of it; or to intimate, that though the blessing was peculiar to the people of Israel, yet the curse was indelible and common to all nations, as they appear from the particular sins here numbered, which are such as made the Gentiles guilty and amenable to God, as is elsewhere affirmed. See Lev. xviii. 28. And Asher, Dan and Naphtali, are the children of the Levitical women, to show that the curse belongs to those of servile and disingenuous spirits, and carriages to God. With these are joined Ituben who by his shameful sin fell from his dignity, Gen. xlix. 4, and Zebulun, as the youngest of Leah's children who was necessary to be joined with those that the numbers might be equal.

11 ¶ And <sup>h</sup>the Levites shall speak, and say unto all the men of Israel with a loud voice

The Levites, &c. some of the Levites, to wit, the priests, which bare the ark, as it is expressed, Josh. viii. 33, for the chief of the Levites stood upon Mount Gerizim, ver. 12 but these stood in the valley between Gerizim and Ebal looking towards the one or the other mountain as they pronounced either the blessings or the curses, for they gathered from Josh. viii. 33 With a loud voice, for as they might be heard by a great number of the people, by whom the rest were informed and directed by some signal, when they should answer

15 <sup>1</sup> Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the LORD, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place <sup>2</sup> And all the people shall answer and say, Amen

Under this particular he understands all the branches of the first table, as under the following branch he comprehends all other sins against the second table, as he intimates from hence that there are other sins, not here mentioned, which are as sinful as these, and will as certainly expose a man to the curse as any of the rest.

it, or although as that particle sometimes signifies. In a secret place, he takes special notice of such, partly to show the folly of those men who think to hide their sins by this means, and partly to deter men from such practices, who would not could not see nor punish, by making them their own conscience miners and executioners. Amen, &c. So let it be. I wish such curse may befall me, if I be guilty of this crime. See Numb v 22. Jer vi 6

his father or his mother And all the people shall say, Amen

17<sup>m</sup> Cursed ~~be~~ he that removeth his neighbour's landmark. And all the people shall say, Amen

18 Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way, and all the people shall say, Amen

That misleadeth the simple, giving them pernicious counsel, either for his own sake, or for the sake of his name

19 Cursed be he that perverteth the judgement of the stranger, fatherless, and widow: and all the people shall say, Amen

20 Cursed be he that lieth with his father's wife, because he uncovereth his father's skirt: and all the people shall say, Amen

21 Cursed be he that lieth with any beast: and all the people shall say, Amen

22 Cursed be he that lieth with his sister, the daughter of his father, or the daughter of his mother: and all the people shall say, Amen

23 Cursed be he that lieth with his brother in law: and all the people shall say, Amen

24 Cursed be he that smiteth his neighbour secretly: and all the people shall say, Amen

25 Cursed be he that taketh reward to slay an innocent person: and all the people shall say, Amen

26 Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the words of this law to do them: and all the people shall say, Amen

Confirmeth not, i. e. performeth not, for he that transgresseth both in some sort destroy and make void the law of God, as to the main end for which it was given, even to the regulation of his life and actions, and as far as lies in him despises the authority and force of God's law

The blessings of obedience, 1—11 Curses for disobedience, 15—48

AND it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe and to do all his commandments which I command thee this day, that the LORD thy God will set thee on high above all nations of the earth:

He will love thee, and honour thee with divers privileges, and his blessing shall follow thee

And all these blessings shall come on thee, and overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God:

These blessings which others greedily follow after, and oftentimes never overtake, they shall follow after thee, and shall be thrown into thy lap by my special kindness

3 Blessed shall thou be in the city, and blessed shall thou be in the field

4 Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy land, and the flocks of thy sheep

5 Blessed shall be thy basket and thy store

6 Blessed shall thou be when thou goest out, and blessed shall thou be when thou goest in

7 In all thy affairs and administrations, which are oft expressed by this phrase, as Numb xxvii. 17, Deut xxxi. 2, 2 Sam. iii. 25, 2 Chron. i. 10, Acts i. 21, ix. 26

8 The LORD shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways

Many ways, as is usual when an army is totally overthrown and dissipated

9 The LORD shall command the blessing upon thee in thy storehouses, and in all that thou settest thine hand unto, and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee

Shall command i. e. shall by his sovereign and powerful providence give it even when it seems furthest from thee, and not likely to come to thee without a word of command from God himself

10 The LORD shall establish thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, if thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways

Shall establish thee an holy people unto himself i. e. shall confirm and establish his covenant with thee by which he separated thee to himself as a holy and peculiar people and shall publicly own thee for such, as it follows, ver. 10

11 And all people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the name of the LORD, and they shall be afraid of thee

That you are in deed and truth his people and children see Deut xiv. 1 xxvi. 18 For to be called times signifies to be, as Isa. xlviii. 1, 5, lvi. 7, Mic. i. 4, 19, xvi. 13

12 And the LORD shall make thee plenteous in goods, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in the land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers to give thee

The same things which were said before are repeated, to show that God would repeat and multiply his blessings upon them

13 The LORD shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give thee rain unto thy land in his season, and to bless all the work of thine hand: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow

His good treasure, to wit, the heaven on the sun, as it here follows, which is God's storehouse, where he treasures up rain or wind or other things for man's use see Job xxxviii. 22, Psal. xxxiii. 7

14 And the LORD shall make thee the head, and not the tail, and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath, if that thou hearken unto the commandments of the LORD thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them

The head, the chief of all people in power, or at least in dignity and privileges, so that even they that are not under thine authority shall reverence thy greatness and excellency So it was at David's and Solomon's time and so it should have been much oftener and much more, if they

in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates

56 The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter,

Evid. i e. unmerciful she will desire or design their destruction for her food

57 And toward her young one that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates

Her young one, Heb. after-birth, that which was loathsome to behold will now be pleasant to eat, and together with it she shall eat the child which was wrapt up in it and may be included in this expression Which she shall bear, on which she shall have born a child more grown children

58 If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful name THE LORD THY GOD,

Name, i e. thing of person to wit this glorious God Names are set out for things as 1 Kings v. 5 Psal. cx. 1, cxi. 1, Acts ix. 12, Eph. i. 21, and for persons as Acts i. 16, Acts iii. 1

59 Then the Lord will make thy plagues wonderful, and the plagues of thy seed, even great plagues, and of long continuance, and sore sicknesses, and of long continuance

60 Moreover he will bring upon thee all the diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of, and they shall cleave unto thee

61 Also every sickness, and every plague, which is not written in the book of this law, them will the Lord bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed

62 And ye shall be left few in number, whereas ye were as the stars of heaven for multitude because thou wouldst not obey the voice of the Lord thy God

63 And it shall come to pass that as the Lord rejoiced over you to do you good, and to multiply you, so the Lord will reprove over you to destroy you, and to bring you to nought, and ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it

Rejoice over you to destroy you his just indignation against you will be so great that it will be a pleasure to him to take vengeance of you For though he doth not delight in the death of a sinner in itself yet he doth doubtless delight in the glorifying of his justice upon incorrigible sinners Seeing the execution of his attributes must needs please him else he were not perfectly happy The land whither thou goes to possess it, which was no ordinary land but a most pleasant land as he had promised, a token of God's favour and a pledge of the eternal inheritance, which was a great aggravation of their loss of it

earth even unto the other, and there thou shalt serve other gods, which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone

65 And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind

Neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest, ye shall have no settlement in the land whither you are banished, but there you shall be tossed about from place to place, and sold from person to person, or, Cain-like, wander about like a vagabond

66 And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life

Either because thou art in the hands of thy enemies, that have power, and want not will, to destroy thee; or because of the terrors of thy own mind, and the guilt of thy conscience, making thee to fear, even where no great cause to fear is

67 In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see

68 And the Lord shall bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee, Thou shalt see it no more again and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bondmen and bondwomen and no man shall buy you

Into Egypt again whence he hath now so gloriously delivered thee repentance of all his kindness to thee, and resolved to undo what he hath done for thee And the remembrance of what they endured in Egypt could not but make the thoughts of returning thither again very terrible to them With ships which was literally fulfilled under Titus when multitudes of them were carried thither in ships and sold there for slaves as Josephus relates And this expression seems to mind them of that time when they went over the sea without ships, God miraculously drying up the sea before them &c. which now they would have occasion sadly to remember By the way or, to the way the Hebrew bath here signifying to as it doth Gen. xi. 4 Lev. xvi. 22 Psal. cx. 5 Isa. xl. 3 &c. Way seems not to be meant here of the usual road-way from Canaan to Egypt which was wholly by land, but to be for the end of the way or journey even the land of Egypt for to this and not to the road way between Canaan and Egypt agree the words here following, whereof I spake unto thee, Thou shalt see it (i e. Egypt) no more again And that way is put for that land in a place parallel to this where the very same words are used, Deut. xviii. 16 to which this place palpably alludes No man shall buy you either because the number of you captives shall be so great that the market shall be glutted with you, or because you shall be so loathsome and contemptible that men shall not be willing to have you for slaves And this was the condition of the Jews after the destruction of Jerusalem, as Josephus the Jew hath left upon record

CHAP. XXIX.

The manifold works and mercies of God's motives to obedience, 1-9 Moses solemnly engageth them to keep covenant with God, 10-17 Unbelief, careless contempt, and breach of covenant shall be severely punished, 18-28 The end and use of the revealed will of God, 29

THESE are the words of the covenant, which the Lord commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, beside the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.

These are the words of the agreement, these are the terms or conditions upon which God hath made, &c. renewed covenant with you. Beside the covenant i.e. that entering into or suffering of covenant. This covenant was but one in substance, but various in the time and manner of its dispensation.

And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, Ye have seen all that the Lord did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land,

The great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs, and those great miracles.

Yet the Lord hath not given you a heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day.

This verse comes in by way of correction or exception to the foregoing clause in this manner, I said indeed, Ye have seen &c. Ver 2, and thine eyes have seen &c. but I must recall my words, for in truth you have not seen them in seeing you have not seen, and perceiving you have not perceived them; you have perceived and seen them with the eyes of your body, but not with your minds and hearts, you have not seen them to any purpose, you have not yet learned rightly to understand the word and works of God, so as to know them for your good, and to make a right use of them, and to comply with them, which he expresseth thus, the Lord hath not given you &c., not to excuse their wickedness, but partly to direct them what course to take, and to whom they must have recourse for the amending of their former errors, and for a good understanding, and improvement of God's works, and partly to aggravate their sin, and to intimate that although the hearing ear and the seeing eye and the understanding heart, be the workmanship of God, Prov. xii 12, and the effects of his special grace, Deut. xxi 6, Jer. xxxi 33, xxxix 39 &c. yet their want of this grace was their own fault, and the just punishment of their former sins, their present case being like theirs in Isaiah's time, who first shut their eyes and ears that they might not see and hear and would not understand, and then by the tremendous, but righteous judgment of God, had their hearts made fat and their eye and ears closed, that they should not be able to see and hear, and understand, as is manifest from the history of their carriage in the wilderness.

And I have led you forty years in the wilderness, your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot.

So far that it was necessary for you to throw them away, and to get new ones. See on Deut. viii 4.

Ye have not eaten bread, neither have ye drunk wine or strong drink, that ye might know that I am the Lord your God.

Not eaten bread, i.e. common bread purchased by your own money, or made by your own hands, but heavenly and angelical bread, Deut. viii 3, Psal. lxxviii 21, 25. You have subsisted without bread, the staff of life. Neither wine or strong drink, but only water out of the rock. The Lord your God, the Lord omnipotent and all-sufficient for your provision, without the help of any creature, and your God in covenant with you, who hath a true affection to you and fatherly care of you, even when ordinary means fail.

And when ye came unto this place, Sihon the king of Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, came out against us unto battle, and we smote them.

And we took their land, and gave it for an inheritance unto the Rubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half tribe of Manasseh.

Keep therefore the words of this covenant, and do them, that ye may prosper in all that ye do.

Ye stand this day all of you before the Lord your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel,

Before the Lord your God, in his presence, who sees your hearts and carriages, and before his tabernacle, where it is probable they were now called together, and assembled for this work. See ver 2.

Your little ones, your wives, and thy stranger that is in thy camp, from the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water.

Thy stranger, such strangers as had embraced their religion. From the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water, all sorts of persons, yea, even the meanest of them such as these were, Josh. ix 27, all sorts and ranks of servants.

That thou shouldest enter into covenant with the Lord thy God, and into his oath which the Lord thy God maketh with thee this day.

Into covenant and into his oath i.e. into covenant or agreement confirmed by a solemn oath.

That he may establish thee to day for a people unto himself, and that he may be unto thee a God, as he hath said unto thee, and as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

Neither with you only do I make this covenant and this oath,

But with him that standeth with us this day before the Lord our God, and also with him that is not here with us this day.

With your posterity, for so the covenant was made at first with Abraham and his seed by which, as God engaged himself to continue the blessing of Abraham upon his posterity, so he also engaged them to the same duties and conditions which were required of Abraham. So it is even among men, where a king confers an estate upon a subject and his heirs for ever, upon some certain conditions, all his heirs who enjoy that benefit are obliged to the same conditions. But whatsoever becomes of man's right, God the Creator and sovereign Lord of all men and things hath an unquestionable right and power to oblige all persons that are or shall be to such conditions as he pleaseth, and especially to such conditions as are for their own benefit, which is the present case.

(For ye know how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt, and how we came through the nations which ye passed by,

In the land of Egypt where you have seen their idolatry, and learned too much of them, in the golden calf showed and therefore need to renew your covenant with God, where also we were in dreadful bondage, where God alone hath delivered us, to whom therefore we are deeply obliged, and have all reason to renew our covenant with him. How we came through the nations, i.e. with what hazards, if God had not appeared for us.

And ye have seen their abominations, and their idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, which were among them.)

What sorry took they at, what senseless and ridiculous duties, so that you have great reason to value your God and to owe to him in covenant, and to take heed of such abominable idolatries.

belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.

Having now mentioned the dreadful and amazing judgments of God upon the whole land and people of Israel, and foreseeing by the Spirit of prophecy the utter extirpation and destruction which would come upon them for their wickedness, he breaks out into this pathetic exclamation either to bridle their curiosity, who hearing this, would be apt to inquire into the time and manner of so great an event, or to quiet his own mind and satisfy the scruples of others, who perceiving God to deal so severely with his own people, when in the mean time he suffered those nations which were guilty of grosser atheism, and idolatry and impiety than the generality of the Jewish people were, to live and prosper in the world, might thence take occasion to deny or reproach his providence, or question the equity of his proceedings. To this he answers, that the ways and judgments of God, though never unjust, are oftentimes secret and hidden from us, and unsearchable by our shallow capacities, and are matter for our admiration not for our inquiry. Unto us and to our children but the things which are revealed by God and his word these are the proper object of our inquiries and studies that thereby we may come to the knowledge of our duty by the practice whereof we may be kept from such terrible punishments and calamities as these now mentioned

CHAP XXX

I promise of gracious deliverance to the Jews upon their repentance, in future times 1-10 The law of God manifest and just, 11-14 Life and death set before them, 15-20.

Lev 26:40 1 AND it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the I own thy God hath driven thee,

10 Kings 17:36 2 The blessing when thou art obedient and the curse when thou becomest rebellious and apostatized. Set before thee Heb placed before thy face i.e. propounded to thy consideration and choice. Bring them to mind or bring them back to thy heart, i.e. deeply affect thy heart with the sense of the things to wit, of the blessings offered and given to them by God's mercy and the curses brought upon them selves by their sins.

1 Sam 12:11 3 And shalt return unto the Lord thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul,

1 Sam 12:14 4 That then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee.

1 Sam 12:15 5 Turn thy captivity, i.e. bring back thy captives, as captives are taken. Psalm 137:7 6 Gather thee i.e. thy children, either spiritually such, as it is explained John 11:51, 52, or literally such, as it is promised Rom 11:26.

Gen 28:14 7 *If any of thine be driven out into the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee.

1 Sam 12:16 8 And the Lord thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it, and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers.

1 Sam 12:17 9 And the Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

The Lord will circumcise thine heart, or, for the Lord will circumcise thine heart i.e. will by his word and Spirit change and purge thy heart from all thine idolatry and superstition, and wickedness and incline thy heart to love him as it here follows. See Deut 10:16 And so this is produced to show why and how those great things should be accomplished, God would first convert and sanctify them, the fruit whereof should be this, that they should return and obey God's commandments, ver 8, and then should prosper in all things, ver 9. The Hebrew text is oft rendered for, and notes the reason of a thing, as 1 Kings 11:21, xxii 3, 4, Paul 1:3, v 12, Isa xvi 2, xiv 5. And this promise principally respects the times of the gospel, and the grace which was to be then imparted to all God's Israel by Christ, by whom alone this circumcision is obtained, Col ii 11. And so having fully described to them the law of God, the rule of their obedience here and in foregoing chapters, and considering their great instability in the performance of their obedience to it, he now seasonably adds a glorious gospel promise, and directs their faith to the Messiah by whom alone they could expect or receive the establishment of their hearts in the ways of God against apostasy.

7 And the Lord thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

8 And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the Lord, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day.

9 And the Lord thy God will make thee and thee plentiful in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good. For the Lord will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers.

Whereas thou didst formerly receive and enjoy these mercies for thy lust, through thy own wicked foolish heart when thou wast ill and fit, forgetting God and kicking against him. 1 Sam 12:20, xxvi 15 now thou shalt have them for thy good, thy heart shall be changed by the grace of the gospel that thou shalt not now abuse them but employ them to the more cheerful and faithful service of God, the giver of them. Rejoice over thee for good i.e. to do thee good, as he did rejoice to assist thee, Deut xxviii 63.

10 If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

This caution and condition is added to warn them that they should not receive the grace of God in vain and to teach them that the grace of God doth not discharge man's obligation to his duty, nor excuse him for the neglect of it, and that conversion and sanctification, though it be God's work yet it is man's duty.

He seems to speak of the law, or of that great command of loving and obeying God, mentioned here ver 2, 6, 10, 16, which is the sum of the law, of which yet he doth not here speak simply, or as it is in itself, but as it is mollified and accompanied with the grace of the gospel whereby God circumcises men's hearts to do this, as is expressed ver 6. The meaning is that although the practice of God's law truly and severely be now far from us and above our strength yet, considering the advantage of gospel grace, whereby God enables us in some measure to our duty, and accepts of our sincere endeavours instead of perfection, and imputes Christ's perfect righteousness unto us that he live now it is near and easy to us. And so this place well 1100 w. d. Rom. x. 6, &c., where St. Paul expounds or appl. this place to the righteousness of faith, by which alone the law is such as it is here described. It is not hid- den from thee, Heb. is not too manifest to thee, as Deut. xvi. 8, Prov. xxx. 18; Jer. xxxii. 17. I. e. not too hard for thee to know and do the will of God which is but darkly manifested to other nations; Acts xvii. 27, is clearly and fully revealed unto thee, thou canst not pretend ignorance or invincible difficulty. Far off, i. e. out of thy reach.

12 <sup>11 Rom. 11</sup> <sup>12</sup> It is not in heaven, that thou shouldst say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

In heaven i. e. shut up there, but it hath been thence delivered and published in thy hearing.

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldst say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

Neither is it beyond the sea the knowledge of this commandment is not to be fetched from far distant places to which divers of the wise heathens travelled for their wisdom, but it was brought to the very doors and ears and declared to thee in this wilderness.

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart that thou mayest do it.

In thy mouth thou knowest it so well that it is the matter of thy common discourse, thou profest thy knowledge and belief of it, or in the mouths of thy priests and Levites who are duly preachers of it and instructors therein. In thy heart i. e. in thy mind, (as the heart is very commonly taken) to understand and believe it.

Life and good i. e. a good or a happy life, a figure called hendiadys or life and all the blessings of life, a good is offered us Job vii. 7, Psal. vi. 6. xxviii. 1. Eccles. i. 2. vi. 8. vi. 3.

16 In that I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments and his statutes and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply, and the Lord thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

17 But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them,

Thine heart either by thy own evil mind or by the examples or persuasions of others.

18 <sup>19</sup> <sup>20</sup> I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it.

19 <sup>21</sup> <sup>22</sup> I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and curse in that ye choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live.

Compare Deut. vi. 26. Josh. xxiv. 27. 1. Sam. i. 1. Isa. i. 2.

20 That thou mayest love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him for he is thy life and the length of thy days, that thou mayest dwell in the land which the Lord swore unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

He is thy life, i. e. the cause or author of thy life, as life is used John xvi. 6; xxi. 3.

CHAP. XXXI

Moses declares to the people his approaching death, and encourageth them, and Joshua, 1-8. He delivereth the law unto the priests to read it every seventh year to the people, 9-13. God putteth Joshua into his office, foretelleth to Moses and him the future disobedience and misery of the people, enjoineth Moses a song to testify against the people, 14-23. Moses chargeth the Levites to lay up the book of the law beside the ark of the covenant, 24-27, assembleth all the people to hear his song, 28-30.

AND Moses went and spake these words unto all Israel.

Went and spake i. e. proceeded or continued to speak, a usual Hebrew phrase. Or, went to the place where he had assembled the people that he might speak to them.

2 And he said unto them, I am an hundred and twenty years old this day, I can no more go out and come in, also the Lord hath said unto me, Thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

Go out and come in, i. e. perform the office of a leader or governor, either because I now find a decay of my mind and body which seems not well to agree with Deut. xxxiv. 7 or because I foresee the time of my death approaches.

3 The Lord thy God, he will go over before thee, and he will destroy these nations from before thee, and thou shalt possess them, and Joshua, he shall go over before thee, as the Lord hath said.

4 And the Lord shall do unto them as he did to Sihon and to Og, kings of the Amorites, and unto the land of them, whom he destroyed.

Which he gave to you to possess.

5 And the Lord shall give them up before your face that ye may do unto them according unto all the commandments which I have commanded you.

Before your face i. e. into your power. See on Deut. i. 5.

6 Be strong and of a good courage, be it not nor be afraid of them, for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee, he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

7 And Moses called unto Joshua, and said unto him in the sight of all Israel, Be strong and of a good courage, for thou must go with this people unto the land which the Lord hath sworn unto their fathers to give them, and thou shalt cause them to inherit it.

8 And the Lord, he it is that doth go before thee, he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee, that not neither be dismayed.

9 And Moses wrote this law, and delivered it unto the priests the sons of Levi, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and unto all the elders of Israel.

This law largely so called, the whole law or doctrine delivered unto Moses contained in these five. Delivered it unto the priests that they might keep tully and religiously, and bring it forth upon occasion, and read it, and instruct the people out of it. Which have the ara, to wit sometimes in great solemnities, as Josh in 13, 17, vi. 12, 1 Kings viii 3 though the Levites also might bear it, as appears from Numb in iv x, 1 Chron xv 2. The elders of Israel were assistants to the priests, and overseers to take care that the law should be kept and read, and observed.

10 And Moses commanded them, saying, At the end of every seven years, in the solemnity of the year of release, in the feast of tabernacles,

The year of release, when they were freed from debts and troubles, and cares of worldly matters, and thereby fitter to attend upon God and his service.

11 When all Israel is come to appear before the Lord thy God in the place which he shall choose, thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing.

Thyself in part, for the Jews tell us that the king was in person to read some part of it, or, at least, thou shalt cause it to be read by the priests or Levites for he could not read it himself in the hearing of all Israel, but this was to be done by several persons and to the people met in several congregations. See Neh viii 1 &c.

12 Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the Lord your God, and observe to do all the words of this law.

Gather the people together, not into one place where all could not hear, but into divers assemblies or synagogues. Women hereby are required to go to Jerusalem at this solemnity, as they were permitted to do in other solemnities, when the males only were enjoined to go. Exod xxiii 17. Children, to wit, such of them as could understand as appears from Neh viii 2, 3. Thy stranger i. e. the proselytes, though others also were admitted. That they may learn that they may then certainly and constantly do so, though they had also other opportunities to do so as upon the sabbath days, Acts xxi 21 and other solemn feasts, even in their private houses.

13 And that then children which have not known anything, may hear and learn to fear the Lord your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

14 And the Lord said unto Moses, Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourself in the tabernacle of the congregation, that I may give him a charge. And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation.

In the tabernacle either properly so called for though the priests only might ordinarily enter there yet others might go in upon a call and command from God which they had, or in the court of the tabernacle, at the door of which God stood in the cloudy pillar, but coming here under the name of the tabernacle as when it comes under the name of the people. That I may give him a charge, immediately from myself for his greater encouragement, and to gain him more authority with the people.

15 And the Lord appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud, and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle.

thers, and this people will rise up and go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land, whither they go to be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them.

The death of men, both good and bad, is oft called a sleep, because they shall certainly awake out of it by resurrection. See Psal lxxvi 5, Dan xii 2, 1 Thess iv 13, &c. 2 Pet iii 4. This people will go a whoring God certainly foresees all things to come, yea, even those which depend upon the wills of men, or contingencies of the things as this unquestionably did. Of the strangers of the land i. e. of the Canaanites, who now are possessors, but shortly will be turned out of their possessions and become as strangers in their own land. This aggravates their folly, to worship such gods as could neither preserve their friends, nor annoy their enemies.

17 Then my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall them, so that they will say in that day, Are not these evils come upon us, because our God is not among us?

Hide my face i. e. withdraw my favour and help.

18 And I will surely hide my face in that day for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel, put it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.

This song, which is contained Deut. xxxii, is put into a song that it may be better learned, and more fixed in their minds and memory. Put it in their mouths, command them to learn it, and sing it one to another, to oblige them to more circumspection and watchfulness. A witness for me, of my kindness in saving them so many bloody times, of my patience in bearing so long with them, of my cheerfulness in giving them such fair and plain warnings, and my justice in punishing such an unthankful, perverse and rebellious people.

20 I or when I shall have brought them into the land which I swear unto their fathers, that it floweth with milk and honey, and they shall have eaten and filled themselves, and waxen fat, then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

21 And it shall come to pass, when many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify against them as a witness, for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed, for I know their imagination which they go about, even now, before I have brought them into the land which I swear.

It shall not be forgotten this seems not to be a precept that they should remember it, but a prediction, that God would give them sad occasion to remember it, by bringing upon them the dreadful calamities mentioned in it. Their imagination which they go about, even now, either their inward inclinations to idolatry, which they do not check in the thought, but rather entertain with delight, and some of them do not only cherish it in their hearts, but as far as they can and dare secretly practise it as may be gathered from Amos vi 26, Acts xvi 13 or their secret purposes to allow themselves therein, when they are settled in their land which were clearly known to God though it may be not fully evident to themselves

22 ¶ Moses therefore wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel

23 ¶ And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, <sup>a</sup> Be strong and of a good courage for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I swear unto them and I will be with thee

This wickedness of theirs which I now foresee and foretell shall not hinder me from bringing them into Canaan

24 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished,

25 That Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying, The Levites, i. e. the priests, ver 9, who also were Levites

26 Take this book of the law, <sup>a</sup> and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God that it may be there for a witness against thee

In the side i. e. in the outside in a little chest fixed to it for nothing but the tables of stone were contained in the ark 1 Kings vi 9 Here it was kept for greater security and reverence A witness against thee i. e. against thy people to whom he turned his speech that they might be more affected with it

27 ¶ For I know thy rebellion and thy stiff neck behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the Lord and how much more after my death

28 ¶ Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears and call heaven and earth to record against them

29 For I know that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you and evil will befall you in the latter days because ye will do evil in the sight of the Lord to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands

30 And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended

CHAP XXXII

The Divine song, which he God's power mercy to his people, and vengeance on his enemies is crafted their ingratitude established 1-18 God's wrath and future judgments 19-26 Yet the idolatrous nations to be destroyed and they at last to be slain 27-33 He exhorts them to set their hearts on his loves for their good 34-47 God sends the sun up to Mount Nebo there to see the promised land and die, 48-52

GIVE ear O ye heavens, and I will speak and hear O earth, the words of my mouth

O ye heavens and O ye earth 1 Angels and men or, 2 Ye lifeless and senseless creatures heaven and earth, which he calls upon partly to accuse the stupidity of Israel that were more dull of hearing than these, and partly as witnesses of the truth of his charges and the justice of God's proceedings against them

2 ¶ My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass

Look what effect rain and dew have upon herbs and grass, which they make fresh and fragrant and growing the same effect I may justly expect and hope that my discourse will have upon your hearts, i. e. to make them soft and pliable and fruitful Or this may be a prayer, Let my doctrine drop &c Oh that it might do so, that my discourse might not be lost upon you, but be profitable to you! the future tense of the indicative mood being put for the imperative mood, as is usual

3 Because I will publish the name of the Lord ascribe ye greatness unto our God

The name of the Lord, i. e. his glorious excellencies and righteous and worthy actions, by which he hath made himself known as a man is known by his name, and by which it will appear both that there is no blame to be laid upon him, whatsoever befalls you, and that it is gross madness to forsake such a God for dumb idols and mere vanities

As I am about to publish the great power and majesty and glory of God, so do you also own and acknowledge it, as you have reason to do, or, do you attend to the words which God hath commanded me to speak to you in his name with that diligence reverence, and godly fear which the presence of so great and glorious a Majesty calls for

4 He is the Rock, his work is perfect for all his ways are judgment God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he

The rock, or, a rock as for the stability and everlastingness of his nature, and invincibility of his power, so also for his fixeness and immutability in his counsels and promises and way, so that if there shall be a sad change in your affairs from a hard and prosperous to a calamitous and deplorable condition there will be, remember that this proceed from yourselves, and from the change of your ways and carriage towards God and not from God in whom there is no variableness nor shadow of change James 1 17 His work is perfect, all his works and actions are unblamable as being perfect way, and righteous as it follows All his ways are judgment, all his administrations in the world and particularly all his dealings with you, are managed with judgment and justice A God of truth constant to his promises you cannot accuse him of any levity or unfaithfulness, towards you to this day

5 ¶ They have corrupted themselves, their spot is not the spot of his children they are a perverse and crooked generation

They, i. e. the Israelites as the following words manifest corrupted themselves this phrase sometimes in Scripture denotes sin and sometimes destruction And so the sense may be either, 1 Their wickedness is not from God, but from themselves, and their own choice, they have wilfully and industriously deprived themselves, and sold themselves to sin Or rather, 2 Their destruction is not from God who is just and true, &c, as was now said, but wholly and solely from themselves and from their own wickedness as it here follows Their spot is not the spot of his children i. e. their blemishes or sins are not committed through ignorance or frailty, or surprisal, as good men sometimes sin but they proceed from design and deliberation, in accompaniment with malice, and wilfulness, and contempt, and followed with obstinacy, impenitency, and incorrigibility so that they carry themselves not like my children and people as they seem to be and profess to be but like mine enemies They are a perverse and crooked generation not only some few of them but the whole body or generation of them, are perverse i. e. froward and untractable and crooked, i. e. irregular and disorderly, not agreeing with the straight and righteous nature of God and of his law Compare Isa xlii 16

6 Do ye thus requite the Lord, O ye

Hath bought thee, that hath redeemed and rescued thee from Egyptian bondage. Made thee, i. e. advanced thee, as that word is used, 1 Sam xii 6, Esth vi 6, 1st Mal xvi 6, xlvii 2, Isa. xliii 7. Made thee, not only in a general and common way, by creation or production, but in a peculiar manner, by adoption, or making thee his peculiar people and children. Established thee, i. e. renewed and confirmed his grace and favour to thee, and not took thee away from thee, which thou hast oft provoked him to do.

<sup>5</sup> ask thy father, and he will shew thee,

The days of old, i. e. the history and events of ancient days or former ages, and thou wilt find that I had a respect unto thee, not only in Abraham's time but long before it. Compare Jer ii 20.

<sup>7</sup> When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel

When God by his providence did allot the several parts of the world to several people which was done Gen i. vi. See Deut ii 9, Amos ix. 1, Acts xvii 26. Separated the sons of Adam, i. e. divided them in their languages and habitations according to their families. He set the bounds of the people, i. e. he disposed of the several lands and limits of the people, so as he did reserve a convenient and sufficient place for the great numbers of the people of Israel, whom he designed to make numerous as the stars of heaven. And therefore he so guided the hearts of several people, that the posterity of Chanaan which was accursed of God Gen ix 25-27, and devoted to ruin should be seated in that country which God intended for the children of Israel, that so when their iniquities were ripe, and God's time came, they might be rooted out, and the Israelites might come in their stead.

It is no wonder God had so great a regard to the people for he chose them out of all men and to be his peculiar portion and treasure.

<sup>9</sup> He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness he led him about, he instructed him

He found him, not by chance but as it were looking out and seeking for him, he met with him there. He did indeed manifest himself to him in Egypt, but it was in the wilderness at Sinai, where he found God and God found him in an eminent manner and revealed his mind and will to him, and entered into covenant with him and separated himself and his grace and blessing to him, that being the place appointed in Egypt for God and Israel to meet to gather, Exod iii 12. By this word he also signifies both their lost condition in the wilderness, and that their recovery was not from themselves but only from God, who sought and found them out by his grace. In a desert land, in a place destitute of all the necessities and comforts of life, which also was a type of that desolate and comfortless condition in which all men are before the grace of God finds them out. See Cant ii 6, viii 5, Ezek xvi 1, Hos ix 10; xiii 9. In the waste howling wilderness, where instead of the voices of men, is nothing heard but the howlings, and yellings, and screeches of ravenous birds and beasts. See Isa xliii 20, Micah i 6. He led him about, he conducted them from place to place by his cloudy pillar and providence. See Exod xiii 18, &c. Or, he compassed him about, by his provident care over him, watching over him and preserving him on every side. Compare Psal xxxii 7. As the apple of his eye, as men use to keep the apple of their eye, i. e. with singular care and diligence, this being, as a most tender, so a most useful part. Compare Psal. xvi 8, Prov vii 2, Zech ii 8.

Her nest, i. e. her young ones in the nest by a common metonymy, which she by her cry and motion provoketh to fly by her example. Spreadeth abroad her wings as preparing herself to fly. On her wings, or, as on her arms, i. e. gently, and tenderly, and safely too, as if she carried them not in her claws for fear of hurting them, but upon her wings. So it is only an allusion of the particle as, which is frequent, as hath been showed. Though some say the eagle doth usually carry her young ones upon her wings.

When they were shut up in Egypt, as in their nest, whence they durst not venture to fly nor stir, he taught, and encouraged, and enabled them to fly out and free themselves from that bondage, and brought them into a state of liberty and safety, he dealt tenderly with them, bearing with their infirmities, keeping them from all harms. No strange god with him to wit, to assist him in that work or to deliver them. The more unworthy they in giving to idols a share in that worship and service which they owe to God only.

On the high places of the earth, i. e. to conquer their strongest holds, which oftentimes are in the mountain, and then cities fortified with walls of greatest height and strength, Deut i 28 ii 36, xxxiii 29, Isa lvi 11. To ride upon in Scripture phrase is to subdue or conquer, as Psal xlv 1, lxxvi 12, Rev vi 2, xix 11, 14. To suck honey out of the rock, this being a land flowing with honey. Exod iii 17 where the bees made honey even in woods as 1 Sam xiv 9 in the hole of rocks or in the trees that grew upon or among rocks. Out of the flinty rock the olive trees grow and bear fruit most in rocky or hilly places.

With fat of lambs, for though the fat wherewith the inward parts were covered was not to be eaten by them, but offered to God, Lev iii 9, 10, yet that fat which was fat joined to and mixed with the flesh they might eat, as the Jewish doctors note. Bashan, a place famous for excellent cattle, Numb xxxii 1, 33. With the fat of kidneys of wheat i. e. with the finest of the grains or kernels of wheat, compared to kidneys for their shape, and plumpness, and largeness. Compare Psal lxxxi 16, cxlvi 11. The pure blood of the grape, wine not mixed with water, but pure as it comes from the grape, which was of a red or bloody colour. See Psal lxxv 8, Isa xxvii 2.

<sup>15</sup> But Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked: thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatness: then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation

Jeshurun, i. e. Israel, as is agreed by Christian and Jewish interpreters, whom he calls right, or upright, righteous, (as the word signifies) not that they were so indeed but partly by way of instruction, to mind the men what they professed, and promised, and ought to be, and partly by way of reproach, to show them how unlike they were to the people of God, which they pretended to be, and what a shame it was to them to degenerate so much from their true name and profession. Waxed fat, and lulled, as welland wanton cattle used to do, he grew insolent and rebellious against God and against his word and Spirit. They are covered with fatness, which is here rightly understood and supplied, by comparing this place with Job xv 27, Psal xvii 10.

16 <sup>1</sup> They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger.

To jealousy, i. e. to anger and fury, for jealousy is the rage of a man, Prov vi 31. And withal it implies the ground of his anger, to wit, their falseness to God, whom they had owned and accepted as their Husband, and their spiritual whoredom with other gods.

17 <sup>1</sup> They sacrificed unto devils, || not to God to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not.

Unto devils, i. e. unto idols, which the devils brought into the world in opposition to God, in and by which the devils oftentimes manifested themselves unto men, and gave them answers, and received their worship. Compare 1 Cor x 20. The Gentiles pretended to worship God in those idols, and the devils which inspired them deluded the nations with false pretences that they were a sort of lower gods. Moses therefore takes off this mask, and shows the Israelites that the pretended gods were really devils those great enemies of mankind, and therefore that it was the height of madness to honour or worship them. Not to God thus he saith, either because though at first they joined God and idols together in worship, yet at last they quite forsook God, and adhered to idols only, or because God utterly rejected those sacrifices which they offered to him together with idols, and took them for no sacrifices. See 1 Cor x 21. Whom they knew not, or whom never knew them, i. e. never showed any kindness to them, or did them any good, for words of knowledge are ascribed as Psal lvi 6. Hos xiii 6. That came newly up, not imply or absolutely, for some of these gods had been worshipped for many generations, and had a fair pretence of long antiquity, but comparatively to the true God who is the Author of days Dan vii 9 and who was worshipped from the beginning of the world. To this effect and to the antiquity Moses recalls them, is also our Saviour who recall the Jews to the first institution Matt xix 8. And therefore we may safely follow both their patterns in despising all pretences of antiquity which are contrary to God's first institutions, continued (as all confess) in the Holy Scriptures. Whom your fathers feared not i. e. served and worshipped not, but justly despised and abhorred them.

18 <sup>1</sup> Of the Rock that begot thee thou art ungodly, and hast forgotten God that formed thee.

Of the Rock i. e. of God, one of whose titles this is, above, ver 4. Isa xlv 8, or of Christ who is called the Rock 1 Cor x 1 whom the Israelites are said to have tempted, ver 9. That begot thee i. e. who hath adopted you to be his people, and hath showed us much care and kindness to you as if he had begotten you.

19 <sup>1</sup> And when the Lord saw it, he abhorred them, because of the provoking of his sons and of his daughters.

Because of their sins whereby they provoked him to anger. Or because of his great and just anger against them he abhorred, or reprobated, or cast off his sons and his daughters, but such they were by calling, and profession, but not in truth and reality.

20 <sup>1</sup> And he said, I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be for they are a very froward generation, children in whom is no faith.

I will see what their end shall be. I will see and observe what will be the issue of all this. I will become of them at last, but that God doth not usually by way of speculation, but practically, i. e. considers with himself what he shall do with them, as I know he shall punish them and sees what he will or purposes to do. A speech after the manner of men. Or I will see is put for I will make the end of them to see what the fruit of such actions shall be. Hebrew verbs in cal do oftentimes take the signification of make. In whom there is no faith, perfidious, that have broken their covenant solemnly made with me.

21 <sup>1</sup> They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God, they have provoked me to anger with their vanities, and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people, I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

With those which are not a people, i. e. with the Gentile or heathenish nations, who are none of my people, who cannot deserve the name of a people, as being without yoke without the knowledge and fear of God, which is the foundation of all true policy and government, and without righteous and necessary laws, and many of them are destitute of all government, and laws, and order, barbarous, and rude, and savage, and brutish in their manners. And yet these people I will prefer before you, and take in your stead, receive them and reject you, which, when it came to pass, how desperately it provoked the Jews to jealousy, may be gathered from Matt xxi 43, &c., Acts xi 2, 3, xxii 21-23, 1 Thess ii 15, 16. A foolish nation, so the Gentiles were both in the opinion of the Jews, and in truth and reality notwithstanding all their pretences to wisdom. Rom i 22 their heart, nothing more foolish or brutish than the worship of idols. See Jer x 6, 1 Cor xii 2.

22 <sup>1</sup> I will kindle a fire in mine anger, and I shall burn unto the lowest hell, and I shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains.

A fire is kindled i. e. great and grievous judgments shall be inflicted, which oft come under the name of fire &c. See Deut xxi 22, Jer xxx 8, Amos ii 5. Unto the lowest hell or, unto hell or, the graves beneath. The sense is it shall not only burn up all the corn and fruits and budbin which grow above ground but it shall reach to the roots, and depth of the earth, and burn up the roots and hopes of future increase.

23 <sup>1</sup> I will heap up mischief upon them, I will spend mine arrows upon them.

I will heap up my quiver and send upon them all my arrows which like arrows shot by a skilful and strong hand shall speedily reach, and certainly hit, and mortally wound them. Compare Jer xiv 12.

24 <sup>1</sup> They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of serpents of the dust.

With hunger, with famine, which burneth and parcheth the inward parts, and makes the face black as a coal. With burning heat, from fevers or carbuncles, or other inflaming distempers. Serpents of the dust who feed upon the dust, Gen ii 14 and lurk in it, that they may surprise unwary passengers, Gen xlix 17.

25 <sup>1</sup> The sword without and terror within shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs.

26 <sup>1</sup> I said, I would scatter them into corners I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men.

27 <sup>1</sup> Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should say, Our hand is high, and the Lord hath not done all this.

The wrath of the enemy, i. e. their rage against me as it is expressed Isa xxxviii 28, 29, their insolent and furious reproaches against my name as if I were unworthy an enemy to my people or unable to deliver them. Compare Isa xxv 13, Numb xiv 13, Deut ix 28, Josh vii 9. The fear hereof is ascribed to God after the manner of men. They are insolently and arrogantly, above what they used to do. Or, make themselves strangers, i. e. either really not acknowledge, or pretend they did not know, that which I had publicly declared, and they either did or easily might have known, to wit, that this judgment was inflicted upon them by my hand for their sins.

28 For they are a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them.

They, either, 1 The enemies last mentioned, who are foolish people, and therefore make so false and foolish a judgment upon things. Or rather, 2 The Israelites themselves, of whom he speaks both in the foregoing ver 26 and in the whole foregoing chapter, and in the next ver 29, and afterwards. I void of counsel, that have not wisdom to direct themselves, nor discretion to desire and receive counsel from others, but rashly and madly go on in those courses which will certainly ruin them.

29 <sup>10</sup> that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!

What their end will be, and that although God spare them long, yet at last judgment will certainly overtake them.

30 How should one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight, except their Rock had sold them, and the Lord had shut them up?

How should one chase a thousand? whence should this miraculous change come that where God had promised that five Israelites should chase an hundred of their enemies, &c. Lev xxv 8, now, on the contrary one enemy should chase a thousand Israelites? Then Rock i. e. their God as before, ver 1, 18, who was their only refuge and defence, had sold them, to wit, for bond. Lives had quitted his right and relation to them, and given them up into their enemies hands. Shut them up, as it were, in the net which their chains had laid for them.

31 For their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves becoming judges.

Who by their dear bought experience have been forced to acknowledge that our God was far stronger than they, and then falls gods together. See Exod xxiv 25, Numb xxviii, 1 Sam iv 8, Jer xl 3.

32 For their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter.

For, or but, for these words seem to contain an answer to that question, ver 30, How should &c. To this he answers 1. Negatively, It was not from impotency in God for that he had not forsaken and delivered them up: they could not have been so easily chased. 2. Positively. But withal the true reason was this, then vine, &c. Of the vine of Sodom. The people of Israel, which I planted and brought up as a choice vine, are now degenerated and become like the vine of Sodom, their principles and practices are all corrupt and abominable. Compare Isa i 10. Their clusters are bitter, their fruits or actions are most hurtful some to me malicious and mischievous to other, and at last will be pernicious to themselves.

33 Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps.

The poison of dragons, for although some write that the dragons of Greece have no poison in them yet that the African and Arabian dragons, of which Moses here writes, have poison in them, is confessed by ancient heathen authors. The cruel venom of asps, whose poison kills cruelly and speedily, as Aristotle and others write.

34 Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?

All their wickedness mentioned before. My long-suffering towards them may make them and others think that I have forgotten their sins, but I remember them punctually, they are sealed up as in a bag Job xiv 17, and as men seal up their treasures that nothing be lost, and I shall bring them to their remembrance also.

35 To me belongeth vengeance, and recompense, their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste.

It is my office to punish sin, and therefore as I know their sins, so I will assuredly punish them. Their feet shall slide, they who now think they stand fast and unmovable, they shall fall into utter destruction. In due time, though not so soon as some may expect it, yet in that time when it shall be most proper and reasonable, when they have filled up the measure of their sins. This due time may be the same with that fulness of time Gal iv 4, when Christ came into the world, whom this people by wicked hands crucified and slew, Acts ii 23, for which wrath came upon them to the uttermost 1 Thess ii 15 16. At hand Heb is near. So the Scripture offers peaks of things which are at many hundred years' distance to meet with objections arising in men's minds from the delays of them and to signify, that though they may be at an off as to our measures of time and expectation of the things, yet in God's account they are near: they are as near as may be, as soon as ever the fit and the full time is come they come intuitively, they are nearer than summer would have them, when the measure of their sin is once full, the judgment shall not be deferred.

36 I of the Lord shall judge his people, and repeat himself for his servants, when he seeth that their power is gone, and there is none shut up, or left.

For or nevertheless or but yet as the particle ch sometimes used as Job v 7, Isa ix 1, xlv 25. Having spoken of the dreadful calamity which would come upon his people he now turns his discourse into a more comfortable strain according to the usual method of the prophets and here begins to show that after God had humbled and sorely chastised his people, yet at last he would have mercy upon them and turn their captivity. Here follows Shall judge his people, i. e. shall place their cause shall protect and deliver them as that phrase is often used. See Psal vii 10, Jer i 17, xi 4 Jer v 24, xxv 16. Repeat himself for his servants i. e. in despite of the evils he hath brought upon them, will change his course and carriage towards them. None shut up or left none shut up either in their strong cities or castles, or other hiding places or in the enemy's hands or prisons, whence there might be some hope or possibility of redemption, and none left, as the poor and contemptible people are neglected and usually left by the conquerors in the conquered land as 2 Kings xv 12, but all seem to be cut off and the people quite destroyed. So this phrase is used 1 Kings xiv 19, xxi 21, 2 Kings ix 8 xiv 26.

37 And he shall say, Where are then gods, their rock in whom they trusted,

He shall say the Lord, before he deliver his people, will first convince them of their former folly in forsaking him and following idols. he will find an occasion from that material and hopeless condition into which their idols have brought them, to upbraid them with it.

38 Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices, and drank the wine of their drink offerings? Let them rise up and help you, and be your protection.

To whom you offered sacrifices and oblations after the manner of the Gentiles. See Exod xxxv 13, Psal cvi 28 1 Cor x 20. Let them help you, if they can do it. Compare Judg x 11, Jer ii 28.

39 See now that I, even I, am he, and there is no god with me. I kill and I make alive, I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.

that tribe, which were 59,300 in Numb i 23, and but 22,300 in Numb xvi 14, which was near forty years after. Or, 2 Because that tribe had no distinct inheritance, but was to have his portion in the tribe of Judah, as he had, Josh xix 1 and therefore must needs partake with them in their blessings.

2 And he said, 'The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them: he shined forth from mount Paran, and he came with <sup>ten thousands</sup> of saints from his right hand <sup>went</sup> <sup>a</sup> fiery law for them.

<sup>The LORD came, to wit, to the Israelites, i.e. manifested graciously and gloriously among them. From Sinai, i.e. beginning at Sinai, where the first and most glorious appearance of God was, and so going on with them to Seir and Paran. Or, to Seir, the particle mem oft signifying to, as is evident by comparing Isa lix 20, with Rom xi 26, 1 Kings viii 30, with 2 Chron vi 21, 2 Sam vi 2, with 1 Chron xii 6. See also Gen ii 8, xi 2, xii 11, i Sam xiv 15. Or, in Seir, mem being put for both en, as Exod xxv 18, Deut xv 1, Job xix 26, Psal lxxvii 29, lxxxi 16. Rose up, he appeared or showed himself, as the sun doth when it riseth. From Seir, i.e. from the mountain or land of Edom, which is called Seir, Gen xxxiii 3, xxxiv 8, Deut ii 4, to which place the Israelites came, Numb xx 14, &c. and from thence God led them on to wards the Land of Promise, and then gloriously appeared for them in subduing Sihon and Og before them and giving their countries unto them, which glorious work of God's is particularly celebrated Judg v 4. But because the land of Seir or Edom is sometimes taken more largely, and so reacheth even to the Red Sea, as appears from 1 Kings ix 26, and therefore Mount Sinai was near to it, and because Paran which here follows was also near Sinai as being the next station into which they came from the wilderness of Sinu Numb x 12, all this verse may belong to God's appearance in Mount Sinai, where that glorious light which shone upon Mount Sinai directly did in all probability scatter its beams into adjacent parts such as Seir and Paran were, and so this is only a poetical and prophetic variation of the phrase and expression of the same thing in diverse words and God coming or rising or shining from on to or in Sinai, and Seir and Paran note one and the same illustrious action of God appearing there with ten thousands of his saints or holy angels, and there giving a fiery law to them, as it here follows. And this interpretation may receive some strength from Hab iii 3 where this glorious march of God before his people is remembered, only temen which signifies the south is put for Seir, which is here, possibly to signify that that Seir which is here mentioned was to be understood of the southern part of the country of Seir or Edom, which was that part adjoining to the Red Sea. Others refer this of Seir to the brazen serpent that eminent type of Christ which was erected in this place. Mount Paran, a place where God eminently manifested his presence and goodness, both in giving the people flesh which they desired, and in appointing the seventy elders and pouring forth his Spirit upon them, Numb xi though the exposition mentioned in the foregoing branch may seem more probable. With ten thousands of saints, i.e. with a great company of holy angels, Psal lxxvii 17. Dim vii 10, which attended upon him in this great and glorious work of giving the law, as may be gathered from Acts vii 53, Gal ii 19. Heb ii 2, xii 22. From his right hand, which both wrote the law and gave it to men, an allusion to men, who ordinarily write and give gifts with their right and not with their left hand. A fiery law. The law is called fiery, partly, because it is of a fiery nature, purging, and searching, and inflaming, for which reasons God's word is compared to fire, Jer xxiii 29, partly, to signify that fiery wrath and curse which it inflicteth upon sinners for the violation of it, 2 Cor iii 7, 9, and principally, because it was delivered out of the midst of the fire, Exod xiv 16, 18, Deut iv 11, v 22, 23.</sup>

The people, i.e. the tribes of Israel, which are called people, Gen xlviii 19, Judg v 11 Acts iv 27. The sense is, This law though delivered with fire and smoke, and thunder, which might seem to portend nothing but hatred and terror, yet in truth it was given to Israel in great love, as being the great mean of their temporal and eternal salvation. And although God shows a general and common kindness to all men, yet he loved this people in a singular and peculiar manner. All his saints, all God's saints or holy ones, i.e. his people as they are now called, the people of Israel, who are all called holy, Exod xiv 6, Numb xvi 3, Deut vi 6, Dan vii 25, viii 24 xii 7, because they all professed to be so and were obliged to be so and many of them were such, though some appropriate this to the true saints in Israel. Are in thy hand, or, were in thy hand, i.e. under God's care, to protect and direct, and govern them as that phrase signifies, Numb iv 28, 33, John x 28, 29. These words are spoken to God, and for the change of persons, his and thy that is most frequent in the Hebrew tongue. See Dan ix 1. This clause may further note God's kindness to Israel in upholding and preserving them when the fiery law was delivered, which was done with so much dread and terror, that not only the people trembled and were ready to sink under it, Exod xx 15, 19 but even Moses himself did exceedingly fear and quake. Heb xii 21. But in this fight God sustained both Moses and the people in or by his hand, whereby he in a manner hid and covered them, that no harm might come to them by this terrible apparition. They sat down at thy feet like scholars to receive instructions and counsels from thee. He alludes either 1 To the manner of disciples among the Jews, who used to sit at their masters' feet. Luke x 39, Acts xxii 3. See also Gen xlix 10, 2 Kings iv 38. But it is doubtful whether this custom was so ancient as Moses. Or 2 To the place where the people waited when the law was delivered, which was at the foot of the mount. Shall receive of thy words, the people, easily understood from the foregoing words did or will receive or submit to thy instructions and commands. This may respect either 1 The people's promise when they heard the law, that they would hearken and do all that was commanded, Deut v 27. Or, 2 The people's duty to do so. 3 The people's privilege, that they were admitted to receive so great a privilege as the words and laws of God were.

1 'Moses commanded us a law, 'even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob

Moses speaks this of himself in the third person, which is very usual in the Hebrew language. The law is called the inheritance partly because the obligation of it was hereditary passing from parents to their children, and partly because this was the best part of all their inheritance and possessions, the greatest of all those gifts and favours which God bestowed upon them.

5 And he was 'king in 'Jeshurun, when the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together

Moses was their king, not in title, but in reality, being under God their supreme and uncontrollable governor and however though the word oft signifies only a prince or chief ruler, as Judg xix 1, Jer xix 3, xlii 25. In Jeshurun, i.e. in Israel, so called Deut xxxiii 15. When the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together when the princes and people met together for the management of public affairs, Moses was owned by them as their king and lawgiver, and he directed and ruled them as their superior. This he saith to show that the people approved and consented to the authority and law of Moses.

6 ¶ Let Reuben live, and not die, and let not his men be few

Though Reuben deserve to be cut off, or greatly diminished and obscured, according to Jacob's prediction, Gen xlix 1, yet God will spare them, and give them a name and portion among the tribes of Israel, and bless them with increase of their numbers.

7 ¶ And this is the blessing of Judah and he said, Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah and bring him unto his people let his hands be sufficient for him, and be thou an help to him from his enemies

Hear, LORD the voice of Judah &c God will hear his prayer for the accomplishment of those great things promised to that tribe, Gen xlix 9-11 This implies the delays and difficulties Judah would meet with herein which would drive him to his prayers, and that those prayers should be crowned with success Bring him unto his people, v 1 When he shall go forth to battle against God's and his enemies and shall fall fiercely upon them, as was foretold Gen xlix 8, 9, bring him back with honour and victory and safety to his people &c either to the rest of his tribe, who were left at home when their brethren went to battle or to his brethren the other tribes of Israel Or, 2 When that tribe shall go into captivity, let them not always be kept in captivity, & the ten tribes ac-ke to be but do thou bring him again to his people Or 3 As thou hast promised the gathering of the people to him, even to the Shunah who was to come out of his loins, Gen xlix 10 so do thou bring him &c the Messias who may be understood out of that parallel prophecy, and who may be here called Judah because he was to come from him as he is for that reason called David in divers places to his people &c to that people which thou hast given to him Or 4 Bring him in to wit is a prince and governor as thou hast promised, Gen xlix to his people &c to thy people of Israel now to be reckoned as his people because of their obedience to him Or rather 5 Bring him in to his people to that people which thou hast promised and given to him, &c to that portion of land which thou hast allotted to him, settle him in his possession the people or inhabitants being here put for the land inhabited by them as the Levites are told they should possess the nations or people of Canaan Dent xi 23, xii 2 &c their land as it is explained Dent xxi 14, xxx 18 for the people they were not to possess but to dispossess and to root out Let his hands be sufficient for him the tribe had been numerous and potent and valiant that it shall suffice to defend itself without a riv and either from foreign nations or from other tribes as appeared when this tribe alone was able to cope with nine or ten of the other tribes be thou an help to him from his enemies, thou wilt preserve this tribe in a special manner so as his enemies shall not be able to ruin it as they will do other tribes and that for the sake of Mes-sias who shall spring out of it

8 ¶ And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one whom thou didst prove at Massah and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah

Thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one the Thummim and the Urim which are thine O LORD by special institution and consecration by which he understands the ephod, in which they were put Exod xxxiii 30 by a synecdoche, and the high priesthood to which they were appropriated, by a metonymy, and with the gifts and grace signified by the Urim and Thummim and means for the discharge of that high office shall be with thy holy one, &c with that Levite that priest which thou hast consecrated to thyself and which is holy in a more peculiar manner than all the people were, & the priesthood shall be continued to and continued in Aaron's family

Whom thou didst prove this is added by way of anticipation, although thou didst try him and rebuke him and brought him out of Egypt to mismanage about fetching water out of the rock thou didst not therefore take away the priesthood from him At Massah, not at that Massah mentioned Exod xvii which is also called Meri-bah, where neither Moses nor Aaron were reproved nor is Aaron so much as named but that Meribah, Numb xx, where this is expressed well as it is called by one of the names of that place, Exod xxi about Meribah Numb xx, so it may be here called by its other name Massah and well may the same names be given to those two places because the occasion of them was in a great measure one and the same Though this place may be otherwise interpreted, whom thou didst try in trying, or with trial, &c whom thou didst exactly and thoroughly try such interpretations being very frequent and elegant in the Hebrew language And it may be observed, that in the Hebrew text there are two several propositions, though the English translation render them both by and, he beth, or with, and in the next branch al, at, or near, or concerning the waters of Meribah, which may seem to intimate that the former is not the name of this place, as the latter is why else should they not have been expressed by the same preposition

With whom thou didst strive, or, contend, &c whom thou didst reprove and chastise, as that phrase signifies, Isa xlix

9 Who said unto his father and to his mother, I have not seen him, neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children for they have

I have not seen him &c I have no respect unto them for so knowledge is oft used as Job ix 21, Prov xii 10 11 1 Thess v 12 The sense is who followed God and his command fully and executed the judgment enjoined by God without any respect of persons, Exod xxxii 26, 27
This seems better than to refer it either to their not mourning for their next kindred, for that was allowed to all but the high priest in case of the death of father or mother and that was only a ceremonial rite and no matter of great commendation, or to their impartiality in executing the judgments committed to them, Dent xvii 9 which they had as yet given no considerable proof Keep thy covenant &c when the rest broke their covenant with God by that foul sin of idolatry with the calf, that tribe kept themselves more pure from that infection and adhered to God and his worship and service as appears from Exod him, and of them that hate him, that they rise not again

His substance &c his outward estate as Dent xvi 18 because he hath no inheritance of his own, and therefore wholly depends upon thy blessing Or his host or army as the word is used Ezek xxxiii 10 The priests that attended upon God's service in the tabernacle or temple are oft compared to his host or army in regard of their exquisite order and courses and constant watches there See Numb iv 3 The work of his hands &c all his holy administrations, which he fully calls the works of his hands either more largely, the hand, one great instrument of action being put for all the rest, or because a great part of the service of the Levites and priests was done by the labour of their hand and body, whereas the service of spiritual ministers is more spiritual and heavenly Write through the loins of them that rise against him he prays thus earnestly for them, partly because he foresaw they who were to teach and admonish, and reprove, and chastise others would have many enemies, Jer xv 10, Amos v 10, and partly because they were, under God, the great preservers and upholders of religion, and their enemies were the enemies of religion itself, as is evident from the history of the Old Testament

12 ¶ And of Benjamin he said, The beloved of the LORD shall dwell in safety by him, and the LORD shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders

The beloved of the Lord, i.e. this beloved tribe so called partly in allusion to their father Benjamin, who was the beloved of his father Jacob, and partly because of the love and kindness of God towards this tribe, which appeared both in this, that they dwell in the fattest and best part of the land, as Joseph's affluence and especially in the following privilege Shall dwell in safety by him, i.e. shall have his lot nigh unto God's temple, which was both a singular comfort and safeguard to him. The Lord may well be understood here, because he was expressed in the former member Shall cover him all the day long, shall protect that tribe continually while they cleave to him. He shall dwell between his shoulders, the Lord shall dwell i.e. his temple shall be placed, between his shoulders i.e. in his portion, or between his borders, or sides, as the word shoulders is oft used, as Exod xxiii 7, Numb xxiv 11, Josh x 8, 10, Ezek xlvii 1, 2. And this was truly the situation of the temple, on both sides whereof was Benjamin's portion, and though Mount Zion was in the tribe of Judah, yet Mount Moriah on which the temple was built, was in the tribe of Benjamin.

13 ¶ And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for <sup>b</sup> the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath,

His portion shall be excellent, and endowed with choicest blessings from God, as it here follows. For the precious things of heaven, i.e. the precious fruits of the earth brought forth by the influence of heaven the warmth of the sun and the rain which God will send from heaven. For the deep that coucheth beneath, the springs of water bubbling out of the earth.

14 And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things † put forth by the † moon,

By the sun which opens and warms the earth cherishes it and improves it and in due time ripeneth the seeds and fruits of the earth. By the moon, which by its moisture refreshes and promotes them. Heb of the moons or months, i.e. which it bringeth forth in the several months or seasons of the year.

15 And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, i.e. The excellent fruits, as grapes, olives, figs, &c. which delight in mountains, growing upon or the precious minerals contained in, their mountains and hills called ancient and lasting i.e. such as have been from the beginning of the world, and likely to continue to the end of it in opposition to those hills or mounts which have been cut up by the wit of man.

16 And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush, let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

For the precious things of the earth, and in general for all the choicest fruits which the land produceth in all the parts of it, whether hills or valleys. Fulness thereof, i.e. the plants and cattle and all creatures that grow increase, and flourish in it. For the good will of him that dwelt in the bush, for all other effects of the good will and kindness of God, who not long since did for a time dwell or appear in the bush to me in order to the redemption of his people, Exod iii 2. Of Joseph, i.e. of Joseph's posterity.

17 His glory • like the • firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like • the horns of unicorns with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh.

The firstling of his bullock, in whose countenance there is a kind of awful majesty and comely generosity, as fully,

Elhan, &c. observe. This seems to note the kingdom which Ephraim should obtain in Jeroboam and his successors. His horns are like the horns of unicorns his strength and power shall be very great. He shall push the people, i.e. all that shall oppose him and particularly the Canaanites. To the ends of the earth, i.e. of the land of Canaan. They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and the are the thousands of Manasseh, though Manasseh be now more numerous, yet Ephraim shall shortly outstrip him, as was foretold, Gen xlviii 19.

18 ¶ And of Zebulun he said, <sup>Re-joice</sup> Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out, and, Issachar, in thy tents.

Thou shalt prosper, and have cause of rejoicing. In thy going out, either, 1. To war, as this phrase is oft used, as Gen xiv 17 which was in part verified, Judg v 18. Or 2. To sea, in way of traffic, because their portion lay near the sea. Or both may be joined, and in both respects his course is opposite to that of Issachar, who was a lover of peace and pasturage. See Gen xlix 14, 15. Issachar is here joined with Zebulun both because they were brethren by father and mother too, and because their possessions lay near together. In thy tents i.e. thou shalt give thyself to the management of land and cattle, living quietly in thy own possessions, disliking the troubles of war and of merchandise. So the phrase is used Gen xxv 27, Josh xxii 1. Judg v 21, vii 8.

19 They shall call all the people unto the mountain, there they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness for they shall suck of the abundance of the seas, and of treasures hid in the sand.

They, either 1. Zebulun and Issachar. Or rather, 2. Zebulun only as the following matter shows, and it was Zebulun that Moses takes more special notice of, vii 18 bringing in Issachar only by the by in conjunction with him or in opposition to him. And so having dispatched Issachar in two words he returns to Zebulun a more active tribe. The people, i.e. the Gentiles, either those of Galilee, which was called Galilee of the Gentiles, who were their neighbours, or people of other nations, with whom they had commerce which they endeavoured to improve in persuading them to the true God and his worship and service. Unto the mountain, i.e. the temple which Moses knew was to be situated upon a mountain. Sacrifices of righteousness i.e. such as God requires and righteousness obligeth them to offer. Their trafficking abroad with heathen nations shall not make them forget or neglect their duty at home, nor shall their distance from the place of sacrifice hinder them from coming to it to discharge that duty. They shall suck of the abundance of the seas, they shall grow rich by the traffic of the sea, and their riches shall not make them the worse as they do others, but they shall consist in themselves and their riches to the service of God. Treasures hid in the sand, such precious things as either, 1. Are contained in the sand of the sea and rivers in which sometimes there is mixed a considerable quantity of gold and silver. Or 2. Such as grow in the sea, or are fished from the sandy bottom of it, as pearls, coral, ambergris, &c. Or 3. Such as being cast into the sea by shipwreck are cast upon the shore by the workings of the sea and thence taken either by merchants, or by the people that live upon the sea-coast.

20 ¶ And of Gad he said, Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad he dwelleth as a lion, and increaseth the arm with the crown of the head.

By praising God for enlarging Gad he supposeth the ground of these praises, that God would enlarge Gad, i.e. either 1. Enlarge his territories, which seems needless because they had a very large portion now when Moses uttered these words. Or 2. Bring him out of his straits and troubles, which he was likely to be oft engaged in, because he was encompassed with potent enemies. And in this sense the phrase is used Psal vii 1. compare Psal xxxi 8, cxviii 5. One instance of the fulfilling hereof we have Judg vi. He dwelleth as a lion i.e. with and secure from his enemies, and terrible to them when they rouse and

22 ¶ And of Dan he said Dan is a lion's whelp †he shall leap from Bashan

From a whelp i.e. courageous and intemperate and strong and successful against his enemies He shall leap from Bashan or which leapeth from Bashan for this clause seems not to belong to the tribe of Dan, which was at a great distance from Bashan even at the other end of the land and therefore this seems too great a leap for him, and if he did leap so far he should rather be said to take his leap from his own lot in the south of Canaan, and thence to leap not from Bashan but to Bashan to fall upon his enemies there but it rather is a continuation of the metaphor and belongs to the lion which is said to leap from Bashan because there were many and fierce lions in those parts see Judg xiv 5, whence they used to come forth to prey and their manner was to leap upon their prey

23 ¶ And of Naphtali he said O Naphtali, †satisfied with favour and full with the blessing of the Lord †possess thou the west and the south

With favour either 1 With God's favour as it follows, or, 2 With men's favour or good-will his carriage being peaceable, courteous, and obliging as is intimated, Gen xlii 21, according to the common translation see the notes there Tell us the blessing of the Lord i.e. seated in a pleasant, and fruitful and happy soil such as Goshen (in which their share was) manifestly was as Josephus and others report The west i.e. to the south, or the sea and the south This is not to be understood of the places that his lot should fall there for he was rather in the east and north of the land, but of the pleasant and commodious of the west or of the sea which was a way of to him from his neighbour Zebulun, and of the south, i.e. from the southern tribes and parts of Canaan which were brought to him down the river Jordan, and both sort of commodities were given him in exchange for the fruits of his rich soil, which he hid in †at abundance

24 ¶ And of Asher he said, †Let Asher be blessed with children, let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him †dip his foot in oil

He shall have numerous and those strong, and healthful, and comely, children Or shall be blessed or praised of or above the sons i.e. the other sons of Israel, or his brethren as it here follows i.e. his portion shall fall in an excellent part, where he may have the benefits both of his own fat soil, and of the sea by his neighbours Tyrrus and Sidon Acceptable to his brethren, by his sweet disposition and winning curia, and communication of his excellent commodities to his brethren, he shall gain their affections Let him dip his foot in oil, he shall have such plenty of oil, that he may not only wash his face, but his feet also, in it. Or, the fitness and fertility of his country may be expressed by oil, as Job xxix 6 And so it agrees with Jacob's blessing of him Gen xlix 20

25 ¶ Thy shoes shall be iron and brass, and as thy days, so shall thy strength be

Thy shoes shall be iron and brass this may note either, 1 Their great strength by which they should be able to tread down and crush their enemies as Christ's feet for this very reason are said to be of brass Rev 1 15 Or, 2 The mines of iron and copper which were in their portion, whence Sidon their neighbour was famous among the heathens for its plenty of brass and iron and Sarcpta is thought to have its name from the brass and iron which were melted there in great quantity Compare Deut viii 9 Or, 3 The strength of its situation, and so some ancients and moderns render the words thy habitation or thy enclosure shall be iron and brass i.e. fortified as it were with walls and gates of iron and brass, being defended by the sea on one side, by their brethren on other sides as also by mountains and rivers So shall thy strength be i.e. thy strength shall not be diminished with thine age but thou shalt have the vigour of youth as in thine old age, thy tribe shall grow stronger and stronger

26 ¶ There is none like unto the God of †Jeshurun, †who rideth upon the heaven in thy help, and in his excellency on the sky

Upon the heaven i.e. upon the clouds, to succour thee from thence by sending thunder and lightning upon thine enemies See Psal xxiii 7 &c., lxviii 34 &c. In his excellency or in his magnificence i.e. magnificently, gloriously, and with great majesty as well as power

27 The eternal God is thy refuge and †redeemeth thee the everlasting arms and †he shall thrust out the enemy from before thee, and shall say, Destroy them

Thy refuge or thy dwelling place Compare Psal xxi 1 Underneath i.e. under thy arms to hold thee up as thy hands were once held up by Aaron and Hur He will support and defend thee Or the meaning is though he dwelleth on high, yet he comes down to the earth beneath to assist and deliver thee Shall say, Destroy them i.e. shall give thee not only command and commission but also power to destroy them for God's saying is doing, his word comes with power

28 Israel then shall dwell in safety alone †the fountain of Jacob shall be upon a land of corn and wine, also his heavens shall drop down dew

Alone, either 1 Though they be alone and have no confederates to defend them, but have all the world against them, yet my single protection shall be sufficient for them Or, 2 Distinct and separated from all other nations, with whom I will not have them to mingle themselves See Numb xxiii 9, Lxxviii 1 2 The fountain of Jacob i.e. the posterity of Jacob which flowed from him as waters from a fountain, in great abundance Compare Psal lxxviii 26, Isa xlviii 1 The fountain is here put for the river or stream which flow from it, as Psal civ 10, as the root is put for the branch, 2 Chron xxii 10, Isa xi 10, Rev 1 5, and as Jacob or Israel, who is the fountain, is oft put for the children of Israel. Or, the eye (for so the Hebrew word oft signifies) of Jacob, i.e. of the people of Israel, and the sense is They who now only hear of the land of promise shall shortly see it, which I am not suffered to do, and shall enjoy it, which is oft signified by seeing, as Psal

16, xxxv 13 xxxiv 12, Eccles i 1, in 13 His heart 18, i.e. those heaven or that air which hangs over his land
184 15 29 Happy art thou, O Israel 'who is like unto thee, O people saved by the LORD, 'the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency' and thine enemies 'shall be found hairs unto thee, and 'thou shalt tread upon their high places

Saved by the Lord, the giver and preserver of all that excellency, that glory, safety and happiness which thou hast above all other people, which thou dost not obtain either by or for thy own wisdom, or strength or goodness. The sword of thy excellency, or, thy most excellent sword, i.e. thy strength and the author of all thy past or approaching victories, shall be found hairs unto thee i.e. shall be deemed as to all their vain hopes and countenances of destroying thee or saving themselves, whether grounded upon their own numbers and valour, and strong holds, or upon old prophecies and predictions of success, or upon their idols. On shall be not to thee shall submit themselves to thee, though it be done frequently and by constraint as this phrase is used 1 Sam viii 41, lxxvi 3, lxxxi 15 Possibly this may design the lies and frauds which the Gibeonites would use to deceive them, Josh ix 4 Thou shalt tread upon their high places i.e. thou shalt subdue their greatest princes, and their strongest holds, Deut xxxii 13, and their idols, temples, and worship

CHAP XXXIV

Moses from Mount Nebo vieweth the land, 1—4 He dieth therein, 5. His burial, 6 His age 7 Thirty days' mourning for him, 8 Joshua succeedeth him, 9 The praises of Moses, 10—12

AND Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the LORD shewed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan,

Moses went up in compliance with God's will that he should then and there resign up his soul to God. Of the mountain of Nebo see Numb xxvii 12, xxxii 38, Deut xxxii 49 Of the land of Gilead Moses had as yet seen and enjoyed but a small part. Of this land see Gen xvi 21 Numb xxvii 12, & Unto Dan, to that which after Moses's death was called Dan, Josh xix 47 Judg xiii 29 So that here is an intimation. But it seems most probable and is commonly believed, that this chapter was not written by Moses but by Eleazar or Joshua, or Ezra or some other man of God directed herein by the Holy Ghost, this being no more impediment to the Divine authority of this chapter, that the penman is unknown, which also is the lot of some other books of Scripture, than it is to the authority of the acts of the king or parliament, that they are written or printed by some unknown person

2 And all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, unto the utmost sea,

All Naphtali, i.e. the land of Naphtali, which, together with Dan, was in the north of Canaan as Ephraim and Manasseh were in the midland parts, and Judah on the south, and the sea on the west. So these parts lying in the several quarters are put for all the rest. He stood in the east, and saw also Gilead which was in the eastern part of the land and thence he saw the north and south and west. The utmost sea, i.e. the midland sea, which was the utmost bound of the Land of Promise on the west

3 And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, 'the city of palm trees, unto Zoar.

1 e The south quarter of the land of Judah which is towards the Salt Sea, which is described Numb xxxv 1—5, Josh xv 1—4 as the western quarter of Judah was described in the words next foregoing. The plain of the valley of Jericho, or, in which lies Jericho which was in the tribe of Benjamin. The city of palm trees i.e. Jericho so called both here and Judg i 16, in 13, 2 Chron xxxiii 15, from the multitude of palm trees which were in those parts, as Josephus and Strabo write, from whence and the balm there growing it was called Jericho, which signifies odorousness, or sweet-smelling

4 And the LORD said unto him, 'This is the land which I swore unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy seed. I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither

With thine eyes to wit, by a miraculous power strengthening thy sight, or making a clear representation of all the parts to thy view

5 ¶ So Moses the servant of the LORD died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the LORD

i.e. in the land which Israel took from the Amorites, which anciently was the land of Moab

6 And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day

He i.e. the Lord last mentioned buried him either immediately or by the ministry of angels, whereof Michael was the chief or prince, Jude 9. No man knoweth of his sepulchre i.e. of the particular place of the valley where he was buried, which God hid from the Israelites to prevent their superstition and idolatry, to which he knew their great proneness. And for this very reason the devil endeavoured to have it known and contended with Michael about it, Jude 9. And seeing God would not endure the worship of the idols or tomb of so eminent a person as Moses was it is ridiculous to think God would permit this honour to be given to any of the succeeding saints who were so far inferior to him

7 ¶ And Moses was an hundred and twenty years old when he died. His eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated

By a miraculous work of God in mercy to his church and people

8 ¶ And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab thirty days. So the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended

Thirty days was the usual time of mourning for persons of high place and eminency. See Gen i 3, 10, Numb xx 29 For others seven days sufficed

9 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom, for Moses had laid his hands upon him and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the LORD commanded Moses

The spirit of wisdom, and other gifts and graces too as appears from the history, but wisdom is mentioned as being most necessary for the government, to which he was now called. Moses had laid his hands upon him, which God had appointed as a sign to Moses, and Joshua, and the Israelites that this was the person whom he had appointed and qualified for his great work. See Numb xxxv 18, & Compare Gen xlviii 10, Numb vii 10

10 ¶ And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face,

Like unto Moses, in the privileges here following. Whom the Lord knew face to face, i.e. whom God did so freely, and familiarly, and frequently converse with Ses on Exod xxxiii 11, Numb xii 8, Deut v 1

ch 4 24

11 In all the signs and the wonders, which the Lord sent him to do in the land of Egypt to Pharaoh, and to all his servants, and to all his land,

In all the signs this is to be joined, either, 1 With the words immediately foregoing, as an eminent instance wherein God did know or acknowledge and own or converse so familiarly with Moses, namely, in the working of all his signs and wonders in Egypt, where God spoke to him so oft, and sometimes even in Pharaoh's presence, and answered his requests so particularly and punctually, when he called for vengeance or for deliverance. Or, 2 With the more remote words, there was none like unto Moses in regard of all the signs &c, the words, whom the Lord knew face to face, coming in by way of parenthesis.

12 And in all that mighty hand, and in all the great terror which Moses shewed in the sight of all Israel

THE BOOK OF

JOSHUA

THE ARGUMENT

It is not material to know who was the penman of this book whether Joshua, as seems most probable from chap xxiv 26 or some other holy prophet. It is sufficient that this book was a part of the Holy Scriptures, or oracles of God, committed to and carefully kept by the Jews, and by them faithfully delivered to us, as appears by the concurring testimony of Christ and his apostles, who owned and approved of the same Holy Scriptures, which the church of the Jews did. But this is certain, that divers passages in this book were put into it after Joshua's death, as Josh x 13 compared with 2 Sam i 18, and Josh xix 17, compared with Judg xvi 1, and Josh xxiv 29, 30. And such like insertions have been observed in the five books of Moses.

CHAP I

God commands Joshua to lead the people unto the land of Canaan 1-3. Its borders 4. God promises to assist him 5-6. Commanding him to observe the law 7-9. He prepares the people to pass over Jordan 10-11. Reminds the Levvites, Gadites and half tribe of Manasseh of their promise to Moses, 12-15. Which they are ready to do and all promise to obey, 16-18.

16-18. NOW after the death of Moses the servant of the Lord it came to pass, that the Lord spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying,

After the death of Moses, either immediately after it, or when the days of mourning for Moses were expired, Joshua was appointed and declared Moses' successor in the government before this time, and therefore doubtless entered upon the government instantly after his death, and here he receives confirmation from God thereof. The servant of the Lord, this title is given to Moses here, and ver 2 as also Deut xxxiv 5, and is oft repeated, not without cause, partly to reflect honour upon him, partly to give authority to his laws and writings in publishing, whereof he only acted as God's servant, in his name and stead, and partly that the Israelites might not think of Moses above what was meet remembering that he was not the Lord himself, but only the Lord's servant, and therefore not to be worshipped, nor yet to be too pertinaciously followed in all his institutions, when the Lord himself should come and then he put off the Mosaic dispensation, it being but reasonable that he who was only a servant in God's house should give place to him who was the Son and Heir, and Lord of it, as Christ was. See Heb iii 3, 5, 6. The Lord spake, either in a dream or vision, or by Urim, Numb xxvii 21. Moses' minister, a servant who had waited upon Moses in his care of employment, and thereby been privy to his ministry of the government, and so fitted and prepared for it.

2 Moses my servant is dead, now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel.

This Jordan, this which is now near thee, which is the only obstacle in this way to Canaan. Which I do give, I am now about to give the actual possession of it, as I formerly gave it to it by promise.

3 Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses.

Every place, to wit within the following bounds.

1 From the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast.

This Lebanon, this emphatically as being the most eminent mountain in Syria and the northern border of the land, or this which is within my view, as if the Lord appeared to him in the form of a man, and pointed to it. Of the Hittites, one of the Canaanites, who elsewhere are all called Amorites, is Gen xv 16, and here Hittites by a synecdoche, the Hittites being, the most considerable and formidable of all, is may appear from Numb xiii 33, xiv 1, 2 Kings vii 6, and many of them being of the race of the giants, dwelling about Hebron. See Gen xxv 9, 10, xxvi 31, xxvii 46. The great sea, the inland sea, great in itself and especially compared with those lesser collections of waters, which the Jews call seas.

Object. The Israelites never possessed all this land. Answer 1. That was from their own sloth and cowardice and disobedience to God, and breach of those conditions upon which this promise was suspended. See Judg ii 20. 2. This land was not all to be possessed by them at once, but by degrees, as their numbers and necessities increased, but Canaan being fully sufficient for them and many of the Israelites being from time to time either cut off or carried captive for their sins, there was never any need of enlarging their possessions. 3. Though their possessions extended not to Euphrates yet their dominion did, and those lands were tributary to them in David's and Solomon's time.

5 There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life, as I was with Moses, so I will be with these. <sup>b Deut. 31. 6, 7. a Heb. 12. 5</sup> "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."

<sup>a</sup> I was with Moses, to assist him against all his enemies, and in all the difficulties of governing this stiff-necked people which Joshua might justly fear no less than the Canaanites. I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, I will not leave thee destitute either of inward support, or of outward assistance.

Joshua, though a person of great courage and resolution, whereof he had given sufficient proof yet needs these exhortations, partly because his work was great and difficult, and long, and in a great measure new, partly because he had a very mean opinion of himself, especially if compared with Moses, and remembering how perverse and ungovernable that people were, even under Moses he might very well suspect the burden of ruling them would be too heavy for his shoulders. Thou shalt divide the land, which supposeth the full conquest of the land. That honour and assistance which I denied to Moses I will give to thee.

Remember that though thou art the captain and commander of my people, yet thou art my subject, and obliged to observe all my commands. To the right hand or to the left, i. e. in any kind, or upon any pretence. That thou mayest prosper, or that thou mayest do wisely, whereby he instructs him in the true art of government and that his greatest wisdom will lie in the observation of all God's commands and not in that pretended reason of state which other princes govern all their affairs by. And this plainly shows that God's assistance promised to him and to the Israelites was conditional, and might justly be withdrawn upon their breach of the conditions. Whithersoever thou goest, i. e. whatsoever thou doest. Men's actions are oft compared to ways or journeys, or steps, by which they come to the end they run to.

<sup>9 Deut. 31. 7, 8. 2 Ps. 1. 1</sup> 9 'Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage, <sup>13</sup> be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

Have not I commanded thee, I whom thou art obliged to obey, I who can carry thee through every thing I put thee upon, I of whose faithfulness and almightiness thou hast had large experience?

10 ¶ Then Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying,

11 Pass through the host, and command the people, saying, Prepare you victuals, for <sup>a</sup> within three days ye shall pass over this Jordan, to go in to possess the land, which the Lord your God giveth you to possess it.

Prepare you victuals, for although manna was given them to supply their want of ordinary provisions in the wilderness, yet they were allowed when they had opportunity, to purchase other provisions, and did so, Deut. ii. 28. And now having been some time in the land of the Amorites and together with manna used themselves to other food which that country plentifully supplied them with, they are warned to furnish themselves therewith for their approaching march. Within three days <sup>q ch. 3. 2. 1 ch. 31</sup> Quest. How can this be when the spies, who were not yet sent away, continued three days in the mountains to h. ii. 22, and the people passed not over till three days after the spies returned? Josh. ii. 2. Ans. These words, though placed here seem not to have been delivered by Joshua till after the return of the spies, such transpositions being so frequent in Scripture, that interpreters have formed this general rule, that there is no certain order, no former nor latter in the histories of the Scripture. And hence it comes that these three days mentioned here below after the history of the spies, in an unrepented Josh. ii. 2. Hezekias, the Septuagint render the words yet three days, and the Chaldee in the end of three days. Others, after three days, as it is Josh. ii. 2. On these three days may be the same with those Josh. ii. 22, and the matter may be conceived thus. Joshua gives the people notice of their passage over Jordan within three days here, and at the same time sends away the spies, who return ere those three days be ended. For the three days Josh. ii. 22, may be understood of one whole day and part of two other days, as it is in that famous instance, Matt. xxv. 63. of which see more on that place and on Matt. vi. 10. The spies came to Jericho in the evening of the first day and intended to be there Josh. ii. 5. but being disturbed and affrighted by the search made after them they go away that night into the mountains, and there al. be the time mentioned. Joshua having delivered this message from God to the Israelites, and sent away the spies, remove from Shittim to Jordan, Josh. ii. 1, being suddenly assisted by his safe passage over Jordan whithersoever became of the spies, and after those three days mentioned here were past Josh. ii. 2, he sends the officers to the people with a second message about the manner of their actual passing over.

12 ¶ And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manassah, spake Joshua, saying, 13 Remember the word which Moses <sup>a Num. 32. 20, 21. ch. 22. 2, 3, 4</sup> the servant of the Lord commanded you, saying, The Lord your God hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

Remember his charge to you, and your promise to him, which they were obliged to keep, and Joshua was to see that they did so. Rest, i. e. a place of rest, is that word signifies see on Gen. xlix. 15.

14 Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan, but ye shall pass before your brethren armed, all the mighty men of valour, and help them.

Ye shall pass, to wit, over Jordan. Before your brethren, either, 1. In their presence. Or, 2. In the front of all of them, which was but reasonable, partly because they hid the advantage of their brethren having actually received their portion which their brethren had only in hope, and therefore were obliged to more service the rather to prevent the envy of the other tribes, partly, because they were freed from those impediments which the rest were exposed to, their wives, and children, and estates being side-lodged, and partly, to prevent their retreat and withdrawing themselves from the present service which they otherwise should have had opportunity and temptation to do, because of the nearness of their habitations. Armed, for by this time they were well furnished with arms which they had either from the Egyptians, or Amalekites, or Amorites from whom the Lord taken them, or by purchase from those people by whose border they passed. Or in military order. See on I Cor. xii 18. The mighty men of valour all such were obliged to go over if occasion required it, but Joshua took only some of them, partly because they were sufficient for his purpose, and partly because some were fit to be left both to secure their own wives, children and possessions, and to prevent their enemies from that side from giving them disturbance or hindrance in their enterprise upon Canaan.

15 Until the Lord have given your brethren rest, is he hath given you, and they also have possessed the land which the Lord your God giveth them. then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and enjoy it, which Moses the Lord's servant gave you on this side Jordan toward the sunrising.

16 ¶ And they answered Joshua, saying All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us, we will go.

They answered i.e. the Reubenites &c. mentioned ver 12 to whom Joshua's discourse is confined ver 1. No doubt the other tribes expressed the same thing but this is only recorded concerning these, because that might seem most doubtful, and the obedience of the rest was unquestionable.

17 According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things so will we hearken unto thee: only the Lord thy God be with thee: as he was with Moses.

The same obedience which we owed unto those who are now alive perfectly performed to Moses we promise unto thee. On the Lord thy God be with thee this is not a limitation of their obedience, as if they would not obey him any further or longer than he was prosperous or successful: but an additional prayer for him. As we have hereby promised their obedience so our prayer shall be, that God would bless and prosper thee as he did Moses.

18 Whosoever he be that doth rebel against thy commandment and will not hearken unto thy words in all that thou commandest him he shall be put to death: only he strong and of a good courage.

In all that thou commandest him not repugnant to God's commands: for none can be so foolish to think that if he had commanded the people to blaspheme God, or worship idols, the people were obliged to obey him therein.

CHAP. II

Joshua sends two spies to Jericho, they are sought after, Rahab hides them, discovers the messengers, 1-7. She acknowledges that God not given them the land: her reasons 8-11. The covenant between her and them, 12-21. Their return and relation, 22-24.

AND Joshua the son of Nun sent out of Shittim two men to spy secretly, saying, Go view the land, even Jericho. And they went and came into an harlot's house named Rahab, and lodged there.

Sent, or, had sent is this then is it used? See on Josh 1:11. Shittim, called also Philistim Numb. xxxiii 49. Two men, not twelve as Moses did, partly because the people of Canaan were now more alarmed than in Moses's time and more suspicious of all strangers, and partly because those were to view the whole land: these but a small parcel of it. To spy i.e. to learn the state of the land and people, and what way and method they should proceed in. It is evident enough that Joshua did not this out of distrust, as the people did Deut 1, and it is most probable he had God's command and direction in it for the encouragement of himself and his army in their present enterprise. Secretly, with reference not to his enemies, which being the constant and necessary practice of all spies, was needless to be mentioned, but to the Israelites, without their knowledge or desire. And thus seems added by way of opposition unto the like action Deut 1 where it was done with the people's privity, and upon their motion: and therefore an account was given not only to Moses, but also to the congregation, where is here it was given to Joshua only ver 23, which was a good caution to prevent the inconvenience which possibly might have arisen if their report had been doubtful or discouraging. The land even Jericho, i.e. the land about Jericho together with the city. Heb the land and Jericho i.e. especially Jericho. So and is used 2 Sam ii 30. 1 Kings xi 1. Psal. xlviii 1. They obeyed Joshua's command, even with the hazard of their own lives, considering that they were under the protection of Divine Providence which could very easily many ways secure them: or being willing to sacrifice their lives in their country's service. In harlot's house, so the Hebrew word is used, Judg. xi 1. xvi 1, 1 Kings ii 16, Ezek. xlviii 14 and so it is rendered by two apostles Heb. xi 31, James ii 2. Such she either now was, or formerly had been, and in a person's house they might come to with less observation than to a hostess: is some render it, or to a public victualling house. And such a course of life was very common among the Canaanites who esteemed fortification to be either no sin, or a very small and trivial one. Lodged there or lay down is the same word is rendered ver 8. intended and composed themselves to rest: but they were disturbed and hindered from their intentions upon the following discourse.

2 And it was told the king of Jericho, saying, Behold there come men in hither to night of the children of Israel to search out the country.

To night this evening, by comparing this with ver 5.

3 And the king of Jericho sent unto Rahab, saying, Bring forth the men that are come to thee, which are entered into thine house: for they be come to search out all the country.

4 And the woman took the two men, and hid them, and said thus, There came men unto me, but I wist not whence they were.

Or But the woman had taken—and had hid them to wit before the messengers came from the king: is soon as she understood from her neighbours, or common rumour that there was a suspicion of the matter and guessed that search would be made. And this is justly mentioned as a great and generous act of faith, Heb. xi 31, for she did apparently venture her life upon a steadfast persuasion of the truth of God's word and promise given to the Israelites. I wist not whence they were her answer contained in these and the following words, was palpably false and therefore unquestionably sinful, howsoever, her intention was good therein see Rom. vii 6. But it is very probable she being a heathen, might think, what some Christians have thought and said that an officious lie is not unlawful. Or at worst this was her infirmity, which was graciously pardoned by God: and her faith was amply rewarded.

5 And it came to pass about the time of shutting of the gate, when it was dark, that the men went out: whither the men went I wot not pursue after them quickly: for ye shall overtake them.

The time of shutting of the gate, either of her house or rather of the city, which was shut at a certain time.

6 But she had brought them up to the roof of the house, and hid them with the stalks of flax, which she had laid in order upon the roof.

To the roof, which was plain, after the manner. See Deut xxi 8; Matt x 27, Mark ii 1, Acts x 9. Laid in order upon the roof, that they may be dried by the heat of the sun.

7 And the men pursued after them the way to Jordan unto the fords and as soon as they which pursued after them were gone out, they shut the gate.

Fords or passages, i.e. the usual places where people used to pass over Jordan, whether by boats or bridges, or rather because of the shallowness of the river which a little after this swelled higher, as the history will tell us, and as it is very usual for rivers to do. They shut the gate of the city, partly for their security against their approaching enemies, and partly to prevent the escape of the spies if peradventure Rahab was mistaken and they yet lurked in the city.

8 ¶ And before they were laid down, she came up unto them upon the roof,

Before they were laid down to rest or sleep as they intended, being now, after the departure of their searchers, come from their hiding-place to their resting-place.

9 And she said unto the men I know that the Lord hath given you the land, and that your terror is fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land are faint because of you.

Quest How could they understand one the other? Answer 1 The Hebrew and the Canaan or Phœnician languages have a very great resemblance, and are thought to be but differing dialects of one and the same tongue, as the learned prove by a multitude of words, which are common to both of them. Or 2 Some of the Hebrews had either out of curiosity, or by Joshua's order and direction, learnt that language for this or other such like occasions. Your terror, i.e. the dread of you. See Exod xiii 27, xxxiv 21, Deut xi 25, xxvii 7.

10 For we have heard how the Lord dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt, and what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites, that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og whom ye utterly destroyed.

11 And as soon as we had heard these things, our hearts did melt, neither did there remain any more courage in a man, because of you for the Lord your God, he is God in heaven above and in earth beneath.

And melt, i.e. were dissolved, lost all consistency and courage. This phrase is oft used, as Deut i 29, xx 8 Josh i 1, vii 5. He is God in heaven above and in earth beneath, he can do whatsoever he pleaseth in heaven and earth, whereas our gods are enclosed in heaven, and can do nothing to us upon earth.

12 Now therefore, I pray you, swear unto me by the Lord, since I have shewed you kindness, that ye will also shew kindness unto my father's house, and give me a true token.

By the Lord, by your God, who is the only true God, so she shews her conversion to God and owns his worship, one eminent act whereof is swearing by his name. My father's house, my near kindred, which she particularly names ver 13. Husband and children it seems she had none. And for herself, it was needless to speak it being a plain and undoubted duty to save their prisoner. A true token, either an assurance that you will preserve me and mine from the common ruin, or a token which I must produce as a witness of this agreement, and a mean of my security.

13 And that ye will save alive my father, and my mother, and my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death.

All that they have, i.e. their children, as appears from Josh i 23.

14 And the men answered her, Our life for your s, if ye utter not this our business. And it shall be, when the Lord hath given us the land, that we will deal kindly and truly with thee.

Our life for yours, we pawn and will venture our lives for the security of yours. Or, may we perish, if you be not preserved. This our business, i.e. this agreement of ours and the way and condition of it, lest others under this pretence secure themselves. By which they show both their piety and prudence in managing their oath with so much circumspection and caution, that neither their own consciences might be insnared, nor the public justice obstructed.

15 Then she let them down by a cord through the window for her house was upon the town wall, and she dwelt upon the wall.

Which gave her the opportunity of dismissing them when the gates were shut. She dwelt upon the wall, her particular dwelling was there, which may possibly be added, because the other part of her house was reserved for the entertainment of strangers.

16 And she said unto them, Get you to the mountain, lest the pursuers meet you, and hide yourselves there three days, until the pursuers be returned and afterward may ye go your way.

To the mountain, i.e. to some of the mountains which with Jericho was encompassed, in which also there were in my caves where they might lurk. Three days, not three whole days, but one whole day, and part of two days. See on Josh i 11.

17 And the men said unto her, We will be blameless of this thine oath which thou hast made us swear.

The men said or he said, namely, before he let them down it being very reasonable either that she would dismiss them before the condition was expressed and agreed, or that she would discourse with them, or that with her about such secret and weighty things after they were let down when others might overhear them, or that she should begin her discourse in her chamber, and not finish it till they were gone out of her house. Object They spoke thus after they were let down, for it follows ver 18, Thou shalt let us down by a cord. These words may be thus rendered, which thou dost let us down by, i.e. art about to do it, it being frequent for the preter tense to be used of a thing about to be done by an enallage of tense, as Josh x 15. Blameless of this thine oath, i.e. free from fault or reproach if it be violated, namely, if the following condition be not observed.

18 Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread in the window which thou dost let us down by and thou shalt bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee.

Into the land, i.e. over Jordan, and near the city. Bind this line of scarlet thread in the window, that it may be easily discerned by our soldiers.

19 And it shall be, that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street, his blood shall be upon his head, and we will be guiltless and whosoever shall be with thee in the house, his blood shall be on our head, if any hand be upon him.

His blood shall be upon his head, the blame of his death shall rest wholly upon himself, as being occasioned by his own neglect or contempt of the means of safety. His blood shall be on our head, we are willing to bear the sin, and shame, and punishment of it. If any hand be upon him, to wit, so as to kill him as this phrase is used, 1st vi 2, Job i 12.

20 And if thou utter this our business, then we will be quit of thine oath which thou hast made us to swear.

21 And she said, According unto your words, so be it. And she sent them away, and they departed: and she bound the scarlet line in the window.

Forthwith partly, that the spies might see it hung out before their departure, and so the better know it at some distance: partly, lest some accident might occasion a mistake or neglect about it, and partly, for her own comfort it being pleasant and encouraging to her to have in her eye the pledge of her deliverance.

22 And they went, and came unto the mountain, and abode there three days, until the pursuers were returned: and the pursuers sought them throughout all the way, but found them not.

Abode there three days, supporting themselves there with the provision, which after the manner of those times, and places they carried with them, which it doubtless hindered them with. Throughout all the way, i. e. in the road to Jordan, and the places near it, but not in the mountain.

23 ¶ So the two men returned and descended from the mountain, and passed over, and came to Joshua the son of Nun, and told him all things that befell them.

And passed over, to wit, Jordan, unto to him. Him alone, not the people, as they did Numb xiii.

24 And they said unto Joshua, Truly, the Lord hath delivered into our hands all the land: for even all the inhabitants of the country do faint because of us.

CHAP. III.

Joshua came with the Israelites to Jordan. 1. The officers instruct the people and priests for the passage. 2. 6. God encourages Joshua, and he encourages the people, giving them for a sign the dividing the waters of Jordan till the ark and people should pass over. 7. 13. The people pass over, the priests standing all the time in the mids of Jordan. 11. 17.

AND Joshua rose early in the morning, and they removed from Shittim: and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

In the morning, not after the return of the spies, as may seem in the text, but after the three days, as it follows, ver 2. I lodged there, that might be they might go over in the day time, partly, that the multitude might be more confident and unperishable, and partly to strike the greater terror into their enemies.

2 And it came to pass, after three days, that the officers went through the host.

After three days, either 1. At the end of the three days mentioned Josh i 11, or upon the last of them, is this phrase is used. See on Deut xv 1. Or 2. After those days were expired. See on Josh i 11. The officers went through the host, the second time to give them more particular directions, as they had given them a general notice, Josh i 10, 11.

3 And they commanded the people, saying, When ye see the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, and the priests the Levites bearing it, then ye shall remove from your place, and go after it.

They commanded the people, in Joshua's name, and by his authority. The priests the Levites, who were not only Levites, but priests also. For although the Levites were to carry the ark Numb iv, yet the priests might perform that office and did so upon some solemn occasions, as here, and Josh vi 6. Go after it towards Jordan, to go over it in such manner as I am about to describe. Till this time the ark went in the middle of the cloudy pillar, probably being now vanished, now it goes in the front.

4 ¶ Yet there shall be a space between you and it, about two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it, that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way heretofore.

Two thousand cubits make a thousand yards, and at which distance from it the Israelites seem to have been encamped in the wilderness. And because they generally went from their tents to the ark to worship God, especially on the sabbath days, hence it hath been conceived that a sabbath day's journey reached only to two thousand cubits. But that may be doubted: for those who encamped near the ark went at that distance from it, and came so far, but the most were farther from it, and their sabbath day's journey was considerably longer. Come not near unto it, partly from the reverence respect they should be to the ark, and partly for the following reason. That ye may know the way by which ye must go, that the ark marching so far before you into the river, and standing still there till you pass over may give you the greater assurance of your safe passage.

5 And Joshua said unto the people, Sanctify yourselves: for to morrow the Lord will do wonders among you.

Joshua said, or rather had said, to wit, the day before their passage, for it follows, to morrow. Sanctify yourselves, both in soul and body, that you may be meet to receive such a favour, and with more attention and reverence observe and ponder the great work, and fix it in your hearts and memories. See on Exod xix 10, Lev xx 7.

6 And Joshua spake unto the priests, saying, Take up the ark of the covenant, and pass over before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

Take up the ark, to wit, upon your shoulders, for so they were to carry it Numb vii 9. Before the people, not in the middle of them, as you used to do.

7 ¶ And the Lord said unto Joshua, This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.

To begin thee, authority and reputation among them, as the person whom I have set in Moses's stead, and by whom I will conduct them to the possession of the promised land.

8 And thou shalt command the priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye shall stand still in Jordan.

To the brink, Heb to the extremity, so far as the river then spread itself, which was now more than ordinary. In Jordan, within the waters of Jordan, in the entrance into the river, where they stood for a season, till the river was divided, and then they went into the midst of it, as it is implied, ver 17, and there abode till all the people were passed over, as it follows in the history.

9 ¶ And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, Come hither, and hear the words of the Lord your God

Come hither, to the ark or tabernacle, the place of public assemblies, and hear the words of the Lord your God, who is now about to give a proof that he is both the Lord, the omnipotent Governor of heaven and earth, and all creatures, and your God, in covenant with you, having a tender care and true affection for you

10 And Joshua said, Hereby ye shall know that the living God is among you, and that he will without fail drive out from before you the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgashites and the Amorites, and the Jebusites

Hereby ye shall know, to wit, by experience and sensible evidence. The living God, not a dull dead senseless, and inactive god, such as the gods of the nations, but a God of life, and power, and activity, to watch over you and work for you. Is among you, is present with you to strengthen and help you, as the phrase signifies, Exod xvi 7 Deut xxi 17, Josh xxi 31

11 Behold, the ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth passeth over before you into Jordan

12 Now therefore take you twelve men out of the tribes of Israel, out of every tribe a man

Take you twelve men, for the work described Josh iv 2, 3

13 And it shall come to pass, as soon as the soles of the feet of the priests that bear the ark of the Lord, the Lord of all the earth, shall rest in the waters of Jordan, that the waters of Jordan shall be cut off from the waters that come down from above, and they shall stand upon in heap

As soon as the soles of the feet of the priests shall rest in the waters of Jordan, that so it may appear that this is the Lord's doing, and that in pursuance and for the accomplishment of his covenant made with Israel. The Lord of all the earth, the Lord of all this terrestrial globe, made of earth and water who therefore can dispose of this river and adjoining land as he pleases

The waters which now are united shall be divided, and put shall flow down the channel towards the Dead Sea, and the other part, that is near the spring or rise of the river, and flows down from it shall stand still. They shall stand upon an heap, being as it were conjoined, as the Red Sea was, Exod xv 8 and so kept from overflowing all the country

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the people removed from their tents, to pass over Jordan, and the priests bearing the ark of the covenant before the people

15 And as they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water, (for Jordan overfloweth all his banks all the time of harvest,)

Which is also noted I Chron xii 15, Leviticus xiv 26, and by Aristarchus in the History of the Jews. Interpreters thus is meant not of the wheat harvest but of the barley harvest, (which was before it Ruth 1 22 2 Sam xxi 9) as is manifest from their keeping of the passover at their first entrance, Josh i 10, which feast was kept on the fourteenth day of their first month when they were to bring sheaf of their first-fruits Lev xxiii 10, Deut xvi 9, 10, which were of barley, as Josephus affirms and is evident from the thing itself. So that this harvest in those hot countries fell very early in the spring, when rivers used to swell most, partly because of the rains which have fallen all the winter, and partly because of the snows which then melt into water and come into the rivers, for which reasons the same overflowing of water which is here ascribed to Jordan, is by other authors ascribed to Euphrates and Tigris, and the Rhone and Maine &c. And thus time God chose for this work, partly that the miracle might be more glorious in itself more obliging to the Israelites, and more amazing and terrible to the Canaanites, and partly that the Israelites might be entertained at their first entrance with more plentiful and comfortable provisions

16 That the waters which came down from above stood and rose up upon an heap very far from the city Adam, that is beside Zaretan and those that came down toward the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, failed, and were cut off and the people passed over right against Jericho

The waters rose up upon an heap which having been affirmed by the other writers to have been done by magicians, it is great impudence to disbelieve or doubt of God's power to do it. Adam, that is beside Zaretan, the city Adam being more obscure, is described by its name as to a more known place Zaretan, or Zarthana, which some think is the same place mentioned I Kings iv 12 vi 16 but it rather seems to have been another place then eminent but now unknown, as many thousands are. The meaning is that the waters were stopped in their course at that place, and so kept at a due distance from the Israelites whilst they passed over. Right against Jericho, here God carried them over, because this part was, 1 The strongest as having in its neighbourhood an eminent city a potent king, and a stout and warlike people. 2 The most pleasant and fruitful, and therefore more convenient both for the refreshment of the Israelites after their long and tedious marches, and for their encouragement to their present expedition

17 And the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan, and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground, until all the people were passed clean over Jordan

Stood firm, i.e. in one and the same place and posture their feet neither moved by any waters flowing in upon them nor sinking into any mire which one might think was at the bottom of the river. And thus may be opposed unto them who stand in the brink of the water when they came to it commanded ver 8, which we but for a while, till the waters were divided and gone away, and then they were to go farther, even into the midst of Jordan. It is here said where they are to stand constantly and firmly, as this Hebrew word signifies, until all were passed over. If it be said that what is prescribed ver 8 is here said to be executed, and therefore the midst of Jordan here is the same place with the brink of the water of ver 8, it may be answered, that the manifest variation of the phrase shows that it is not absolutely the same thing, which is spoken of there and here, but what is there enjoined is here executed with advantage. For when it is said that they stood firm—in the midst of Jordan, it must needs be supposed that they first came to the brink of the water, and that they stood there for a season, till the waters were cut off and dried up, as appears from the nature of the thing, and that then they went farther, even into the midst of Jordan. In the midst of Jordan, either, 1 Within Jordan, as it is expressed above, ver 8, for that place doth not always signify the exact middle of a place, but any part within it, as appears from Gen xiv 6, Exod xiii 22, xxi 18, Josh vii 13, x 13, Prov xxx 19. Or rather, 2 In the middle and deepest part of the river. For 1 Words should be taken properly, where they may without any inconvenience, which is the case here. 2 The ark went before them to direct, and encourage and secure them in the dangers of their passages for which the middle was the fittest place. 3 In this case the one phrase is used, Josh iv 8, 9, for certainly those words which were to be witnesses and monuments of their passage over Jordan should not be taken from the brink or bank of the river, or from the side which Jordan overflowed only at that season, but from the most inward and deepest parts of the river, and ver 16-19 where the priests are said to ascend or come up out of Jordan, and out of the midst of Jordan unto the dry land, where is hid this been meant only of the first entrance into the river they must have been said first to go down into Jordan and then to go up to the land.

CHAP IV

God commands him to carry twelve stones for a memorial out of Jordan, Joshua orders it, the people perform, 1-8 Twelve other stones set up for a memorial in the midst of Jordan 9 The people pass over the river they observe 10-11 God magnifies Joshua 12 The priests go up out of Jordan, 13-17 The waters return 18 The time of this passage 19 Twelve stones set up in Gilgal, to what purpose declared 20-21

AND it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over Jordan, that the Lord spake unto Joshua, saying,

The Lord commanded before Josh in 12, and is here repeated with enlargement, as being now to be put in execution

2 Take ye twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man,

For the greater evidence and certainty, and the more effectual proving of the report of this miraculous work among all the tribe

3 And command ye them, saying Take ye hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where the priests stood firm twelve stones and ye shall carry them over with you and leave them in the lodging place where ye shall lodge this night

Out of the midst of Jordan, and which see on Josh in 17 Where ye shall have this night in Gilgal as is expressed below ver 19, 20

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had prepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man

They were appointed or chosen for that work and commanded them to be ready for it

5 And he said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the Lord your God into the midst of Jordan and take ye up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel

Pass ye before the ark and go back again to the place where the ark stands

6 That this may be a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones?

A sign, a monument or memorial of this day's work

7 Then ye shall answer them, That the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the Lord, when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off and these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel for ever

Before the ark, as it were to the sight and approach of the ark to give it and the Israelites a safe passage

8 And the children of Israel did so as Joshua commanded, and took up twelve stones out of the midst of Jordan, as the Lord spake unto

Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there

9 And Joshua set up twelve stones in the midst of Jordan, in the place where the feet of the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood and they are there unto this day

In the midst of Jordan, properly so called, as Josh in 17 Quest How could these stones be a monument of this work when they were not seen, but generally covered with the waters of Jordan? Answer These stones are not the same with those which a man could carry upon his shoulders ver 5, and therefore might be very much larger, and being set up in two rows one above another, they might possibly be seen, at least sometimes when the water was low, and especially where the water was commonly more shallow, as it might be ordinarily in this place, though not at this time, when Jordan overflowed all its banks Add to this that the waters of Jordan are said to be very pure and clear, and therefore these stones, though they did not appear above it, might be seen in it, either by those who stood upon the shore because that river was not broad, or at least by those that passed in boats upon the river, who could easily discern them by the peculiar noise and motion of the water occasioned by that heap of stones And this was sufficient especially considering that there was another more distinct and visible monument of this miracle set up in Gilgal They are there unto this day this might be written, either, 1 By Joshua who wrote this book not twenty years after this was done, or, 2 By some other holy man divinely inspired and approved of by the whole Jewish church who inserted this and some such passages both in this book, and in the writings of Moses

10 ¶ For the priests which bare the ark stood in the midst of Jordan, until every thing was finished that the Lord commanded Joshua to speak unto the people, according to all that Moses commanded Joshua and the people hastened and passed over

11 ¶ He that went unto the people to command the people to do according to all that Moses commanded Joshua, which he did not partly only but in the general because he commanded Joshua to observe and do all that God had commanded him by Moses and all that he should command him any other way Hastened and passed over as is passed over with haste which is noted as an argument of their fear or weakness of their faith, as on the contrary, the priests were commanded that they stood firm, and fixed and settled in their minds as well as in the posture of their bodies

11 And it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over, that the ark of the Lord passed over, and the priests, in the presence of the people

The people looking on, and beholding this wonderful work of God with attention and admiration

12 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad and half the tribe of Manassah, passed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses spake unto them

13 About forty thousand prepared for war passed over before the Lord unto battle, to the plains of Jericho

Either, 1 Before the ark, by which they, as well as the rest passed when they went over Jordan Or, 2 In the presence of God who diligently observed whether they would keep their promise and covenant made with their brethren or not

14 ¶ On that day the Lord magnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel, and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life

15 And the Lord spake unto Joshua, saying,

<sup>Ex 23. 16.</sup> 16 Command the priests that bare <sup>the</sup> ark of the testimony, that they come up out of Jordan

For being now in the middle, and lowest, and deepest place of the river, (of which see on Josh iii 17.) they are most properly said to ascend or go up to the land, which word is thence used in this and the two next following verses.

17 Joshua therefore commanded the priests, saying, Come ye up out of Jordan

The priests staid contentedly in the river, till God by Joshua called them out.

18 And it came to pass, when the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord were come up out of the midst of Jordan, and the soles of the priests' feet were †lifted up unto the dry land, that the waters of Jordan returned unto their place, †and †flowed over all his banks, as they did before

The waters came down from their heaps, and returned with all convenient speed into their proper channel, according to their natural and usual course

19 ¶ And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the first month, and encamped <sup>in</sup> Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho

The first month to wit of Nisan which wanted but five days of forty years from the time of their coming out of Egypt which was on the fifteenth day of this month, so punctual is God in the performing of his word whether promised or threatened. And this day was very seasonable for the taking up of the limbs, which were to be used four days after, according to the law, Exod xii 3 6 Gilgal, a place so called hereafter, on a following occasion, Josh v 9 So here it is an anticipation

Which most probably were placed evenly and in order like so many little pillars which were most proper to keep remembrance of this miraculous benefit vouchsafed to this people

21 And he spake unto the children of Israel, saying, When your children shall ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean these stones?

22 Then ye shall let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land

23 For the Lord your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as the Lord your God did to the Red sea, which he dried up from before us, until we were gone over

Before us, i. e. myself and Caleb, and all of us here present, for this benefit though done to their fathers is justly and rightly said to be done to themselves, because they were then in their parents' loins, and then very being, and all their happiness, depended upon that deliverance

24 That all the people of the earth might know the hand of the Lord, that it is mighty that ye might fear the Lord your God †for ever

Dist. & 2 Ps 89 = Jer 10. 7 + Heb all days

CHAP V

The Amorites and Canaanites hear of this, and are afraid, 1 The males born in the wilderness are circumcised, 2—9 The passover is celebrated, 10 They eat of the corn of the land, and the manna ceaseth, 11, 12 Christ appeareth to Joshua in form of a man of war, he worships him, the place of his presence holy ground, 13—15

AND it came to pass, when all the kings of the Amorites, which were on the side of Jordan westward, and all the kings of the Canaanites, which were by the sea, heard that the Lord had dried up the waters of Jordan from before the children of Israel, until we were passed over, that their heart melted, neither was there spirit in them any more, because of the children of Israel

The Amorites and the Canaanites are mentioned for all the rest as being the chief of them for number, and power, and courage. Westward this is added to distinguish them from the other Amorites, eastward from Jordan, whom Moses had subdued. All the kings of the Canaanites, so the proper place of this nation was on both sides of Jordan. By the sea, the midland sea all along the coast of it, which was the chief seat of that people though divers colonies of them were come into and settled in other places. Jordan was their bulwark on the east side, while the Israelites were for it is very probable they had taken away all bridges in those parts, and the Israelites having been so long in that neighbouring country, and yet not making any attempt upon them they were grown secure especially now, when Jordan swelled beyond its ordinary bounds, and therefore they did not endeavour to hinder their passage. Their heart melted, they lost all their courage and durst attempt nothing upon the Israelites, not without God's special providence, that the Israelites might quietly participate of the two great sacraments of their church, circumcision and the passover, and thereby be prepared for their high and hard work and for the possession of the holy and promised land, which would have been defiled by uncircumcised people

2 ¶ At that time the Lord said unto Joshua, Make thee sharp knives, and circumcise again the children of Israel the second time

At that time, as soon as ever they were come to Gilgal, which was on the tenth day, and so this might be executed the next, on the eleventh day, and but in the morning on the thirteenth day they were sore of their wounds, and on the fourteenth day they recovered and at the even of that day kept the passover. Make thee sharp knives, or, prepare, or make ready, as this word is sometimes used. As it was not necessary for those who had such knives already to make others for that use, so it is not probable that such were commanded to do so but only to make them sharp and fit for that work. They are called in Hebrew knives of flints, not as if they were all necessarily to be made of flints, but because such were commonly used, especially in those parts, where there was but little iron, and because such knives were oft used in this work, as the Jewish doctors note and in such like works, as the heathen writers relate. Thus we call that an ink horn which is made of silver, because those utensils are commonly made of horn. Circumcise again, he doth thus a second circumcision, not as if these same persons had been circumcised once before, either by Joshua, or by any other, for the contrary is affirmed below, ver 7, but with respect unto the body of the people, whereof one part had been circumcised before, and the other at this time, which is called a second time in relation to some former time wherein they were circumcised, either, 1 In Egypt, when many of the people, who possibly for fear or favour of the Egyptians had neglected this duty, were by the command of Moses (who had been awakened by the remembrance of his own neglect and danger therein) circumcised; which during the ten plagues and the grievous confusion and consternation of the Egyptian, they might easily find opportunity to do. Or 2 At Sinai, when they received the passover Numb ix 5 which no uncircumcised person might do, Exod xii 18, and therefore it may not seem improbable, that all the children born in that first year after their coming out of Egypt, and all they who peradventure might come out of Egypt in their uncircumcision were now circumcised. Object 1 All that came out of Egypt were circumcised, ver 5

Ans 1 This may be true but he doth not say when and where they were circumcised, nor doth he deny that this was done to some of them either in time of the plagues in Egypt, or at Sinai. 2 All is very old used of the greatest part, as is confessed Object 2 All the people that were born in the wilderness were not circumcised, ver 5 Ans 1 Understand this also of the greatest part. 2 This is limited to them that were born by the way, as it is said there, and emphatically repeated, ver 7 & 8 in their journeys and travellings, which in it imports the reason why they were not circumcised, because they were always uncertain of their stay in any place, and were constantly to be in a readiness for a removal when God took up the cloud: but this reason ceased at Sinai where they knew they were to abide for a considerable time: and seeing they took that opportunity for the celebration of the passover, it is likely they would improve it also to the circumcision of their children or others, which they ought to prize highly, and to embrace all occasions offered by it: which though the people might it is not likely that Moses would neglect. Object 3 They are said to have remained uncircumcised forty whole years in the wilderness, ver 6 Ans 1 For almost forty years, as the same phrase is used Numb xiv 33 34, xxiii 13 when there was above one year of that number past and gone. Or, as in Abraham, and so the sense may be, The first circumcision conferred upon Abraham and continued in his posterity hath been for many years neglected or omitted: and so that great and solemn pledge of my covenant with you is not a matter wholly lost, and therefore it is but fit and necessary to have this long interrupted practice of circumcision revived and to have Abraham's posterity circumcised a second time for the renewing of the covenant between them and me again.

3 And Joshua made him sharp knives, and circumcised the children of Israel at the hill of the foreskins.

Ans 1 He cut off this to be done: and because it was to be done privately the preface approaching, it was necessary to be in many hands in it, either priests and Levites or other circumcised persons who at that time those circumstances were permitted to do it. The children of Israel i. e. such of them as were uncircumcised. And though it be not mentioned at all more than probable that the Israelites beyond Jordan were circumcised at the same time.

4 And this is the cause why Joshua did circumcise. All the people that came out of Egypt that were males, even all the men of war, did in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt.

This is confirmed to such as were then above twenty years old: and such as were guilty of that rebellion Numb xvi is it expressed below, ver 6.

5 Now all the people that came out were circumcised: but all the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they had not circumcised.

They, either the parents or the rulers of Israel who a commission here it was not through neglect for then God who had ordered the practice of circumcision to be cut off, Gen xvi 11 would not have left so gross a fault unpunished, but by Divine commission and indulgence, partly because they were now in a journey in which case the passover should be neglected Numb ix 10 & 13 and at that journey the passover was but once observed, and partly because there was not so great a necessity of this note of circumcision to distinguish them from other nations whilst they dwelt alone and unarmed in the wilderness, as there was afterwards.

6 For the children of Israel walked forty years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the Lord, unto whom the Lord swore that he would not shew them the land, which the Lord swore unto their fathers: that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

All the people, the Hebrew word commonly signifies the Gentiles, so he calls them, to note that they were unworthy of the name and privileges of Israelites. He would not shew them, i. e. not give them so much as a sight of it, which he granted to Moses, much less the possession and enjoyment of it. Or showing is possible, as it is Paul ii 6, ix 3; Eccles ii 24.

7 And their children, whom he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way.

Them Joshua circumcised, which God would have now done. 1 As a testimony of God's reconciliation to the people of which circumcision was a sign, and that God would not further impute their parents' rebellions to them. 2 Because the great impediment of circumcision was now removed to wit, their continued travels, and frequent and uncertain removal. 3 To prepare them for the approach of the passover. 4 To distinguish them from the Canaanites, into whose land they were now come. 5 To ratify the covenant between God and them, whereof circumcision was a sign and seal, to assure them that God would now make good his covenant in giving them this land, and to oblige them to perform all the duties and services to which this covenant bound them, of which circumcision was the beginning and foundation, all which they were expressly commanded to do as soon as ever they came into Canaan, Exod xii 15, Lev xxiii 10, Numb xv 2.

8 And it came to pass, when they had done circumcising all the people, that they abode in their places in the camp, till they were whole.

Free from that pain and sore which circumcision caused Gen xxxiv 26. It was indeed in act of great faith to expose themselves to so much pain and danger too in this place where they were humbled in by Jordan and their enemies: but they had many considerations to support their faith, and suppress their fears, the fresh experience of God's power and readiness to work miracles for their preservation, the great confirmation of all their enemies, which they might observe and rationally presume, the considerable number of the people who were above fifty years old and therefore circumcised before this time, their great general being one of this number, the time it would require for their enemies to bring together a force sufficient to oppose them.

9 And the Lord said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you. Wherefore the name of the place is called Gilgal unto this day.

The reproach of Egypt, i. e. uncircumcision, which was both in truth, and in the opinion of the Jews, a matter of great reproach, Gen xxxiv 14, 1 Sam xiv 6, xxv 26. And although this was a reproach common to most nations of the world, yet it is particularly called the reproach of Egypt, either, 1 Because the other neighbouring nations being the children of Abraham by the concubines, are supposed to have been circumcised, which the Egyptians at this time were not as may be gathered from Exod i 6, where they knew the child to be an Hebrew by this mark. Or, 2 Because they came out of Egypt, and were esteemed to be a sort of Egyptians, Numb xxi 5, which they justly thought a great reproach, but by their circumcision they were now distinguished from them, and manifested to be another kind of people. Or, 3 Because many of them lay under this reproach in Egypt, having wickedly neglected this duty there for worldly reasons, and others of them continued in the same shameful condition for many years in the wilderness.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even in the plains of Jericho.

This was their third passover the first was in Egypt, Exod. xii, the second at Mount Sinai, Numb. ix, the third here; for in their wilderness travels these and all other sacrifices were neglected, Amos v 25

11 And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the passover, unleavened cakes, and parched corn in the selfsame day.

The old corn, the corn of the last year, which the inhabitants of those parts had left in their barns, being doubtless stored for fear of the Israelites into their strong cities or other remote and safer parts. On the morrow after the passover, i. e. on the sixteenth day, for the passover was killed between the two evenings of the fourteenth day, and was eaten in that evening or night, which, according to the Jewish computation, whereby they began their day at the evening, was a part of the fifteenth day, all which was the feast of the passover, and so the morrow of the sixteenth day was the morrow after the passover, when they were obliged to offer unto God the first sheaf and then were allowed to eat of the rest. Parched corn of that year's corn, which was most proper and customary for that use. In the selfsame day, having an eager desire to enjoy the fruits of the land.

12 ¶ And the manna ceased on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land, neither had the children of Israel manna any more but they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year.

God now withheld the manna, 1 To show that it was not an ordinary production of nature is by the long and constant enjoyment of it they might be prone to think, but an extraordinary and special gift of God to supply their necessities. 2 Because God would not be prodigal of his favours, nor expose them to contempt by giving them superfluously, or by working miracles where ordinary means were sufficient. On the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn, i. e. on the seventeenth day.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he lifted up his eyes and looked, and behold there stood a man over against him with his sword drawn in his hand and Joshua went unto him, and said unto him, Art thou for us or for our adversaries?

By Jericho Heb in Jericho i. e. in the country or territory adjoining to Jericho, whether he went to view those parts and discern the fittest places for his attempt upon Jericho, as generals usually do. A man, one in the appearance of man. With his sword drawn, in readiness to fight, not, as Joshua thought, against him, but for him and his people.

14 And he said, Nay, but as captain of the host of the Lord am I now come. And Joshua fell on his face to the earth, and did worship, and said unto him, What saith my lord unto his servant?

He said, Nay, I am neither Israelite nor Canaanite. Captain of the host of the Lord, either 1 Of all creatures in heaven and earth, which are God's hosts. Or 2 Of the angels, who are called the host of heaven. 1 Kings xxii 19, 2 Chron. xviii, 18, Luke ii 13. Or, 3 Of the host or people of Israel, which are called the Lord's host, 1 Cor. xii 18. The sense is, I am the chief Captain of this people and will conduct and assist thee and thine in this great undertaking. Now this person is none other than Michael the Prince, Dan. x 21; xii 1 not a created angel but the Son of God, who went along with the Israelites in this expedition, 1 Cor. x 4 not surely as an underling, but as their Chief and Captain. And this appears 1 By his acceptance of adoration here which a created angel durst not admit of, Rev xxi 8, 9. 2 Because the place was made holy by his presence, ver 15, which was God's prerogative, Exod. iii 5. 3 Because he is called the Lord, Heb Jehovah, Josh vi 2. What saith my lord unto his servant? I acknowledge thee for my Lord and Captain, and therefore wait for thy commands, which I am ready to obey.

15 And the captain of the Lord's host said unto Joshua, Loose thy shoe from off thy foot, for the place whereon thou standest is holy. And Joshua did so.

Loose thy shoe from off thy foot, in token of reverence and subjection, see on Exod. iii 5. The place is holy, consecrated by my presence, which when it was withdrawn, it was no more holy than any other place, the reason of its holiness being removed.

CHAP. VI.

Jericho is shut up by the Israelites. 1 The people and seven priests with the ark go round it six days, 2-11. On the seventh day they go round seven times the priests blow the trumpets, the people shout, the city is overthrown, nothing to be taken but all consecrated, the walls fall down men women, and cattle destroyed. 15-21. Rahab and her kindred are saved. 22-25. Joshua curseth the men who should rebuild Jericho, 26.

NOW Jericho was strictly shut up because of the children of Israel none went out, and none came in.

Strictly shut up, not only by night, as before Josh. ii 5, but constantly and diligently.

2 And the Lord said unto Joshua, See I have given into thine hand Jericho, and the king thereof, and the mighty men of valour.

Who are in it resolved and ready to defend it with their utmost strength.

3 And ye shall compass the city, all ye men of war, and go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days.

Go round about the city, i. e. at convenient distance out of the reach of their arrows, thus shalt thou do six days, every day once. This and the following course might seem ridiculous and absurd and is therefore prescribed and used by God that they might learn to take new measures of things and to expect success not from their own valour or skill, or probable means, but merely from God's appointment and blessing, and in general, not to judge of any of God's institutions by mere carnal reason, to which divers of their ceremonies would seem no less foolish than this action and that they might have a full demonstration of the all-sufficiency of that God who can do what he pleases, even by the most contemptible means.

4 And seven priests shall bear before the ark seven trumpets of rams' horns and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and the priests shall blow with the trumpets.

Of rams' horns, or, of the jubilees i. e. such trumpets where with they were to sound in the years of jubilee, Lev. xxv 9. Either thus, or one of the other six, was certainly a sabbath day, and it is not material which was it, for the command of the Lord of the sabbath was sufficient to legitimate any action.

5 And it shall come to pass, that when they make a long blast with the ram's horn, and when ye hear the sound of the trumpet, all the people shall shout with a great shout, and the wall of the city shall fall down flat, and the people shall ascend up every man straight before him.

When they make a long blast, i. e. as usual in the close of musical sounds. The wall of the city, not all of it which was not only unnecessary but inconvenient, and might have given the people better opportunity of escaping, but only a considerable part of it, where the Israelites might fully enter, for Rahab's house was not overthrown ver 22. But Heb under it i.e. below the place they stood in, or, in its place, it was not battered down with engines, which would have made part of it fall out of its place, but it fell out without any force and of its own accord, and therefore in the place it did formerly stand in.

6 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun called the priests, and said unto them, Take up the ark of the covenant, and let seven priests bear seven trumpets of rams horns before the ark of the Lord.

7 And he said unto the people, Pass on, and compass the city, and let him that is armed pass on before the ark of the Lord.

God would have them armed, both for the defence of themselves and the ark in case the enemies should make a silly upon them, and for the execution of the Lord's vengeance upon that city.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua had spoken unto the people, that the seven priests bearing the seven trumpets of rams horns passed on before the Lord, and blew with the trumpets, and the ark of the covenant of the Lord followed them.

9 ¶ And the armed men went before the priests that blew with the trumpets, and the forefront came after the ark, the priests going on and blowing with the trumpets.

The rearward being opposed to the armed men may seem to note the unarmed people who were desirous to be spectators of this wonderful work. The priests, which is rightly supplied here from ver 4.

10 And Joshua had commanded the people, saying, Ye shall not shout, nor make any noise with your voice, neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth, until the day I bid you shout, then shall ye shout.

Ye shall not shout because shouting before the time appointed would be ineffectual, and so might give them some discouragement, and their enemies matter of insulting.

11 So the ark of the Lord compassed the city, going about it once, and they came into the camp, and lodged in the camp.

12 ¶ And Joshua rose early in the morning, and the priests took up the ark of the Lord.

13 And seven priests bearing seven trumpets of rams horns before the ark of the Lord went on continually, and blew with the trumpets, and the armed men went before them, but the rearward came after the ark of the Lord, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

14 And the second day they compassed the city once, and returned into the camp, so they did six days.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they rose early upon the dawning of the day, and compassed the city after the same manner seven times, only on that day they compassed the city seven times.

16 And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, Shout for the Lord hath given you the city.

Shout to testify your faith in God's promise, and thankfulness for this glorious mercy, and to encourage yourselves and brethren, and to strike a terror into your enemies.

17 ¶ And the city shall be accursed, even it, and all that are therein, to the Lord, only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because she hid the messengers that we sent.

Accursed, i.e. devoted to utter destruction, Lev xxvii 21, 29, Deut xii. Thus he spake by instinct or direction from God, as is evident from 1 Kings xvi 34. To the Lord, partly, because the first-fruits were appropriated to God, partly, lest the soldiers being gluttied with the spoil of this rich city, should grow sensual and sluggish in their work, and partly, to strike the greater terror into the rest of their cities.

18 And ye, in any wise keep yourselves from the accursed thing, lest ye make yourselves accursed, when ye take of the accursed thing, and make the camp of Israel a curse, and trouble it.

Make the camp of Israel a curse by provoking God to punish them for your sin in which they may be one way or other involved, or at least upon the occasion of your sin. For, to speak properly, God will not (the case of Adam a sin only excepted) punish one man for the sin of another, as he hath oft declared, but the whole camp having sins of their own, God might take what occasion he saw fit to inflict this punishment.

19 But all the silver, and gold, and vessels of brass and iron, are consecrated unto the Lord, they shall come into the treasury of the Lord.

Except that of which images were made, which were to be utterly destroyed Exod xxxii 20, Deut vii 25. Consecrated unto the Lord being first made to pass through the fire, Numb xxi 22, 23. They shall come into the treasury of the Lord, to be employed wholly for the service or uses of the tabernacle, not to be applied to the use of any private person or priest.

20 So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets, and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.

21 And they utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword.

Being commanded to do so by the sovereign Lord of every man's life, and being informed by God before that the Canaanites were abominably wicked, and deserved the severest punishments. As for the infants, they were guilty of original sin, and otherwise at the disposal of their Creator, as the clay is in the hands of the potter, but if they had been wholly innocent, it was a great favour to them to take them away in infancy, rather than reserve them to those dreadful calamities which those who survived them were liable to.

22 But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, as ye swore unto her.

The harlot's house together with the wall upon which it leaned, was left standing either by a special favour of God to her, or for the reason alleged upon ver 5.

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had, and they brought out all her kindred, and left them without the camp of Israel

Till they were cleansed from the impurities of their Gentile state, and instructed in the Jewish religion, and solemnly admitted into that church in the usual way to which Rahab's good counsel and example had doubtless very much prepared them, and this stupendous work of God confirmed their purposes.

<sup>a ver 19</sup> 24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that ~~was~~ therein only the silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the Lord

<sup>1</sup> See Matt. 25 And Joshua saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had, and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this day, because she hid the messengers, which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho

For that general command of rooting out the Canaanites seems to have had some exception, in case any of them had sincerely and seasonably cast off their idolatry and wickedness, and submitted themselves to the Israelites as we shall see hereafter

<sup>1</sup> 1 Kin 16. 34 26 ¶ And Joshua adjured them at that time, saying, "Cursed be the man before the Lord, that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his firstborn, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it

Adjured them, or made them to swear, caused the people, or some in the name of all to swear for the present and succeeding generations, and to confirm their oath by a curse before the Lord, i. e. from God's presence and by his sentence, as they are said to cast lots before the Lord, Josh. xviii 10, i. e. expecting the decision from God. He intimates that he doth not utter this in a passion, or upon a particular dislike of that place, but by Divine inspiration, as appears from 1 Kings xvi 31. God would have the ruins of this city remain as a standing monument of God's justice against this wicked and idolatrous people, and of his almighty power in destroying so great and strong a city by such contemptible means. That riseth up and buildeth i. e. that shall attempt or endeavour to build it. So this curse is restrained to the builder but no way below, so to those who should inhabit it after it was built, as is evident from 2 Kings xix 18, Luke xix 1, 5. The builder shall love all his children in the work the first at the beginning, other in the progress of it by degrees, and the youngest in the close of it, when the gates use to be set up. This was fulfilled, 1 Kings xvi 31

CHAP VII

Achan takes of the accursed and devoted thing. God is angry with Israel, 1. Joshua sends three thousand men against Ai, they flee and thirty-six are slain, 2-5. Joshua complains to God, who discovers the cause, and enjoins a lot, 6-15. Achan is found guilty. Joshua's advice, and his confession, 16-21. He and his are stoned and burnt in the place named The valley of Achor, 22-26

BUT the children of Israel committed a trespass in the accursed thing for" Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the accursed thing and the anger of the Lord was kindled against the children of Israel

The children of Israel, i. e. one of them, by a very usual synecdoche or enallage, as Gen viii 4, xix 29, Matt xxvi, 8, where that is ascribed to the disciples which belonged to Judas only, John vii 4. In the accursed thing, i. e. in taking some of the forbidden and accursed goods. Zabdi, called also Zerah, 1 Chron ii 6. Zerah, or Zerah who was Judah's immediate son, Gen xxxviii 30 who went with Judah into Egypt; and so for the filling up the two hundred and fifty-six years that are supposed to come between that and this time, we must allow Achan to be now an old man, and his three ancestors to have begotten each his son at about sixty years of age, which at that time was not incredible nor unusual. Against the children of Israel. Why did God punish the whole society for this one man's sin? Answer. All of them were punished for their own sins, whereof each had a sufficient proportion, but God took this occasion to inflict the punishment upon the society, partly, because divers of them might be guilty of this sin, either by covering what he actually did, or by concealing of his fault, which it is probable could not be unknown to others, or by not sorrowing for it and endeavouring to purge themselves from it, partly, to make sin the more hateful, as being the cause of such dishonour and public judgments, and partly, to oblige all the members of every society to be both more circumspect in the ordering of their own actions and more diligent to watch over one another and to prevent the miscarriages of their brethren which is a great benefit and blessing to them and to the whole society, and worthy to be purchased by a sharp affliction upon the society

2 And Joshua sent men from Jericho to Ai, which is beside Beth-el, and spake unto them, saying Go up and view the country. And the men went up and viewed Ai

Ai, called Ibae Gen xii 8 and Aija Neh xi 31. They were not to go into the city of Ai, but into the country beyond and belonging to it and there to understand the state and quality of the place and people. Beside, so the Hebrew is used, Gen xxi 11 xxxv 4, Judg ix 6, xxvii 3, xix 11. Beth-el, a city or town distinct from, but not far from Beth-el though Beth-el was afterwards by allusion called Beth-elon Hos ii 15 x 5. Compare Josh xi 12. On the east side of Beth-el compare Gen xii 8, 10 a viii 9 12

3 And they returned to Joshua, and said unto him, Let not all the people go up, but let about two or three thousand men go up and smite Ai and make not all the people to labour thither, for they are but few

This was done by the wise contrivance of Divine Providence, that their sin might be punished, and they awakened and reformed with as little hazard, and mischief, and reproach as might be, for if the defeat of these caused so great a consternation in Joshua it is easy to guess what did, and confusion and despair it would have caused in the people if a great host had been defeated

4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men and they fled before the men of Ai

Not having their usual courage to strike a stroke, which was a plain evidence that God had forsaken them, and a useful instruction, to show them what weak and unsupportable creatures they were when God left them, and that it was God, not their own valour, that gave the Canaanites and their land into their hands

5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men. for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them in the going down wherefore the hearts of the people melted, and became as water

About thirty and six men, a dear victory to them, where-by Israel was awakened, and reformed, and reconciled to their God and Saviour, and they hardened to their own ruin. In the going down, by which it seems it was a downhill way to Jericho, which was nearer Jordan. As water, soft and weak, and full of fluctuation and trembling.

6 ¶ And Joshua rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the Lord until the eventide, he and the elders of Israel, and put dust upon their heads.

Joshua rent his clothes in testimony of great sorrow, as Gen xxxviii 18. He fell to the earth in deep humiliation and fervent supplication. Until the eventide, continuing the whole day in fasting and prayer. Put dust upon their heads, as was usual in a confession and astonishment. 1 Sam iv 12, 2 Sam i 2, xiv 19. Joshua i 6, Micah i 10.

7 And Joshua said, Alas, O Lord God, wherefore hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!

These clauses though well intended, and offered to God only by way of expostulation and argument, yet do savour of human infirmity, and fall short of that reverence and modesty, and submission which he owed to God: and are mentioned as instances that the holy men of God were subject to like passions and infirmities with other men.

8 O Lord, what shall I say, when Israel turneth their backs before their enemies?

What shall I say in answer to the reproaches cast by our insulting enemies upon us, and upon thy name, Israel? God's own people, which he hath singled out of all nations for his own peculiar.

9 For the Canaanites, and all the inhabitant of the land shall hear of it, and shall environ us round, and cut off our name from the earth: and what wilt thou do unto thy great name?

Which will upon this occasion be blasphemed and charged with unbelief, unkindness, and unfaithfulness to their own people, and with inability to resist them, or to do thy people that good thou didst intend them. Compare Exod xxxii 12, Numb xiv 13. Deut xxxiii 26. Job ii 17.

10 ¶ And the Lord said unto Joshua, Get thee up, wherefore fliest thou thus upon thy face?

The business is not to be done by unactive supplication but by vigorous endeavours for reformation.

11 Israel hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them: for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

Israel, some crime of them is before our view. I have pressed my covenant i.e. broken the conditions of my covenant which I have commanded them, and they have promised to perform. As obedience to all my commands Exod xix 8. xxiv 7. whereof this was one, not to meddle with the accursed thing. Of the accursed thing which I charged them not to meddle with. And have also stolen, i.e. taken my portion which I had reserved. Josh vi 19. Dissembled, covered the act with deep dissimulation, and a real, not verbal, perjury of their innocence. Possibly Achan might be suspected, and being accused, had denied it, or was resolved to deny it. Put it even among their own stuff, converted it to their own use, and added obstinacy and resolution to the crime: thus he loads this sin with divers aggravations.

12 Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they were accursed: neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you.

Because they were accursed, as I warned and threatened them, Josh. vi 18, they have put themselves out of my protection and blessing, and therefore are liable to the same destruction which belongs to this accursed people.

13 Up, sanctify the people, and say, Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, for thus saith the Lord God of Israel, There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.

Sanctify yourselves, purify yourselves from that defilement which you have all in some sort contracted by this accursed fact, and prepare yourselves to appear before the Lord as it is most probable they were required to do, as imploring, and expecting the sentence of God for the discovery and punishment of the sin, and that the guilty person might hereby be awakened and terrified, and brought to a free and reasonable confession of his fault. And it is a marvellous thing that Achan did not on this occasion acknowledge his crime, but this is to be imputed to the heart-hardening power of sin, which makes men grow worse and worse, partly, to his pride, being loth to take to him self the shame of such a mischievous and infamous action, partly to his self-flattering and vain conceit, whereby he might think many others were guilty as well as he, and some of them might be taken, and he escape, and partly, to the just judgment of God, whereby he blinds and hardens sinners to their own ruin. See a like instance, Matt xxvi 21, 22, 25.

14 In the morning therefore ye shall be brought according to your tribes, and it shall be that the tribe which the Lord taketh shall come according to the families thereof, and the family which the Lord shall take shall come by households, and the household which the Lord shall take shall come man by man.

Which the Lord taketh which shall be discovered as detected guilty by the lot which is disposed by the Lord. Prov xvi 33, and which was to be cast in the Lord's presence before the ark. Of such use of lots, see 1 Sam xiv 41, 42. Josh i 7, Acts i 26.

15 And it shall be, that he that is taken with the accursed thing shall be burnt with fire, he and all that he hath, because he hath transgressed the covenant of the Lord, and because he hath wrought folly in Israel.

Burnt with fire as persons and things accursed were to be. See Numb xv 30, 35, Deut xiii 16. All that he hath his children and goods, as is noted, ver. 24, according to the law, Deut xiii 16. He hath wrought folly, sin is oft called in Scripture as Gen xxxiv. 7, Jude xv 6 &c., in opposition to the idle opinion of sinners who commonly esteem it to be their wisdom and interest. In Israel i.e. among the church and people of God, who had such excellent laws to direct them, and such an all-sufficient and gracious God to provide for them, without any such indirect and unworthy practices.

16 ¶ So Joshua rose up early in the morning, and brought Israel by their tribes, and the tribe of Judah was taken.

17 And he brought the family of Judah, and he took the family of the Zarahites, and he brought the family of the Zarahites man by man, and Zabdi was taken.

The family of Judah, either, 1 The tribe or people, as the word family sometimes signifies, as Judg xiii 2. Zabdi xii 13, Amos iii 1, Acts iii, 25, compared with Rom 7. Or, 2 The families, as ver 11, the singular number is 11 plural, the chief of each of their five families, Numb xxv 20, 21. Man by man, not every individual person, as is evident from ver 18, but every head of the several houses or lesser families of that greater family of the Zarahites, of which see 1 Chron ii 6.

18 And he brought his household man by man; and Achan, the son of Carni, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, was taken.

He, either Joshua, or Zabdi by Joshua's appointment.

19 And Joshua said unto Achan, My son, give, I pray thee, glory to the Lord God of Israel, and make confession unto him; and tell me now what thou hast done, hide it not from me.

He calls him my son, to show that this severe inquisition and sentence did not proceed from any hatred to his person, which he loved as a father doth his son, and as a prince ought to do each of his subjects. Give glory to the Lord God of Israel, as thou hast highly dishonoured him, now take the shame and blame to thyself and ascribe unto God the glory of his omniscience in knowing this sin, of his justice in punishing it in thee, and others for thy sake, of his omnipotency, which was obstructed by thee, and of his kindness and faithfulness to his people which was eclipsed by thy wickedness, all which will now be evident by thy sin confessed and punished.

20 And Achan answered Joshua, and said, Indeed I have sinned against the Lord God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done.

He seems to make a sincere and ingenuous confession and loads his sin with all just aggravations. Against the Lord, against his express command and just rights, and glorious attributes. The Lord God of Israel, the true God, who hath chosen me and all Israel to be the people of his peculiar love and care.

21 When I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them, and behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.

He accurately describes the progress of his sin which began at his eye which he permitted to gaze and fix upon them which inflamed his desire, and made him covet them, and that desire put him upon action, and made him take them, and having taken, resolve to keep them and to that end hide them in his tent. Babylonish garments were compassed with great art with divers colour, and of great price, as appears both from Scripture, Ezek xxiii 15 and from divers heathen authors. [See my Latin Synopsis.] Two hundred shekels, to wit in weight not in coin, for as yet they received and paid money by weight. I hid it, i. e. under the Babylonish garment, covered with it, or wrapt up in it.

22 ¶ So Joshua sent messengers, and they ran unto the tent, and, behold, it was hid in his tent, and the silver under it.

Joshua sent messengers that the truth of his confession might be evident and unquestionable, which some perditioners might think was forced from him. They ran partly longing to free themselves and all the people from the curse under which they lay, and partly that none of Achan's relations or others might get thither before him, and take away those things. It was hid, i. e. the parcel of things mentioned ver 21, 24.

23 And they took them out of the midst of the tent, and brought them unto Joshua, and unto all the children of Israel, and laid them out before the Lord.

Where Joshua and the elders continued yet in their assembly, waiting for the issue of this business.

24 And Joshua, and all Israel with him, took Achan the son of Zerah, and the silver, and the garment, and the wedge of gold, and his sons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that he had, and they brought them unto the valley of Achor.

His sons and his daughters, but this seems hard and unjust, and therefore forbidden by God himself, Deut xxiv 16. Answer 1. That law was given to men, not to God, who certainly hath a more absolute right and sovereignty over men than one man hath over another. 2. Their death was a debt they owed to nature and to their own sins, which debt God may require when he pleases, and he could not take it in more honourable and excellent circumstances than these, that the death of a very few in the beginning of a new empire, and of their settlement in the land might be useful to prevent the death of many thousands who took warning by this dreadful example, whom if the fear of God did not yet the love of their own and of their dear children's lives would, restrain from such dangerous and pernicious practices. 3. It is very probable they were conscious of the fact, as the Jewish doctors affirm. If it be pretended that some of them were infants the text doth not say so, but only calls them sons and daughters. And considering that Achan was an old man as is most probable because he was the fifth person from Judah (of which see on ver 1,) it seems most likely that the children were grown up, and so capable of knowing and concealing or discovering this fact. Nor doth it follow that they were not guilty because it is not said so, for it is apparent that in many circumstances are omitted in diverse historical relations in Scripture, which sometimes are supplied in other places. His oxen and his asses and his sheep which though not capable of sin nor of punishment properly so called, yet as they were made for man's use, so they are rightly destroyed for man's good, and being daily killed for our bodily food, it cannot seem strange to kill them for the instruction of our minds, that he who might learn the detestable and contagious nature of sin, which involves innocent creatures in its plague, and how much sorer punishments are reserved for man, who having a law given to him, and the excellent gift of reason and will to restrain him from the transgressions of it, his guilt must needs be unspeakably greater, and therefore his sufferings more severe and terrible. Further by this enumeration it appears that he had no colour of necessity to induce him to this fact, but was wholly excusable.

25 And Joshua said, Why hast thou troubled us? the Lord shall trouble thee this day. And all Israel stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire, after they had stoned them with stones.

Stoned him with stones and burned him with fire, which is easily understood, both out of the following words, and from God's command to do so, ver 15, which doubtless was here executed.

Quest How could both these deaths be inflicted upon them? Answer It seems they were stoned to death which was the punishment of such offenders, Lev xxiv 11. Numb xv 35 and not burned to death, and therefore the stoning only of Achan is mentioned here, and not his burning, and God would have then dead carcasses burned to show his utmost detestation of such persons as break forth into sins of such a public scandal and mischief. And for the burning of Achan, commanded ver 15, it seems not likely to be meant of his burning alive, because that burning is common to him, and all that he hath, as is there expressed, but of the burning of his dead carcass, and other like things, as the manner was with accursed things, Deut xiii 16.

26 And they raised over him a great heap of stones unto this day. So the Lord turned from the fierceness of his anger. Wherefore the name of that place was called,<sup>1</sup> The valley of || Achor, unto this day

A great heap of stones, as a monument of the sin and judgment here mentioned that others might be instructed and warned by the example, and as a brand of infamy, as Josh viii 29, 2 Sam xviii 17 The valley of Achor, or the valley of trouble, from the double trouble expressed ver 25

CHAP VIII

God puts new courage into Joshua, commands him to go and besiege Ai, promising he should take it 1, 2 The stratagem whereby it is taken, it is burnt, 3-22 The king is taken prisoner, the inhabitants are put to the sword, the cattle and goods spoiled, the king is hanged, 23-29 Joshua builds an altar, 30, offers thereon 31, writes the law on stones, 32 It and its blessings and curses are read before the people, 33-35

AND the LORD said unto Joshua, "I fear not, neither be thou dismayed: take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai: see, I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land

Take all the people of war with thee, partly to strengthen them against those fears which then but defeated had wrought in them, and partly that all of them might be put to work of this just spoil and thereby be encouraged to proceed in their work. The weak multitude were not to go, because they might have hindered them in the following stratagem, and it was but fit that the military men who run the greatest hazards, should have the precedence and privilege in the spoils

2 And thou shalt do to Ai and her king as thou didst unto Jericho and her king: only the spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves: lay thee an ambush for the city behind it

To Ai, i.e. the city and people of Ai As thou didst unto Jericho and her king, i.e. overcome and destroy them. This was enjoined, partly to chastise their past insolence and the triumphs and blasphemies which doubtless their success produced, and partly to revive the dread and terror which had been impressed upon the Canaanites by Jericho's ruin, and had been much abated by the late success of Ai, and their confidence and expectation of further and greater success much raised

3 ¶ So Joshua arose, and all the people of war, to go up against Ai: and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty men of valour, and sent them away by night

*To go up against Ai, i.e. to consider and conclude about this expedition of going against Ai, not as if all the people of war did actually go up, which was both unnecessary and burdensome, and might hinder their following design, but it seems to be suggested by Joshua, and all the council of war, that the thirty thousand men following should be selected for the enterprise. Part 1. The thirty thousand now mentioned. Or 2. Part of them, to wit such as were to lie in wait, is so most probable, both from the next verse, which limits it to those who were to lie in wait, and from ver 9 where what is here mentioned only by anticipation is actually put in execution, and it is said of them that were sent forth, that they went to lie in ambush, and did so, and these were only five thousand men, as is expressed, ver 12. And the only convenience of this exposition is, that the pronoun them is put without or before its antecedent, which is fit to be gathered out of the following words, which is not unusual in the Hebrew tongue, as plainly appears from Exod xiv 19, Numb xviii 9, xxiv 17, Psal lxxviii 1, cv 19, cxiv 2, Prov vii 8, xiv 26.*

4 And he commanded them, saying, Behold, ye shall lie in wait against the city, even behind the city: go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready

He commanded them, the same party last spoken of, ver 3, even the five thousand mentioned ver 12. This historical narration seems obscure and intricate, and at first view to make three parties one of thirty thousand, ver 3, one of five thousand ver 12, which may seem to be two several ambushes, and a third of all the people, ver 5, 11. But if it be more narrowly and considerably observed, it will appear that there are only two parties engaged in the taking of Ai, and but one ambush, as plainly appears by comparing ver 9 (which manifestly speaks of that party which is mentioned ver 3) with ver 12, which speaks only of five thousand, which is justly supposed to be a part of those thirty thousand named ver 3, and that part which was to lie in ambush, unless we will suppose that there were two ambushes, one of thirty thousand, and the other of five thousand, both lying in wait in the same quarter, even between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of Ai, the only place where the ambush lay, as is said both ver 9, and 12. 13 which seems absurd and incredible. And besides, in the execution of this command, there is mention but of one ambush ver 12-14, 19 and they are said to consist only of five thousand, ver 12, and they only take and burn the city, ver 19, so that the other supposed ambush of thirty thousand is perfectly vanished and lost, and did nothing in this work, which also is very improbable. And therefore that thirty thousand, ver 3, are the same who are called the people, and the people of war that were with Joshua, ver 5, 11, which is pitched on the north side of Ai, ver 11, 13 is the ambush did on the west side, but for any other side of the city, or a third party placed elsewhere about Ai, we read not one word, and therefore it may well be presumed there were no more employed to take it.

5 And I and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city: and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, that we will flee

Joshua and that shall be, for at present he sent them away ver 9, but he next morning followed them, and joined him to them ver 10, 11. He will flee, I and the twenty-five thousand with me.

6 (For they will come out after us) till we have drawn them from the city, for they will say, They flee before us, as at the first: therefore we will flee before them

7 Then ye shall rise up from the ambush, and seize upon the city: for the Lord your God will deliver it into your hand

Ye shall rise up from the ambush, to wit, upon the signal given, of which ver 18.

8 And it shall be, when ye have taken the city, that ye shall set the city on fire, according to the commandment of the Lord: shall ye do. ¶ See, I have commanded you

Ye shall set the city on fire, to wit, part of it as a sign to their brethren of their success, for the whole city was not burnt now, but afterwards, as is said ver 28.

9 ¶ Joshua therefore sent them forth, and they went to lie in ambush, and abode between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of Ai: but Joshua lodged that night among the people

Sent them forth, the same party designed by the pronoun them, ver 3 of which see the notes there. Among the people, Heb. that people to wit the people of war, i.e. they are called, ver 11, to wit, the main body of that host consisting of thirty thousand.

10 And Joshua rose up early in the morning, and numbered the people, and went up, he and the elders of Israel, before the people to Ai

The people, Heb that people, not all the people of Israel which was needless, and required more time than could now be spared, but the rest of that host of thirty thousand, whereof five thousand were sent away, and now the remainder are numbered, partly to see whether some of them had not withdrawn themselves, taking the advantage of the night, and of the design of laying an ambush, and partly that it might be evident that this work was done without any loss of men, and thereby they might be encouraged to trust in God, and to proceed vigorously and resolutely in their work. The elders of Israel, either 1 The military elders, the chief commanders of his army. But they seem to be included in the thirty thousand, ver 3, which are supposed to be furnished and led by their several commanders, and such persons are scarce ever called the elders of Israel. Or rather, 2 The chief magistrates and rulers of Israel under Joshua, who are commonly so called, and these, I suppose, went with Joshua and with the army, to take care that the cattle and the spoil of the city which was given by God to all Israel for a prey ver 27 might be justly and equally divided between those that went to battle, and the rest of the people, according to the example and precept, Numb xxxi 27, and that they who were present and assistant in the taking of that city, might not engross the whole to themselves, as is usual for soldiers in those cases to do.

11 <sup>b</sup> And all the people, even the people of war that were with him, went up, and drew nigh and came before the city, and pitched on the north side of Ai now there was a valley between them and Ai.

The people of war that were with him, to wit, the thirty thousand mentioned ver 3, or the most of them.

12 And he took about five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of the city.

And he took of men, but he had taken to wit, out of the said number of thirty thousand, for this is added by way of recapitulation and further explication of what is said in general, ver 9.

13 And when they had set the people, even all the host that was on the north of the city, and then liers in wait on the west of the city, Joshua went that night into the midst of the valley.

To wit, accompanied with a small part of the host now mentioned, i.e. very early in the morning, when it was yet dark as is said in a like case John vi 1, whence it is here called night though it was early in the morning as is ver 10, for it seems most probable that all was done in one night's space and in this manner. Joshua sends away the ambush by night, ver 3 and lodges that night with twenty-five thousand men, ver 9, not far from the city. But not able nor willing to sleep all night, he rises very early ver 10 and numbers his men, which by the help of the several officers was quickly done, and so immediately leads them towards Ai, and while it was yet duskish or night he goes into the midst of the valley ver 13, and when the day dawns he is discovered by the king and people of Ai who the reason rose up early to fight with them ver 13. Though others conceive this was the second night and so the ambush had lain hid a night and a day together. But then there might be danger of their being discovered. Although that danger may seem to be the less, because Ai might be shut up, that none might go out nor come in, but by order, and upon necessity, because of the madness of their enemies, as Jericho formerly was for the same reason Josh vi 1. Into the midst of the valley, which was near the city, thereby to allure them forth.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw it, that they hasted and rose up early, and the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain, but he wist not that there were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

All his people to wit all his men of war, for the rest were left in Ai, ver 16. At a time appointed, at a certain hour agreed upon between the king and people of Ai, and of Beth-el too, who were the confederates in this enterprise as it may seem from ver 17. Possibly they might appoint the same hour of the day on which they had fought against Israel with such good success, looking upon it as a lucky hour. Before the plain, i.e. towards or in sight of that plain or valley in which the Israelites were, that so they might put themselves in battle-array. He wist not that there were liers in ambush, the former success having made him more careless and secure, as is usual in such cases, God also blinding his mind, and insinuating him, as he useth to do with those which he intends to destroy.

15 And Joshua and all Israel made as if they were beaten before them, and fled by the way of the wilderness.

Made as if they were beaten before them, i.e. fled from them, as it were for fear of a second blow, and peradventure some of them might be wounded though none were killed and might make that the pretence of their fleeing away. The wilderness lay between Ai and Jericho, whether they now seemed to flee.

16 And all the people that were in Ai were called together to pursue after them and they pursued after Joshua, and were drawn away from the city.

All the people, to wit, all that were able to bear arms, for old men and children were unfit for the pursuit or flight, and that they were yet left, may seem from ver 21, 25.

17 And there was not a man left in Ai or Beth-el, that went not out after Israel and they left the city open, and pursued after Israel.

Not a man to wit fit for war. Beth-el, being a neighbouring city and encouraged by the former success had sent some forces to assist them, and now, upon notice sent to them of the flight of their common enemy or upon some other signal given which might easily be done, having been appointed beforehand, as is usual in such cases, all their men of war join with those of Ai in the pursuit.

18 And the Lord said unto Joshua, Stretch out the spear that is in thy hand toward Ai for I will give it into thine hand. And Joshua stretched out the spear that he had in his hand toward the city.

The spear, or thy banner, or there might be some banner in the end of his spear. This was prescribed and practised either, 1 For a sign to his host present with him, to stop their flight, and make head against the pursuers, or 2 For a signal to the liers in wait, as may seem from ver 19, who, though they were at some distance, might know this from persons whom they had set in some high and convenient places to observe Joshua's motion, and to give notice from one to another, and that speedily, as is common in such cases until it came to the whole ambush, or 3 As a mystical token of God's presence and assistance with them, and of their victory, or as a mean by God's appointment contributing to their good success, as the like posture of Moses lifting up his hand was, Exod xvi 11, 12, which may be the reason why he continued this posture till the enemies were all destroyed, ver 26, whereas if it had been a signal only, it was sufficient to do it for a little while. I know no reason why all these ends might not be joined together.

19 And the ambush arose quickly out of their place and they ran as soon as he had stretched out his hand and they entered into the city, and took it, and hasted and set the city on fire.

Not all of it as appears both from ver 28 and because then they had lost that prey which God had allowed them, but some part of it, enough to raise a smoke, and give notice to their brethren of their success.

Josh 20.

Eccl 9 12.

20 And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they saw, and, behold, the smoke of the city ascended up to heaven, and they had no power to flee this way or that way: and the people that fled to the wilderness turned back upon the pursuers.

No power or place, for so the Hebrew word is oft used as Numb ii 17, Neh vi 1, Job xxxvii 7, Psal civ 25, Isa xxi 18, Jer 5.

21 And when Joshua and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city ascended, then they turned again, and slew the men of Ai.

All Israel, i. e. all the Israelites there present, or all those who seemed to flee away before.

22 And the other issued out of the city against them, so they were in the midst of Israel, some on this side, and some on that side: and they smote them, so that they let none of them remain or escape.

The other, they who lay in ambush. So their late success was a real mischief to them as being the occasion of their total ruin.

23 And the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

Reserving him to a peculiar and more ignominious punishment for the terror of the other kings who were the chief causes of all that opposition and disturbance which Israel met with in gaining the possession of the Promised Land.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword until they were consumed, that all the Israelites returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

The inhabitants of it the men who through ignorance were misled for war and the women ver 25.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of Ai.

Not truly but falsely so called: who were now in Ai, either as content and settled inhabitants or as sojourners, and unless some came to them for their help such as being confederate with them were reckoned as one with them, for it is evident that the men of Bethel are included in this number ver 17 the Israelites who took this number being unable to distinguish who belonged to the one city, and who to the other.

26 For Joshua drew not his hand back, where-with he stretched out the spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

Either 1. He was not to fight with that hand. Or, 2. He kept his hand and spear in the same posture both stretched out and directed up as a sign both to encourage them and to direct them to go on in the work. See on ver 18.

27 Only the cattle and the spoil of that city Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the word of the Lord which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap for ever, even a desolation unto this day.

For ever, or for a long time as that word oft signifies, as Gen vi 3, Isa xlii 11 for that it was after some ages rebuilt may seem from Neh vi 1 unless that were another city built near the former there being some little difference in the name also.

29 And the king of Ai he hanged on a tree until eventide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcase down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raise thereon a great heap of stones, that remaineth unto this day.

He dealt more severely with the kings of Canaan than with the people, partly because the abominable wickedness of that people was not restrained and punished (as it should have been,) but countenanced and encouraged by their evil examples and administrations, and partly because they were the principal authors of the destruction of their own people by engaging them in an obstinate opposition against the Israelites. That they should take his carcase down from the tree, according to God's command in that case, Dent xxi 22-23. He chose the entering of the gate of the city either as most commodious, now especially when all the city within the gate was already turned into a heap of stones and rubbish, or because this was the usual place of judgment and therefore proper to bear the monument of God's just sentence against him, not without reflection upon that injustice which he had been guilty of in that place.

30 ¶ Then Joshua built an altar unto the Lord God of Israel in mount Ebal.

Then, to wit after the taking of Ai. For they were obliged to do this when they were brought over Jordan into the land of Canaan Dent xi 29 xxvii 2-3, which is not to be understood strictly as if it were to be done the same moment or day for it is manifest they were first to be circumcised and to eat the passover, which they did, and which was the work of some days, but as soon as they had opportunity to do it which was now when these two great frontier cities were taken and destroyed, and thereby the coast cleared and the bordering people under great consternation and confusion that all the Israelites might come much thither. And indeed this work was fit to be done as soon as might be that thereby they might renew their covenant with and profess their subjection to, that God by whose help alone they could expect success in their great and difficult enterprise. Built an altar, to wit for the offering of sacrifices, as appears from the following verse and from Dent xviii 5-7. In Mount Ebal, Why not on Mount Gerizim also? There Because God's altar was to be but in one place Dent xii 13, 14, and this place was appointed to be Mount Ebal Dent xxvii 1-5, which also seem most proper for it, that in that place where the curses of the law were denounced against sinners there might also be the tokens and means of grace and peace and reconciliation with God for the removing of the curses and the procuring of God's blessing unto sinners.

31 As Moses the servant of the Lord commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, an altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron: and they offered thereon burnt offerings unto the Lord, and sacrificed peace offerings.

32 ¶ And he wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

Not upon the stones of the altar, which were to be rough and unpolished, ver 31 but upon other stones, smooth and plastered as is manifest from Dent xxvii 2. A copy of the law of Moses, not certainly the whole five books of Moses, for what stones and time would have sufficed for this: nor the blessings and the curses here following, which never are nor can without great impropriety be called the law of Moses, seeing they presuppose the law, and the observance or transgression thereof, to which they belong only as rewards of the one, and punishments of the other, but the most weighty and substantial parts of the law, as may be gathered from the laws which are mentioned, and to the violators whereof the curses are applied, Deut xxvii 15, &c., and especially the law of the ten commandments.

33 And all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark and on that side before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, as well the stranger, as he that was born among them, half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount Ebal, as Moses the servant of the Lord had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

All Israel, i.e. the whole congregation, old and young male and female, as it follows, ver 33. On this side the ark, and on that side i.e. some on one side of it and some on the other. Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal were in the tribe of Ephraim not far from Shechem, as appears both from Scripture, Deut xi 29, 30, xxvii 12, Judg ix 7 and from other authors who lived in those parts as Josephus and the Jewish doctors. That they should bless or curse which is easily understood out of the following verse, and from Deut xxvii 13, &c.

34 And afterward he read all the words of the law, the blessings and curses, according to all that is written in the book of the law.

Afterward, after the altar was built, and the stone plastered and writ upon. He read i.e. he commanded the priests or Levites to read, Deut xxvii 11. The blessings and curses, which words come in not by way of explanation, as if the words of the law were nothing else besides the blessings and curses, but by way of addition to note that these were read over and above the words of the law.

It saith not according to all that was written upon those stones but in the book of the law which shows the mistake of them that think the same things were both read and written upon these stones.

35 There was not a word of all that Moses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel, with the women and the little ones, and the strangers that were conversant among them.

There was not a word which Joshua read not, therefore he read not the blessings and curses only, as some think. But the whole law, as the manner was when all Israel men and women, were assembled together, as we read, Deut xxx 10-12. That were conversant among them i.e. who were proselytes, for no others can be supposed to be with them at this time.

CHAP. IX.

The kings of Canaan hear of Joshua's exploits, consult together, and conclude to fight against him. 1, 2. The Gibeonites, feigning themselves to be of a far country, obtain a league. 3-15. The craft is discovered, the promise which was confirmed with an oath remains firm. 16-20. But for a punishment they are condemned to perpetual slavery. 21-27.

AND it came to pass, when all the kings which were on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coasts of the great sea over against Lebanon, the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof.

2 That they gathered themselves together, to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one accord.

They gathered themselves together, not actually as the following history shows, but they entered into a league or confederation to do this.

3 ¶ And when the inhabitants of Gibeon heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai,

On, but taken the inhabitants, for he shows that these took another and a wiser course. Gibeon, a great and royal city of the Hivites, Josh x 2, xi 19.

4 They did work wisely, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors, and took old sacks upon their asses, and wine bottles, old, and rent, and bound up.

Ambassadors, sent from a far country, as they say ver 6.

5 And old shoes and clouted upon their feet, and old garments upon them, and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy.

6 And they went to Joshua unto the camp at Gilgal, and said unto him, and to the men of Israel, We be come from a far country: now therefore make ye a league with us.

Gilgal the place of their head quarters. To the men of Israel to wit those who used to meet in council with Joshua to whom it belonged to make leagues, as it here follows, even the princes of the congregation, not the common people as appears both from ver 15, 18, 19, 21 and from common usage of all ambassadors, who generally deliver their message to and treat with princes not people. And the Hebrew word ish here used sometimes notes men of eminency and dignity. Now therefore, because we are not of this people whom as we are informed you are obliged utterly to destroy that which appeared sufficiently by the Israelites' practice in destroying the Amorites beyond Jordan and the people of Jericho and Ai, without any allowance for sex or age and by common rumour and the report of the Israelites and other persons who dwell among them or had converse with them as Rahab and all her kindred, and by the nature of the thing, because they were to possess that whole land, and were not mix themselves with the people of it.

7 And the men of Israel said unto the Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us, and how shall we make a league with you?

The Hivites i.e. the Gibeonites who were Hivites Josh xi 19. Among us i.e. in this land and so are of that people with whom we are forbidden to make any league or covenant Exod xxiii 32, 33, Deut vii 2, xi 15, 16.

8 And they said unto Joshua, We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye? and from whence come ye?

We are thy servants, we desire a league with you upon your own terms, we are ready to accept of any conditions. Who are ye? and from whence come ye? for this free and general confession of theirs gave Joshua just cause to suspect that they were of the cursed Canaanites.

9 And they said unto him, I from a very far country thy servants are come because of the name of the Lord thy God for we have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt,

Because of the name of the Lord, being moved thereto by the report of his great and glorious nature and works so they gave them hopes that they would embrace their religion. All that he did in Egypt they cunningly mention these things only which were done some time since, and say nothing of the dividing of Jordan nor of the destruction of Jericho and Ai, as if they lived so far off that the fame of those things had not yet reached them.

10 And all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond

Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbon, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashteroth

11 Wherefore our elders and all the inhabitants of our country spake to us, saying, Take victuals † with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants therefore now make ye a league with us

12 This our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you, but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy

13 And these bottles of wine, which we filled, were new, and, behold, they be rent and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey

14 And ¶ the men took of their victuals, and asked not counsel at the mouth of the Lord

The men, i. e. the princes, as before ver 6 Took of their victuals, not from their want or any desire they could have to such unpleasant and unwholesome food: nor in a ceremony usual in making leagues for that was not now done, but in the next verse, but that they might examine the truth of what they said. Asked not counsel at the mouth of the Lord, as they ought to have done upon all such weighty and doubtful occasions. So they are accused of rashness and neglect of their duty. For though it is probable if God had been consulted he would have consented to the sparing of the Gibeonites, yet it should have been done with more caution and an obligation left upon them to embrace the true religion which here was omitted.

15 And Joshua made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live: and the princes of the congregation sware unto them

So let them live, i. e. that they would not destroy them. Some question whether this league was lawful and obliging because it is contrary to a positive and precedent law of God by which they were enjoined to make no peace with them but utterly to destroy them Exod xxxii 12 xxxiv 12 &c. But this law seems to admit of some exception and favourable interpretation and that taken from the reason and soul of that law which was this that the Israelites might not be tainted with their idolatry and other abominations by cohabitation with them: and therefore when that reason ceased i. e. if they were willing to relinquish their possessions and idolatry and other wickedness i. e. to embrace the true religion they might be spared. And though this law was delivered in general terms to cause God to know that the Israelites could be most prompt in that kind by sparing those whom they should destroy, yet that it was to be understood with an exception of penitents and true converts must easily be gathered both from the example of Rahab and from the tenor of Divine threatenings which though absolutely delivered allow of this exception as appears from Jer xxiii 7, 8, Jonah iii, iv and from the great kindness and favour which God hath manifested unto all true penitents in delivering them from evil their due to them and inflicting upon others: which kindness of God we also are obliged to imitate by virtue of that natural and moral law of God implanted in us and revealed to us to which such positive commands as this of killing the Canaanites must give place. And that this league was lawful and obliging may seem probable. 1 Because from it and all the princes upon the review concluded it so to be and spake it in a cordingly, ver 19, 20, 22, 23. 2 Because God punished the violation of it long after, 2 Sam xxi 1. 3 Because God is said to have hidened the hearts of an other king not to seek peace with Israel that so he might utterly destroy them, Josh xi 19, 20, which seems to imply that their utter destruction did not necessarily come upon them by virtue of any absolute and peremptory command of God to destroy them, but by their own obstinate hardness, whereby they neglected and refused to make peace with the Israelites. Object This league was grounded upon a deceit and error of the persons, which also they had entered a caution against ver 7. Answer Their supposition that they were Canaanites was indeed a part of the foregoing discourse ver 7, and the Israelites rested satisfied with their answer and believed they were not, and so entered into the league: but that league was absolute, not suspended upon that or any other condition, and the error was not about the persons, but about the country and people to which they belonged, which was not material to this contract, no more than it is to a contract of marriage, that the one person believed the other to be of another country or family than indeed they were.

16 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbours and that they dwelt among them

At the end of three days, i. e. at the last of them, or upon the third day as it is said ver 17, so this phrase is else where used, as Deut xiv 28, xxxi 10. Or it may be properly understood that after three days they heard this, and on the day after they heard this, they came to their cities as is said ver 17.

17 And the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were Gibeon, and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and Kithi-jearim

Cities which were subject to Gibeon which was the royal city Josh x 2.

18 And the children of Israel smote them not ¶ because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the Lord God of Israel. And all the congregation murmured against the princes

Partly from that perverseness which is in people to censure the actions of their rulers: partly because they might think the princes by their rashness had brought them into a snare, that they could neither kill them for fear of the oath nor spare them for fear of God's command to the contrary: and partly for their desire of the possession and spoil of these cities of which they thought themselves hereby deprived.

19 But all the princes sware unto all the congregation. We have sworn unto them by the Lord God of Israel: now therefore we may not touch them

They plead not the lawfulness or the prudence of their action but only the obligation of an oath of which though it was procured by fraud, they perceived the people sufficiently sensible. We may not touch them, i. e. not hurt them, as that word is oft used as Gen xxi 11, Psal cxxv 5, or not spare them, as is said, ver 18.

20 This we will do to them, we will even let them live, lest wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we sware unto them

21 And the princes said unto them, Let them live, but let them be hewers of wood and drawers of water unto all the congregation, as the princes had promised them

i. e. Let them be public servants, and employed in the meanest offices and drudgeries, (such as this was, this kind being put for all the rest, as it is Deut xxix 11) for the use and benefit of the congregation, to do this partly for the sacrifices and services of the house of God as is expressed, ver 23 which otherwise the Israelites themselves must have done, partly for the service of the camp or body of the people and sometimes upon occasion even to particular Israelites, whence they are made bond-men, which is mentioned as a thing distinct from their service in the house of God, ver 23. And so they are in effect stripped of all their possessions whereby the main ground of the people's quarrel was taken away. As the princes had promised them, or, because of seeing that (as the Hebrew word sometimes signifies) the princes (i. e. we ourselves), they speak of themselves in the third person which is very frequent in the Hebrew language) had promised it to them, to wit, that they should live, and confirmed their promise by an oath so the princes speaking here to the people allege the promise of oath of the princes when they met among themselves, and apart from the people. And this change of persons may possibly arise from hence because some of the princes who were present in the assembly of the princes might now be absent upon some occasion. And this clause relates not to the next words, which are fully enclosed within a parenthesis, but to the foregoing clause let them live, because the princes have promised them their lives.

22 ¶ And Joshua called for them and he spake unto them, saying Wherefore have ye beguiled us, saying, "We are very far from you; when ye dwell among us?"

23 Now therefore ye are <sup>1</sup> cursed, and there shall none of you be freed from being bondmen, and <sup>2</sup> hewers of wood and drawers of water for the house of my God.

Ye are cursed, you shall not escape the curse of God, which by Divine sentence belongs to all the Canaanites who are a people devoted by God to ruin but only change the quality of it, you shall feel that curse of bondage and servitude, which is proper to your race by virtue of that ancient decree, Gen. ix. 25, you shall live indeed, but in a poor, vile, and miserable condition. There shall none of you be freed from being bond men, the slavery which is upon you shall be entailed to your posterity. Hewers of wood and drawers of water for the house of my God this only service they mention here, because it was their principal and most durable servitude, being first in the tabernacle, and then in the temple, whence they were called Nethinims 1 Chron. ix. 2, 17; 12; 43, whereas their servitude to the whole congregation would in a great measure cease when the Israelites were dispersed to their several habitations.

24 And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how that the Lord thy God <sup>1</sup> commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you; therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing.

25 And now, behold, we are in thine hand as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do.

We are in thine hand, i. e. in thy power to use as thou wilt. We refer ourselves to thee and to thy own pity, and piety, and faithfulness to thy word and oath, if thou wilt destroy thy humble suppliants, we submit.

26 And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not.

So as was said ver 23, and so is here follows.

27 And Joshua made them that day <sup>1</sup> hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation, and for the altar of the Lord, even unto this day, in the place which he should choose.

By which it appears that they were not only to do this service in God's house, but upon all other occasions, as the congregation needed or required their help.

CHAP. X.

Five of the kings of Canaan, afraid of Joshua, are angry with the Gibeonites, and wage war against them, they send to Joshua for succour, 1-5. He rescues them, 6-10. God casts down hail-stones upon the enemy, 11. Joshua prays to God, and commands the sun to stand still which it does for the space of a day, 12-15. The five kings hide themselves in caves, where Joshua causeth them to be shut up, afterwards to be brought forth, scornfully used, and hanged, and thrown into a cave by Makkedah, 16-27. This place taken, the king, city, and all therein are burnt, 28. Joshua doth the same to Libnah and Lachish, 29-32. To Gezer, Eglon, Hebron, Debir, and all the land, 33-42. Joshua returns to Gilgal, 43.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedec king of Jerusalem had heard how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it as he had done to Jericho and her king, so he had done to Ai and her king and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them.

1. ¶ When conversant with them had yielded themselves to their disposal submitted themselves to their laws, had mingled interests with them.

2 That they feared greatly, because Gibeon was a great city, as one of the royal cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

They feared i. e. he and his people, the king being spoken of ver 1, as a public person representing all his people. Or, he and the following kings, ver 3. But this fear is mentioned ver 2 as the cause why he sent to those kings. As one of the royal cities, either, 1. Itally a royal city the Hebrew participle caph oft signifying the truth of a thing as Hos. iv. 1 v. 10 and oft elsewhere. Or, 2. I quid to one of the royal cities, though it had no king but seems to be governed or tyrannically by their elders, Josh. ix. 11.

3 Wherefore Adoni-zedec king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Iaphia king of Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

He sent, either because he was superior to them in power or dignity or because he was nearest the danger, and most forward in the work.

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon for it hath made peace with Joshua and with the children of Israel.

5 Therefore the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon, and made war against it.

Amorites, this name being here taken largely or generally for any of the Canaanites, as is frequent, for, to speak strictly, the citizens of Hebron, here mentioned, ver 3 were Hittites: thus the Gileonites, who were Hittites, Josh. xi. 19, are called Amorites, 2 Sam. xxi. 2. It is reasonably supposed that the Amorites, being numerous and victorious beyond Jordan did pour forth colonies or forces into the land of Canaan and there subdued divers places, and so communicated their name to all the rest.

6 ¶ And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua to the camp to Gilgal, saying, Slack not thy hand from thy servants, come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us for all the kings of the Amorites that dwell in the mountains are gathered together against us

The men of Gibeon sent or had sent, when their enemies were drawn towards them which they could easily learn. Slack not thy hand, do not neglect nor delay to help us. From thy servants, whom thou art obliged to protect both in duty, as thou art our master and ruler, and by thy own interest, we being part of thy possessions, and in ingenuity, because we have given our selves to thee, and put ourselves under thy protection. In the mountains, in the mountainous country.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, <sup>heb # 1</sup> and <sup>1</sup>all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

Having no doubt asked advice of God first, which is implied by the answer God gives to him ver 5. And all the mighty men of war, or that is is this participle is oft used, as hath been noted before. So it seems put here by way of explanation and restriction, having said all the people of war, he now adds even all the mighty men &c., i. e. an army of the most valiant men picked out from the rest for it is not probable either that he would take so many hundred thousands with him, which would have hindered one another, or that he would leave the camp without an army to defend it.

8 ¶ And the Lord said unto Joshua. Fear them not for I have delivered them into thine hand, <sup>1</sup>there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all night.

Though assisted by God of the victory, yet he useth all prudent means, and surpriseth them. It is not said that he went from Gilgal to Gibeon in a night's space, but only that he travelled all night, unto which you may add part either of the fore going or of the following day.

10 And the Lord discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased it along the way that goeth up to Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah, and unto Makkedah.

Slew them, or he slew them, either God or Israel, for God's work is described ver 11. At Gibeon, Heb in Gibeon, not in the city, but in the territory belonging to it, as Joshua is said to be in Jericho Josh x 1.

11 And it came to pass as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the Lord cast down great stones from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died: they were men, which died with hailstones, as in they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

Great stones, i. e. the stones of extraordinary greatness and hardness cast down with that ceremony as to hit the Canaanites and their persecutors the Israelites, and with that force as to kill them. Josephus shews that thunder and lightning were mixed with the hail, which may seem probable from Hab in 11.

12 ¶ Then spake Joshua to the Lord in the day when the Lord delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel. Sun stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.

Joshua spake to the Lord to wit in way of petition for this miracle being moved to be it out of zeal to destroy God's enemies, and directed to it by the motion of God's Spirit, and receiving a victorious answer, and being filled with holy confidence of the success, he speaks the following words to the people, that they might be witnesses of it.

In the sight of Israel, i. e. in the presence and audience of Israel, seeing being sometimes put for hearing, as Gen. xii 1, compared with Acts vi 12; although these words may seem rather to be joined with the following, thus In the sight of Israel stand still, O sun &c., which sense the Hebrew accents favour. Upon Gibeon, i. e. over and above against Gibeon, i. e. in that place and posture in which now it stands towards and looks upon Gibeon. Let it not go down lower, and by degrees, out of the sight of Gibeon. It may seem that the sun was declining, and Joshua perceiving that his work was great and long, and his time but short, begs of God the lengthening out of the day, and that the sun and moon might stop their course, and keep the place in which they now were. In the valley, or, upon the valley, as before upon Gibeon, the preposition being the same there and here. Ajalon, either, 1 That Ajalon which was in the trib of Zebulun Judg xii 12, northward from Gibeon. Or rather 2 That Ajalon which was in the tribe of Dan Josh xix 12, Judg i 35, westward from Gibeon, For, 1 This was nearer Gibeon than the other. 2 This was most agreeable to the course of the sun and moon, which is from east to west. 3 This way the battle went, from Gibeon westward to Ajalon, and so further westward even to Jericho ver 31. And he mentions two places, Gibeon and Ajalon, not as if the sun stood over the one, and the moon over the other, which is absurd and ridiculous to affirm, especially these places being so near the one to the other, but partly to vary the phrase, as is common in poetical passages, partly because he was in his march in the pursuit of his enemies to pass from Gibeon to Ajalon, and he begs that he may have the help and benefit of longer light to pursue them, and to that end that the sun might stand till and the moon also, not that he needed the moon's light when he had the sun's, but because it was fit either that both the sun and moon should go, or that both should stand still, to prevent disorder and confusion in the heavenly bodies.

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. <sup>1</sup>It is not thus written in the book of Jasher? So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day.

Stood still, Heb was silent, i. e. still as this phrase is commonly used as 1 Sam xiv 9, Psal iv 4, Jonah 12, the cessation of the tongue's motion being put synecdochically for the cessation of any other motion or action. Until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies, i. e. till they had utterly destroyed them, as is mentioned in the following chapter. The book of Jasher, either of a man so called, or of the righteous or upright, wherein possibly the memorable actions of worthy men were recorded, and this more of the rest. And this book was written and published before Joshua wrote his, and so is fitly alleged here. But this as well as some few other historical books, is lost, not being canonical book, and therefore not preserved by the Jews with the same care as they were. So the sun stood still, here is no mention of the moon, because the sun's standing was the only thing which Joshua desired and needed, and the moon's standing he desired only by accident, to prevent irregularity in the motions of those celestial lights. Some take this to be but a poetical phrase and relation of the victory, that Joshua did so many and such great things in that day as if the sun and moon had stood still and given him longer time for it. But the frequent repetition and magnificent declaration of this wonder manifestly confutes that fancy. That the sun and moon did really stand still is affirmed Hab in 11, Sirach xlvi 5, 6. And if it seem strange to any one that so wonderful a work, observed by the whole world that there was should not be mentioned in any heathen writers, he must needs be satisfied if he considers that it is confessed by the generality of writers, heathens and others that there is no certain history or monument in heathen authors of any thing done before the Trojan wars, which was a thousand years after Joshua's time, and that all time before that is called by the heathen's the unexamined unknown, or obscure time. In the midst of heaven, not mathematically, in the very meridian or middle part of that hemisphere, but morally, and with the consideration whereof seems to have given Joshua occasion for his desire About a whole day, i. e. for the space of a whole day. Understand an artificial day, between sun-rising and sun-setting, for that was the day which Joshua needed and desired, a day to give him light for his work.

14 And there was no day like that before it or after it, that the Lord hearkened unto the voice of a man for the Lord fought for Israel.

There was no day like that to wit in those parts of the world in which he here speaks, and about which the comparison is here made. vain therefore is that objection that the days are longer near the northern and southern poles, where they are constantly longer at certain seasons, and that by the order of nature, whereas the length of this day was purely contingent and granted by God in answer to Joshua's prayer, as is here added. Object In Hezekiah's time, and at his prayer, there was a day which may seem to have been longer, for the sun went back ten degrees in ten hours, and then returned again ten degrees in ten hours, and so it was twenty hours longer than a common day, and so longer than this. Answer It is not certain either that each degree designed an hour, and not rather half an hour, or a quarter as others think, or that the sun returned those ten degrees as slowly as he went down before or after. Besides it was now near summer solstice, when the day was longest, and about fourteen hours, and that being doubled, the artificial day was twenty-eight hours, and because there is not the least evidence that Hezekiah's day was long, but rather of the contrary, it is much more reasonable to believe this Scripture assertion, than to deny or question upon mere suppositions or idle conjectures. Hearkened unto the voice of a man to wit in such a manner to alter the course of nature, and of the heavenly bodies, that a man might have more time to pursue and destroy his enemies. The Lord fought for Israel this is added as the reason why God was so ready to answer Joshua's petition herein, because he was engaged and resolved to fight for Israel and that in a more than ordinary manner.

15 ¶ And Joshua returned and all Israel with him unto the camp to Gilgal.

Not immediately, or upon the same day, but after he had dispatched the matter which here follows, as appears by ver. 43 where the very same words are repeated to show that it was the meaning of them. And they are put here to close the general discourse of the fight which began ver. 10 and ends here, which being done, he particularly describes some remarkable passages, and closes them with the same words.

16 But these five kings fled, and hid themselves in a cave at Makkedah.

The five kings named above ver. 3. In a cave is a place of most secrecy or security, but there is no escaping the eye or hand of God, who here brought them into that of their own making. At Makkedah, Heb. in Malkayah, i. e. in the city for that was not yet taken. It in the territory of it, as in Gibeon ver. 10.

17 And it was told Joshua, saying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah.

18 And Joshua said, Roll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them.

19 And stay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and smite the hindmost of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the Lord your God hath delivered them into your hand.

Stay ye not, lose not your opportunity by your sloth or negligence. The hindmost of them, their reward, all whom you can overtake. To enter into their cities, where by they will recover their strength and renew the war. The Lord hath delivered them into your hand, your work will be easy, God hath already done the work to your hands.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

i. e. Joshua by the children of Israel, or the children of Israel, i. e. a party of them, by the command, direction, and encouragement of Joshua, for Joshua himself went not with them, but abode in the siege before Makkedah, ver. 21.

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: none moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

To the camp, to the body of the army which were encamped there with Joshua to besiege that place. None moved his tongue not so much as it is expressed, Exod. xi. 7 Not only their men of war could not find their hands, but they were all so confounded that they could not move their tongues in way of insultation and reproach as doubtless they did when the Israelites were reproached and smitten at Ai, but now they were silenced as well as conquered, they durst no more provoke nor injure the Israelites.

22 Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

23 And they did so, and brought forth those five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Lachish, and the king of Gibeon.

24 And it came to pass, when they brought out those kings unto Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war which went with him, Come near, put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them.

Put your feet upon the necks of the kings this did not from pride and contempt of their dignity in itself, but partly as a punishment for their impious rebellion against their overlord, partly, in punishment of that curse of servility due to all this people Gen. ix. 25 partly as a token to assure his captains that God would subdue the proudest of them all under their feet, and partly, to oblige and teach his people severely to execute the judgment of God upon them and not to spare any of them either out of foolish pity, or out of respect to their dignity, as Saul afterwards spared Agag to his own ruin.

25 And Joshua said unto them, Fear not, nor be dismayed, be strong and of good courage: for thus shall the Lord do to all your enemies against whom ye fight.

26 And afterward Joshua smote them, and slew them, and hanged them on five trees: and they were hanging upon the trees until the evening.

He hanged them, after they were dead, as a brand of infamy and for the terror and instruction of others.

27 And it came to pass at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and cast them into the cave where in they had been hid, and laid great stones in the cave's mouth, which remain until this very day.

Laid great stones in the cave's mouth, that neither wild beasts could come in to devour them nor any of their people to give them honourable burial.

28 ¶ And that day Joshua took Makkedah, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof he utterly destroyed, them, and all the souls that were therein he let none remain and he did to the king of Makkedah<sup>a</sup> as he did unto the king of Jericho

That day, on which the sun stood still or on which the five kings were hanged. Not is it strange that so much work was done and place so far distant taken in one day, when the day was so long and the Canaanites struck with such a terror. The king of Jericho was hanged or otherwise killed, as appears from Josh vi 2

29 Then Joshua passed from Makkedah and all Israel with him, unto Libnah, and fought against Libnah

All Israel to wit, who were with him in this expedition. Libnah a city of Judah, Josh xv 42

30 And the Lord delivered it also, and the king thereof into the hand of Israel, and he smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein, he let none remain in it but did unto the king thereof as he did unto the king of Jericho

All the souls, i. e. the human souls, for all the cattle they had for a prey

31 ¶ And Joshua passed from Libnah, and all Israel with him, with Iachish, and encamped against it and fought against it

32 And the Lord delivered Iachish into the hand of Israel, which took it on the second day and smote it with the edge of the sword and all the souls that were therein, according to all that he had done to Libnah

On the second day either the day after he first taking of the place or after the taking of Makkedah or Libnah

33 ¶ Then Horam king of Gath came up to help Iachish, and Joshua smote him and his people until he had left him none remaining

Gath either that in Ephraim of which Josh xvi 5, Jud. i 29 but that seems too remote from the other place or rather that in Judah which was near Iachish 1 Chron. xiv 16 whose king therefore was more capable, and more obliged to help them for his own sake

34 And from Iachish Joshua passed unto Iglon and all Israel with him and they encamped against it and fought against it

Iglon a city of Judah Josh xv 39

35 And they took it on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed that day according to all that he had done to Iachish

On that day on which they first attempted it

36 And Joshua went up from Iglon, and all Israel with him, unto Hebron<sup>a</sup> and they fought against it

Judg 1 10

Which though they took and killed all its inhabitants yet they did not keep it and therefore when Joshua and his army had forsaken it and were returned to Gilgal it seems the Gittites and other Canaanites being driven away from their former seats planted and fortified them selves there, which made it necessary for Caleb to take it a second time as is recorded Josh xv 14 Jud. i 10 On this is the same day and the same conquest of Hebron, which is here generally related and afterwards repeated and more particularly described Josh xv 13 14

37 And they took it and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and all the souls that were therein he left none remaining according to all that he had done to Iglon, but destroyed it utterly, and all the souls that were therein

The king thereof; either him mentioned before ver 23 whose death is here repeated in this account of the general destruction of all the inhabitants of that place, or his heir or successor. All the cities thereof which were subject to its jurisdiction, this being, it seems, a royal city, as Gibeon was, ver 2, and having cities under it as that had, Josh ix 17

38 ¶ And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, to Debir, and fought against it

He is said to return thither, not as if he had been there before, but because having gone as far westward and southward as he thought fit, even as far as Gaza ver 11, he now returned towards Gilgal, which lay northward and eastward from him, and in his return fell upon Debir see on Josh xv 15

39 And he took it, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and they smote them with the edge of the sword, and utterly destroyed all the souls that were therein he left none remaining as he had done to Hebron, so he did to Debir, and to the king thereof, as he had done also to Libnah, and to her king

40 ¶ So Joshua smote all the country of the hills, and of the south and of the vale, and of the springs, and all their kings he left none remaining, but utterly destroyed all that breathed, as the Lord God of Israel<sup>a</sup> commanded

All that breathed i. e. all mankind, by a synecdoche for they received the cattle for their own use. As the Lord God of Israel commanded this is added for the vindication of the Israelites whom God would not have to suffer in their reputation for executing his command, and therefore he acquits them of that imputable hatred and heinous cruelty which they might be thought guilty of and ascribes it to himself and his own just indignation against this most wicked people

41 And Joshua smote them from Kadish-barnea even unto<sup>a</sup> Gaza, and all the country of Goshen even unto Gibeon

Kadish-barnea lay in the south of Canaan Numh xxxv 1 Deut i 19, Josh xv 3. Gaza was in the south-west of Canaan. So he here signifies that Joshua did in this expedition subdue all those parts which lay south and west from Gilgal. Goshen, not that Goshen in Egypt but an other in Judah Josh xi 16, xv 51

42 And all these kings and their land did Joshua take at one time, because the Lord God of Israel fought for Israel

43 And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal

CHAP XI

The other kings and cities of Canaan gather themselves together to fight against Israel 1-5. God encourages Joshua promising him victory 6. The Canaanites destroyed, their cities taken, Hazor burnt, the Anakims cut off, 7-21, those in Gaza, Gath, and Ashdod accepted, 22, 23

AND it came to pass, when Jabin king of Hazor had heard those things, that he sent to Jobab king of Madon, and to the king of Shimron, and to the king of Achshaph,

Hazor, the chief city of all those parts, ver 10. He heard those things this was a remarkable instance of the wisdom and goodness of Divine Providence, which governed the minds and hearts of the Canaanites that they were not all united under one king, but divided among many petty kings and next, that these did not all unanimously join their counsels and forces together to oppose the Israelites at their first entrance, which their own wisdom and interest obliged them to do, but quietly suffered the destruction of their brethren, thereby preparing the way for their own Shimron, called Shimron-meron, Josh xii 20 Achshaph, a place in the tribe of Asher the furthest part of the land toward the north and west

2 And to the kings that were on the north of the mountains, and of the plains south of Chinneroth, and in the valley, and in the borders <sup>d</sup> of Dor on the west,

On the north of the mountains Heb on the north (which may be the general designation of all the particular places following, that they were in the northern parts of Canaan, as those mentioned Josh x were in the southern parts) on the mountain, either in or near the famous mountain of Lebanon, called the mountain by way of eminency, or in the mountainous country South of Chinneroth Heb in the plain lying southward from Chinneroth or the lake of Genesareth See Deut in 17, Luke v 1 Dor, a place upon the coast of the midland sea

3 And to the Canaanite on the east and on the west, and to the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Jebusite in the mountains, and to the Hivite under Hermion in the land of Mizpeh

The Canaanites properly so called lived part of them on the east near Jordan, and part on the west near the sea, and both are here united The Hivite under Hermion that dwelt under Mount Hermion in the north of Canaan, whereby they are distinguished from the Hivites who lived in Gibeon, of which before Mizpeh, that Mizpeh which was in the northern part of Gilead, of which Gen xxxi 19, Judg xi 29 But there were other cities called by that name which signifying a watching-place, might be easily applied to several places of good prospect Besides this there is one Mizpeh of Judah Josh xv 38, another of Benjamin, Josh xviii 26 a third in Moab, 1 Sam xxi 3

4 And they went out, they and all their hosts with them, much people, even as the sand that is upon the sea shore in multitude, with horses and chariots very many

5 And when all these kings were met together, they came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel

The waters of Merom, a lake made by the river Tana in the northern part of it which was in the territory of the king of Shimron, or Shimron-meron and near Hazor, Jabun's royal city, and almost in the middle of these confederate kings

6 ¶ And the Lord said unto Joshua, Be not afraid because of them: for to-morrow about this time will I deliver them up all slain before Israel: thou shalt hough their horses, and burn their chariots with fire

Though their horses, i e cut their hinders, that they may be unfit for war For God forbide them to have or keep many horses, Deut xvii 16, now especially, that they might not trust to their horses, as men are apt to do, nor distrust God for want of so necessary a help in battle, nor ascribe the conquest of the land to their own strength, but wholly to God, by whose power alone a company of raw and unexperienced footmen were able to subdue so potent a people, which besides their great numbers, and giants, and walled cities, had the advantage of many thousands of horses and chariots

7 So Joshua came, and all the people of war with him, against them by the waters of Merom suddenly, and they fell upon them

When they least expected them, intending there to refresh, and prepare, and order themselves for the offensive, war which they designed

8 And the Lord delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them unto great Zidon, and unto Mizrephoth-maim, and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward, and they smote them, until they left them none remaining

Zidon, a great and famous city in the north-west part of Canaan, and upon the sea Mizrephoth maim a place not far from Zidon, supposed to be so called from the salt or glass which they made there The valley of Mizpeh under Mount Hermon, as appears by comparing this with ver 3, 17, where it seems to be called the valley of Sebanon This lay on the east, as Zidon did on the west and so it seems they fled several ways and the Israelites also divided themselves into two bodies, one pursuing east, and the other west

9 And Joshua did unto them as the Lord bade him: he houghed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took Hazor, and smote the king thereof with the sword for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms

Smote the king thereof, either in the former battle, though it be mentioned here, or rather in his royal city, to which he fled out of the battle The head of all those kingdoms not of all Canaan but of all those who were confederate with him in this expedition

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them: there was not any left to breathe, and he burnt Hazor with fire

There was not any i e no human person

12 And all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword, and he utterly destroyed them, as Moses the servant of the Lord commanded

13 But as for the cities that stood still in their strength, Israel burnt none of them, save Hazor only, that did Joshua burn

In their strength, Heb with (for so this preposition is oft used, as Exod xxxv 12, Lev ii 2, Ezek xvi 37, &c) their fence or fences, walls or bulwarks, i e which were not utterly ruined together with their walls in the taking of them Save Hazor only, which though taken by the Israelites, was not so much destroyed as other places were That did Joshua burn, because this city began the war, and being the chief and royal city, might renew the war, if the Canaanites should ever seize upon it

14 And all the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves, but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe

15 ¶ As the Lord commanded Moses his servant, so did Moses command Joshua, and so did Joshua, he left nothing undone of all that the Lord commanded Moses

16 So Joshua took all that land, the hills, and all the south country, and all the land of Goshen, and the valley and the plain, and the mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same,

All that land, of Canaan whose parts here follow The land, or, the mountain, i.e. the mountainous country, to wit, of Judea, as may seem, 1 Because in the following enumeration he begins in the south parts where there was an eminent mountain Numb xiii 17 2 Because a considerable part of Judea was called the hilly or the mountainous country, Luke i 9 65 which is not likely to be omitted in this particular description of the land, the rather because Hebrew one of the places taken by Joshua, chap x 36 37, was in the mountain of Judah, Josh x 7 3 Because this is here distinguished from the mountain of Israel, and therefore most likely to be the mountain of Judah, especially if you compare this with ver 21 where having mentioned the mountain in general from which Joshua cut off the Anakims he comes to particularize, and names only two all the mountain of Judah and all the mountain of Israel All the south country i.e. not only the mountainous part but all the country of Judea, which lay in the southern part of Canaan and oft comes under the name of the south, as Numb xii 22 29 xvi 1, Josh x 10, xiii 5 &c The land of Goshen of which see Josh x 11 The vale, the low countries The plain, the fields or champaign ground The mountain of Israel, either 1 Some one particular and eminent mountain possibly the hill of Samaria mentioned 1 Km xvi 21 or rather 2 The mountains or mountainous country of Israel See the second note on this verse The end of the name i.e. of Israel

17 Even from the mount Hakk that goth up to Sen, even unto Bial-gid in the valley of Lebanon under mount Hermon and all then kings he took, and smote them, and slew them

That goth up to Sen i.e. to the country of Sen i.e. to the north part of it which was south from Judea not that which was eastward from it as appears from here that here is also Josh x 7 is mention of the two extreme bound of the land conquered by Joshua whereof the other which follow being in the north, this must needs be in the south of the land Bial-gid, a part of Mount Lebanon

18 Joshua made war a long time with all these kings

For divers years together as is evident by the following history and by comparing Deut ii 11 with Jo xiv 7 &c And this is here expressed lest it should be thought that as all these were not here recorded in a short narration so they were dispatched in a short time And God would have the land to be conquered gradually for many weighty reasons 1 To test the sudden extinction of those nations should have made a great part of the land desert and thereby have increased the numbers of wild beasts, Deut vii 22 2 To be born done suddenly and easily it should soon be forgotten and be pined as the memory of men is apt to do in those cases 3 That by long continuance the Israelites might grow callous in heart of war which was very useful and needful for them in that land 4 For the trial and exercise of their patience, and courage and trust in God 5 To oblige them to the government to please and obey God, whom they yet needed for their help against their enemies

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel, save the Hivites the inhabitants of Gibeon all other they took in battle

To wit all that were taken by Joshua were taken by the sword and therefore it is no wonder that the war was long when the enemy was so obstinate

20 For it was of the Lord to harden their hearts that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour but that he might destroy them, as the Lord commanded Moses

It was the design of God's providence not to soften their hearts with compassion with the Israelites but to give them up to their own animosity, pride, which is and stubbornness, that so both their inhuman and incorrigible wickedness might be severely punished, and that the Israelites might not be mixed with them, but be entire among themselves in the possession of the land Compare Deut ii 30, and for the phrase, Exod vii 12; ix 12, xiv 17

21 ¶ And at that time came Joshua, and cut off the Anakims from the mountains, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities

At that time, i.e. in that war, for it cannot be meant of any particular and short time, because the work here related was done in divers times and years The Anakims, a race of giants of which see Numb xiii 33 From the mountain or, mountains, the singular number for the plural these barbarous and monstrous persons either chose to live in the dens or caves, which were frequent in the mountains of those parts, or else they were driven thither by the arms and success of the Israelites From Debir, either 1 From the territories belonging to these cities as we have oft seen in this history cities mentioned for the country subject to them, for the cities were taken before by Joshua chap x 36-35 Or 2 From the cities themselves, and so either the cities were retaken by the giants, which it is not probable that God would permit in Joshua's time, or he speaks here of that time when he took the places mentioned here in chap x which history he here in part repeats and connecteth with this memorable circumstance that together with the rest, he destroyed also the giants which were in those places Anab, a place in the tribe of Judah Jo h xiv 15 From all the more towns of Judah and from all the mountain of Israel it doth not follow from hence which some conclude, that this book was written by one other person long after to have dealt even after the division of the Israelites into two kingdoms of Israel and Judah but only that this was one of those causes which were added or altered and suited to the style of the present time by Ezra or some other prophet though that be not necessary for since it was evident to Joshua from Gen xiv 9 &c that the tribe of Judah was to be the chief of all the tribe and some drawing of its eminence appeared in that time in their laws, the first 10 in the land of Canaan Josh xv 1, and the latest inheritance Josh xiv 9 it is no wonder that it was mentioned apart, and distinguished from the rest of the tribes of Israel though that also be one of them, even as the daughter of Pharaoh is distinguished from the strange women 1 Km xi 1 and Saul from all David's enemies Psal xvi 10 and Peter from the disciples Mark xvi 7 though they were each of the same stature and quality with the rest Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities Quest How could he have utterly destroyed these when Caleb and Othniel destroyed some of them after Joshua's death Josh xvi 12 Judg i 10-13 Ansa this might be either, 1 Because these places being in part destroyed and neglected by the Israelites might be repossessed by the giants, either in Joshua's time or after his death and by them kept till Caleb dispossessed and destroyed them Or rather, 2 Because this work though done by the particular valour and industry of Caleb is ascribed to Joshua as the general of the army according to the manner of all historians, and therefore it is here attributed to Joshua though afterwards, that Caleb might not lose his deserved honour, the history is more particularly described, and Caleb owned as the great instrument in the achievement of it, Josh xiv 1, Judg i

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel only in Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod, there remained

Three cities of the Philistines, to which they retired, and where we find some of them afterwards, 1 Sam xvii 1, 2 Sam xvi 16, which may be one reason why the Israelites durst not make an attempt upon these places though they were a part of their possession

23 So Joshua took the whole land, according to all that the Lord said unto

Moses; and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel according to their divisions, by their tribes. And the land rested from war.

The whole land, synecdochically, i. e. the greatest and the best part of it, for some parts and places are expressly excepted in the following history. From war, from actual war, so far that they could now quietly survey, and distribute, and possess the land.

CHAP. XII.

A catalogue of the kings, and their possessions out of which they were driven by the Israelites, first in the time of Moses on the other side Jordan, 1—6, and afterwards by Joshua on this side of Jordan, 7—23, in all one and thus by kings, 21.

NOW these are the kings of the land, which the children of Israel smote, and possessed their land on the other side Jordan toward the rising of the sun, from the river Arnon unto mount Hermon, and all the plain on the east.

On the east of Jordan, called the plain, Deut. 1. 1, and the plains of Moab, Deut. xxiv. 1.

2. Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon, and ruled from Ar, which is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and from the middle of the river, and from half Gilead, even unto the river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon.

From the middle of the river it is not unusual, even against us, for a river to be divided between two lords, and for their territories or jurisdictions to meet in the middle of the river, and besides, here is a very particular reason for this expression, because the city Ar, which was a part of Sihon's dominion, but belonged to the Moabites, but in 9, 18 was in the middle of the river Arnon, Deut. 34. 30, in 16, and therefore the middle of the river is not fitly and properly here mentioned, as the bound of Sihon's dominion on that side. And from half Gilead, and the half Gilead, i. e. Half of the country of Gilead the particle from is not in the original and thus both not seem to denote the term or bound from which his dominion began, as our version implies, for so indeed it is not, but the place or country in and over which his dominion was, which, as is here said, began at Arnon, and ended in half Gilead, and ended at Jabbok, beyond which was the other half of Gilead, which belonged to Og, as is expressly said, ver. 5, where the words being wholly the same that are here, it is most reasonable to understand and apply them in the same manner.

3. And from the plain to the sea of Chinneroth on the east, and unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea on the east, the way to Beth-jeshimoth and from the south, under Ashdod-pisgah.

To the sea of Chinneroth on the east, which words describe the situation not of the sea of Chinneroth, which was part of the western border of Sihon's dominion, but of the plain, which is here said to lie eastward from the sea of Chinneroth, and also eastward from the salt sea, as it here follows. And this was indeed the situation of the plains of Moab, which are here spoken of to wit that they lay between the two seas, that of Chinneroth and the salt sea, and eastward to them both. The sea of the plain, the salt sea, called because it was a famous plain, place of a fruit, before it was turned into a salt sea. From the south, or, out of toward the south.

4. And the coast of Og king of Bashan, which was of the remnant of the giants, that dwelt at Ashtaroth and at Edrei.

Town, successively; sometimes at the one, sometimes at the other city, both being his royal mansions.

5. And reigned in mount Hermon, and in Saleph, and in all Bashan, unto the border of the Geshurites and the Maachathites, and half Gilead, the border of Sihon king of Heshbon.

The Geshurites, of which see Deut. xii. 14, Josh. xiii. 13, 2 Sam. xii. 37, xv. 8.

6. Them did Moses the servant of the Lord and the children of Israel smite: and Moses the servant of the Lord gave it for a possession unto the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh.

7. And these are the kings of the country which Joshua and the children of Israel smote on this side Jordan on the west, from Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon even unto the mount Halak, that goeth up to Scim, which Joshua gave unto the tribes of Israel for a possession according to their divisions.

8. In the mountains, and in the valleys, and in the plains, and in the springs, and in the wilderness, and in the south country, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

The wilderness, this word here and elsewhere in Scripture notes not a land wholly desert and uninhabited, but one thin of inhabitants, as 1 Kings ii. 34, ix. 18, Matt. iii. 1.

9. The king of Jericho, one; the king of Ai, which is beside Beth-el, one.

Which is beside Beth-el, this is added to distinguish it from Ai of the Ammonites, of which Jer. xlv. 3.

10. The king of Jerusalem, one; the king of Hebron, one.

11. The king of Jath, one; the king of Lachish, one.

12. The king of Eglon, one; the king of Gezer, one.

13. The king of Debir, one; the king of Geder, one.

14. The king of Ilormah, one; the king of Arad, one.

15. The king of Labnah, one; the king of Adullam, one.

16. The king of Makkedah, one; the king of Beth-el, one.

17. The king of Tappuah, one; the king of Hepher, one.

18. The king of Aphek, one; the king of Lasharon, one.

19. The king of Madon, one; the king of Hazor, one.

20. The king of Shunron-meion, one; the king of Achishaph, one.

21. The king of Taanach, one; the king of Megiddo, one.

22. The king of Kedesh, one; the king of Joknean of Carmel, one.

23. The king of Dor on the coast of Gilgal, one; the king of the nations of Gilgal, one.

Dor, of which Josh. xi. 2. Gilgal, not of that Gilgal where Joshua first lodged after his passage over Jordan.

where it doth not appear that there was either king or city, but of another city of the same name (as was frequent in those parts,) probably in Galilee towards the sea, whither divers people might possibly resort for trade and merchandise, over whom this was king, as formerly Tidal seems to have been, Gen. xiv. 1 24 The king of Tizah, one all the kings thirty and one.

Each being confined to a narrow compass, and being king only of one city or small province belonging to it, which was by the wise and singular providence of God, that they might be more easily and successively conquered by the Israelites one after another, as they were

CHAP. XIII.

God makes known to Joshua the bounds of the land not yet conquered, 1-6, commands it to be divided among the nine tribes and a half, 7. The inheritance of the two tribes and a half on the other side Jordan, 8-13. The Lord and his servants the inheritance of Levi, 14. The portion of the Reubenites 15-21, of the Gadites 21-28, of the half tribe of Manasseh, 29-32.

141. NOW Joshua was old and stricken in years, and the Lord said unto him, Thou art old and stricken in years, and there remaineth yet very much land to be possessed.

Thou art old therefore delay not to do the work which I have appointed and commanded thee to do. To be possessed, to be conquered, and so possessed by the people.

2 This is the land that yet remaineth all the borders of the Philistines, and all Geshuri.

That yet remaineth unconquered by thee and to be conquered by the Israelites if they behave themselves aright. Geshuri a people in the north east of Canaan of which see Deut. iii. 11, as the Philistines are on the south-west.

3 From Sihor which is before Egypt, even unto the borders of Ekron northward, which is counted to the Canaanite five lords of the Philistines, the Gazathites, and the Ashdothites, the Ashkalonites, the Gittites and the Ekronites, also the Avites.

Sihor, a river, of which see Isa. xlviii. 3, Jer. ii. 18. Which is counted to the Canaanite i.e. which, though now possessed by the Philistines who drove out the Canaanites, the old inhabitants of it, Deut. ii. 23, Amos ix. 7, yet is a part of the land of Canaan and therefore belongs to the Israelites. The Avites or the Avims, as they are called, Deut. ii. 23 who though they were expelled out of their ancient seat and most of them destroyed by the Captivities or Philistines as is there said yet many of them probably escaped and planted themselves in some other place not very far from the former.

4 From the south, all the land of the Canaanites, and Mearah that is beside the Sidonians, unto Aphek, to the borders of the Amorites.

i.e. From those southern parts of the sea-coast now possessed by the Philistines all the more northern parts of the sea-coast being yet inhabited by the Canaanites, almost as far as Sidon, as it here follows for there is no mention made of any conquests of Joshua upon the sea-coast. The Canaanites, properly so called are said to dwell by the sea, Num. xiii. 29 and these are here spoken of, though some of them dwelt in other parts of the land. Mearah a strong place, it matters not whether it was a city, or an impregnable cave which the writers mention to be in those parts. Aphek, not that of which Josh. xv. 58, but another in the tribe of Asher of which Josh. xii. 18, Judg. i. 31. In the borders of the Amorites the Amorites were a strong and very numerous people, and we find them dispersed in several parts, some within Jordan, and some without it, some in the south, and others in the north of whom he speaks here.

5 And the land of the Gihlites, and all Lebanon, toward the sunrise, from Baal-gad under mount Hermon unto the entering into Hamath.

The Gihlites; a people dwelling near Sidon in Gehal, of which see 1 Kings v. 18; Ezek. xxiii. 9.

6 All the inhabitants of the hill country from Lebanon unto Misrephoth-maim, and all the Sidonians, them will I drive out from before the children of Israel only divide thou it by lot unto the Israelites for an inheritance, as I have commanded them.

Them will I drive out from before the children of Israel, presently after thy death, if the Israelites do not hinder it by their unbelief or wickedness.

Though they be now unconquered, yet divide them partly, as a pledge to assure them of my help in conquering them after thy death, partly, to lay an obligation upon the Israelites to proceed in conquering work, and to bear witness against them in case they did not, and partly as a wall of partition between them and the Canaanites, to prevent all agreements, contracts, and confederacies with them to which God saw they began to incline.

7 Now therefore divide this land for an inheritance unto the nine tribes, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

8 With whom the Reubenites and the Gadites have received their inheritance, which Moses gave them, beyond Jordan eastward, even as Moses the servant of the Lord gave them,

With whom, Heb. with him i.e. with the half tribe of Manasseh, not that half which is expressed ver. 7, is evident from the thing, but the other half which is sufficiently and necessarily understood, the relative being here put for the antecedent understood, as it is, Numb. xii. 14. Psal. cxiv. 2, Isa. viii. 21, Jonah i. 3. As Moses the servant of the Lord gave them, which Moses gave them by my command, and therefore do not thou disturb them in their possessions, but proceed to divide the other possession to the rest.

9 From Aroer, that is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, and all the plain of Medeba unto Dibon.

The city that is in the midst of the river, of which see the notes on Deut. ii. 16, and on Josh. xii. 2. Either this is the same city now mentioned, even Aroer, which is said to have been a double city as the very name seems to import, whereof one part was on the bank of the river and the other in the middle of it, whence we read of the cities of Aroer Isa. xlvii. 2, or it is another city, possibly Ar, as it is elsewhere named Medeba and Dibon, two cities anciently belonging to the Moabites and taken from them by the Amorites Numb. xxi. 30, and from them by the Israelites, and after the Israelites were gone into captivity, recovered by the first possessors the Moabites, as may seem from Isa. xlv. 2.

10 And all the cities of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, unto the border of the children of Ammon, 11 And Gilead, and the border of the Geshurites and Maachathites, and all mount Hermon, and all Bashan unto Saleh.

Maachathites, whose land God had given to the Israelites without Jordan, though they had not yet used the gift of God, nor taken possession of it, as is noted, ver. 13.

12 All the kingdom of Og in Bashan, which reigned in Ashtaroth and in Edrei, who remained of the remnant of the giants for these did Moses smite, and cast them out

1 Deut 3:11
ch 12:4
Num 21:34, 35

These did Moses smite, not all now mentioned, as appears from ver 13, but Sihon and Og and their people, and the generality of them, which he had now named, some of them being excepted

13 Nevertheless the children of Israel expelled not the Geshurites, nor the Maachathites but the Geshurites and the Maachathites dwell among the Israelites until this day

1 ver 11

This seems added by way of anticipation and reflection upon the present Israelites, implying, that although Moses did and might permit them to remain, both because the land which he had conquered was more than enough for the Israelitish possessors and because being intent upon their passage over Jordan into the land of Canaan he would not delay them, by searching their enemies out of all their corners, yet they were in fault in not going on and perfecting the work which was begun by Moses, and carried on so far by Joshua

14 Only unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance, the sacrifices of the Lord God of Israel made by fire are their inheritance, as he said unto them

1 Num 18:20, 21, 24, ch 14:3, 4

Ver 14 Moses, as is expressed ver 33 gave none inheritance, to wit, in the land beyond Jordan, where yet a considerable part of the Levites were to have their settled rhode This is mentioned as the reason both why Moses gave all that land to the Reubenites, and Gadites, and Manassites, and why Joshua should divide the land only into nine parts and a half, as was said, ver 7, because Levi was otherwise provided for Sacrifices of the Lord made by fire, which by a synecdoche are here put for all those sacrifices and oblations, including first fruits and tithes which were assigned to the Levites, and this passage is so oft repeated and urged to prevent those calumnies and injuries which God foresaw the Levites were likely to meet with from the malice, envy, and covetousness of their brethren, and to oblige all the other tribes to a cheerful and conscientious giving to the Levites their dues to which they had as good a right and title as they had to their several possessions

15 ¶ And Moses gave unto the tribe of the children of Reuben inheritance according to their families

Dividing the inheritance into as many parts as they had families, but this is only spoken of the greater families, for the lesser divisions or distributions to the several small families was done by inferior officers, according to the rules which Moses gave them

ch 12:2

16 And their coast was from Aroer, that is on the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, and all the plain by Medaba

17 Heshbon, and all her cities that are in the plain, Dibon, and Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon.

Heshbon: this city and Dibon and Aroer were upon the borders of Reuben and Gad, and therefore sometimes are ascribed to Reuben, as here, and Numb xxii. 37, sometimes to Gad, as Numb xxii. 34, 1 Chron vi. 80, 81, by whom Heshbon, is said to be given to the Levites Josh xii. 39 Possibly it and the rest were jointly inhabited by both tribes, as Jerusalem was by Jews and Beniamites Bamoth-baal, of which Numb xii. 28 Beth-baal-meon, called Beth-meon, Jer. xlviii. 23, and Baal-meon Ezek xvi. 9, part of the name being cut off, as is usual with the Hebrews.

Numb xxxi. 8 Answer There were divers petty kings in the parts which were subject to greater kings, and such the case, but are here called dukes or princes of Sihon because they were subject and tributaries to him, and therefore did one way or other assist Sihon in this war, though they were not killed at this time It is probable, that when Sihon destroyed those Moabites which dwelt in these parts he frightened the rest of them, and with them their neighbours and confederates the Midianites, into some kind of homage or tribute which they were willing to pay to him Dwelling in the country, Heb inhabiting that land, namely Midian last mentioned, whereby he signifies that though they were subject to Sihon, yet they did not dwell in his land but in another

25 And their coast was Jazer, and all the cities of Gilead, and half the land of the children of Ammon, unto Aroer that is before Rabbah,

All the cities of Gilead, i.e. all the cities of note and eminency, all cities properly so called, which it seems lay in that part of Gilead, and so this may well agree with ver 31, where half the country of Gilead is said to be given to the Manassites, but there is no mention of any cities there Half the land of the children of Ammon, not of that which now was theirs, for that they were forbidden to meddle with, Deut ii, 9, but of that which was anciently theirs, but taken from them by the Amorites, Numb xxi 26, from whom the Israelites took it, Judg xi 15. Unto Aroer, the border between them and Moab. Rabbah, the chief city of the Ammonites, 2 Sam xi 1, xii 26, 27.

26 And from Heshbon unto Ramath-mizpeh, and Betonim, and from Mahanaim unto the border of Debir.

From Heshbon either exclusively or inclusively. See before on ver 17. Ramoth-mizpeh, called Ramoth-gilead, or Ramoth in Gilead Josh xx 8, and elsewhere. Mahanaim, exclusively, for Mahanaim was in the portion of Manasseh beyond Jabbok, which was the border of Gad and Manasseh.

27 And in the valley, <sup>q</sup>Beth-atam, and <sup>q</sup>Beth-nimrah, and Succoth, and Zaphon, the rest of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heshbon, Jordan and his border, even unto the edge of the sea of Chinnereth on the other side Jordan eastward.

28 This is the inheritance of the children of Gad after their families, the cities, and their villages.

29 ¶ And Moses gave inheritance unto the half tribe of Manasseh: and this was the possession of the half tribe of the children of Manasseh by their families.

Unto the half tribe of Manasseh not that they desired it, as Reuben and Gad did Numb xxxii 1 but partly as a recompense to Machir the Manassite for his valiant acts against Og, and partly for the better security and defence of the other two tribes by so considerable an accession to them which also was without any inconvenience to them because the country was too large for the two tribes of Reuben and Gad.

30 And their coast was from Mahanaim, all Bashan, all the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, and <sup>q</sup>all the towns of Jair, which are in Bashan, threescore cities.

Jair who, though of the tribe of Judah by the father 1 Chron ii 21 2<sup>d</sup> ver is called the son of Manasseh, Numb xxxii 11 because he married a daughter of Manasseh and wholly associated himself with those valiant Manassites and with their help took sixty cities or great towns, Deut iii 1, 11 which thence were called the towns of Jair.

31 And half Gilead, and Ashtaroth, and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan, were pertaining unto the children of Machir the son of Manasseh even to the one half of the children of Machir by their families.

The children of Machir whom before he called the children of Manasseh he now calls the children of Machir, because Machir was the most eminent and as it may seem, the only surviving son of Manasseh Numb xxi 29, 1 Chron vii 11 16. For the other half of Machir's or Manasseh's children see Josh xvii 1, &c.

32 These are the countries which Moses did distribute for inheritance in the plains of Moab, on the other side Jordan, by Jericho, eastward.

33 But unto the tribe of Levi Moses gave not an inheritance: the Lord God of Israel is their inheritance, as he said unto them.

couraged the people, Moses then promised him the land of Hebron, which he now claims of Joshua, 6-12; who grants his request, 12-15

AND these are the countries which the children of Israel inherited in the land of Canaan, which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance to them.

These mentioned chap xiv-xix. Eleazar the priest see on Josh viii 33, ix 15, 18, xix 51. He best understood the laws of God, by which this division was to be regulated and he was to consult God upon any difficult occurrence. The heads of the fathers of the tribes, twelve persons, each the head of his tribe, which were appointed and named by God, Numb xxxiv 19, and if any of them were now dead, no doubt Joshua and Eleazar, by God's direction, put others in their stead.

2 By lot was their inheritance, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes and for the half tribe.

This course God ordained, partly to prevent contentions, animosities, and quarrels among the tribes about the quality of their several portions and partly to demonstrate the truth and wisdom of his providence, by which alone those parts fell to each of them, which Jacob long since, and Moses lately, foretold, so that, as a learned man saith, He must be more stupid than stupidity, and more impudent than impudence itself, that doth not acknowledge and confess a Divine hand and providence in this matter. The lot did only determine the several parts or provinces to the several tribes, but did not precisely fix all the bounds of it but these might be either enlarged or diminished according to the greater or smaller number of the tribe, Numb xxxi 33 56, xxxiii 54, and that by the direction of those persons mentioned ver 1, Josh xvii 14-18.

3 For Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and an half tribe on the other side Jordan but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.

4 For the children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, save cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

Were two tribes, i. e. had the double portion, or the portion of two tribes 1 Chron vi 1, 2, and therefore though Levi was excluded, there remained nine tribes and a half as was said ver 2, to be provided for in Canaan.

5 As the Lord commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

They, i. e. the persons named ver 5, who represented and acted in the name of the children of Israel, divided it either now, or presently after, which is here spoken by anticipation.

6 ¶ Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in Gilgal and Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenazite said unto him, Thou knowest the thing that the Lord said unto Moses the man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea.

Then the children of Judah, either, 1 At that time when Joshua and the rest were consulting about the division of the land, though they did not yet actually and fully divide it. Or, 2 When Joshua, and himself, and the Israelites were proceeding in their conquests, and were going against Hebron Josh x 36, which expedition, then mentioned in a general manner, may be particularly described in this

CHAP XIV

The land and its inheritances to be divided by lot, 1-5. Caleb having on his return seen spying the land en-chapter, and Josh. xv 13, 14. But the former seems more probable, because this was done when Joshua was in Gilgal, and not when he was pursuing his enemies. Came, not so much to intercede for Caleb, which was not needful with Joshua, especially in a thing already promised by God, but only to justify and countenance him in his desire. Gilgal, where the division of the land was designed and begun, though it was executed and finished at Shiloh, Josh. xv 1, &c. Son of Jephunneh, so he is called here, and 1 Chron. iv 15, to difference him from Caleb the son of Hebron, 1 Chron. ii 18. The Kenzite, of the posterity of Kenaz, of whom see Judg. i 13. 1 Chron. iv 13, 15. The thing that the Lord said unto Moses, in general the gracious and comfortable promise he made us of possessing this land; and in particular, for my part, that which is expressed here, ver. 9. The man of God, whose words thou art obliged to make good.

7 Forty years old was I when Moses the servant of the Lord sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land, and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart

Forty years old was I see on Josh. xi 18. I brought him word again as it was in mine heart, I spoke my opinion sincerely, without flattery and fear, when the other spies were biased by their own fears, and the dread of the people, to speak otherwise than in their consciences they believed, as appears from Numb. xiii 30-32, xiv 10.

8 Nevertheless my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt, but I wholly followed the Lord my God

Which self commendation is justifiable, because it was necessary, as being the ground and foundation of his petition.

9 And Moses sware on that day, saying, Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the Lord my God

See Numb. xiv 24, Deut. i 36.

10 And now, behold the Lord hath kept me alive, as he said, these forty and five years, even since the Lord spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel wandered in the wilderness, and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old

These forty and five years, whereof thirty eight years were spent in the wilderness, and seven since they came into Canaan.

11 As yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me, as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both to go out, and to come in

For war, not only for counsel, but for action, for marching and fighting. And therefore this gift will not be cast away upon an unprofitable and unserviceable person. To go out, and to come in, to perform all the duties belonging to my place.

12 Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the Lord spake in that day, for thou heardest in that day how the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced. If so be the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able to drive them out, as the Lord said.

This mountain, i. e. this mountainous country, in which was Hebron, Josh. xi 21, xx 7, and Debir, and Anab. He names the country rather than the cities, either, 1. Because the giants here following were already driven out of their cities, but yet abode in their caves or holds in the mountains, whence they much molested the Israelites. Or, 2. Because the cities were given to the Levites, Josh. xxi 11, 13. Thou heardest, i. e. didst understand, both by the reports of others and by thy own observation, as I also did. Hearing the sense by which we get knowledge, is oft put for knowing or understanding, as Gen. xi 7, xlii 23, 2 Kings xviii 26. If so be the Lord will be with me, a modest, and humble, and pious expression, signifying both the absolute necessity of God's help and his godly fear, lest God for his sins should deny his assistance to him, as he might justly do, for although he was well assured in general that God would crown his people with success in this war, yet he might doubt of his particular success in this or that enterprise. To drive them out, out of their fastnesses, where they yet remain. Caleb desires this difficult work as a testimony of his own faith, and as a motive to quicken and encourage his brethren to the like attempts.

13 And Joshua blessed him, and gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance

Joshua either 1. Prayed to God to bless and help him according to his own desire. Or, 2. Acknowledged his praiseworthy carriage in the matter of the spies and the reasonableness of his request. Or, 3. Consented to his desire, and as it follows, gave it to him, as God's blessing is oft put for his actual conferring of favours upon men.

14 Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenzite unto this day, because that he wholly followed the Lord God of Israel

15 And the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba, which Arba was a great man among the Anakims. And the land had rest from war

A great man in stature, and strength, and dignity, and authority, as being the progenitor of Anak, the father of those famous giants called Anakims. The land I rest from war, which gave the opportunity for the distribution of the land.

CHAP. XV

The borders of the lot of Judah, 1-12. Among them Kirjath-arba, Caleb's inheritance, he drives thence the three sons of Anak, promises to give his daughter in marriage to him who should smite Kirjath-sepher, which Othniel does and obtains her, she requests of her father some land for a dowry, which he grants, 13-19. The cities of Judah 20-62. The Jebusites could not be conquered by them, 63.

THIS then was the lot of the tribe of the children of Judah by their families, even to the border of Edom the wilderness of Zin southward was the uttermost part of the south coast

For the general understanding of this business, it must be known 1. That this work of casting lots was transacted with great solemnity and solemnity, in God's presence with prayer and appeal to him for the decision of the matter. 2. That although an exact survey of this land was not taken till Josh. xviii 1, 5, yet there was and must needs be, a general description of it, and a division thereof into nine parts and a half, which as far as they could guess, were equal either in quantity or in quality. 3. That the lot did not at this time so preposterously and unchangeably determine each tribe, that their portion could neither be increased nor diminished, as is manifest, because after Judah's lot was fixed, Simeon's lot was taken out of it, Josh. xix 9, though after the land was more distinctly known and surveyed, Josh. xviii it is likely the bounds were more certain and fixed. 4. That the lot determined only in general what part or quarter of the land belonged to each tribe, but left the particulars to be determined by Joshua and Eleazar, &c. For the manner of this lottery, it is probably conceived that there were two urns or pots, into one of which were put the names of all the tribes, each in a distinct paper, and into the other the names of each portion described, then Eleazar, or some other person, drew out first the name of one of the tribes out of one pot, and then the name of one portion out of the other pot, and that portion was appropriated to that tribe, and so in the rest. And with respect to these pots in the bottom of which the papers lay, these lots are oft said to come up, or come forth. The lot of the tribe of the children of Judah came out first by God's disposition as a note of his pre-eminence above his brethren. Idom lay south east from Judah's portion.

2 And their south border was from the shore of the salt sea, from the bay that looketh southward

The bay, Heb the tongue, by which he understands either a creek or arm of that sea, or a promontory, which by learned authors is sometimes called a tongue, it is not material to know which of these it was.

3 And it went out to the south side to Maach-arahabbim, and passed along to Zin, and ascended up on the south side unto Kadesh-barnea, and passed along to Hezion, and went up to Adar, and fetched a compass to Karkia

Concerning this description of the southern coast of Judah, see Numb xxiv 3-5

4 From thence it passed toward Azmon, and went out unto the river of Egypt, and the goings out of that coast were at the sea this shall be your south coast

5 And the east border was the salt sea, even unto the end of Jordan. And then border in the north quarter was from the bay of the sea at the uttermost part of Jordan

The end of Jordan, i.e. the place where Jordan runs into the Salt Sea

6 And the border went up to Beth-hogla, and passed along by the north of Beth-arabah, and the border went up to the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben

by the north of Beth-arabah, or on the north or northward to Beth-arabah, which place is attributed to Judah here ver 61, and to Benjamin Josh xxv 22, because it was a frontier town in the borders of Judah and Benjamin, and therefore prone to be jointly belonging to both, which also was the case of some other places, and his collocation was convenient to maintain brotherly love and union between the several tribes especially in the borders where differences oft arise. The stone of Bohan, a place so called not from Bohan's dwelling there (for the Reubenites had no portion on this side Jordan) but from some notable exploit which he did there though it is not recorded in Scripture.

7 And the border went up toward Debir from the valley of Achor and so northward, looking toward Gilgal, that is before the going up to Adummim, which is on the south side of the river, and the border passed toward the waters of En-shemesh, and the goings out thereof were at En-rogel

Debair, a differing place from that Debir ver 15, which was near Hebron and remote from Judah's border, as also from that Debair, Josh xii 26 which was beyond Jordan (Gilgal, either that Gilgal nigh Jerico Josh iv 19 or another place of that name) On the south side of the river, or brook, or valley.

8 And the border went up by the valley of the son of side of the Jebusite, the same is Jerusalem and the border went up to the top of the mountain that lieth before the valley of Hinnom westward, which is at the end of the valley of the giants northward

The border went up, properly, for the line went from Jordan and the Salt Sea, to the higher grounds nigh Jerusalem, and therefore the line is said to go down, Josh xviii 16 because there it takes a contrary course, and goes downwards to Jordan and the sea. Hinnom, a very pleasant place, but afterwards made infamous, 2 Kings xxiii, 10. Of the Jebusite i.e. of the city of the Jebusites, which was anciently called Jebusi, Josh xvii 12, Judg i 10. The same is Jerusalem it may seem hence, and from Deut. xxxiii 12 Josh xviii 28, Judg i 21, that Jerusalem, properly, or at least principally, belonged to Benjamin, and yet it is ascribed to Judah also here, ver 63, and elsewhere, either because a part of the city was allotted to Judah, or because the Benjamins needed or desired the help and conjunction of this powerful tribe of Judah, for the getting and keeping of this most important place. And when the Benjamins had in vain attempted to drive out the Jebusites, this work was at last done by the tribe of Judah who therefore had an interest in it by the right of war, as Aiklah, which belonged to the tribe of Simeon, being gotten from the Philistines by David, was adjudged by him to his tribe of Judah, 1 Sam xxvii 6.

9 And the border was drawn from the top of the hill unto the fountain of the water of Nephtoth, and went out to the cities of mount Ephron, and the border was drawn to Baalah, which is Kirjath-jearim

Of Mount Jearim i.e. belonging to or bordering upon Mount Ephron Kirjath-jearim called Kirjath-baal, ver 60, Josh xviii 11.

10 And the border compassed from Baalah westward unto mount Seir, and passed along unto the side of mount Jearim, which is Chesalon, on the north side, and went down to Beth-shemesh, and passed on to Timnah

Mount Seir, not that of Edom, but another so called from some resemblance it had with that in quality. Beth-shemesh there were divers cities of this name, thus in Judah here, and Josh xxi 16, 2 Kings xii 11 another in Issachar, and a third in Naphtali Josh xix 22, 38.

11 And the border went out unto the side of Ekron northward, and the border was drawn to Shieron, and passed along to mount Baalah, and went out unto Jabnail, and the goings out of the border were at the sea

12 And the west border was to the great sea, and the coast thereof. This is the coast of the children of Judah round about according to their families

13 ¶ And unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh he gave a part among the children of Judah, according to the commandment of the Lord to Joshua, even the city of Arba the father of Anak, which city is Hebron

He gave, i.e. Joshua, as appears by comparing this with Josh xiv 6 12, 13. Arba or Kirjath-arba, not the city, which was the Levites, but the territory of it, Josh xxi 13.

14 And Caleb drove thence the three sons of Anak, Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmar, the children of Anak and forts in it; compare Josh. xiv. 15. This and the following work was done either in Joshua's life-time, as may seem from Josh. xi. 21 or after his death, as is related Judg. i. 10, these giants having either recovered their cities or defended themselves in the mountains, Shechem, and Abimam, and Tadmor, either the same who are mentioned Numb. xiii. 33, and so they were long-lived men, such as many were in those times and places, or their sons, called by their fathers' names, which is very usual.

Thence, i.e. from the said territory, from their caves

15 And he went up thence to the inhabitants of Debir and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher

Debir, the same mentioned above, ver. 7. The name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher this clause seems to be added to distinguish this from the other Debir subdued by Joshua, Josh. x. 38, 39.

16 ¶ And Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife

Which is to be understood with some conditions as if he were one who could marry her by God's law, for every promise contrary to that is void, and if she were willing, for though parents had a great power over their children, they could not force them to marry any person against their own wills. He might otherwise be an unfit and unworthy person but this was no ordinary motion propounded to the mutation of others, but a Divine impulse that Othniel's valour might be more manifest, and so the way prepared for his future government of the people, Judg. iii. 9.

17 And Othniel the son of Kenaz, the brother of Caleb, took it and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife

Object This marriage was unlawful. Answer No, for it was not Othniel but Kenaz, who was Caleb's brother and besides, the word brother is commonly used for any kinsman and that Caleb was not properly Othniel's brother differently appears, because Caleb is constantly called the son of Ephraim, and Othniel, the son of Kenaz here, and 1 Chron. iii. 13.

18 ¶ And it came to pass, as she came unto him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field and she lighted off her ass, and Caleb said unto her, What wouldst thou?

Is she came unto him on, as she went, to wit from her father's house to her husband's as the manner was seen Matt. i. 19. She moved him to ask, she persuaded her husband, either, 1 That he would ask, or rather 2 That he would suffer her to ask as she did. She lighted off her ass, that she caught address herself to her father in a humble posture and as a suppliant, which he understood by her gesture. Gen. 34. 11.

19 Who answered, Give me a blessing, for thou hast given me a south land, give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs, and the nether springs

Give me a blessing, i. e. a gift, as that word signifies, Gen. xii. 11. A south land, i. e. a dry land, which was much exposed to the south wind which in those parts was very hot and drying as coming from the desert of Arabia. Springs of water, i. e. a field as she desired, ver. 18, wherein are springs of water, which in that country were of great price, for it is not probable that he would give her the springs, and gave to another the grounds in which the springs were, who could thereby at their pleasure deprive her of the use and benefit of her springs so she begs a well-watered field, which also might give some relief to that which was hot and barren. The upper springs, and the nether springs, i. e. springs both in the higher and in the lower grounds, or two fields one in high, another in low grounds or rather, one above, and the other below, that south and dry ground which she complained of, that by this means it might be watered on both sides.

20 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Judah according to their families

21 And the uttermost cities of the tribe of the children of Judah toward the coast of Edom southward were Kabzeel, and Eder, and Jagur,

The uttermost cities, those which were on the borders of the land, not the midland cities. It is apparent that all the cities belonging to this tribe are not mentioned in this catalogue. Kabzeel, called Jekabzeel, Neh. xi. 25.

22 And Kinah, and Dimonah, and Adadah,

23 And Kedesh, and Hazor, and Ithnan,

24 Ziph, and Telem, and Bealoth,

25 And Hazor, Hadattah, and Kerioth, and Hezron, which is Hazor,

Hazor, Hadattah, possibly it should be read as one word, Hazor hadattah, as there is Hazor gaddah, ver. 27, and Hazor-shual, ver. 28, such compounded proper names being usual, and this may seem the more probable, because if Hazor and Hadattah were two different cities, the conjunction would have been put between them, as it is generally in the text. Which is Hazor, or, which also is called Hazor but to distinguish it from the other Hazor, ver. 23, this was called also Hezron.

26 Aniam, and Shema, and Moladah,

Shema, called also Sheba, Josh. xix. 2.

27 And Hazar-gaddah, and Heshmon, and Beth-palet,

28 And Hazar-shual, and Beer-sheba, and Bizjathjah,

29 Baulah, and Iim, and Azem,

30 And Etolad, and Chesil, and Hormah,

31 And Ziklag, and Madmannah, and Sansannah,

32 And Lebaoth, and Shilhim, and Ain, and Rimmon all the cities are twenty and nine, with their villages

Object Here are thirty-seven or thirty-eight cities named before, how then are they only reckoned twenty-nine? Answer There were only twenty-nine of them, where either, 1 Properly belonged to Judah, the rest fell to Simeon's lot, or 2 Were cities properly so called, i. e. walled cities, or such as had villages under them, as it here follows the first being great but unwalled towns or such as had no villages under them.

33 And in the valley, Eshtaol, and Zoreh, and Ashnah,

34 And Zanoah, and En-gannim, Tappuah, and Enam,

35 Jarmuth, and Adullam, Socoh, and Azekah,

36 And Sharam, and Adithaim, and Gederah, and Gederothaim, fourteen cities with their villages

Object There are fifteen numbered. Answer Either one of them was no city strictly called, or Gederah and Gederothaim is put for Gederah or Gederothaim, so called, possibly, because the city was double, as there want not instances of one city divided into two parts, called the old and the new city. So the conjunction and is put for the disjunctive or, whereof examples have been given before.

37 Zefan, and Hadashah, and Migdal-gad,

38 And Dilean, and Mizpeh, and Joktheel,

39 Lachish, and Bozkath, and Eglon,

40 And Cabbon, and Lahmam, and Kithlish,

41 And Gederoth, Beth-dagon, and Naamah, and Makkedah; sixteen cities with their villages:

42 Libnah, and Ether, and Ashan,

Libnah, Heb. Libnah. See Josh. x. 29.

43 And Jiphtah, and Ashnah, and Nezib,

44 And Keilah, and Achzib, and Mareshah; nine cities with their villages

45 Ekron, with her towns and her villages.

Here and in the following verses are contained all the cities of the Philistines, which are Gath and Askelon, which peradventure were omitted, because they were not at this time places of such prominence as afterwards they were, but were the daughters of some of these following cities, though afterwards the daughter might overtop the mother, as is usual. Her towns, Heb. her daughters, i. e. lesser cities, or great towns, subject to Ekron's jurisdiction. Her villages, i. e. lesser towns or hamlets.

16 From Ekron even unto the sea, all that lay near Ashdod, with their villages.

47 Ashdod with her towns and her villages, Gaza with her towns and her villages, unto the river of Egypt, and the great sea, and the border thereof.

1 c The sea coast, and all other cities, towns, and villages upon it.

48 ¶ And in the mountains, Shamir, and Jattir, and Socoh,

1 c In the higher grounds, called mountains or hills, in comparison of the sea coast.

19 And Dannah, and Kirjath-sannah, which is Debir,

Debir is also called Kirjath-sepher, above, ver. 15. So this city had three names.

50 And Anab, and Eshtemoah, and Anim,

1 c 10 41 51 And Goshen, and Holon, and Gil-
1 c 10 10 loh, eleven cities with their villages.

Goshen See Josh. x. 41.

52 Arab, and Dumah, and Ishan,

1 c 10 15 53 And Janum, and Beth-lappuah,
1 c 10 11 and Aphekah,

54 And Humtah, and Kirjath-arba, which is Hebron, and Zior, nine cities with their villages.

55 Maon, Carmel, and Zaph, and Juttah, Maon, of which see 1 Sam. xxiii. 2; xxv. 2. Carmel Nabal's country, 1 Sam. xxi. Zaph, which gave its name to the neighbouring mountain, 1 Sam. xxxi. 1.

56 And Jezreel, and Jokdeam, and Zanoah,

57 Cam, Gibeah, and Timnah, ten cities with their villages.

58 Halhul, Beth-zur, and Gedor,

59 And Maarath, and Beth-anoth, and Eltekon, six cities with their villages.

60 Kirjath-baal, which is Kirjath-jearim, and Rabbah, two cities with their villages.

61 In the wilderness, Beth-arabah, Middim, and Seccah.

The wilderness In the Hebrews call places either uninhabited by men or having but few inhabitants.

62 And Nibshim, and the city of Salt, and Engedi, six cities with their villages.

The city of Salt so called either from the Salt Sea, which was near it, or from the salt which was made in it, or about it.

63 ¶ As for the Jebusites the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the children of Judah could not drive them out: but the Jebusites dwell with the children of Judah at Jerusalem unto this day.

For though Jerusalem was in part taken by Joshua before this, yet the upper and stronger part of it, called Zion, was still kept by the Jebusites even until David's time, and it seems from thence they descended to the lower town called Jerusalem and took it, so that the Jebusites were forced to win it a second and yet a third time also, for afterwards it was possessed by the Jebusites, Judg. xix. 11, 2 Sam. v. 6, 7. Could not drive them out, namely, because of their unbelief as Christ could do no mighty work—because of the people's unbelief, Mark vi. 5, 6, Matt. xiii. 58, and because of their sloth, and cowardice, and wickedness, whereby they hindered God's help, and then they must needs be potent; but their inability was wilful, and brought upon them by themselves. Jebusites dwell with the children of Judah at Jerusalem; the same things which are here said of the children of Judah, are said of the Benjamites, Judg. i. 21. Hence ariseth a question, To which of the tribes Jerusalem belonged? whether to Benjamin as is gathered from Gen. xlix. 27; Deut. xxxiii. 12; Jer. vi. 1, or to Judah, as is implied here, and Psal. lxxviii. 68, 69. Some think that being on the borders of both, it was common to both, and was consequently inhabited by both, and it is certain that after the conquest it was possessed by both, Neh. xi. 4. But for the present, though it did belong to Benjamin, yet the children of Judah being possibly very active in the first taking of it by Joshua, as they certainly were after his death, Judg. i. 8, they might thereby get some right share with the Benjamites in the possession of it. It seems most probable that part of it, and indeed the greatest part and main body of it, stood in the tribe of Benjamin, and hence this is mentioned in the list of their cities, and not in Judah's list and part of it stood in Judah's share, even Mount Moriah, on which the temple was built, and Mount Sion, when it was taken from the Jebusites. Unto this day, when this book was written, whether in Joshua's life and old age, which continued many years after the taking of Jerusalem, or after his death, when this clause was added here and elsewhere in this book by some other man of God, which must needs be done before David's time, when the Jebusites were quite expelled, and their fort taken.

CHAP. XVI.

The general borders of the sons of Joseph, 1—4. The borders of Ephraim 5—9. Some of the Canaanites not expelled but made tributary, 10.

AND the lot of the children of Joseph fell from Jordan by Jericho, unto the water of Jericho on the east, to the wilderness that goeth up from Jericho through out mount Beth-el.

Of Joseph's lot of Ephraim and the half tribe of Manasseh which are here put together in one, not because they had but one lot for Ephraim had one here, ver. 5, and Manasseh another Josh. xviii. 1, but because in these first verses he speaks of them in common and of the south border which seems to be the same, either wholly or in a great part, and then he comes to the particular description of their several portions. It is here further remarkable, that God so disposed of these lots, that they came both in decent and due order, Judah's first to whom the sovereignty was promised, and then Joseph's who succeeded Reuben in the other privilege of the birth-right, the double portion, 1 Chron. v. 1, 2. The waters of Jericho, of which see 2 Kings ii. 19, 22. The wilderness that goeth up from Jericho, the wilderness of Beth-aven as appears by comparing Josh. xviii. 12, which speaks of the very same border which was on the south of Ephraim, and on the north of Benjamin.

2 And goeth out from Beth-el to Luz, and passeth along unto the borders of Archi to Ataroth,

From Beth-el to Luz, or, from Bethel-Judah as the LXX here join the words, for Beth-el was anciently called Luz. Gen. xxviii. 19, xlviii. 3, though some think this was another Luz spoken of Judg. i. 26. Others make Beth-el and Luz two neighbouring towns, which afterwards both more built and inhabited, became one, as oft hath happened.

3 And goeth down westward to the coast of Japhleti, unto the coast of Beth-horon the nether, and to Gezer, and the goings out thereof are to the sea.

Of the two Beth horons, see Josh. x. 10, 11.

4 So the children of Joseph, Manasseh and Ephraim, took their inheritance.

Manasseh is the half Manasseh, by a synecdoche. Their inheritance, i. e. their several portions which here follow. Some think that they had but one lot between them, and therefore, they are now sent to the direction of Joshua, and Eleazar, &c., for that phrase being used of them, and not to any remembrance of any other tribes, may seem to have some peculiar significance, which doth not agree to the other tribes. But there being mention of a peculiar lot taken out for Manasseh, Josh xvi 1, shows that their several inheritances fell to them, as the rest did to the other tribes, even several lots, and it is said of them, that they took their inheritance, which also Judah had done before them, because the tribes of Judah and Joseph took their inheritances before the rest, and it was in they should do so, for the security of the main camp, and the help of the people which were at Gilgal. See Josh xviii 1.

¶ And the border of the children of Ephraim according to their families was this even the border of their inheritance on the east side was unto Beth-horon the upper,

On the east side, i. e. the north-east side. It is no wonder if some of these descriptions are dark and doubtful to us at this distance of time and place, there having been so many alterations made in places, and so many circumstances being now altogether undiscoverable. But this is evident to every man of common sense, that this and all the descriptions here mentioned were then certain and evident to the Israelites, because these were the foundation of their present practice, and of all the possessions which then they took and peaceably possessed in succeeding ages.

6 And the border went out toward the sea to Michmethah on the north side, and the border went about eastward unto Taanath-shiloh, and passed by it on the east to Janohah,

Toward the sea, the midland sea, towards the west.

7 And it went down from Janohah to Ataroth, and to Naarath, and came to Jericho, and went out by Jordan.

Not to the city of Jericho, which belonged to Benjamin's lot Josh xvii 21, but to its territory.

8 The border went out from Tappuah westward unto the river Kanah, and the goings out the reef were at the sea. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Ephraim by their families.

9 And the separate cities for the children of Ephraim were among the inheritance of the children of Manasseh, all the cities with their villages.

The separate cities, i. e. besides those cities which were within Ephraim's bounds, he had some other cities to which all their territories were annexed out of Manasseh's portion, because his tribe was all here, and was larger than Manasseh's.

10 And they drave not out the Canaanites that dwell in Gilead, but the Canaanites dwell among the Ephraimites unto this day, and serve under tribute.

The Canaanites were not driven out until Solomon's time, 1 Kings ix 16. Under tribute, as Josh xvi 13, 1 Kings ix 16.

CHAP XVII

The separate cities of Manasseh, and its borders, 1-11. They could not drive out the Canaanites but made them tributary, 12, 13. The children of Joseph complain that their borders are too narrow. Joshua promises them the subduing of the Canaanites, 14-18.

THERE was also a lot for the tribe of Manasseh, for he was the firstborn of Joseph, to wit, for Machir the firstborn of Manasseh, the father of Gilead, because he was a man of war, therefore he had Gilead and Bashan.

He was the first-born of Joseph, the sense is, though Ephraim was to be more potent and numerous, yet Manasseh was the first-born, and had the privilege of the first-born, which was translated to Joseph, to wit, a double portion, and therefore though this were but half the tribe of Manasseh, yet they are not made inmates to Ephraim but have a distinct lot of their own, as their brethren or other half tribe had beyond Jordan. Machir, the only son of Manasseh, who therefore is here and Judg i 11, put for the whole tribe. The first-born, so even only sons are sometimes called, as Matt i 25 see Exod iv 22. The father of Gilead, or, and the father, or who was also the father of Gilead, not of the land of Gilead, but of the man Gilead, who was Machir's son, Numb xvi 29. He was a man of war, he, i. e. Machir, had given great proof of his valour in his generation, (though the particular history be not mentioned,) and his posterity were no degenerate sons, but had his valiant blood still running in their veins. Gilead and Bashan, i. e. part of those countries, for part of them was also given to the Reubenites, and part to the Gadites, as appears from Josh vii 30, 31. This may be added as a reason, either, 1. Why he got those places from the Amorites, or, 2. Why they were allotted to him or his posterity, because this was a frontier country, and the outworks to the land of Canaan, and therefore required such valiant persons to defend it.

2 The rest was also a lot for the rest of the children of Manasseh by their families, for the children of Abiezer, and for the children of Helek, and for the children of Asriel, and for the children of Shechem, and for the children of Hepher, and for the children of Shemida these were the male children of Manasseh the son of Joseph by their families.

1 lot or, a portion, or distinct inheritance. The rest of the children of Manasseh, to wit, those of them who had not received their possession beyond Jordan, Numb xvi 29, &c. These were the male children, this expression is used to bring in what follows, concerning his female children.

3 ¶ But Zelophehad, the son of Hephher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters, and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milkah, and Tirzah.

No sons, but daughters, of whom see on Numb xxvi 33, xxvii 1.

4 And they came near before Eleazar the priest, and before Joshua the son of Nun, and before the princes, saying, The Lord commanded Moses to give us an inheritance among our brethren. Therefore according to the commandment of the Lord he gave them an inheritance among the brethren of their father.

He gave them, i. e. Eleazar, or Joshua, with the consent of the princes appointed for that work.

5 And there fell ten portions to Manasseh, beside the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were on the other side Jordan,

Ten portions, either, 1. Six portions for the six sons, whose one was Hephher, and because he had no sons, his part was subdivided into five equal parts for each of the daughters. Or, 2. Ten portions five for the sons and five for the daughters, for as for Hephher both he and his son Zelophehad were dead, and that without sons, and therefore he had no portion, but his daughters had several portions allotted to them.

6 Because the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his sons and the rest of Manasse's sons had the land of Gilead

Among his sons, i. e. no less than the sons, so their ex- was no bar to their inheritance

7 ¶ And the coast of Manasseh was from Asher to Michmethah, that lieth before Shchem and the border went along on the right hand unto the inhabitants of Eubippah

8 Now Manasseh had the land of Ephraim but Eubippah on the border of Manasseh belonged to the children of Ephraim

9 And the coast descended unto the river Kanah, southward of the river these cities of Ephraim are among the cities of Manasseh the coast of Manasseh also was on the north side of the river, and the outgoings of it were at the sea

These cities of Ephraim, Eubippah, and the cities upon the coast descending to the river &c. last mentioned are among the cities of Manasseh i. e. are intermixed with their cities which was not strange nor unfit the two being linked together by a nearer alliance than the rest

10 Southward it was Ephraim's, and northward it was Manasse's, and the sea is his border and they met together in Asher on the north, and in Issachar on the east

His border either 1 Manasse's, whose portion is here described and whose name was last mentioned Or 2 Ephraim's and Manasse's, both expressed in the foregoing words, and implied in the following they In which upon the tribe of Asher for though Zebulun came between Asher and them for the greatest part of their land yet it seems there were some necks or parcels of land both of Ephraim and of Manasse's which jutted out farther than the rest and touched the borders of Asher And it is certain there were many such incursions of the land of one tribe upon some parcels of another although they were otherwise considerably distinct one from the other See Josh xix 31 And you must not judge of these things by the present maps, which are drawn according to the opinions of late authors, which many times are false, and they are to be judged by the Scripture and not the Scripture by them but that part of Manasseh did reach to Asher appears from hence that Dor a city of Manasseh ver 31 was in Josephus witnesseth near Canaan, which belonged to Aher Josh xix 26

11 ¶ And Manasseh had in Issachar and in Asher Beth-shean and her towns, and Ibleam and her towns, and the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of Endor and her towns, and the inhabitants of Taanach and her towns, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns, even three countries

In Issachar and in Asher, cul 1, 1 Bordering upon them, as in Asher is taken, ver 10 and as Aaron's rod is said to be in the ark i. e. close by it, Heb ix 4, or, 2 Properly in these as Ephraim had some cities in the tribe of Manasseh Josh xix 9 and as it was not unusual, when the places allotted to any tribe was too narrow for it and the part too large to give away part from the larger to the less portion; nay sometimes one whole tribe was taken into another as Simeon was into Judah's portion, when it was found too large for Judah Josh xix 9 The inhabitants of Dor, not the places only, but the people, whom, contrary to God's command they spared and used for servants, whom therefore they are said to have or possess These countries this may be preferred either to some to wit, the three last places or to all the places named in the verse, which are here said either to have three countries or tracts of land belonging to them, or to be in three several countries or portions, as they seem to have been some in Issachar, and some in Asher, and yet both belonging to Manasseh Or, the words may be rendered the third part of that country, for the Hebrew word is of the singular number, and the article seems emphatical, and so the meaning may be, that the cities and towns here mentioned are a third part of that country, i. e. of that part of Issachar and Asher's portion, in which those places lay

12 Yet the children of Manasseh could not drive out the inhabitants of those cities, but the Canaanites would dwell in that land

See on Josh xv 63 Would dwell, were resolved to fight, rather than be turned out of their ancient habitations

13 Yet it came to pass, when the children of Israel were waxen strong, that they put the Canaanites to tribute, but did not utterly drive them out

Which they were obliged to, now they were strong and numerous enough to possess those places

14 And the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying, Why hast thou given me but one lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am a great people, forasmuch as the Lord hath blessed me hitherto?

The children of Joseph, i. e. of Ephraim and Manasseh, remark partly from ver 17, where it is so explained, and partly because they mention it as an unreasonable thing, that they being two should have but one lot Spake unto Joshua, i. e. expostulated with him, when they went and saw that portion which was allotted to them, and found it much short of their expectation One lot, and one portion, either 1 Because they really had but one lot, which was afterwards divided by the arbitrators between them Or 2 Because the land severally allotted to them was no more than a little enough for one of them great people or numerous, for so the Hebrew word oft signifies

15 And Joshua answered them, If thou be a great people, then get thee up to the wood country, and cut down for thyself there in the land of the Perizzites and of the giants if mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee

He returns their own argument Seeing thou art a great and numerous people turn thy complaints into actions and valiant exploits, and enlarge thy borders by thy own hand to which thou mayst confidently expect God's assistance To the wood country, to the mountain, as it is called, ver 18 where among some towns there is much wood land which thou must without much difficulty possess and so get the more room Cut down, i. e. the wood, ver 18 for thy own advantage and use, partly in building more cities and towns, and partly for preparing the land for the use of pasture and tillage The Perizzites, supposed to be a savage and brutish kind of people, that lived in woods and mountains Of the giants, who lived in caves and mountains, now especially when they were driven out of their cities If Mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee, or, seeing Mount Ephraim is too narrow for thee, as thou complaineest, take to thyself the rest of that hilly and wood country Mount Ephraim was a particular and eminent portion of the land belonging to the tribe of Ephraim as appears from Josh xix 50, xx 7; ver 21; Judg ix 5 And this seems to be here mentioned synecdochically for all the portion allotted to Ephraim and Manasseh, as appears from their complaint, which was not that this part, but that their whole portion, was too strait for them

16 And the children of Joseph said, The hill is not enough for us and all the Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley have chariots of iron, both they who are of Beth-shean and her towns, and they who are of the valley of Jezreel

The hill is not enough for us; if we should invade and conquer it, and cut down both wood and men, yet it would not be sufficient for us. Heb. The hill will not be found, i. e. obtained, by us, those fierce and strong people the Perizzites and the giants will easily defend themselves, and frustrate our attempts, having the advantage of the woods and mountains. The Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley, i. e. and if thou sayest, as we know thou wilt reply, that if the hill either cannot be conquered, or be not sufficient for us, we may go down and take more land out of the pleasant and fruitful valleys, we shall meet with no less difficulty there than in the mountains. Or thus, In going to the hills to which thou directest us, we must pass through valleys, where we shall be waylaid by powerful and armed enemies. Chariots of iron, not all made of iron, but armed with iron, not only for defence, but for offence also, having as it were scythes and swords fastened to them to cut down all that stood in their way. The valley of Jeruel, which was either in the tribe of Issachar, or upon the borders of it, Josh. xix. 18.

17 And Joshua spake unto the house of Joseph, even to Ephraim and to Manasseh, saying, Thou art a great people, and hast great power: thou shalt not have one lot only.

Thou needest and deservest more than that lot of which thou art actually possessed, and thou hast power to get more; which if thou endeavourst to do, God will bless thee, and give thee more.

18 But the mountain shall be thine for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down, and the outgoings of it shall be thine for thou shalt drive out the Canaanites, though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong.

The outgoings of it, either, 1. The productions or fruits of that land when it is cleared from the wood and purged, or rather, 2. The valleys and fields belonging or adjoining to it, for there the Canaanites were, ver. 16.

CHAP. XVIII.

The tabernacle is set up in Shiloh, 1. The remainder of the land described, and divided into seven parts for the seven tribes which as yet had no inheritance, 2-9. Joshua casts the lot at Shiloh, 10. The first comes out for Benjamin, whose borders and duties are described, 11-28.

AND the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together at Shiloh, and set up the tabernacle of the congregation there. And the land was subdued before them.

Set up the tabernacle of the congregation there by God's appointment as is manifest from Deut. xii. 5, &c., Jer. vii. 12., Hither it was removed from Gilgal, partly for the honour and convenience of Joshua, that he being of the tribe of Ephraim, and seating himself there, might have the opportunity of consulting with God as oft as he desired and needed, and partly for the convenience of all the tribes, that, being in the heart and centre of them, they might more easily resort to it from all places. Here the tabernacle continued for above three hundred years even till Samuel's days, 1 Sam. i. 3. And the land, or for the land, because these words contain a reason of the former action, the purpose and is oft used for, as hath been showed.

2 And there remained among the children of Israel seven tribes, which had not yet received their inheritance.

3 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, How long are ye slack to go to possess the land, which the Lord God of your fathers hath given you?

This slackness is supposed to arise partly from their dissatisfaction in the portions already allotted, Judah's being too large, as it appeared, and Joseph's too narrow, as they complained; partly, from an opinion of the impossibility of making any regular and equal distribution of the parts, till the whole were better known, and more exactly surveyed, which accordingly is here done, and partly, because being weary of war, and having sufficient plenty of all things in their present condition they grow slothful and secure, and were unwilling to run into new hazards and wars, as they perceived by Joshua's answer to the tribe of Joseph, Josh. xvii. 15, &c., they were likely to do when they entered upon their several possessions.

4 Give out from among you three men for each tribe, and I will send them, and they shall rise, and go through the land, and describe it according to the inheritance of them, and they shall come again to me.

Three men three, not one, for more exact observation both of the measure and quality of the several portions and for greater assurance and evidence of their care and faithfulness in giving in their account. Of each tribe, either one of each of these tribes, who were yet unprovided for, or rather two of all the tribes, even of them who had already received their portions, which was highly expedient, that in case it should appear that there was not a sufficiency for each of these tribes who wanted their portions, their brethren might be more ready either to assist them in procuring more land, or to put with some of their own portion to them. Go through the land, which they might now safely do, because the terror of the late war was yet upon the Canaanites, who were loth to raise so many potent enemies.

5 And they shall divide it into seven parts. Judah shall abide in their coast on the south, and the house of Joseph shall abide in their coasts on the north.

Seven parts, which were of equal extent or worth, for no tribe was so great but one of these parts in its full extent would abundantly suffice them, and there was no reason why the portions should be greater or less according as the tribes at present were more or fewer in number, because of the various changes which happened therein successively it being usual for one tribe to be more numerous than another in one age, which was fewer in the next. And if the several tribes had increased more, and not diminished therein, by their sins, they might have sent forth colonies, and taken any part of the land, even as far as Euphrates, all which the Lord of the whole earth had given them a right to, which when they pleased they might take possession of. Shall abide in their coast on the south, they shall not be disturbed in their possession, but shall keep it, except some part of it shall be adjudged to another tribe. On the north, in respect of Judah, not of the whole land, for divers other tribes were more northern than they.

6 Ye shall therefore describe the land into seven parts, and bring the description hither to me, that I may cast lots for you here before the Lord our God.

Before the ark or tabernacle, that God may be witness, and judge, and author of the division, that each may be contented with his lot, and that your several possessions may be secured to you as things sacred, and not to be divided.

7 But the Levites have no part among you for the priesthood of the Lord is their inheritance, and Gad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the east, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave them.

8 ¶ And the men arose, and went away, and Joshua charged them that went to describe the land, saying, Go and walk through the land, and describe it, and come again to me, that I may here cast lots for you before the Lord in Shiloh.

The Levites have no part among you, therefore it shall be divided only into seven parts, as I have said.

9 And the men went and passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book, and came again to Joshua to the host at Shiloh.

By cities, or, according to the cities, to which the several parts or territories belonged.

10 ¶ And Joshua cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel according to their divisions.

11 ¶ And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin came up according to their families: and the coast of their lot came forth between the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

Where we see the wisdom of Divine Providence, thus being the only place in which that prophecy, Deut. xxxiii. 12, could have been accomplished.

12 ¶ And their border on the north side was from Jordan, and the border went up to the side of Jericho on the north side, and went up through the mountains westward, and the goings out thereof were at the wilderness of Beth-aven.

A place distinct from but near unto Beth-el, as may be gathered from Josh. xvi. 1.

13 And the border went over from thence toward Luz, to the side of Luz, which is Beth-el, southward, and the border descended to Ataroth-iden, near the hill that lieth on the south side of the nether Beth-horon.

14 And the border was drawn thence and compassed the corner of the sea southward, from the hill that lieth before Beth-horon southward, and the goings out thereof were at Kirjath-baal, which is Kirjath-jearim, a city of the children of Judah: this was the west quarter.

Kirjath-jearim, the Israelites changed the name to blot out the remembrance of Baal. Compare Josh. xv. 9, Num. b. xxxiii. 38.

15 And the south quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the west, and went out to the well of waters of Nephtoa.

The south quarter, the same with the north quarter of Judah. See Josh. xv. 6, 11.

16 And the border came down to the end of the mountain that lieth before the valley of the son of Hinnom, and which is in the valley of the giants on the north, and descended to the valley of Hinnom, to the side of Jebusi on the south, and descended to En-rogel.

To the end of the mountain, i.e. the place where the mountain ends, and the valley begins. Before the valley of the son of Hinnom, i.e. in the prospect of that valley, or that reacheth to that valley on the south. In the valley of the giants on the north. This extends to this other valley on the north side of it. To the side of Jebusi, to that part where the Jebusites lived, which was in and near Jerusalem.

17 And was drawn from the north, and went forth to En-shemesh, and went forth toward Gidloth, which is over against the going up of Adummim, and descended to the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben.

Gidloth, called also Gugal, as appears from Josh. xv. 7, Judg. iii. 19, but differs from that Gidgai by Jordan.

18 And passed along toward the side over against Arabah northward, and went down unto Arabah.

Arabah, called Beth-arabah, Josh. xv. 6.

19 And the border passed along to the side of Beth-hoglah northward, and the outgoings of the border were at the north bay of the salt sea at the south end of Jordan: this was the south coast.

20 And Jordan was the border of it on the east side. This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, by the coasts thereof round about, according to their families.

At the north bay of the Salt Sea, where an arm of the sea runs into the land, which is opposed to the south bay that was in the south border of the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 2. At the south end of Jordan, where it enters into the Salt Sea, which is here opposed to the north end of it, or the spring head, which was in the north.

21 Now the cities of the tribe of the children of Benjamin according to their families were Jericho, and Beth-hoglah, and the valley of Keziz,

Jericho, for though the city was destroyed, the territory remained, and some houses probably were built and inhabited there, though it was not made a city with walls and gates, which was the only thing forbidden, Josh. vi. 26. Keziz, or, Lemer Keziz, the proper name of a city or great town.

22 And Beth-arabah, and Zemaraim, and Beth-el,

23 And Avim, and Parah, and Ophrah,

24 And Chephai-haammonai, and Ophni, and Gaba, twelve cities with their villages.

25 Gibbon, and Ramah, and Beeroth, Zemaraim, which either gave name to or took name from that mountain, 2 Chron. xiii. 4.

26 And Mizpeh, and Chephunah, and Mozah,

27 And Rekem, and Irpeel, and Taralah, Mizpeh near Ramah, in the same mountain where Silo was. There were divers other cities of that name.

28 And Zelah, Eleph, and Jebusi, which is Jerusalem, Gibath, and Kirjath, fourteen cities with their villages.

This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin according to their families.

Which is Jerusalem, so it seems this city did properly and primarily belong to Benjamin, although the tribe of Judah had also an interest in it, either because some part of it was allotted to them, or because the Benjamites gave them a share in it, for the assistance which either they had received or did expect from that potent tribe, for the getting or defending of that very important place. See more on Josh. xv. 63. It is more than probable that all the cities belonging to this tribe are not here named, because Anathoth and Almon are omitted here, but expressed Josh. xvi. 18.

CHAP. XIX.

The second lot falls to Simeon, his borders among the tribe of Judah, whose inheritance was too great for them, 1-9. The third lot falls to Zabulon, 10-16. The fourth to Issachar, 17-23. The fifth to Asher, 24-31. The sixth to Naphtali, 32-39. The seventh to Dan, 40-48. The children of Israel give an inheritance to Joshua, 49, 50. The division of the land finished, 51.

AND the second lot came forth to Simeon, even for the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families, and their inheritance was within the inheritance of the children of Judah.

This was so ordered by God's providence, partly, to fulfil that threatening that he would divide and scatter this tribe in Jeruel, Gen. xlii 7, which was hereby done in part, because they had no distinct part of their own, but were as inmates to Judah, partly, because now upon the more exact survey of the land it appeared to Joshua and Eleazar, and all the princes and people, even to the tribe of Judah themselves, that the part given to Judah did far exceed the proportion which either they needed and could occupy or which the other tribes could expect; and partly, because this was the least of the tribes, as is evident from Num. xxi 14, and therefore fittest to be put within another tribe.

2 And they had in their inheritance Beer-sheba, Sheba, and Moladah,

Beer-sheba, Sheba, or, or Sheba, i. e. otherwise called, for that Beer-sheba and Sheba were one and the same city is manifest, both from ver. 6, where all the cities are reckoned to be but thirteen, and from 1 Chron. iv 28, where Simon's cities are enumerated, and Sheba omitted is superfluous.

3 And Hazar-shual, and Balah, and Azem,

Balah, called also Bithah, 1 Chron. iv 29, and Baalath Josh. xv 29. For let this be observed, once for all, that the names of persons or places are frequently changed through length of time, or difference of dialects, or study of brevity and easiness in pronunciation, or new accidents or other causes. Thus Filolad and Bethul, ver. 1 are called Folad and Bethuel, 1 Chron. iv 29, 30, and for Jith-lebaoth, ver. 6, is Beth-leuei, 1 Chron. iv 31.

4 And Eltolad, and Bethul, and Hormah,

5 And Ziklag, and Beth-marchoth, and Hazar-susah,

6 And Beth-lebaoth, and Sharuhen thirteen cities and their villages

Thirteen cities, or, towns, as some of them are called, 1 Chron. iv 32. Nor are all Simon's cities here numbered, for Ekem is added, 1 Chron. iv 32, unless that were built afterward.

7 Ain, Remmon, and Ether, and Ashan, four cities and their villages

8 And all the villages that were round about these cities to Balaath-beer, Ramath of the south. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families.

9 Out of the portion of the children of Judah was the inheritance of the children of Simeon for the part of the children of Judah was too much for them: therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.

10 ¶ And the third lot came up for the children of Zebulun according to their families and the border of their inheritance was unto Sarid.

Zobulun is here put before Issachar, his elder brother, as he is also Gen. xlix 13, 14, Deut. xxxiii 18.

11 ¶ And their border went up toward the sea, and Maralah, and reached to Dabbasheth, and reached to the river that is before Jokneam,

The sea, i. e. the midland sea, as on the other side it reached to the sea of Galilee, and so those prophecies concerning him, Gen. xlix 13, Deut. xxxiii 18 were abundantly fulfilled. Jokneam supposed to be Kishon, Judg. vii 7 or Belus, or Pagus.

12 And turned from Sarid eastward toward the sunrise unto the border of Chisloth-tabor, and then goeth out to Daberath, and goeth up to Japha.

Daberath, a city in Issachar, as appears from Josh. xxi 18.

13 And from thence passeth on along on the east to Gittah-hepher, to Itah-kazin, and goeth out to Remmon-meathoar to Neah;

14 And the border compasseth it on the north side to Hannathon, and the outgoings thereof are in the valley of Jiphthah-el.

15 And Kattath, and Nahallal, and Shumron, and Idalah, and Beth-lehem: twelve cities with their villages.

Bethlehem, not that where Christ was born, which was in Judah thence called Bethlehem Judah, Matt. ii 1, but another Twelve cities, there are more numbered here, but the rest either were not cities properly so called, having villages under their jurisdiction, or were not within this tribe but only bordering upon it, and belonging to other tribes, which is evident of some of them, and may well be presumed of others.

16 This is the inheritance of the children of Zebulun according to their families, these cities with their villages.

17 ¶ And the fourth lot came out to Issachar, for the children of Issachar according to their families.

18 And their border was toward Jesreel, and Chesulloth, and Shunem,

Jesreel the royal city 1 Kings xxi 1. This tribe, because it lay between Benjamin on the south and Zebulun on the north, is not here described by its borders, which were the same with theirs, but by some of its cities. Shunem, the birth-place of Abimelech, 1 Kings i 3.

19 And Naphtham, and Shihon, and Anaharath,

20 And Rabbuth, and Kishon, and Abec,

21 And Remoth, and En-gannim, and En-haddah, and Beth-pazzei.

En-gannim, a different place from that En-gannim in the tribe of Judah Josh. xv 31.

22 And the coast reacheth to Tabor, and Shazimah, and Beth-shemesh; and the outgoings of their border were at Jordan sixteen cities with their villages.

23 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Issachar according to their families, the cities and their villages.

24 ¶ And the fifth lot came out for the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families.

25 And their border was Helkath, and Hali, and Beten, and Achshaph,

Then border, on the north west side.

26 And Alammek, and Amad, and Misheal, and reacheth to Carmel westward, and to Shihor-ibnath.

Carmel westward, or, Carmel by the sea, to distinguish it from that Carmel in the tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. xxi 2. This was a place of eminent fruitfulness, Isa. xxxiii 9, xxxv 2, xxxvii 21, applicable to the prophecy concerning Asher, Gen. xlix 20, Deut. xxxiii 24.

27 And turneth toward the sunrise to Beth-dagon, and reacheth to Zebulun, and to the valley of Jiphthah-el toward the north side of Beth-emek, and Neiel, and goeth out to Cabul on the left hand.

Either, 1 That country called Cabul, wherein were twenty cities, of which 1 Kings ix 13. But this is not probably, because that was not within nor belonging to any particular tribe, for then Solomon could not have alienated it from them and given it unto Hiram, where as this did belong to Asher. Or 2 A certain city so called. On the left hand, i. e. on the north, which when men look towards the east, as is usual, is on their left hand.

28 And Hebron, and Rohob, and Hammon, and Kanah, seven unto great Zidon.

Kanah, to wit, Kanah the greater, in the Upper Galilee, not Kanah the less, which was in the Lower Galilee. Great Zidon, called great for its antiquity, and riches, and glory. This city also was not given to the Issachars, but is only mentioned as their border, or at least was never possessed by them, not without a singular providence of God, that they might not by the opportunity of so good a port be engaged in much commerce with other nations, from which, together with wealth that grew corrupter of mankind, they might contract their errors and vices.

29 And then the coast turneth to Ramah, and to the strong city † Tyre, and the coast turneth to Hosah, and the outgoing thereof at the sea from the coast to Achzib.

The coast turneth from the north southward To the strong city Tyre, exclusively for this city was no part of the land given them.

30 Unmah also, and Aphak, and Rehob twenty and two cities with their villages.

Here are more named but some of them were not within this tribe but only bordering places.

31 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families, these cities with their villages.

32 ¶ The sixth lot came out to the children of Naphtali, even for the children of Naphtali according to their families.

33 And their coast was from Heleph, from Allon to Zaanannum, and Adani, Nekch, and Jabned, unto Lakuni, and the outgoings thereof were at Jordan.

Then coast their northern border, drawn from west to east, as appears because when this coast is described and brought to its end the coast is said to turn from the east westward ver 31. The outgoings are at the end of that coast.

34 And then the coast turneth westward to Aznoth-tabor, and goeth out from thence to Hukkok, and reacheth to Zebulun on the south side, and reacheth to Asher on the west side, and to Judah upon Jordan toward the sunrising.

Bestowed this is unquestionably the southern border described from east to west. To reach upon Jordan. Quest. How can this be when there were divers tribes between this and Judah? It which reached to Jordan. He doth not say of Judah as he doth of Zebulun and Asher that it reacheth to it. But, as it seems, purposely leaves out that word which he had used in both the former branches but it should be understood of the latter, to it, or to be contiguous with it which was not true and that he might signify that he meant this tribe in another sense, to wit that it did in some sort go on reacheth or coast westward Judah by Jordan. And so this may be here added to show the accomplishment of that famous and obscure prophecy, That Naphtali, though he should be planted in the utmost border of the land on the north yet he should possess the riches of the west and south Deut xxxiii 23 i.e. of those tribes which were at a great distance from him westward and southward and thus he should do by way of commerce with them by their famous river Jordan, which he did not only touch in a small part as some of the other tribes had but lay all along it for a good space together even from the very fountain unto the sea of Genesareth. Some think that this is verified by that royalty of this river which they suppose God gave to the tribe of Judah which extended as far as Naphtali.

35 And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth, Hammath, or Hamath which see Numb xxxiii 8, 1 Kings xviii 22 Ham, xxiii 33 Chinnereth whence the lake of Chinnereth or Gennesareth received its name.

36 And Adamah, and Ramah and Hazor,

37 And Kedesh, and Edrei and Jn-hazor,

38 And Iion and Migdal-el Horeb, and Beth-anath, and Beth-shemesh nineteen cities with their villages.

Nineteen cities see on ver 15, 22, 30.

39 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Naphtali according to their families, the cities and their villages.

40 ¶ And the seventh lot came out for the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families.

41 And the coast of their inheritance was Zorah, and Eshtaol, and Ii-shemesh,

Their inheritance, which is here described only by its cities, not by its borders, which are in part the same with Judah's, and their inheritance is in good part taken out of Judah's too large portion, as appears from divers of the cities here mentioned, which are also reckoned as in Judah's portion.

42 And Shashabbin, and Ajalon, and Jethlah,

43 And Elon, and Thimnathah, and Ekron,

44 And Eltekeh, and Gibbethon, and Baalath,

45 And Jehud, and Berne-berak, and Iath-rimmon,

46 And Me-jarkon, and Rakkon, with the border before Japho.

47 And the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them therefore the children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it, and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, Dan after the name of Dan their father.

Went out too little for them. Heb went out from them to wit out of their hands or possession for so this Hebrew word is used concerning those lands which in the year of the jubilee are said to go out, Lev xxv 28-30, 31-33, i.e. out of the hands of the present possessor, to the first and ancient owner. And so peradventure this may signify that many of the Danites were forced by their powerful neighbours the Philistines to relinquish their coast and their allotted habitations which put them upon the following course. The children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem after Joshua's death as appears from Judg xviii and seems to be here inserted, partly that all the other places where the Danites dwelt though far distant, might be mentioned together, and partly to give an account of this strange accident, why they removed from their appointed portion to so remote a place, which may be thus being much molested and terrified by their bad neighbours, they thought fit to go to some place remote from them, which also they were in a manner constrained to do because otherwise they must have taken some part of the portions of other tribes whereas now going to the very utmost northern point of the land, they took that which did not belong to any, at least, was not in the possession of any other tribe. See more on Judg xviii.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families, these cities with their villages.

49 ¶ When they had made an end of dividing the land for inheritance by their coasts, the children of Israel gave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them.

They gave said to give it, because the whole land was given to Joshua, and Eleazar, and the princes, as J 1st trustees, acting in the name and for the good of the people, so that even Joshua could take nothing without their gift.

50 According to the word of the Lord they gave him the city which he asked, even Timnath-<sup>2</sup>serah in mount Ephraim.

and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

According to the word of the Lord, as God promised and commanded, either, first formally, as may be gathered from Josh xiv 6, where we read that the Lord said something unto Moses concerning me, Caleb, and thee, Joshua; though only what is said to Caleb be there expressed, the other not being to his purpose there, for Joshua having showed the same courage and faithfulness which Caleb did, did doubtless receive equal encouragement and comfort from God at that time. Or, secondly now at this time by Eleazar. Kinath-arba, called Kinnath heros, Judg. ii. 9. He built, i. e. repaired and enlarged it, in which sense Nebuchadnezzar is said to have built Babylon, Dan. iv. 30.

51 <sup>a Num. 34 17 ch. 14. 1</sup> These are the inheritances, which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, divided for an inheritance by lot in Shiloh before the Lord, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. So they made an end of dividing the country.

CHAP XX

God commands six cities of refuge for those who unawares should slay a man, 1—4. The right use of them 5, 6. The Israelites appoint hitherunto three cities on this, and three on the other side of Jordan, 7—9.

THE LORD also spake unto Joshua, saying

2 Speak to the children of Israel, saying, <sup>a Ex. 21. 13 Num. 35. 11, 14 Deut. 19. 9</sup> Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses.

The possessions being now divided among you do you reserve some of them for the use which I have commanded.

3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares and unwittingly may flee thither, and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

Unawares and unwittingly Heb. through ignorance or error, or mistake, and without intention, the same thing twice repeated, to cut off all the doubts and expectations that wilful murderers might have of protection here, and God having declared that such could be taken even from his altar, that they might be killed, Exod. xxi. 14, and accordingly Joab was by Solomon's order killed even at the altar, 1 Kings ii. 28. 31, 31. It is the more strange and impudent that any Christians should make their sanctuaries give protection to such persons whom God hath so expressly excepted from it, which the papists do, and their doctors are not ashamed to defend it upon frivolous reasons. The avenger of blood, the kinsman who had right or power to demand or take vengeance of the slaughterer.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities shall stand at the entering of the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall take him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

The judges used to sit at the entering of the gate. His cause, or, his matters or business, what he hath done, and why, and how, he shall give them a true relation of the fact, and all its circumstances. They shall take him into the city, understand, if they are satisfied in the relation he makes concerning the fact, otherwise it had been a vain thing to examine his cause. Give him a place, which they might well allow him because God gave them the city with a reservation for such persons.

5 And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand, because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not beforetime.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, until he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high priest that shall be in those days: then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

Standing was the posture of the accused and accusers, Exod. xviii. 13. Isa. i. 8, Zech. iii. 1. Before the congregation, or, company, or assembly, to wit, the council appointed to judge of these matters, not the council of the city of refuge, for they had examined him before, ver. 1, but of the city to which he belonged, or in or nigh which the fact was committed, as appears from Numb. xxxv. 25. Until the death of the high priest, of which see on Numb. xxxv. 25.

7 ¶ And they appointed Kedesh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, and Shechem in mount Ephraim, and Kinath-arba, which is Hebron, in the mountain of Judah.

Concerning these cities note, 1 That they were all upon mountains, that they might be seen at a great distance, and so direct those who fled thither. 2 That they were situated at convenient distance one from another for the benefit of the several tribes, for Kedesh was in the north, Hebron in the south, and Shechem between them. 3 That they all belonged to the Levites, partly that these causes might be more impartially examined and justly determined by them, who are presumed best able to understand the law of God, and most obliged and likely to follow it in their judgment, and not to be biased by any affection or corrupt interest, and partly that their just reputation with the people, and their good counsels, might lay some restraint upon revengeful persons, who might be inclined or tempted to follow the man slayer thither, and endeavour to kill him there.

8 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho eastward, they assigned Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain out of the tribe of Reuben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

They assigned or gave or had assigned or given, for they were given by Moses about ver. 11, &c., or they confirmed Moses's grant, and applied them to that use to which Moses designed and separated them.

9 These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, until he stood before the congregation.

For the stranger, not only proselytes, but others also, because this was a matter of common right, that a distinction might be made between casual man slayers and wilful murderers.

Cities given out of the other tribes by lot to the Levites, 1—9. Particularly to the priests, the children of Aaron, 9—19, to the Levites, the Kohathites, 20—26, the Gershonites, 27—33, and Merarites, 34—40, in all forty eight cities with their suburbs, 41, 42. The Israelites quietly enjoy the Promised Land, 43—45.

THEN came near the heads of the fathers of the Levites unto Eleazar the priest, and unto Joshua the son of Nun, and unto the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel,

Then, i. e. when the whole land was distributed unto the several tribes, but not actually possessed by them, which was the proper season for them to put in their claim. The fathers of the Levites, were Kohath, Gershon, and

For they gave them Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer, and Gether with her suburbs, and Beth-lehem with her suburbs; four cities.

And of the tribe of Dan, Eltekeh with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; four cities.

And of the half tribe of Manasseh, Tabor with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; two cities.

That half which dwelt in Canaan, by compounding with her 27.

27 ¶ And unto the children of Gershon, of the families of the Levites, out of the other half tribe of Manasseh they gave Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer, and Beeshterah with her suburbs; two cities.

28 And out of the tribe of Issachar, Kishon with her suburbs, Dabareh with her suburbs;

29 Jarmuth with her suburbs, En-gannim with her suburbs; four cities.

30 And out of the tribe of Asher, Mishal with her suburbs, Abdon with her suburbs;

32 And out of the tribe of Naphtali, Kedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer, and Hammoth dor with her suburbs, and Kartan with her suburbs; three cities.

33 All the cities of the Gershonites according to their families were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

34 ¶ And unto the families of the children of Manasseh, the rest of the Levites, out of the tribe of Zebulun, Jolneam with her suburbs, and Kartah with her suburbs, and Nahalal with her suburbs; four cities.

35 And out of the tribe of Reuben, Bezer with her suburbs, and Jahazah with her suburbs;

CHAP XXII

The two tribes and half are sent home with a blessing, stratagem to fight the Lord, and great booty, 1-9 They build an altar of testimony at the brink of Jordan, 10 The Israelites are offended, and assemble to wage war against them, 11-12 They first send Phinehas and ten princes ambassadors to reprove them, 13-20 They clear the isles: their brethren rest satisfied, 21-31

THEN Joshua called the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

2 And said unto them, Ye have kept all that Moses the servant of the Lord commanded you, and have obeyed my voice in all that I commanded you,

3 Ye have not left your brethren these many days unto this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the Lord your God. The Lord your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them; therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you on the other side Jordan.

4 And now the Lord your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them; therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you on the other side Jordan.

5 And now the Lord your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them; therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you on the other side Jordan.

6 And now the Lord your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them; therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you on the other side Jordan.

7 And now the Lord your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them; therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you on the other side Jordan.

Unto your tents, i. e. to your settled habitations, as appears from ver 8, which are oft called tents, as Judg. xix 9, 2 Sam xviii 17, Hos ix 6, Mal ii 12

5 But <sup>4</sup> take diligent heed to do the commandment and the law, which Moses the servant of the Lord charged you, to love the Lord your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul

Take diligent heed, watch over yourselves and all your actions. The commandment and the law, two words expressing the same thing the law of commandments delivered by Moses. With all your heart and with all your soul, with the whole strength of your minds, and wills, and affections

6 So Joshua blessed them, and sent them away and they went unto their tents

7 ¶ Now to the one half of the tribe of Manassah Moses had given possession in Bashan but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them,

8 And he spake unto them, saying, Return with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment. Divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren

9 With them who stand beyond Jordan for the defence of their land, and wives and children who therefore were to have a share though not an equal share with these. See Numb xxxi 27. But for them 1 Sam xxx 21, their share was equal because their danger was equal

9 ¶ And the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manassah returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go unto the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession whereof they were possessed, according to the word of the Lord by the hand of Moses

10 ¶ And when they came unto the borders of Jordan that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manassah built there an altar by Jordan, a great altar to see to

Or, built then, is this puzzle is elsewhere used, and so learned interpreters understand it, Psal xiv 5, xxxvi 12, Psalms in 17 Hos ix 15. And in the Latin tongue adverbs of place are sometimes put for adverbs of time, so I take it here. But because this best answers to the sense in the beginning of the verse. Secondly, This seems to clear a great difficulty as to the place where the altar was built which though according to our translation requires, and is generally thought by interpreters to have been, in the land of Canaan yet if things be more narrowly examined, it may be thought to have been on the other side Jordan in Gilead and that both, first, from ver 11, where it is said to have been built over against, or in the sight of the land of Canaan therefore not in it. And secondly, from the reason they give of the building of this altar, for fear lest the Israelites within Jordan and in Canaan should say unto their brethren dwelling beyond Jordan, The Lord hath made us a border between us and you, &c. which jealousy would have been much confirmed by building the altar in Canaan, but would be satisfied and confuted by having on the other side of Jordan, and in their own land, a pattern of that altar at which God was served in the land of Canaan, as a witness that they owned the same God, and the same way of worship, with their brethren that lived in Canaan. But whether the Hebrew participle be rendered there or there, it is not to be taken too strictly if then, the meaning is not, that they did this as soon as ever they came to the borders of Jordan that are in the land of Canaan, but about that time when they came to them, that they thought and designed it, and as soon as ever they were got over Jordan, which was in a very little time, they effected and perfected it. If it be rendered there, it is not to be limited to the very same spot of ground mentioned before, as if it was built at that border of Jordan that was in the land of Canaan, but to be a little more largely understood, to be built at one or other of the borders of Jordan, or, in general, by Jordan, which is here purposely added, for the explanation of the word there, and to prevent the restraint of it to the border of Jordan within Canaan

11 ¶ And the children of Israel heard say, Behold, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manassah have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at the passage of the children of Israel

Where they passed over Jordan, either at their first entrance into Canaan, or afterwards, and usually

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, the whole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them

The children of Israel, not in their own persons, but by their elders who used to transact all affairs of this kind in the name and kind of all the people. To go up to war against them, is apostates from God, according to God's command in that case. Deut xiii 13, &c.

13 And the children of Israel sent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half tribe of Manassah into the land of Gilead, Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest,

14 And with him ten princes, of each tribe a prince throughout all the tribes of Israel, and each one was an head of the house of their fathers among the thousands of Israel

15 ¶ And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half tribe of Manassah, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,

16 Thus saith the whole congregation of the Lord, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to turn away this day from following the Lord, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might rebel this day against the Lord?

The whole congregation of the Lord, who do and are resolved to cleave unto that God from whom you have revolted, and who speak to you in the name of the Lord. What trespass is this? how heinous a crime is this? Turn away this day, i. e. so soon after God hath obliged you by such wonderful favours, and when God is now conducting you home to reap the fruits of all your pains and hazards. That ye might rebel, with a design to revolt from and rebel against God, and against his express command of worshipping him at one only altar, Exod xx 24, Lev xvi 8, 9, Deut xii 5, 11, 13

17 Is the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed

until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD,

The integrity of Peor, i.e. of our worshipping of Baal-Peor, Num. xxv. From which we are not cleansed until this day; for though God had pardoned it, as to the national punishment of it, Num. xxv. 11, yet they were not yet thoroughly purged from it; partly because the shame and blot of that filthy and odious practice was not yet wiped off, and partly because some of that corrupt leaven still remained among them, and though smothered for a time, yet was ready to break forth upon all occasions. See Josh. xxiv. 23. And God also took notice of these idolatrous inclinations in particular persons, and found out ways to punish them one time or other.

18 But that ye must turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, seeing ye rebel to day against the LORD, that to morrow he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel

To-morrow, i.e. suddenly as that word is oft used, as Matt. vi. 30, 1 Cor. xv. 32. He will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel, with you for doing so, and with us for suffering, or not punishing it.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, wherein the LORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us; but rebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar beside the altar of the LORD our God

If the land of your possession be unclean, i.e. if you apprehend it to be so for want of the tabernacle and altar there: as the following words imply, if you now repent of your former choice in preferring the worldly commodities of that country before the advantage of God's presence and favour, and more frequent opportunities of his service. Take possession among us, we will readily resign part of our possessions to you for the prevention of this sin and mischief, wherein they show great zeal for God's honour and great pity and charity to their brethren. Nor rebel against us, for all the tribes were united in one body politic and military community, and our church, and each tribe was subject to the laws and commands of the whole society, and of the chief ruler or rulers thereof, so its disobedience to their just commands was properly rebellion against them.

20 Did not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perished not alone in his iniquity

The son of Zerah, i.e. one of his posterity, Josh. vii. 17, 18. Perished not alone but brought destruction upon his whole family, and part of our forces sent against him. In his iniquity, or, for his sin, of which see Josh. vii. 21.

21 Then the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasse answered, and said unto the heads of the thousands of Israel,

Either, first, properly, each was a governor of a thousand, for there were among them divers rulers, some of tens, some of hundreds, and some of thousands, or rather, secondly, improperly, and indefinitely i.e. of the people of Israel, which consist of so many thousands more than you whose authority therefore you owe a reverence to. For by comparing ver. 14, these seem to be greater persons than those that were rulers of thousands.

22 The LORD "God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he knoweth, and Israel he shall know, if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD, (save us not this day,)

The Lord God of gods, that Jehovah whom we, no less than you, acknowledge and adore as the God of gods, infinitely superior to all that are called gods. The multiplying of his titles, and the repetition of these words, show their zeal and earnestness in this matter, and their abhorrence of the very thoughts of it. He knoweth, to him we appeal who knoweth all things, and the truth of what we are now saying. Israel he shall know, not only our present words, but our future and constant course shall satisfy all Israel of our perseverance in the true religion. If it be, if it has been done by us with such design, or in such a manner. Save us not this day, thou, O Lord, to whom we have appealed, and without whom we cannot be saved or preserved, save us not from any of our enemies, nor from the sword of our brethren. It is a sudden apostrophe to God, usual in such vehement speeches.

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt offering or meat offering, or if to offer peace offerings thereon, let the LORD himself require it

Let the LORD himself require it, i.e. Call us to an account, and punish us for it, as that phrase is oft used, as Deut. xxi. 19, 1 Sam. xx. 16, Job x. 6, Ps. l. 13.

24 And if we have not rather done it for fear of this thing, saying, In time to come your children might speak unto our children, saying, What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

You have no relation to him, nor interest in him, or his worship.

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you ye children of Reuben and children of Gad ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD

I border between us and you, to shut you out of the land of Promise, and consequently from the covenant made between God and our fathers. Ye have no part in the LORD, nothing to do with him, no right to serve him or expect favour from him. See the like phrase 2 Sam. x. 1, 1 Chron. 3. John xiv. 8.

26 Therefore we will, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt offering, nor for sacrifice

27 But that it may be a witness between us, and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace offerings, that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD

That we might do the service of the Lord before him, that we and ours may have and hold our privilege of serving and worshipping God, not upon this altar, but in the place of God's presence, in your tabernacle, and upon your altar.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt offerings, nor for sacrifice; but it is a witness between us and you

The pattern, an exact representation and resemblance. A witness between us and you, that we both serve one God, and approve and make use of one and the same altar.

29 God forbid that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt offerings, for meat offering, or for sacrifices, beside the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle

They were fully satisfied with this answer

The Lord is among us by his gracious presence and preventing goodness in keeping you from so great an offence, and all of us from those dismal calamities that would have followed upon it. Out of the hand of the Lord, i. e. from the wrath and dreadful judgments of God, by avoiding that sin which would have involved both you and us in a most bloody war: you have delivered us from the evils we feared. He that prevents in unexpected or approaching disaster or mischief doth us truly deliver a man from it, as he that cures or removes it after it hath been inflicted.

¶ And the children of Reuben and the children of Gad called the altar †Ed for it shall be a witness between us that the LORD is God

CHAP XXIII

Joshua being old assembles the people, declares the wonders God had wrought for them and would work, in expelling the Canaanites. 1-4. I exhorts them to be courageous, to observe the law, and beware of idolatry 5-9, which he enforces by former benefits, and promises, 9-11 by the covenant 12-16

¶ And it came to pass a long time after that the LORD had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies round about, that Joshua waxed old and stricken in age

4 long time about four or five years after it

2 And Joshua called for all Israel, and for their elders, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and said unto them, I am old and stricken in age

Joshua calls for i. e. calls to him witnesses or rather to Shiloh, the usual place of such assemblies where his words being uttered before the Lord were likely to have the more effect upon them. For all Israel, not all the people in their own persons who could not either come thither, or hear him there: but all their representatives by their elders, heads, judges and officers, which are here added for the instruction and expectation of that general expression. And for or, even for, &c.

3 And ye have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto all these nations because of you; for the LORD your God is he that hath fought for you.

Because of you, for your sake and good, that you might gain by their losses

4 Behold, I have divided unto you by lot these nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the great sea westward.

These nations that remain, not yet conquered. To be an inheritance for your tribes, you shall certainly subdue them and inherit their land as you have done the rest, if you be not wanting to yourselves. With all the nations that I have cut off, i. e. with the land of those nations, the people put for their land, as we have seen before, and as sometimes, on the contrary, the land is put for the people. Westward where the Philistines, your most formidable adversaries yet survive, but them also and their land I have given to you and you shall undoubtedly destroy them, if you will proceed vigorously in your work

5 And the LORD your God, he shall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your sight, and ye shall possess their land, as the LORD your God hath promised unto you

6 Be ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses, that ye turn not aside therefrom to the right hand or to the left,

Be ye therefore very courageous, for it will require great courage and resolution to execute all the commands of Moses and particularly that of expelling and destroying the residue of the Canaanites. To the right hand or to the left i. e. in one kind or other, by adding to the law or diminishing from it as Moses speaks

7 That ye come not among these nations these that remain among you, neither make mention of the name of their gods, nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them

Come not among these nations i. e. avoid all familiar converse and contracts, but especially in marriages, with them, as it is explained ver 12 and is the Hebrew word intimating being oft used of coming or going in to a woman. Neither make mention of the name of their gods, to wit unnecessarily and familiarly lest the mention of them breed disesteem about them, and so by degrees bring a man to the approbation and worship of them. Compare Exod. xxiii 13 Deut. xii 3 Psal. cvi 4, Eph. i 3. Nor cause to swear by them, nor require nor compel the Gentiles to swear by them as they used to do, especially in leagues and contracts which therefore the Israelites are here implicitly forbidden to make with them. Neither serve them, i. e. bow yourselves unto them, neither give them any inward reverence or outward adoration. Here is an observable gradation whereby he shows what notable progress sin usually makes and what reason there is to look to the beginnings of it, for as much as a civil and common conversation with their persons was likely to bring them, and indeed did actually bring them, by insensible steps, to the worship of their gods. So it is no wonder if some things not simply and in themselves evil be forbidden by God, as here the naming of their gods is, because they are occasions and introductions to evil

8 But cleave unto the LORD your God, as ye have done unto this day

Cleave unto the Lord, by firm affiance, constant obedience, entire affection, faithful service and worship of him alone. As ye have done unto this day, to wit since ye came into Canaan, since which time the body of the people for of them he speaks not of every particular person, but collected themselves much better than they did in the wilderness, and had not been guilty of any gross and general apostasy from God, or rebellion against him

9 <sup>For the</sup> Lord hath driven out from before you great nations and strong but <sup>as for you,</sup> no man hath been able to stand before you unto this day

To wit, whom you have invaded, otherwise some of those people did yet remain unconquered

10 <sup>One</sup> man of you shall chase a thousand: for the Lord your God, he <sup>is</sup> that fighteth for you, <sup>as</sup> he hath promised you.

He it is that fighteth for you, impute not this therefore to your own valour, as you will be apt to do, but to God's gracious and powerful assistance

11 <sup>Take</sup> good heed therefore unto yourselves, that ye love the Lord your God

Now it requires more watchfulness and diligence than it did in the wilderness, because your temptations are now more and stronger, partly from the examples and insinuations of your bad neighbours, the remainders of this wicked people, and partly from your own peace and prosperity and the pride, security, forgetfulness of God, and luxury which usually attend upon that condition: as God had warned them, Deut vi 10, 12

12 Else if ye do in any wise <sup>go</sup> back, and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, <sup>even</sup> these that remain among you, and shall make marriages with them, and go in unto them, and they to you

If ye go back from God and from his worship and service
Go in unto them, the phrase note the matrimonial act

13 Know for a certainty that <sup>the</sup> Lord your God will no more drive out any of these nations from before you, <sup>but</sup> they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye perish from off this good land which the Lord your God hath given you

They shall be snares and traps unto you by your indulgence to them, and converse with them, you will be enticed and drawn by degrees into their errors, and impieties, and brutish lusts <sup>scourges in your sides, and thorns in your</sup> eyes when they have inveigled, and seduced, and thereby weakened you, then they will molest and vex you no less than a severe scourge doth a man's sides which are lashed by it, or than a small thorn doth the eye when it is got within it <sup>Until ye perish from off this good land</sup> they shall so persecute you, and fight against you with such success, that you shall be forced to quit your own land and wander you know not whither, which must needs be very terrible to them to think of, when they compared this present ease, and plenty, and safety, with the pains and weariness, and hazards, and want, of their former win-derings

14 And, behold, this day <sup>I am</sup> going the way of all the earth and ye know in all your hearts and in all your souls that <sup>not</sup> one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you, all are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

Of all the earth, i. e. of all flesh, or of all men: the way which all men go, I am about to die, as all men must, Heb ix 27 The same phrase is 1 Kings ii <sup>Ye know</sup> in all your hearts and in all your souls, i. e. you know assuredly, your own experience puts it out of all question Not one thing hath failed. Quest How is this true, when so great a part of the promised land and people yet remain unconquered? Answer God promised them to destroy all their enemies, and to give them the whole land, not at once, but by degrees, by little and little as is expressed Deut vii

22, and as was most convenient for them

15 <sup>Therefore</sup> it shall come to pass, that as all good things are come upon you, which the Lord your God promised you; so shall the Lord bring upon you all evil things, until he have destroyed you from off this good land which the Lord your God hath given you.

The accomplishment of God's promises is a pledge or insurance that he will also fulfil his threatenings, both of them depending upon the same ground, the faithfulness of God

16 When ye have transgressed the covenant of the Lord your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and served other gods, and bowed yourselves to them, then shall the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and ye shall perish quickly from off the good land which he hath given unto you

CHAP XXIV

Joshua assembles all the tribes at Shechem. 1 <sup>Brief history</sup> of God's benefits from Israel he exhorts them faithfully to serve the true God, 2-13 Reminds them of a covenant between them and God, promising for himself and his house, the people four several times promising for themselves 11-13
He writes this in the book of the law and sets up a stone for a witness 20-26 His age, death and burial, 29-31
The burying of Joseph's bones, 32 The death and burial of Joshua, 33

AND Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel to Shechem, and called for the elders of Israel, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers; and they presented themselves before
God

Gathered all the tribes of Israel, to wit, by then representatives as Josh xxiii 2 To Shechem, either, 1 To Shiloh, where the ark and tabernacle was, because they were here said to present themselves before God, and because the stone set up here is said to be set up in or by the sanctuary of the Lord of both which I shall speak in their proper places And they say Shiloh is here called Shechem because it was in the territory of Shechem, but that may be doubted, seeing Shiloh was ten miles distant from Shechem, as St Jerome affirms And had he meant Shiloh why should he not express it in its own and proper name, by which it is called in all other places, rather than by another name no where else given to it? Or rather, 2 To the city of Shechem, a place convenient for the present purpose, not only because it was a Levitical city, and a city of refuge, and a place near to Joshua's city, but especially for the two main ends for which he summoned them thither 1 For the solemn burial of the bones of Joseph, as is implied here, ver 32, and of the rest of the patriarchs, as is noted Acts vii 15, 16, for which this place was designed 2 For the solemn renewing of their covenant with God, which in this place was first made between God and Abrahham Gen xii 6, 7, and afterwards was there renewed by the Israelites at their first entrance into the land of Canaan, between the two mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, Josh viii 30, &c, which were very near Shechem, as appears from Judg ix 6, 7, and therefore this place was most proper, both to remind them of their former obligations to God, and to engage them to a further ratification of them Before God, either, 1 Before the ark or tabernacle is that phrase is commonly used, which might be either in Shiloh, where they were fixed, or in Shechem, whither the ark was brought upon this great occasion, as it was sometimes removed upon such occasions, as 1 Sam iv 3, 2 Sam. xv 24 Or, 2 In that public, and venerable, and sacred assembly met together for religious exercises, for in such God is present, Exod xx 24 Psal lxxvii 1, Matt xviii 20 Or, 3 As in God's presence to hear what Joshua was to speak to them in God's name and to receive God's commands from his mouth. Thus Isaac is said to bless Jacob before the Lord i e in his name and presence, Gen xxxii 7, and Ephraim is said to utter all his words before the Lord in Mizpah i e as in God's presence, calling him in to be witness of them

2 And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nachor and they served other gods.

Unto all the people, i e that people which were present, to wit, to the elders &c, by whom it was to be imparted to all the rest and to as many of the people as came thither. The flood, or the river, to wit, Euphrates as all agree, so called by way of eminence. They served other gods, i e both Abraham and Nahor were no less idolaters than the rest of mankind. This is said to prevent their vain boasting in their worthy ancestors, and to assure them that whatsoever good was in or had been done by their progenitors was wholly from God free grace, and not for their own merit or righteousness, as the Jews were very apt to conceit.

3 And I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and multiplied his seed and gave him Isaac.

I took your father. I apprehended him by my grace and snatched him out of that idolatrous and wicked place, and took him into acquaintance and covenant with myself which was the highest honour and happiness he was capable of. I led him throughout all the land of Canaan i e I brought him after his father's death into Canaan Gen xii 1 and I conducted and preserved him in safety in all his travels through the several parts of Canaan. Multiplied his seed i e gave him a numerous posterity not only by Hagar and Keturah but even by Sarah and by Isaac as it follows. Gave him Isaac, by my special power and grace to be the heir of my covenant and all my promises and the seed in or by which all nations were to be blessed Gen xii 2 xvi 2

4 And I gave unto Isaac Jacob and I gave unto Jacob Esau, and I gave unto Esau mount Seir, to possess it, but Jacob and his children went down into Egypt.

I gave unto Isaac Mount Seir i e I gave it that he might leave Canaan entire to his brother Jacob and his posterity. Gen xxxiii 7. Esau and I's children went down into Egypt, where they long lived in grievous bondage which God having delivered us from I shall now pass it over.

5 I sent Moses also and Aaron, and I plagued Egypt, according to that which I did among them and afterward I brought you out.

According to that which I did i e in such manner, and with such plagues as I inflicted and are recorded.

6 And I brought your fathers out of Egypt and ye came unto the sea and the Egyptians pursued after your fathers with chariots and horsemen unto the Red sea.

7 And when they cried unto the Lord, he put darkness between you and the Egyptians and brought the sea upon them and covered them, and your eyes have seen what I have done in Egypt and ye dwelt in the wilderness a long season.

He speaketh thus to the elders, ver 1, who were so, not only by power and dignity, but many of them by age, and there being now not sixty years past since those Egyptian plagues, it is very probable that a considerable number of those here present had seen those things in Egypt, and being not twenty years old, were exempted from that dreadful sentence of destruction, passed upon all who were then of more years standing, Numb xii.

8 And I brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwelt on the other side Jordan, and they fought with you and I gave them into your hand, that ye might possess their land, and I destroyed them from before you.

9 Then Balak the son of Zipper, king of Moab, arose and warred against Israel, and sent and called Balaam the son of Beor to curse you.

Balak warred against Israel. Quest How is this true when Balak did never fight against Israel, Judg. xi 25? Answe One prince may commence a war against another, though he never come to a battle, nor strike one stroke, so Balak warred though not by open force yet by crafty counsel and warlike stratagems, by magical arts by wicked devices, by making brie between them and God their confederate, or by warlike preparations in case Balaam's charms had succeeded, as may be gathered from Numb xxi 11, or at least by design or intention, things being oft said to be done both in Scripture and other authors which were only designed or intended as here ver 11, Gen xxxvii 21, Ezek xxv 13 Matt v 28 John x 32, 33 And the old lawyers note, That he is rightly called a thief in an adulterer's bed, who wanted nothing but occasion to be so.

10 But I would not hearken unto Balak therefore he blessed you still I delivered you out of his hand.

I would therefore hearken unto Balak who here by appears to have desired of God leave to curse Israel and therefore it is not strange that God who permitted him simply to go was highly merry with him for going with so wicked an intent Numb xxi 20 22, 32 Out of his hand, i e from Balak's malicious design against you.

11 And we went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho and the men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, and I delivered them into your hand.

I fought against you, in due opposition against you, by shutting their gates, by endeavouring to cut off your spirits, &c they warred against you if not by an offensive, yet by a defensive war. In the names of these nations he seems to compute all their wars which being so fresh in their memory he thought it needless particularly to mention.

12 And I sent thy hornet before you, which drove them out from before you, even the two kings of the Amorites but not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

The hornet, either 1 Figuratively, i e tedious and plagueous or other destroying judgements. Or 2 Properly so called See on Exod xxiii 28 And this being done before Joshua's entrance into Canaan it is not strange if it be not mentioned in this book or record of Joshua's actions. Not with thy sword nor with thy bow, for though thou didst fight with them and prevail against them in battle, yet this was not because thou hadst more force or courage than they, but because by my hornet, which I sent like a harbinger before thee I had both broken their spirits and greatly diminished their numbers, and particularly cut off those giants or others who were like to give thee most trouble and difficulty, whence it comes to pass that we read of so few giants in that land, which was called the land of giants, Deut iii 13.

13 And I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them, of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do ye eat

14 ¶ Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and in truth, and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt, and serve ye the Lord

In sincerity and in truth; either these two expressions note the same thing, or sincerity is opposed to the mixture of false gods with the true, as it here follows, or of a false and corrupt worship of God with that which God appointed, and truth is opposed to dissimulation and falsehood and instability of heart. Put away the gods, whereby it appears, that although Joshua had doubtless prevented and purged out all public and manifest idolatry yet there were some of them who practised it in their private houses and retirements. See below, ver 23, Amos 5: 26, Acts 17: 23. Your fathers, Israhel, and Nahor, and Abraham, ver 2, and others of your ancestors. On the other side of the flood, and in Egypt see Ezek 34: 19, 21, 27. Under these particulars no doubt he comprehends all other false gods, which were served by the nations amongst whom they were, as appears from ver 15, but only mentions these, as the idols which they were in more danger of worshipping than those in Canaan, partly because those of Canaan had been now lately and palpably disgraced by their inability to preserve their worshippers from total ruin, and partly because the other idols came recommended into them by the venerable name of antiquity and the custom of their forefathers. See Jer 17: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve, whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell. But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord

If it seem evil, unjust unreasonable or inconvenient. Choose you this day whom ye will serve not that he leaves them to their liberty, whether they would serve God or idols, for Joshua had no such power or liberty himself nor could give it to any other and both he and they were obliged by the law of Moses to give their worship to God only, and to forbid all idolatry in themselves and severely to punish it in others but it is a rhetorical and powerful exhortation, whereby he both implies that the worship of God is so highly reasonable, so necessary and beneficial, and the service of idols is so absurd, and vain and pernicious, that if it were left free to all men to make their choice, every man in his right wits must needs choose the service of God before that of idols, and provokes them to bind themselves faster to God by their own choice. See such manner of speeches in Ruth 1: 8, 15, 1 Kings 18: 21. But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord, but know this, if you should all be so hard and brutish as to prefer senseless and impotent idols before the true and living God, it is my firm purpose, that I will, and my children and servants (as far as I can influence them) shall, be constant and faithful to the Lord.

16 And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the Lord, to serve other gods;

17 For the Lord our God, he it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed

18 And the Lord drove out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwell in the land: therefore will we also serve the Lord, for he is our God

19 And Joshua said unto the people, Ye cannot serve the Lord for he is a holy God; he is a jealous God; he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins

Ye cannot serve the Lord he speaks not of an absolute impossibility, (for then both his resolution to serve God himself, and his exhortation to them to do so, had been vain and ridiculous,) but of a moral impossibility, or a very great difficulty, which he allegeth not to discourage them from God's service, which is his great design to engage them in, but only to make them more considerate and cautious in obliging themselves, and more circumspect and resolved in answering their obligations. The meaning is, God's service is not as you seem to fancy, a slight and easy thing, as soon done as said, but it is a work of great difficulty and requires great care and courage, and resolution, and when I consider the minute purity of God, that he will not be mocked or abused, and withal your great and often manifested proneness to superstition and idolatry, even during the life of Moses and in some of you whilst I live, and whilst the obligations which God hath laid upon you in this land are fresh in remembrance, I cannot but fear that after my decease you will think the service of God too hard and burdensome for you and therefore will cast it off, and revolt from him if you do not do unto your watch and carefully avoid all occasions of idolatry which I see you will not do, but I do hereby exhort you to do. He is a jealous God, he will not endure a rival or partner in his worship, you cannot serve him and idols together as you will be inclined and tempted to do. He will not forgive your transgressions if you who own yourselves for his people and servants shall wickedly and wantonly transgress his laws by idolatry or other crimes he will not let this go unpunished in you as he doth in other nations therefore consider what you do when you take the Lord for your God weigh your advantages and inconveniences for thee, for as if you be sincere and faithful in God's service you will have admirable benefit by it, so if you be false to your professions and forsake him whom you have so solemnly avouched to be your God, he will deal more severely with you than with any people in the world.

20 ¶ If ye forsake the Lord, and serve strange gods, then he will turn and do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good

He will turn, i. e. he will alter his course and the manner of his dealing with you, and will be as severe as ever he was kind and precious. Consume you, after that he hath done you good, he will repay of all his former kindness, and his goodness abused will be turned into fury

21 And the people said unto Joshua, Nay; but we will serve the Lord

Not him only, and not strange gods, as was supposed by Joshua, ver 20

22 And Joshua said unto the people, Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen you the Lord, to serve him. And they said, We are witnesses

We are witnesses against yourselves, this solemn profession will be a swift witness against you, if here after you apostatize from God

23 Now therefore put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you, and incline your heart unto the Lord God of Israel

The strange gods which are among you, those idols which you either brought out of Egypt, or have taken in Canaan, which I have too much reason to believe that some of you, contrary to God's command, do keep whether for the privacy of the matter, or rather for some secret inclination to superstition and idolatry, as the following words imply. See ver. 14.

24 And the people said unto Joshua, The LORD our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

25 So Joshua made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance in Shechem.

Either, 1. He set, or propounded, or declared unto them the statute and ordinance, i. e. the sum of the statutes and ordinances of God, which their covenant obliged them to Ob. 2. He set or established it to wit, that covenant, with them, i. e. the people, for a statute or an ordinance, to bind themselves and their posterity unto God for ever, as a statute and ordinance of God doth

26 ¶ And Joshua wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone, and set it up there under an oak, that was by the sanctuary of the LORD.

These words i. e. this covenant or agreement of the people with the Lord. In the book of the law of God, i. e. in that volume which was kept in the ark, Deut. xxxi. 9, 26. whence it was taken and put into this book of Joshua. This he did, partly, for the perpetual remembrance of this great and solemn action, partly, to lay the greater obligation upon the people to be true to their engagement, and partly as a witness for God and against the people if afterwards he severely punished them for their defection from God to whom they had so solemnly and freely obliged themselves. Set it up there is a witness and monument of this great transaction, according to the custom of those ancient times as Gen. xxviii. 18, xxxi. 13, xxxv. 11 Exod. xxiv. 4, Deut. xxvii. 2, Josh. iv. 3, viii. 32. Possibly the agreement was written upon this stone, as was then usual. Under an oak that was by the sanctuary of the Lord i. e. near to the place where the ark and tabernacle then were, but though they were forbidden to plant a grove of trees near unto the altar Deut. xvi. 21, as the Gentiles did yet they might for a time set up an altar or the ark near a grove of trees which had been planted there before.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, Behold, this stone shall be a witness unto us for it hath heard all the words of the LORD which he spake unto us: it shall be therefore a witness unto you, lest ye deny your God.

It hath heard, it shall be as sure a witness against you as if it had heard. This is a common figure, called prosopopoeia, whereby the sense of hearing is oft ascribed to the heavens and the earth, and other senseless creatures, as Deut. xxxii. 1, Isa. i. 2, Jer. ii. 12.

28 So Joshua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

29 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

30 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-herah, which is in mount Ephraim, on the north side of the hill of Gaash.

31 And Israel served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that overhived Joshua, and which had known all the works of the LORD, that he had done for Israel.

32 ¶ And the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Shechem, in a parcel of ground which Jacob bought of the sons of Hamor the father of Shechem for an hundred pieces of silver: and it became the inheritance of the children of Joseph.

In Shechem, not in the city of Shechem but in a field near and belonging to it, as appears from the following words, and from Gen. xxxiii. 18. and from the ancient custom of the Israelites to have their burying place without cities, in a field or grove.

33 And when the son of Aaron died, and they buried him in a hill that pertained to Phinehas his son, which was given him in mount Ephraim.

By special favour and for his better convenience in attending upon the ark which then was, and for a long time was to be, in Shiloh, which was near to this place, where as the cities which were given to the priests were in Judah, Benjamin, and Simeon, which were remote from Shiloh, though near to the place where the ark was to have its settled abode, to wit, to Jerusalem.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES.

THE ARGUMENT

THE author of this book is not certainly known, whether it was Samuel, or Ezra, or some other prophet; nor is it material to know. It matters not who was the king, or secretary, or with what pen it was written, if it be once known that it was the king who made the order or decree: it is sufficient that unto the Jews were committed the oracles of God, Rom. iii. 2, i. e. the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament, one part of which this was, by confession of all, and that the Jews did not falsify their trust therein, but kept those Holy books themselves, and delivered them to the world, entire without addition or diminution, for neither Christ nor his apostles, who severely rebuked them for their mistakes and misunderstandings of some passages of Scripture, ever charged them with any perfidiousness about the canon or books of the Scripture. This book is called the Book of Judges, because it treats of the judges, or of the state of the commonwealth of Israel under all the judges, except Eli and Samuel, who being the last of the judges, and the occasions or instruments of the change of his government are omitted in this book. The judges were a sort of magistrates inferior to kings, and could neither make new laws nor impose any tributes, but were the supreme executors of God's law, and commands, and the generals of their armies.

CHAP. I.

The tribe of Judah, by God's command, begin to make war against the Canaanites, 1--3. Adoni-bezek justly requited,

5--7. They take Jerusalem, 8, and Hebron. Anak's sons slain, 9. 10. Othniel subdueth Debir, and so obtaineth Caleb's daughter to wife, 11--15. The Kenites dwell in Judah, 16. Simeon subdueth Zephath, 17, and Judah the more strong of the Philistines, 18—20. The Jebusites dwell with Benjamin, 21. They of the house of Joseph subdue Beth-el, 22—26. Manasseh, Ephraim, Zebulun, Asher, Naphthali, Dan drive not out the Canaanites, for which they are blamed by them, and are left to dwell one among another, 27—30.

NOW after the death of Joshua it came to pass, that the children of Israel asked the Lord, saying, Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first, to fight against them?

After the death of Joshua, not long after it, because Othniel, the first judge, lived in Joshua's time. The children of Israel asked the Lord, being assembled together at Shiloh, they inquired of the high priest by the Urim and Thummim. See Numb xxvii 21, Judg xx 18, 1 Sam xlii 9. Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first? Being sensible that the Canaanites are troublesome to them, and expected great advantage against them by their heedless condition, and finding their people to increase and multiply exceedingly, and consequently the necessity of enlarging their quarters, they renew the war. They do not inquire who shall be the captain general to all the tribes, but (as appears by the answer) what tribe shall first undertake the expedition, that by their success the other tribes may be encouraged to make the like attempt upon the Canaanites in their several lots.

2 And the Lord said, Judah shall go up; behold, I have delivered the land into his hand.

Not a person so called, but the tribe of Judah, as is manifest from ver 3, 4, 8, 9, which is chosen for the first enterprise, because they were both most populous and so most needing enlargement, and withal most valiant, and therefore most likely to succeed, for God chooseth fit means for the work which he designs, and because the Canaanites were numerous and strong in those parts, and therefore were in time to be suppressed, before they grew too strong for them.

3 And Judah said unto Simeon his brother, Come up with me into my lot, that we may fight against the Canaanites; and I likewise will go with thee into thy lot. So Simeon went with him.

Unto Simeon his brother, i. e. nearest to him both by relation, being his brother by both parents, which few of them were, and by habitation, as appears from Josh xix 1, 2. Against the Canaanites, specially so called, because they are distinguished from the Perizzites, ver 1.

4 And Judah went up, and the Lord delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hand; and they slew of them in Bezek ten thousand men.

Not in the city, for that was not yet taken, ver 5, but in the territory of it, or near to it, as in Hor is taken, Numb xxxiii 37, and in Jericho, Josh 13.

5 And they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek; and they fought against him, and they slew the Canaanites and the Perizzites.

Adoni-bezek, the lord or king of Bezek, as his name signifies, in Bezek, whither he fled, when he had lost the field. Against him, i. e. against the city wherein he had encamped himself, and the rest of his army.

6 But Adoni-bezek fled, and they pursued after him, and caught him, and cut off his thumbs and his great toes.

That he might be disabled to fight with his hand, or to run away upon his feet. And thus they did, either by the secret instinct and direction of God, or upon notice of his former tyranny and cruelty expressed upon others in this manner, as it follows. Either way it was a just requital.

7 And Adoni-bezek said, Threescore and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table, as I have done, so God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem, and there he died.

Threescore and ten kings, which is not strange in those times and places; for these might be either, first, kings successively, and so there might be divers of those kings in one place, and so in others, or, secondly, contemporary kings. For it is well known that anciently each ruler of a city, or great town, was called a king, and had kingly power in that place; and many such kings we meet with in Canaan, and it is probable that some years before kings were more numerous there, till the greater devoured many of the less. Having their thumbs cut off, that so their hands might be unable to manage weapons of war. Gathered their meat under my table, an act of barbarous inhumanity thus to insult over the miserable, joined with abominable luxury. God hath requited me, he acknowledgeth the providence and vindictive justice of God, which also Pharaoh did, and others too, without any true sense of piety. They brought him, they carried him in triumph, as a monument of God's righteous vengeance. To Jerusalem, it being the metropolis of the nation.

8 Now the children of Judah had fought against Jerusalem, and had taken it, and smitten it with the edge of the sword, and set the city on fire.

To wit, in Joshua's time, which though done before, may be here repeated, to show why they brought Adoni-bezek to Jerusalem, because that city was in their hands, having been taken before, as may be gathered from Josh xv 63. And the taking of this city may be ascribed to the children of Judah rather than to Joshua, because the city was not taken by Joshua and the whole body of the army in that time when so many kings were destroyed, Josh x, xi. (for there is mention made of the destroying of the king of Jerusalem Josh x 23, xi 10, but not a word of the taking of Jerusalem, as there is of the taking of Makkedah, and Libnah, and other cities belonging to the kings there mentioned, Josh x 28 &c.) but by the children of Judah after they had received their lot, when it was divided, and with the consent of the Benjamites, in whose lot Jerusalem fell Josh xviii 28, they joined and took it, and thereby, as it seems, acquired the right of copartnership with the Benjamites in the possession of that city. Though some think Jerusalem was twice taken, once in Joshua's lifetime, and being afterward recovered by the Canaanites, was now retaken by the children of Judah.

9 And afterward the children of Judah went down to fight against the Canaanites, that dwell in the mountain, and in the south, and in the valley.

10 And Judah went against the Canaanites that dwell in Hebron (now the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba) and they slew Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai.

Judah went under the conduct of Caleb, as it is recorded Josh xv 11, &c., for that relation, and thus here following, are doubtless one and the same expedition and war, as appears by all the circumstances; and it is mentioned either there by anticipation, or here by repetition. Of this and the following verses, see the notes there.

11 And from thence he went against the inhabitants of Debir, and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher.

12 And Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.

13 And Othniel the son of Caleb, (Caleb's younger brother, took it, and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.)

14 And it came to pass, when she came to him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field and she lighted from off her ass, and Caleb said unto her, What wilt thou?

16 ¶ And the children of the Kenite, Moses' father in law, went up out of the city of palm trees with the children of Judah into the wilderness of Judah, which is in the south of <sup>the</sup> Arad and they went and dwelt among the people

Children of the Kenite, i.e. of Jethro so called from the people from whom he descended Numb xxiv 21, 22. And whatsoever he did it is evident that his posterity came into Canaan with the Israelites, and were there seated with them. See Jer. xl 11 17, y 24 1 Sam xv 6 1 Chron ii 35. Out of the city of palm trees i.e. from Feicho so called Jer. xxxiv 3 not the city which was utterly destroyed but the territory belonging to it where it seems they were seated as in a most pleasant and fruitful and safe place, according to the promise made by Moses to their father Numb x 31 32 and whence they might remove either to avoid the society or molestation of the neighbouring Canaanites, or out of love to the children of Judah whom they went to, or to avoid temptations to luxury, and exercise themselves in self denial and contempt of the present evil world, and the like is there of, as may be thought from Jer. xxxv 6 &c., or for some other cause unknown to us at this distance. In the south of Arad in the southern part of the land of Canaan where Arad was Numb xxi 1. They went i.e. some of them, for others of them dwelt in the contrary quarter in the most northern part of the land. Among the people Heb. that people to wit the children of Judah that lived there.

Judah went with Simeon his brother, according to his promise ver 3, and the laws of justice and gratitude. Hormah, either 1. The same place so destroyed and called, Numb xxi 3 and so what was there vowed is here executed. or 2. Some other place called by the same name upon the like occasion in which was frequent among the Hebrews. This seems more probable. 1. Because this was but one city, that destroyed Numb xxi 2 3. 2. Because the seems to have been done in Moses' time, though interpreted generally think otherwise of which see my notes there.

18 Also Judah took Giza with the coast thereof, and Askelon with the coast thereof, and Ekron with the coast thereof.

The principal cities of the Philistines. Quest. How could this be when among the people left to try Israel are the five lords of the Philistines, Jud. iii 3? Answer. It is only said that they took the cities and probably contented themselves with making them tributary, but it is not said that they slew the people as they ought to have done, and as it is said of the other cities here ver 5, 17 25. And the people being thus spared did by God's just punishment recover their strength and expelled the Jews out of their cities, as we find afterwards. It is not observable, that Ekron here taken was one of the five cities, Josh xiv 13, and it was attempted and taken here by Judah and Simeon partly out of love to their father David and partly to secure their new conquest, and other adjoining territories from such potent neighbours.

An angel reprimeth Israel at Bechim, they bewail their sins, 1—5. The wickedness of the new generation after Joshua, the frequent idolatry 6—13, for which they are often punished of God by the enemy, and being declared by the judges grow worse, 14—19, wherefore God will leave the Canaanite to prove and vex them, 20—23

<sup>1</sup> c. <sup>1</sup> Josh. 27. 11 ¶ And an angel of the Lord came up from Gilgal, to Bechim, and said, I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I swore unto your fathers, and I said, I will never break my covenant with you

An angel of the Lord either first A created angel. Or, secondly, A prophet or man of God, for such are sometime called angels, which signifies only messengers of God, and then the following words are spoken by him in the name of God, as may easily be understood. Or thirdly, Christ, the Angel of the covenant, who is oft called the Angel of the Lord, as we have formerly seen to whom the conduct of Israel out of Egypt, and through the wilderness, and into Canaan, here spoken of is frequently ascribed, as Exod. xiv 19, xxiii 20, xxxiii 14, Josh. v 13 11, Judg. vi 12, viii 3, who alone of all the angels could speak the following words in his own name and person: whereas created angels and prophets do universally usher in their Divine messages with, Thus saith the Lord, or some equivalent expression. And this angel having assumed the outward shape of a man, it is not strange that he imitates the local motion of a man, and comes as it were from Gilgal to the place where now they were, by which motion he signified that he was the person that brought them to Gilgal, the first place where they rested in Canaan, and there renewed covenant with them, and protected them there so long, and from thence went out with them to battle, and gave them success. Bechim, a place so called here by anticipation, for the reason expressed here ver. 5. And it seems to be no other than Shiloh, where it seems probable that the people were met together upon some solemn festival. And this was the proper and usual place of sacrificing, ver. 5. And I said, i. e. I promised, upon condition of your keeping covenant with me

2 And ye shall make no league with the inhabitants of this land: ye shall throw down their altars: but ye have not obeyed my voice: why have ye done this?

3 Wherefore I also said, I will not drive them out from before you: but they shall be as thorns in your sides, and their gods shall be a snare unto you

I also said with myself, I have now taken up this peremptory resolution. Thorns in your sides see on Numb. xxviii 5, Josh. xxiii 13

1 And it came to pass, when the angel of the Lord spake these words unto all the children of Israel, that the people lifted up their voice, and wept

Some of them from a true sense of their sins: but most of them from a just apprehension of their danger and approaching misery from the Canaanites growing power, and God's forsaking of them, as the following history makes most probable

5 And they called the name of that place Bechim: and they sacrificed there unto the Lord

For the expiation of their sins, by which they had provoked God to this resolution, and for the securing of God's favour

6 ¶ And when Joshua had let the people go, the children of Israel went every man unto his inheritance to possess the land

When Joshua had let the people go, when he had distributed their inheritances and dismissed them severally to take possession of them. This was done before this time, whilst Joshua lived, but is now repeated in order to the discovery of the time, and cause, on occasion of the people's defection from God, and of God's desertion of them

7 ¶ And the people served the Lord all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that continued Joshua, who had seen all the great works of the Lord, that he did for Israel

8 And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the Lord, died, being an hundred and ten years old

9 ¶ And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-heres, in the mount of Ephraim, on the north side of the hill Gaash

Timnath heres called Timnath serah, Josh. xix 50, xxi 30

10 And also all that generation were gathered unto their fathers: and there arose another generation after them, which knew not the Lord, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel

Which knew not the Lord, which had no experimental nor serious and affectionate knowledge of God nor of his works

11 ¶ And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord, and served Baalim

In the sight of the Lord, which notes the heinousness and the impudence of their sins above other people's sins; because God's presence was with them, and his eye upon them, in a peculiar manner, and he did narrowly observe all their actions, which also they were not ignorant of, and therefore were guilty of more contempt of God than other people. Beastly, i. e. like gods. He useth the plural number, because the gods of the Canaanites and adjoining nations, which Israel worshipped, were divers, and most of them called by the name of Baal.

12 And they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed other gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and bowed themselves unto them, and provoked the LORD to anger.

13 And they forsook the LORD, and served Baal and Ashtaroth.

i. e. The sun and the moon, whom many heathens worshipped though under divers names, and so they ran into that error which God had so expressly warned them against, Deut. iv. 19.

14 ¶ And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and he sold them into the hands of their enemies round about, so that they could not any longer stand before their enemies.

Sold them i. e. delivered them up as the seller doth his commodities unto the buyer. Thus the same phrase is used Judg. in 8, iv. 9 compared with ver. 11, Psal. xiv. 12.

15 Whithersoever they went out, the hand of the LORD was against them for evil, as the LORD had said, and the LORD had sworn unto them: and they were greatly distressed.

Whithersoever they went out i. e. what ever expedition or business they undertook, which is usually signified by going out and coming in.

16 ¶ Nevertheless the LORD raised up judges, which delivered them out of the hand of those that spoiled them.

The LORD raised them up, by inward inspiration and exaltation of their minds and hearts, and by outward designation, testified by some heroic and extraordinary action. Judges, i. e. supreme magistrates, whose office it was under God, and by his particular direction to govern the community of Israel by God's law, and to protect and save them from their enemies, to preserve and purify religion, to maintain the liberty of the people, and to suppress all oppressors. See Judg. in 9, 10, 15 &c. iv. 1, vi. 25, 26, viii. 23.

17 And yet they would not hearken unto their judges, but they went a whoring after other gods, and bowed themselves unto them: they turned quickly out of the way which their fathers walked in, obeying the commandments of the LORD, but they did not so.

Their judges admonished them of their sin and folly, and of the danger and misery which would certainly befall them.

18 And when the LORD raised them up judges, then the LORD was with the judge, and delivered them out of the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge: for it is said the LORD because of their grievings by reason of them that oppressed them and vexed them.

It repented the LORD, i. e. the LORD changed his course and dealings with them, as penitent men use to do, removed his judgments, and returned to their mercy. Gen. vi. 6.

19 And it came to pass, when the judge was dead, that they returned, and corrupted themselves more than their fathers, in following other gods to serve them, and to bow down unto them: they ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way.

They returned to their former, and usual, and natural though interrupted course More than their fathers, i. e. Egypt or in the wilderness. From their own doings, i. e. from their evil practices, which he calls their own, partly because they were agreeable to their own natures, which in all mankind are deeply and universally corrupted, Gen. vi. 5, viii. 21, and partly because they were familiar and customary to them. Compare Isa. lviii. 13, lvi. 3; Jerk. xxxvi. 32, Acts. xiv. 16, Jude. 16. Their stubborn way, i. e. hard way, so he calls their way of wickedness, either because it proceeded from a hard heart, and was managed with a hard and stiff neck, or to signify, that although it seemed at first very soft, and easy and pleasant, yet they would certainly, and did constantly, find that it was hard and difficult, and troublesome to them, as a hard way is to the traveller.

20 ¶ And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel, and he said, Because that this people hath transgressed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened unto my voice, 21 I also will not henceforth drive out any from before them of the nations which Joshua left when he died.

22 ¶ That through them I may prove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not.

That I may prove Israel, either first, that I may try and see whether Israel will be true and faithful to me, or whether they will suffer themselves to be corrupted by the evil counsels and examples of their bad neighbours, whom I will leave among them for their trial and exercise. Or secondly, that by them I may afflict and punish Israel, for afflictions are commonly and justly called trials. But the former sense suits better with the following words.

23 Therefore the LORD left those nations, without driving them out hastily, neither delivered he them into the hand of Joshua.

Hastily, or, speedily, when the Israelites desired it, and needed it.

CHAP. III.

The nations left to prove Israel mentioned, 1-4 The Israelites marrying their daughters, and serving their gods: they are delivered up to the king of Mesopotamia, are rescued by Othniel 5-11 (Continuing to do evil they are again punished and oppressed by the king of the Moabites, are rescued by Ehud ten thousand Moabites are slain 12-30) They are afterwards delivered from the Philistines by Samson, 31

NOW these are the nations which the LORD left, to prove Israel by them, even as many of Israel as had not known all the wars of Canaan,

i. e. Such who had no experience of those wars nor of God's extraordinary power and providence manifested in them.

2 Only that the generations of the children of Israel might know, to teach them war, at the last such as before knew nothing thereof,

Might know, to teach them war, that by the neighbourhood of such warlike and potent enemies, they might be purged from sloth and security, and obliged to insure themselves to martial exercises, and to stand continually upon their guard, and consequently to keep close to that God whose assistance they had so great and constant need of

Josh. 12. 2. 3 Namely, five lords of the Philistines, and all the Canaanites, and the Sidonians, and the Hivites that dwelt in Mount Lebanon, from mount Baal-hermon unto the entering in of Hamath

Josh. 12. 2. 9 ¶ And when the children of Israel cried unto the Lord, the Lord raised up a deliverer to the children of Israel, who delivered them, even Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother

Josh. 12. 2. 10 Cried unto the Lord, i. e. prayed fervently for deliverance Caleb's younger brother, of which see on Judg i 13

Josh. 12. 2. 10 And the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he judged Israel, and went out to war and the Lord delivered Chushan-rishathaim king of Mesopotamia into his hand, and his hand prevailed against Chushan-rishathaim.

The Spirit of the Lord came upon him, with extraordinary influences, endowing him with singular wisdom, and courage, and resolution, and stirring him up to this great undertaking. Compare Judg vi 34, xi 29 He judged Israel, i. e. pleaded and avenged the cause of Israel against their oppressors; as that phrase is oft used, as Deut. xxxii. 36; Psal x. 18; xlii 1

11 And the land had rest forty years And Othniel the son of Kenaz died

The land had rest, either, first, It rested about forty years, or the greatest part of forty years; it being most frequent in Scripture to use numbers in such a latitude. Thus the Israelites are said to bear their iniquities forty years in the wilderness, Numb xiv 34, when there waited near two years of that number, and to dwell in Egypt four hundred and thirty years, when there waited many years of that number. Thus Joseph & kindred, sent for and called by him into Egypt are numbered seventy-five souls, Acts vi 14, although they were but seventy, as is affirmed Gen xli 27, Exod i 5 So here the land is said to rest forty years although they were in servitude eight of those years, ver 8 And in like manner the land is said to have rest eighty years, though eighteen of them they served the king of Moab ver 11 And so in some other instances. Nor is it strange and unusual, either in Scripture or in other authors, for things to be denominated from the greater part, as here it was especially when they did enjoy some degrees of rest and peace, even in their times of slavery which here they did. Or, secondly, It rested, i. e. began to rest or recovered its interrupted rest, in the fortieth year either after Jotham's death, or after the first and famous rest procured for them by Joshua, as is noted, Heb ix 9 when he destroyed and subdued the Canaanites and gave them quiet possession of the land, and the land had rest from war, as is said, Josh xi 23, xiv 19

So there is this difference between the years of civility and oppression and those of rest, that in the former he tells us how long it lasted in the latter, when it began, by which, compared with the other years it was easy also to know how long the rest lasted To strengthen this interpretation, two things must be noted 1 That resting is here put for beginning to rest as to begin is put for to begin to begin, Gen x 32, xi 26 and to begin to begin, to reign, 2 Sam ii 10 and to build, 1 Kings xi 13, 24, for to begin to build, 2 Chron i 2 That forty years is put for the fortieth year, the ordinal number for the ordinal, which is common both in the Holy Scripture, as Gen i 5 ii 11 Exod xii 2, 11; 1 Mark xvi 2 and in other authors

12 ¶ And the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the Lord and the Lord strengthened Eglon the king of Moab against Israel, because they had done evil in the sight of the Lord

Strengthened Eglon, by giving him courage, and power, and success against them

13 And he gathered unto him the children of Ammon and Amalek, and went and smote Israel, and possessed the city of palm trees

Josh. 12. 2. 14 Jericho as may be gathered from Deut xxxiv 2, Judg i 16 2 Chron xxviii 15 Not the city, which was demolished, but the territory belonging to it Here he fixed his camp partly for the admirable fertility of that soil, and partly because of its nearness to the passage over Jordan which was most commodious, both for the conjunction of his own forces, which lay on both sides of Jordan and to prevent the conjunction of the Israelites in Canaan with their brethren beyond Jordan, and to secure his retreat into his own country, which therefore the Israelites prevented, ver 28

14 So the children of Israel served Eglon the king of Moab eighteen years

15 But when the children of Israel cried unto the Lord, the Lord raised up a deliverer, Ehud the son of Gera, a Benjamite, a man left-handed and by him the children of Israel sent a present unto Eglon the king of Moab

A Benjaminite, Heb. the son of Gemur, who was of the tribe of Benjamin, 2 Sam xvi 11, xix 17, 1 Kings ii 8 This tribe was next to him, and doubtless most afflicted by him; and hence God saith deliverer. Left-handed, which is here noted, partly as a mark of his courage, and strength, and activity, see Judge xx 16, and principally as a considerable circumstance in the following story, whereby he might more advantageously and unsuspectingly give the deadly blow

16 But Ehud made him a dagger which had two edges, of a cubit length, and he did gird it under his raiment upon his right thigh

A cubit length long enough for his design, and not too long for carriage and concealment. Upon his right thigh, which was most convenient, both for the use of his left hand, and for the avoiding of suspicion

17 And he brought the present unto Eglon king of Moab: and Eglon was a very fat man

The present was to be paid to him as a part of his tribute. A very fat man: and therefore more unwieldy and unable to ward off Ehud's blow

18 And when he had made an end to offer the present, he sent away the people that bare the present

He accompanied them part of the way, and then dismissed them, and returned to Eglon alone that so he might have more easy access to him, and privacy with him: and that he might the better make his escape

19 But he himself turned again from the quarries that were by Gilgal, and said, I have a secret errand unto thee, O king: who said keep silence. And all that stood by him went out from him

He turned again, as if he had forgot to mention some important business. Turned again, either first. When they heard these words. Secondly. The twelve times which Elisha stood up there, by the multitude of him was amounted to his work. Thirdly. He does in the word also includes which that he then stood in place there either in spite and contempt to the Eglonite, who had that place in great veneration, or that he might secure his conquest of the land to his idols as the Eglonite did to the true God, by setting up this monument in the entrance or beginning of it. Keep silence till my errands be done, whom he would not have acquainted with a business which he supposed to be of great and close importance

20 And Ehud came unto him: and he was sitting in a summer parlour, which he had for himself alone. And Ehud said, I have a message from God unto thee. And he rose out of his seat

They had divers houses and chambers some for winter, other for summer. See Jer xxxvi 22. Amos iii 15. What he had for himself alone, into which he used to retire himself from company, which is mentioned as the reason why his servants waited so long ere they went in to him. 20. I have a message to be delivered not in words but by action. Heb. a word of thy tongue or business. So that there is no need to charge Ehud with lying, as some do. Turned again, he saith to amuse him by raising his expectation and would to have it him from any apprehension of his danger, and to charge him to rise out of his seat which he knew he would do from the common practice of the heathens in their intercourse with God. And he designedly useth the name Ehud, since it was common to the true God and these ones, and not Jehovah which was peculiar to the true God, because Ehud not knowing who that the message came not from his own father, he would rise certainly rise, and thereby lay. Ehud more advantage for his blow, whereas he could possibly show his contempt of the God of Israel by sitting still to hear his message. To arise out of his seat in token of humble subjection and reverence to God, see Psalm xxi 18, 2 Kings xxiii 3, which con- demns those Christians that behave themselves irreverently in the presence and service of the true God.

21 And Ehud put forth his left hand, and took the dagger from his right thigh, and thrust it into his belly

22 And the haft also went in after the blade; and the fat closed upon the blade, so that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly, and the dirt came out

His excrements came forth, not at the wound, which closed up, but at the fundament, as is usual when persons die either a natural or violent death

23 Then Ehud went forth through the porch, and shut the doors of the parlour upon him, and locked them

Ehud went forth, with a composed countenance and gait, without any fear, being well assured that God, who by his extraordinary call had put him upon that enterprise, would by his special providence preserve him, and carry him through it. Upon him, either upon the king, or upon or after himself. Locked them, either by pulling it close after him as we do when doors have spring-locks, or by taking the key with him for more caution, and thus he did that they supposing the king to be retired, might wait till he was gone

24 When he was gone out, his servants came: and when they saw that, behold, the doors of the parlour were locked, they said, Surely he covereth his feet in his summer chamber

Covereth his feet, this phrase is used only here and 1 Sam xvi 3. It is commonly understood in both places of using nativity, because the men not then wearing breeches, as we do but long coats, they did in that act cover their feet as women do: but a late judicious interpreter explains it of composing himself to take a little sleep or rest, as was very usual to do in the day time in those hot countries. 2 Sam xv 5, vi 2. And when they did so, a good place, such as this summer parlour unquestionably was they used to cover their feet as appears in 1 Ruth 7. And thus may seem to be the more probable, had he come to the summer parlour was more proper for this use than the former: and because this was a more likely reason for their long waiting at his door lest they should disturb his repose. And this sense best agrees with Saul's case in the cave, when being asleep David could more securely cut off the tip of his garment. 1 Sam xxiv 3, where see my annotations

25 And they tarried till they were ashamed: and, behold, he opened the doors of the parlour: therefore they took a key, and opened them: and, behold, their lord was fallen down dead on the earth

Ashamed or confounded not knowing what to say or think, lest they should either disturb him, or be guilty of neglect towards him. A key, another key, it being usual in such courts to have divers keys for the same door

26 And Ehud escaped while they tarried, and passed beyond the quarries, and escaped unto Seirath

27 And it came to pass, when he was come, that he blew a trumpet in the mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Israel went down with him from the mount, and he before them

Doubtless he had prepared the children of Israel, and his emissaries gathered together in considerable numbers

28 And he said unto them, Follow after me: for the Lord hath delivered your enemies the Moabites into your hand. And they went down after him, and took the fords of Jordan toward Moab, and suffered not a man to pass over

The Jords, where they passed over Jordan, that neither the Moabites that were got into Canaan might escape, nor any more Moabites come over Jordan to their succour.

29 And they slew of Moab at that time about ten thousand men, all † lusty, and all men of valour, and there escaped not a man.

30 So Moab was subdued that day under the hand of Israel. And the land had rest fourscore years.

How these are to be understood, see on ver 11. Instead of eighty, some copies read eight years.

31 ¶ And after him was Shamgar the son of Anath, which slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox goad; and he also delivered Israel.

Slew six hundred men with an ox-goad, as Samson did a thousand with the jaw-bone of an ass, both being miraculous actions, and not at all incredible to him that believes a God, who could easily give strength both to the persons and to their weapons to effect this.

CHAP. IV.

King Jabin oppresses Israel, his captain-general was Sisera, 1—3. The prophetess Deborah from the Lord commands Barak to go out against him, promising victory, she herself marcheth with him, 4—11. Sisera's host is beaten, he flees. Jael hides him in her tent and while he sleeps she kills him, 15—23. King Jabin is destroyed, 24.

AND the children of Israel again did evil in the sight of the Lord, when Ehud was dead.

2 And the Lord sold them into the hand of Jabin king of Canaan, that reigned in Hazor, the captain of whose host was Sisera, which dwelt in Harosheth of the Gentiles.

King of Canaan, i. e. of the land where the most of the Canaanites, strictly so called, now dwell, which seems to be in the northern part of Canaan. This seems to be of the posterity of that Jabin, whom Joshua slew Josh. xi 10, who watched all opportunities to recover his ancient possessions, and to revenge his own and father's quarrel upon the Israelites. In Hazor, either 1. In the city of Hazor, which though taken and burnt by Joshua, chap. xi 11, yet might be retaken and rebuilt by the Canaanites. Or 2. The territory or kingdom of Hazor, which might now be restored to its former largeness and power. Josh. xi 10, the names of cities being oft put for the territories. Sisera, a city, Josh. xv 33, is put for the fields belonging to it. Judge and 2, in which Samson's parents lived. Judg. xxi 25, xvi 31, xviii 2. Harosheth of the Gentiles, so called, because it was much frequented and inhabited by the Gentiles; either by the Canaanites, who being driven out of their former possessions, sought themselves in the northern parts, or by other nations coming thither for traffic, or upon other occasions, as Strabo notes of those parts, whither Galilee, where this was, is called Galilee of the Gentiles.

3 And the children of Israel cried unto the Lord, for he had nine hundred chariots of iron, and twenty years he mightily oppressed the children of Israel.

More than the former tyrants, partly from his malice and hatred against the Israelites, and principally from God's just judgment, the growing punishment being most suitable to their aggravated wickedness.

4 ¶ And Deborah, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, she judged Israel at that time.

As there were men prophets, so there were also women prophetesses, as Miriam, Exod. xv 20, Huldah, 2 Kings xxii 14, and divers others; but the word propheta or prophetesses is very ambiguous in both Testaments, sometimes being used of persons extraordinarily inspired by God, and endowed with a power of working miracles, and foretelling things to come, and sometimes of persons endowed with special, though not miraculous gifts or graces, for the better understanding of and discoursing about the word and mind of God, for praising of God, or the like, of which see 1 Chron. xxi 1, 1 Cor. xi 5, xiv 1, 3, 4, &c. And of this sort were the sons of the prophets, or such who were bred in the schools of the prophets, who are oft called prophets, as 1 Sam. x. 5, 10—12. See also 1 Kings. xviii 1; xiv. 10. And because we read nothing of Deborah's miraculous actions, peradventure she was only a woman of eminent holiness and prudence, and knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, by which she was singularly qualified for the judging of the people according to the laws of God. If it be alleged that she foretold and foretold the following victory, so did all the sons of the prophets forever and foretold Elijah's translation, 2 Kings ii. 1, 5, which yet were not extraordinary prophets. The wife of Lapidoth, or, a woman of Lapidoth, and so Lapidoth is not the name of a man, but of the place of her birth or abode. She judged Israel, i. e. determined causes and controversies arising among the Israelites, as is implied ver. 5. And thus Jabin might suffer to be done especially by a woman, and the frequent discharge of this part of the judge's office, whereby she gained great power and authority with the people, did notably (though not observed by the tyrant) prepare the way for her hiding into the other part of her office, which was to defend and rescue the people from their enemies.

5 And she dwelt under the palm tree of Deborah between Ramah and Beth-el in mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel came up to her for judgment.

To have their suits and causes determined by her sentence.

6 And she sent and called Barak the son of Abinam out of Kedesh-naphthali, and said unto him, Hath not the Lord God of Israel commanded, saying, Go and draw toward mount Tabor, and take with thee ten thousand men of the children of Naphthali and of the children of Zebulun?

She sent and called Barak, by virtue of that power which God had given her, and the people owed in her. Kedesh-naphthali, so called to distinguish it from other places of that name, one in Judah, Josh. xv. 23, and another in Issachar, 1 Chron. vi. 72. Hath not the Lord God of Israel commanded? i. e. assuredly God hath commanded thee; this is not the timor of a weak woman, which peradventure thou mayest despise, but the command of the great God by my mouth. Which command of God and the following assurance of success, she might either gather from the general rules of Scripture, and the common consent of God's gracious providence, which was always ready to succour them when they cried to God, or receive by instinct or direction from God. Go and draw, or go, for so this word is oft used, as Gen. xxxvii 28, Judg. ix. 37, Job xxi 33. Heb. draw, to wit, thyself, or thy feet. Mount Tabor, a place most fit for his purpose, is being in the borders of divers tribes, and having a large plain at the top of it, where he might conveniently muster and discipline his army. She names Naphthali and Zebulun, partly, because they were nearest and best known to Barak, and therefore soonest brought together; partly, because they were nearest to the enemy, and therefore most likely to be hindered in their design, whilst the other tribes, being at more distance, had better opportunity of gathering forces for their succour; and partly, because these had most smelted under their oppressor, who was in the heart of their country, and therefore were most forward in the present service, but these are not named exclusively, as appears by the concurrence of some other tribes, as is related Judg. v.

7 And I will draw unto thee to the river Kishon Sisera, the captain of his army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand

I will draw unto thee, by my secret and powerful protection, ordering and overruling his inclinations that way.

8 And Barak said unto her, If thou wilt go with me, thou I will go but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go

His offer to go with her shows the truth of his faith, so which he is praised, Heb. xi. 32., but his refusal to go without her shows the weakness of his faith, that he could not trust God's bare word, as he ought to have done, without the pledge of the presence of his prophets whom he thought God would preserve and deliver, and himself suffer for sake.

9 And she said, I will surely go with thee notwithstanding the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour, for the Lord shall <sup>be</sup> with Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah arose, and went with Barak to Kedesh.

Note distending the journey, He b. the way i.e. the course of practice as the way is taken Numb viii 32. I ro- m. either 1. fact, or rather 2. Debit, who being in it vice, the judge and chief commandress of the army, the honour of the victory would be ascribed to her. But for 1. her fact would have been the same though Balaak had gone into the field without Deborah.

10 ¶ And Barak called Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedesh: and he went up with ten thousand men: and Deborah went up with him.

At his feet—i.e., who followed him on his footsteps, possibly he intimates that they were all future disciples, no longer now having him as their teacher, allowed to have a multitude of his disciples, and so thus emphatically added, to signify by what count number means God overtook Samaria's great host when there were ten thousand and he as Jesus the triumphant.

10 Now Heber the Kenite, which was of the children of Hobab the father in law of Moses, had severed himself from the Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the plain of Zinnun, which is by Kedesh

Heber, the husband of Deborah, 1st. See Heber, of whom see Num. xxv 21-22. And a 16. Heber, called Abraham. See Num. x 20. From the Kenites, from the rest of his brethren who lived in a wilderness of which he had a 16, which removed him mentioned, lest we should wonder to find the Kenites in this place. He was a rich dwelling which probably was in tents as they had used.

12 And they shewed Simeon that Benek the son of Abraham was gone up to mount Tabor.

They are the people dwelling there on his pious, celestial crust, the best of an impersonal speech.

13 And Sisera † gathered together all his chariots even nine hundred chariots of iron: and all the people that were with him from Habor of the Gentiles unto the river of Kishon

14 And Deborah said unto Barak Up for this is the day in which the Lord hath delivered Sisra into thine hand
'is not the Lord gone out before thee'
So Barak went down from mount Tabor, and ten thousand men after him

[illegible]

lunity of using all his horses and chariots, that so the victory might be more glorious and wonderful.

5 And "the Lorn discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword before Barak: so that Sisera lighted down off his chariot, and fled away on his feet.

The Lord discomfited Sisera, with great terror and haste, as the word signifies, Exod. xiv. 24; Job. x. 16; 1 Sam. x, most probably with thunder, and lightning, and hail stones, or other such instruments of destruction put upon them from heaven, as is sufficiently implied, Judg. i. 20. With the edge of the sword, i. e. by the sword of Barak and his army, whose ministry God used; but so that they had little else to do but to kill those whom God by more powerful arms had put to flight. Fled away on his feet, that he might flee away more secretly and securely in the quality of a common soldier, whereas his chariot would have exposed him to more observation and hazard.

16 But Barak pursued after the chaniots, and after the host, unto Harosheth of the Gentiles: and all the host of Sisera fell upon the edge of the sword, and there was not † a man left.

to wit in the field, for there were some who fled away,
 Sister did

17 Howbeit Sisera fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite; for there was peace between Jabin the king of Hazor and the house of Heber the Kenite.

1st tent of Saul, for women had their tents apart from their husbands, Gen. xiv. 67, xxvi. 33. And here he shows that he loved more securely than in her husband's tent she bore peace not the sign or covenant of friendship, which they were bound to make with that cursed people, but an actual hostility, which he afforded her because they were a peaceable people abhorring war, and wholly mild in nature and were not Ishimites, with whom his prior judgment was, and especially by God's overruling discipline, his heart to favour them who were careful to keep themselves unmingled with Israel's sins, and therefore are delivered from their plagues.

18 ¶ And Iud went out to meet Sisera, and said unto him, Turn in, my lord, turn in to me, fear not. And when he had turned in unto her into the tent, she covered him with a mantle

I can not this was a promise of security, and therefore she cannot be excused from dissimulation and treachery in the manner though the substance of her act was lawful and worthy.

19 And he said unto her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water to drink, for I am thirsty. And she opened a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him.

travels milk to drink, either because she had not water in her tent and pretended fear of discovery or some inconvenience if she went out to fetch it, or as a signification of greater respect, or as a likely mean to cast him into a sleep, which she desired and designed, to which end possibly she might mix something with it to cause sleep, which she could not so conveniently have done with water. Covered him, upon pretence of liding him, but really to dispose him to sleep.

20 Again he said unto her, Stand in the door of the tent, and it shall be, when any man doth come and enquire of thee, and say, Is there any man here? that thou shalt say, No

He speaks imperiously to her but it is observable that he gives him no promise to do so, nor makes him any answer, possibly because though she knew her design upon him was so arrantable yet she had proceeded too far in usurping dominion therein.

21 Then Jael Hoher's wife took a nail of the tent, and took a hammer in her hand, and went softly unto him, and smote the nail into his temples, and fastened it into the ground for he was fast asleep and weary. So he died.

A nail of the tent, wherewith they used to fasten the tent, which consequently was long and sharp, being headed with iron: these weapons she chooseth, either 1 Because she had no better weapons at hand, this being only the woman's tent, where arms was not to be kept, and these people being wholly given to peace, and negligent of war, or Sisera having disarmed them before this time. Or 2 Because she had more skill in the handling these than other weapons being probably accustomed to fasten the tents here with. Or 3 Because this was very proper for his present posture and which she knew would be effectual. Into his temples, which is the softest part of the skull and soonest pierced. This might seem a very bold attempt but it must be considered that she was encouraged to it partly by observing that the heavens and all the elements conspired against him, as against one devoted to destruction partly by the fair opportunity which God's providence put into her hands, and principally, by the secret instinct of God inciting her to it and assuring her of success in it. Quest What shall we judge of this fact of Jael's? It is a difficult question and necessary to be determined, because on the one hand there seems to be gross perfidy and a horrid violation of all the laws of hospitality and friendship, and of the peace which was established between Sisera and her, and on the other side, this fact of hers is applauded and commended in Deborah's song, Judge 5: 24, &c. And some will make it their business to pick quarrels with the Holy Scriptures, from hence take occasion to question and reject their Divine authority for this very passage, because it commend an act so contrary to all humanity, and so great a breach of faith. And where is all the pretence of their infidelity taken in in the following song, and not from this history where in the fact is barely related, without any reflection upon it that it is manifestly given to that argument, is 1 That there was no league of friendship between Jael and Sisera but only a cessation of acts of hostility of which see the notes on ver 17. 2 That Deborah doth not commend Jael's words ver 18, Turn in my lord, turn not, in which is great strength of this objection lies, but only for action and that attitude that he asked water and she gave him milk, which if impartially examined will be found to differ but little from that of warlike stratagems wherein a military retreat for his enemy and deceives him with pretence of doing something which he never intends. And Sisera, enough for the time he pretended to be a friend yet was in truth a bitter and implacable enemy unto God and all his people, and consequently to Jael herself. But these and other answers may be omitted, and this one consideration following may abundantly suffice to stop the mouth of the objector. It cannot be denied that every word of praise or discourse which is recorded in Scripture is not divinely inspired, because some of them were uttered by the devil and others by holy men of God, but mistaken, (the prophets themselves not always speaking by inspiration) such as the discourse of Nathan to David 2 Sam vii which God expressly contradicted, ver 15 &c. and several discourses of Job's three friends, which were so far from being divine, as inspired that they were in a great degree grounded in God himself tells them, Job xlii 7, I have not spoken of the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath. Thus being so, the worst that any malicious mind can infer from this place is, That this song though indited by a good man or woman, was not divinely inspired but only composed by a man or woman piously-minded, and transported with joy for the deliverance of God's people, but subject to mistake, who therefore, out of zeal to commend the happy instrument of so great a deliverance, might easily overlook the indirectness of the means by which it was accomplished and commend that which should have been disliked. And if they further object, that it was composed by a prophetess, Deborah, and therefore must be divinely inspired, it may be replied, 1 That it is not certain what kind of prophetess Deborah was, whether extraordinary and infallible, or ordinary, and so liable to mistakes; for there were prophets of both kinds, as hath been proved above, on ver 4. 2 That every expression of a true and extraordinary prophet was not divinely inspired, as is evident from Nathan's mistake above mentioned, and from Samuel's mistake concerning Eliab, whom he thought to be the Lord's anointed, 1 Sam xvi: 6.

22 And, behold, as Barak pursued Sisera, Jael came out to meet him, and said unto him, Come, and I will shew thee the man whom thou seekest. And when he came into her tent, behold, Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples.

23 So God subdued on that day Jabin the king of Canaan before the children of Israel.

24 And the hand of the children of Israel prospered, and prevailed against Jabin the king of Canaan, until they had destroyed Jabin king of Canaan.

CHAP V

Deborah exhorts to praise, she begins, recounts the former honors and mercies of God to his people 1-5. From the miseries of former time glories in their present state, 6-9. Exhorts the ancients, &c. to praise the Lord, 10-13. Commends the chief of the tribes who went for willingly to this battle, and checks the unavailing who tarried at home 14-18. Describes the victory in all its circumstances 19-22. Counsell Meroz for not coming to their assistance, 23. Exalts Jael and her act, 24-27. Describeth Sisera's court ladies, 28-30. Praises for like judgment on their enemies, and prosperity to God's people 31.

THEN singing Deborah and Barak the son of Abinoam on that day, saying,
Deborah was the composer of this song as may be gathered from ver 7.

2 Praise ye the Lord of the heavens, of Israel, when the people willingly offered themselves.

Praise ye the Lord, i.e. him who hath done the work for the avenging of Israel, or for taking vengeance to wit upon his and their enemies, by Israel, or for Israel, for Israel's benefit, or for the injuries and violence offered by them to Israel. The people, chiefly Zebulun and Naphtali below, ver 18, &c. and others hereafter mentioned. Willingly offered themselves when neither Deborah nor Barak had any power to compel them.

3 Hear, O ye kings, give ear, O ye princes, I, even I, will sing unto the Lord, I will sing praise to the Lord God of Israel.

You especially that live near to Israel and have evil minds and design against Israel, know this for your instruction and caution, and terror too, if you shall presume to molest them. To the Lord God of Israel who, as you see by this plain instance, is both able and resolved to defend them from all their enemies.

4 Lord, when thou wentest out of Seir when thou marchedst out of the field of Edom, the earth trembled, and the heavens dropped, the clouds also dropped water.

Seir and Edom are the same place, and these two expressions note the same thing, even God's marching a head of his people from Seir or Edom towards the land of Canaan. Whilst the Israelites were encompassing Mount Seir there were none of the following either on their march, or when they had done that, and got Edom on their backs, then they marched directly forwards towards the land of Canaan. The prophets being to praise God for the present mercy, takes her rise higher, and begins her song with the commemoration of the former and ancient deliverances afforded by God to his people: the rather because of the great resemblance this had with them in the extraordinary and miraculous manner of them. The earth, either, 1. The inhabitants of the earth or land, or, 2. The earth, properly taken, as the following passages are, God prepared the way for his people, and struck a dread into their enemies by earthquakes, as well as by other terrible signs. The clouds also dropped water, &c. thou didst send most dreadful showers of rain, storms and tempests, thunder and lightning, and other tokens of thy displeasure, upon thine enemies, as may appear by comparing this with other parallel texts.

5 The mountains melted from before the LORD, even that Sinai from before the LORD God of Israel.

Melted or flowed with floods of water poured out of the clouds upon them, and from them flowing down in a mighty river upon the lower grounds and carrying down some part of the mountain with it, as is usual in excessive showers.

She slides into the mention of another and a more ancient appearance of God for his people: to wit, in Sinai, it being usual in Scripture repetitions of former actions to put divers together into a narrow compass and in few words. The sense is, No wonder that the mountains of the Amorites and Canaanites melted and trembled when thou didst lead thy people towards them: for even Sinai itself could not be thy presence, but melted in like manner before thee. Or, is that Sinai did upon a like manifestation of thyself, so there is only a defect of the particle as which I have showed to be frequent.

6 In the days of Shamgar the son of Anath, in the days of Jael, the highways were unoccupied, and the travellers walked through byways.

In the days of Shamgar, whilst Shamgar lived who was of no judicious yet an eminent person for strength and valor, Judg. in 31. In the days of Jael, Jael though an villainous woman, and of ignominious and influence upon the people, did effect nothing for the deliverance of God's people till God raised me up, &c. Through by ways, partly because of the Canaanites who besides the public burdens and tributes which they laid upon them waited for all opportunities of doing them mischief secretly: their soldiers watching for travellers in common roads, a usual with such times of war, and partly because of the robbers even of their own people who having cut off the fear and worship of God and there being no law or ruler in Israel to restrain or punish them, and being so many of the multitude to put it went through the eyes of the Canaanites: it is not strange, if in those times of public disorder and anarchy divers of the Israelites themselves did break forth into acts of injustice and violence, even against their own brethren whom they could meet with in convenient places, which made travellers seek for by paths.

7 The inhabitants of the villages ceased, they ceased in Israel, until that Deborah arose that I arose as a mother in Israel.

The villages ceased, the people forsook all their unfortified towns, as not being able to protect them from military insolence. I mother, i. e. to be to them as a mother to sustain, and rule, and protect them which duties a mother owes to her children, in as she is able.

8 They chose new gods, then was war in the cities: was there a shield or spear seen among forty thousand in Israel?

They did not only submit to idleness when they were forced to it by tyrants, but to worship, chose new gods, new to them, and unknown to their fathers, and new in comparison of the true and ever lasting God of Israel being but upstarts, and of yesterday. In the cities, i. e. in their walled cities, which have gates and bars, gates are set for cities, as Gen. x. c. 17; Deut. vii. 2, Obad. 11. Then their strongest holds fell into the hands of their enemies. Was there, i. e. there was not, the meaning is not that all the Israelites had no arms, for here is mention made only of shields or spears, so they might have swords and bows, and arrows to offend their enemies, but rather that they had but few arms among them, being many thousands of them disarmed by the Canaanites; or that they generally neglected the use of arms, as being utterly despised, and without all hope of recovering their lost liberty, and being necessitated to other employments for subsistence.

9 My heart is toward the governors of Israel, that offered themselves willingly among the people. Bless ye the Lord.

I greatly honour and love those, who being the chief of the people in wealth and dignity, did not withdraw themselves from the work, as those usually do, but did expose themselves to the same hazards, and joined with the meaner brethren in this noble but dangerous attempt, and by their example and countenance engaged others in it. Bless ye the Lord, who inclined their hearts to thus undertaking, and gave them success in it. As she gives instruments then due, so she is careful the sovereign Cause and Lord of all lose not his glory.

10 Speak, ye that ride on white asses, ye that sit in judgment, and walk by the way.

Speak, celebrate the praise of our mighty God, whose hand hath done this. Ye that ride on white asses, i. e. magistrates and nobles, who used to do so, Judg. x. 4, and horses being in a manner forbidden there Deut. xxi. 10. Ye that walk by the way, i. e. you that now in safety travel about your business in the highways which before you durst neither ride nor walk in. So great and mean persons are jointly excited to praise God.

11 Then that are delivered from the noise of archers in the places of drawing water: there shall they rehearse the righteous acts of the Lord, even the righteous acts toward the inhabitants of his villages in Israel: then shall the people of the Lord go down to the gates.

From the noise of archers, either, 1. From the noise or sound and consequently the force of those arrows which are shot at them: but she names the noise, because this epithet is frequently given to bows and arrows in poetical writings. Or, 2. From the triumphant noise and shout of archers rejoicing when they meet with their prey. In the places of drawing water, at those pits or springs of water which were scarce and precious in those hot countries, to which the people's necessities forced them oft to resort, and high unto which the archers did usually lurk in woods or thickets, or hedges, that from thence they might shoot at them and kill and spoil them. When they come to those places with freedom and safety which before they could not, they shall with thankfulness rehearse this righteous and faithful, and gracious work of God, in rescuing his people, and punishing his enemies. He mentions the inhabitants of his villages, because as their danger was greater, ver. 7, so was their deliverance, and their obligation to praise God. To the gates, to wit, of their cities, which were the chief places to which both city and country resorted for public business and matters of justice, from which they had been debarred by their oppressors, but now they had free access and passage either in or out of the gates, as their occasions required, and they who had been driven from their cities, now returned to them in peace and triumph, so the citizens' deliverance is celebrated here as the countrymen's is in the foregoing words.

12 Awake, awake, Deborah, awake, arise, Barak, and lead thy captivity captive, thou son of Abinoam.

Awake, awake, stir up thyself and all that is within thee to admire and praise the Lord. Lead thy captivity captive, how could this be done when there was none of them left? Judg. iv. 16. Arise, i. e. None were left to make head against them. 2. None is oft put for few, and those few might be taken after the battle, and carried captive, and led in triumph, and afterward slain

13. Then he made him that remaineth <sup>17. ch. 11.</sup> have dominion over the nobles among the people: the Lord made me have dominion over the mighty.

Thus God did not only preserve the poor and despised remnant of his people from the fury of the oppressor before this war, and from the destruction which Sisera designed and promised himself to bring upon them by this war, but also gave them the victory, and thereby the dominion over the princes and nobles of Canaan who were combined against them. Me, though but a weak woman

14. Out of Ephraim was there a root of them against Amalek, after thee Benjamin, among thy people, out of Machu came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the pen of the writer

Now she relates the carriage and miscarriage of the several tribes in this expedition, and she begins with Ephraim. Was there a root of them, either first Of the Ephraimites, or, secondly, Of them that came forth to this expedition. By root she seems to mean a branch, is that word is sometimes used, as Isa vi 10, Lu 2 by which also she may note the likeness of those that came out of Ephraim, that fruitful bough consisting of many branches Gen xlv 22, yielding but one branch or a handful of men to this service. Against Amalek, the constant and sworn enemy of the Israelites, who were confederate with their oppressors the Moribites, Judg i 13 and in all probability took their advantage now against the Israelites in the southern or middle parts of Canaan, whilst their main force was drawn northward against Ithim and Sisera. Again these therefore Ephraim sent forth a party, and so did Benjamin as it here follows, and these hindered their conjunction with Jabim's forces, and gave their brethren the advantage of fighting with Sisera alone. After thee, Benjamin Benjamin followed Ephraim's example. Or, after thee O Benjamin, and thus the pre-eminence is here given to Benjamin in two respects. First That he was first in this expedition. Indeed he lay near the Amalekites, and by his example encouraged the Ephraimites. Secondly That the whole tribe of Benjamin though now but small came forth to this war when the numerous tribe of Ephraim sent only a handful to it. Among thy people either first Among the people of Benjamin with whom these few Ephraimites united themselves in this expedition. Or secondly Among the people or tribes of Israel to wit those who engaged themselves in this war. Out of Machu i.e. out of the tribe of Manasseh, which are elsewhere called by the name of Machu, as Josh xii 31, to wit out of the half tribe which was within Jordan for of the other he speaks ver 17. Governors, either civil governors the princes and great persons who were ready to hazard themselves and their ample estates as the momentary military officers, valiant and expert commanders such as some of Moab's posterity are noted to have been. They that handle the pen of the writer, i.e. even the scribe who gave themselves to study and writing, whereby they were exempted from military service, did voluntarily enter into this service. Or they that drew, to wit, the people after them as that which is used, Judg iv 6. With the pen of the scribe or writer i.e. who did not only go them selves but by their letters invited and engaged others to go with them to the battle

15. And the princes of Issachar were with Deborah, even Issachar, and also Barak: he was sent on foot into the valley. For the divisions of Reuben there were great thoughts of heart

Here with Deborah, i.e. ready to assist her. Even Issachar, Heb and Issachar, i.e. the tribe or people of Issachar, following the counsel and example of their princes, and being now at their commandments as they were afterwards upon another occasion, 1 Chron xii 32. And also Barak, or, even as Barak, i.e. they were as hearty and valiant as Barak their general, and as he marched on foot here and Judg iv 10, against their enemies' horses and chariots, and that into the valley where the main use of horses and chariots lies, so did they with no less courage and resolution. The divisions, or reparations, whereby they were divided or separated, not so much one from another in their thoughts, counsels, and carriage in this war, (for they seem to be all too well agreed in abiding at home with their sheep, as it follows,) as all from their brethren, from whom they were divided no less in their designs and affections, than in their situation by the river Jordan, and they would not join their interests and forces with them in this common cause. Great thoughts, or, great sorrows, as it is ver 16, great and sad thoughts, and debates, and perplexities of mind among the Israelites, to see themselves deserted by so great and potent a tribe as Reuben was

16. Why abodest thou among the sheepfolds, to hear the bleatings of the flocks? For the divisions of Reuben there were great sorrows of heart

Why wast thou so unworthy and cowardly, so void of all zeal for God and compassion towards thy brethren, and care for the recovery of thy own liberties and privileges, that thou wouldst not engage thyself in so just, so necessary and so noble a cause, but didst prefer the care of thy sheep, and thy own present ease and safety, before this generous undertaking? Reuben thought in utility the wisest course, being very rich in cattle, Numb xxxii 1. They were loath to run the hazard of so great a loss, by taking up arms against so potent an enemy as Jabim was, and the bleatings of their sheep were so loud in their ears, that they could not hear the call of Deborah and Barak to this expedition

17. Gilead abode beyond Jordan and why did Dan remain in ships? Asher continued on the sea shore, and abode in his breaches

Gilead is sometimes taken more largely, for all the land of the Israelites beyond Jordan is Numb xxxii 1, 26, 29. So it is not here taken because Gilead is here distinguished from Reuben and his land. Sometimes it is taken more strictly for that part of the land beyond Jordan which fell to the half tribe of Manasse, as Numb xxxii 3, 40, Dent i 15. Josh xvi 1. And sometimes both for that part of Manasse and for Gad's portion as Josh xii 21, 25, 29, 31. And so it seems to be understood here, and the land Gilead is here put for the people or inhabitants of it Gad and Manasse. Inward Jordan in their own portion and did not come over Jordan to the help of the Lord and of his people as they ought to have done. Dan, whose coast was near the sea, was wholly intent upon his merchandise and shipping as the great instrument both of his wealth and safety, and therefore would not join in this land expedition. On the sea shore, where then lay in his breaches, either, first In the creeks of the sea, whether in design to save themelves by ships in case of danger, as Dan also intended, or upon pretence of repairing the breaches made by the sea into their country. Or, secondly In their broken and craggy rocks and caves therein, in which they thought to secure themselves

18. Zebulun and Naphtali were upon the high places of the field

Impaired, Heb despised, or reproached, or contemned comparatively, they chose rather to venture upon a glorious and honourable death, than to enjoy a shameful and servile life. In the high places of the field, i.e. upon that high and eminent plain in the top of Mount Tabor, where they put themselves in battle-array, and expected the enemy, though when they saw he did not come up to them they marched down to meet and fight him

19. The kings came and fought, then fought the kings of Canaan in Taanach by the waters of Megiddo: they took no gain of money

The kings, either confederate with him or subject to him for it is known that there were divers petty kings in those parts; which also oftentimes were subject to one greater and more potent king, and particularly this Hazor, where this Sabim now resided, Judg iv 2, were beforetime the head of divers petty kingdoms. Josh xii 10.

Taanach and Megiddo were two eminent cities belonging indeed to Manasseh, Judg i 27 but seated in the tribe of Issachar, Josh xvii 11, not far from Mount Tabor, Josh xvii 10; Judg i 27, nor from the river Kishon. They took no gain of money, either, first from Sisera. They fought without pay whether from mere hatred of the Israelites, and a desire to be revenged upon them, or from a full hope and confidence of paying themselves abundantly out of Israel's spoil. Or, secondly from the Israelites, so the sense is, They kill, lose all their hopes of money and rich spoils, and booty which they assured themselves of, instead of gaining a prey, they lost themselves.

20 'They fought from heaven 'the stars in their | courses fought against Sisera

Or, they from heaven or the heavenly host fought, by thunder and lightning and hailstones, possibly mingled with fire. Compare Josh. x. 11, 1 Sam. vii. 10. The stars which raised the storms by their influences, which they do naturally and ordinarily, but now far more when God sharpened their influences, and disposed of them to receive and improve their impressions. In their courses or from their paths, or stations or high places. As soldiers fight in their ranks, and places assigned them, so did the stars, and that with advantage, as those enemies do which fight from the higher ground.

Leh 4 7 21 The river of Kishon swept them away, that ancient river, the river Kishon O my soul, thou hast trodden down strength

The river of Kishon, though not great in itself and therefore fordable, was now much swelled and increased by the foregoing storm and run in Josephus affirms, and therefore drowned the Hebrews pursued by the hand of God: and by the Egyptians were forced into it, and thought to pass over it as they did before. That ancient river so called either first In opposition to the five rivers which were of a later date being made by the hand and wit of man Or secondly Because it was a river anciently famous for some remarkable exploits, for which it was celebrated by the ancient poets or writers, though not here mentioned. Thou hast trodden down strength i.e. thou O Deborah, though but a weak woman first, by Gods assistance and blessing upon thy counsels and prayers subdued a potent enemy. Such apostrophes and abrupt speeches are frequent in poetical scriptures.

22 Then were the horschoofs broken by the means of the || pransings, the pransings of them mighty ones

Their horses in which they put most confidence had then hoofs which in some support and strength broken either by dreadful hail <sup>or</sup> either by their swift and violent running over the stony grounds, when they staid with all possible speed from God and from Israel. By the means of the pawings, or, because of their fierce and swift runs. Of their new ones, either, first Of their strong and valiant riders, who forced their horses to run away as fast as they could. Or secondly Of the horses as the word signifies, Jer viii 16. Gen 3, 12 &c of themselves, the 23 Cursed ye, Meroz, said the angel of the Lord, cursed ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof: because they came not to

We call a place then no doubt, much and considerable though now there be no remembrance of it left, which possibly might be the effect of this in a course, is God with the Annals in this manner that he would utterly 'put out their remembrance, &c, Psal. xxi. 11. Deut. xxx. 19.
 And this place above all others may be thus severely punished, either because it was near the place of the fight and therefore had the greatest opportunity and obligation to enlarge with and to assist their brethren, and their denying their help was a great discouragement to all their brethren, whose hearts, no doubt, were greatly afflicted, and might have utterly fainted at this great miscarriage, and scandalous example, or for some other great aggravation of their cowardice and treachery, which may easily be imagined, though it be not here expressed. Said the angel of the Lord she signifies that this curse proceeded not from her spleen or ill will towards that place, nor from her own private opinion or affection, but from Divine inspiration, and that if all the rest of the song should be taken but for the breathings and expressions of a pious and devout soul, but liable to mistake yet this branch of it was immediately dictated to her by the Lord, by the ministry of an angel; otherwise she neither would nor durst have uttered so bitter a curse against them. Of the Lord, either, first, Of the Lord's people, for God takes what is done for or against his people as if it was done to himself. see Isa lxiii 9, Psalm 8, Matt xxi 45. Or, secondly, Of the Lord himself who though he did not need, yet did require and expect their help and concurrence, and he expresseth it thus, to show the usefulness and unreasonableness of their cowardly desertion of this cause, because it was the cause of God, and they had the will of God to it whom they knew to be able easily to crush that enemy whom they dreaded, and who had promised to do it.

24 Blessed above women shall *Jael the Blessed above women, celebrated, and praised, and endowed with all sorts of blessings more than they. But of this fact of Tael's, see the notes on Judge iv 21. In the tent, in her tent or habitation in her house and family, and all her affairs for she and hers dwelt in tents. The tent is here mentioned in allusion to the place where this fact was done.

CHAP. VI

The Midianites oppress Israel, 1-6. A prophet raised rebukes them, 7-10. An angel calls Gideon to Israel's deliverance, 11-16, confirms him by a miracle, 17-21. He builds an altar, calls it Jehovah shalom, and offereth there. By God's command he breaks down the altar of Baal, his name Terib baal, 22-32. The Midianites gather together to fight, and Gideon prepares against them. God strengthens and confirms him by a miracle, 33-40.

1 AND the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD: and the LORD delivered them into the hand of Midian seven years.

For although the generality of the Midianites had been cut off by Moses about two hundred years ago, yet many of them doubtless fled into the neighbouring countries, and afterwards they returned into their own land, and that time might easily grow to be a very great number, especially when God furthered their increase: that might be a fit scourge for his people Israel when they transgressed.

2 And the hand of Midian prevailed against Israel: and because of the Midianites the children of Israel made them dens, which are in the mountains, and caves, and strong holds.

In which they might secure their persons and provisions from the hands of the Midianites.

3 And so it was, when Israel had sown, that the Midianites came up, and the Amalekites, and the children of the east, even they came up against them; *

The children of the east, † i. e. the Arabians who are commonly called the children of the east as Gen. xxi. 1. Judg. vii. 10, 11, Job. i. 3, Ezek. xxv. 4. Not all the Arabians, for in that were many and divers people, but in the eastern part of Arabia.

4 And they encamped against them, and destroyed the increase of the earth, till thou come unto Gaza, and left no sustenance for Israel, neither sheep, nor ox, nor ass.

Till thou come unto Gaza, † i. e. from the east, on which side they entered, to the west, where Gaza was near the sea; so they destroyed the whole land.

5 For they came up with their cattle, and their tents, and they came as grasshoppers for multitude; for both they and their camels were without number: and they entered into the land to destroy it.

Without number, † i. e. so many that it was not easy to number them. It is an hyperbole.

6 And Israel was greatly impoverished, because of the Midianites; and the children of Israel cried unto the LORD.

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD because of the Midianites,

8 That the LORD sent a prophet unto the children of Israel, which said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I brought you up from Egypt, and brought you forth out of the house of bondage;

9 And I delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all that oppressed you, and drove them out from before you, and gave you your land.

10 And I said unto you, I am the LORD your God, fear not the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but ye have not obeyed my voice.

Fear not † i. e. do not serve or worship them.

11 ¶ And there came an angel of the LORD, and sat under an oak which was in Ophrah, that pertained unto Joash the Abiezrite: and his son Gideon thrashed wheat by the winepress, to hide it from the Midianites.

In Ophrah to wit, in Manasse, for there was another Ophrah in Benjamin. Jo. i. 23. The Abiezrite, of the posterity of Abiezzer, of the tribe of Judah. Josh. xvii. 2, 1 Chron. vi. 18. See Judg. vii. 27-32. Thrashed wheat, not with oxen, as the manner was Deut. xxv. 1, but with a staff, to prevent discovery. By the winepress, in the place where the wine press stood, not in the common floor.

12 And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him, and said unto him, The LORD is with thee, thou mighty man of valour.

Will a list thee against thine and mine enemies? Thou mighty man of valour, to whom I have given strength and courage for this end.

13 And Gideon said unto him, Oh my Lord, if the LORD be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his miracles, which our fathers told us of, saying, Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? but now the LORD hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites.

14 And the LORD looked upon him, and said, Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites: have not I sent thee?

The LORD looked upon him, with a settled and pleasant countenance, as a testimony of his favour to him, and of his readiness to help him. Go in this thy might, or go now, or at this time, in thy might, the strength which thou hast already received, and dost now further receive from me, is sufficient with my help. Have not I sent thee? I do hereby give thee command and commission for this work, and therefore art obliged in honour to assist thee in it.

15 And he said unto him, Oh my Lord, wherewith shall I save Israel? behold, <sup>My family, Heb my thousand,</sup> my family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house.

<sup>tributed into several thousands whereof each thousand had his peculiar governor</sup> I am the least, either for age, or for wisdom, and fitness for so great a work.

16 And the Lord said unto him, Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man.

As easily as if they were all but one man or thou shalt destroy them to a man as he did, Judg viii.

17 And he said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, then shew me a sign that thou talkest with me.

That it is thou to wit an angel or messenger sent from God that appears to me and discourseth with me and not a fancy or delusion, that thou art in truth what thou seemest and pretendest to be, ver 12. On a sign of that which thou talkest with me i.e. that thou wilt by me smite the Midianites.

18 Depart not hence, I pray thee until I come unto thee, and bring forth my present, and set it before thee. And he said, I will tarry until thou come again.

My present not a sacrifice because neither was Gideon a priest nor was this the place of sacrifice nor was any altar here, nor was there any such service here follows appointed by God, but a request or some food for the angel which he thought to be a man disappears by ver 22. Compare Judg viii 15 Gen xviii 5. Set it before thee, that thou mayest eat and refresh thyself.

19 ¶ And Gideon went in, and made ready a kid and unleavened cakes of an ephah of flour the flesh he put in a basket, and he put the broth in a pot, and brought it out unto him under the oak and presented it.

Of an ephah of flour to wit out of the choicest part of a whole ephah, is also he brought to him the best part of a kid dressed, for a whole ephah and a whole kid had been very superfluous, and improper to provide for and set before one man.

20 And the angel of God said unto him, Take the flesh and the unleavened cakes, and lay them upon this rock, and pour out the broth. And he did so.

21 ¶ Then the angel of the Lord put forth the end of the staff that was in his hand, and touched the flesh and the unleavened cakes and there rose up fire out of the rock and consumed the flesh and the unleavened cakes. Then the angel of the Lord departed out of his sight.

By these things he shewed himself to be no man that needed such provision but a true angel of God, or the Son of God, and by this instance of his omnipotency gave him assurance that he believed and would consume the Midianites.

22 And when Gideon perceived that he was an angel of the Lord Gideon said, Alas, O Lord God! for because I have seen an angel of the Lord face to face.

I am an undone man, I must die and that speedily for that he feared, ver 23, according to the common opinion in that case, of wash ver Gen xvi 13, xxvii 30, Exod xxxiii 20, Deut x. 10, 26. For because, or for therefore,

&c, i.e. therefore God hath showed me this sight as a preface of my death.

23 And the Lord said unto him, Peace be unto thee, fear not thou shalt not die.

The Lord spoke by inward suggestion, rather than in a visible apparition. Peace be unto thee, thou shalt receive no hurt by this vision as thou fearest, but only peace, i.e. all the blessings needful for thy own happiness, and for the present work, for this is a very comprehensive phrase among the Hebrews.

24 Then Gideon built an altar there unto the Lord, and called it Jehovashalom unto this day it is yet in Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

There, to wit on the top of the rock as is evident from ver 20 and especially from ver 26, where that which is here expressed only in general and by anticipation, is more particularly described, according to the usage of the Scripture. Jehovashalom i.e. the Lord's peace; the sign or witness of God's speaking peace to me, and to his people, or the place where he spoke peace to me, when I expected nothing but destruction.

25 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the Lord said unto him, Take thy father's young bullock, even the second bullock of seven years old, and throw down the altar of Baal that thy father hath, and cut down the grove that is by it.

Then the second bullock thus there was but one bullock which was young to wit comparatively but not simply for it was seven years old and of such this Hebrew word is used Job xxi 10 for the circumstances are fruitful above seven years. On thus thy father's young bullock, and the second bullock so there were two bullocks. But because there is but one of them mentioned both in the next verse, and in the execution of this command ver 28 it is probable it was but one, and the Hebrew particle even, and is put exactly for even or not is very usual. And thus he calls his father's young bullock both because his father was the owner of it, and because his father kept and fed it for a sacrifice to Baal. But because it is likely his father kept divers of these cattle of differing ages and structures for that use either at his own or at the people's charge therefore he adds by way of limitation, that he should not take the eldest and the greatest, but the second, to wit in age or stature, or goodness, or in the order of sacrifice, that which was to have been sacrificed to Baal in the second place. And thus he singled out because of its age for being seven years old, it begun with the Midianish calamity, and being now to be sacrificed did fully signify that the period of that misery was now come. That thy father hath, which thy father built in his own ground though for the common use of the whole city, ver 28—30. The grove that is by it, planted by the altar for idolatrous or unpure uses, as the manner of idolaters was. See Judg iii 7. This action might seem injurious to his father's rights and authority, but God's command was sufficient warrant, and Gideon was now called to be the supreme magistrate, whereby he was made his father's superior and was empowered, and authorized, and enjoined to root out all idolatry and superstition, and the instruments thereof.

26 And build an altar unto the Lord thy God upon the top of this rock, in the ordered place, and take the second bullock, and offer a burnt sacrifice with the wood of the grove which thou shalt cut down.

Upon the top of this rock, of which ver 20, 21. Heb of this strong hold, for in that calamitous time the Israelites retreated to such rocks and hid and fortified themselves in them. In the ordered place i.e. in a plain and smooth part of the rock, where an altar may be conveniently built. Or, in order, i.e. in such manner as I have appointed, for God had given rules about the building of altars. Offer a burnt-

He called him, I, & Joash called Gideon so, Judg vii. 1, in remembrance of this noble exploit, and to put a brand upon Baal

27 ¶ Then Gideon took ten men of his servants, and did as the Lord had said unto him: and so it was, because he feared his father's household, and the men of the city, that he could not do it by day, that he did it by night.

Doubtless he had acquainted the ten men with his design, and the assurance of success in it, whereby they were easily induced to assist him, if not sincerely, yet for the expectation of advantage to themselves by it. Because he feared, not so much lest he should suffer for it, for he knew very well the doing it by night with so many hands could not hinder the discovery, and consequently the punishment of it, but lest he should be prevented from doing it.

28 ¶ And when the men of the city arose early in the morning, behold, the altar of Baal was cast down, and the grove was cut down that was by it, and the second bullock was offered upon the altar that was built.

Not upon Baal's altar, for which it was designed: but upon an altar erected in contempt of Baal.

29 And they said one to another, Who hath done this thing? And when they enquired and asked, they said, Gideon the son of Joash hath done this thing.

Which they might easily conjecture partly by his known aversion from the worship of Baal, and partly because no other person durst presume to do such a thing, but they might more certainly learn it from some of the persons employed in it, who through fear or favour might inform them.

30 ¶ Then the men of the city said unto Joash, Bring out thy son, that he may die: because he hath cast down the altar of Baal, and because he hath cut down the grove that was by it.

31 And Joash said unto all that stood against him, Will ye plead for Baal? will ye save him? he that will plead for him, let him be put to death whilst it is yet morning: if he be a god, let him plead for himself, because one hath cast down his altar.

Will ye plead for Baal? Why are you so zealous in pleading for that Baal, for the worship whereof you suffer such grievous calamities at this day, and from whom you have no help? It is plain that Joash had been a worshipper of Baal, either therefore he was now convinced by Gideon's information and action, or he makes use of this pretence to preserve his son, being indeed indifferent in matters of religion, and therefore as he did worship Baal to comply with his neighbours, so now he deserts him to rescue his son. He that will plead for him, let him be put to death, or that shall further plead for such a god as this, deserves to die for his folly and impiety. It is not probable that this was all that he said for his son's defence, or that he would neglect to mention the call his son had from God to it, the apparition of an angel, the promise of deliverance, but it is usual in Scripture to give only some short hints of the things which were more largely discoursed. Whilst it is yet morning, i. e. instantly without delay, for it was now morning time, as appears from ver. 28 &c. Let him plead for himself, as the God of Israel hath often done when any indignity or injury hath been done to him. But Baal hath now showed that he is neither able to help you nor himself, and therefore is not worthy to be served any more. His countenance and resolute answer was necessary to stop the torrent of the people's fury, and it was drawn from him partly by the sense of his son's extreme danger, and partly by the confidence he had that God would plead his son's cause, and use him for the rescue of his people.

32 Therefore on that day he called him Jerubbaal, saying, Let Baal plead against him, because he hath thrown down his altar.

1 That is, Let Baal plead against him. 2 Jerubbaal, i. e. Let Baal plead against him. 3 Jerubbaal, i. e. Let Baal plead against him. 4 Jerubbaal, i. e. Let Baal plead against him.

He called him, I, & Joash called Gideon so, Judg vii. 1, in remembrance of this noble exploit, and to put a brand upon Baal

33 ¶ Then all the Midianites and the Amalekites and the children of the east were gathered together, and went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel.

Not that Jezreel in Judah, of which Josh. xv. 56, but another in the borders of Manassah and Issachar, Josh. xii. 16, xix. 18 which is not far distant from Ophrah, where Gideon dwelt, and now was.

31 But the Spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon, and he blew a trumpet; and Abi-ezer was gathered after him.

Came upon Gideon inspiring him with extraordinary wisdom, and courage, and zeal, to vindicate God's honour and his country's liberty. Compare 1 Chron. xii. 18, 2 Chron. xxiv. 20. Abi-ezer i. e. the Abi-ezrites, his kindred, and their servants and others, who finding no harm coming to him for the destroying of Baal, but rather a blessing from God, in giving him strength and courage for so great and dangerous an attempt changed their minds, and followed him as the person by whose hands God would deliver them.

35 And he sent messengers throughout all Manassah, who also was gathered after him: and he sent messengers unto Asher, and unto Zebulun, and unto Naphtali, and they came up to meet him.

Throughout all Manassah, on both sides of Jordan, Unto Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali, because these tribes were nearest to him, and so could soonest join with him, and were nearest the enemy also, ver. 33 and therefore were most sensible of the calamity and would in all reason be most forward to rescue themselves from it.

36 ¶ And Gideon said unto God, If thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said, Gideon said this in way of humble supplication, partly for the strengthening of his own faith, and partly for the greater encouragement of his soldiers in this great and strange attempt.

37 Behold, I will lay a fleece of wool upon the floor, and if the dew be on the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth beside, then shall I know that thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said.

I upon all the earth beside, i. e. upon all that spot of ground which adjoins to and encompasses the fleece.

38 And it was so for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl full of water.

39 And Gideon said unto God, Let not thine anger be hot against me, and I will speak but this once: let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece, let it now be dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew.

Which was more difficult and preternatural than the former instance, because if there be any moisture, such bodies as fleeces of wool are most likely to drink it up.

40 And God did so that night: for it was dry upon the fleece only, and there was dew on all the ground.

CHAP VII

Gideon with two and thirty thousand men encamps against the Midianites, they by God's command and token, are reduced to three hundred, 1-8. He is encouraged by a dream, and its interpretation, 9-15, divideth his army into three companies, who all with one accord blow the trumpets, and break the pitchers, wherein the lamps were, in pieces, 16—20 The Midianites are terrified, flee and destroy one another 21 22 The next adjoining Israelites pursue them to stop their passage over Jordan two princes of the Midianites are taken by the Ephraimites, 23—25.

THEN *Jernbbaal, who is Gideon, and all the people that were with him, rose up early, and pitched beside the well of Harod so that the host of the Midianites were on the north side of them, by the hill of Morch, in the valley

2 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people that are with thee are too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me

Too many for me, i. e. for my purpose, which is so to deliver Israel, that it may appear to be my own miraculous act that so I may have all the glory of it, and they may be more strongly obliged to love and serve me

3 Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, saying, Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from mount Gilead And there returned of the people twenty and two thousand, and there remained ten thousand

Mount Gilead, not that famous Mount Gilead which was beyond Jordan, for it is apparent that both the camps of the Ephraimites and of the Midianites were on this side Jordan but another Mount Gilead in the tribe of Manassch, which might be so called either for some resemblance it had with the other Mount Gilead, or in remembrance of their father Gilead, or that this might be a memorial of the reunion to their brethren notwithstanding their being divided one from another by Jordan, or for some other reason now unknown at this distance of time and place Or the words may be rendered towards Mount Gilead for the Hebrew participle min or men, is sometimes rendered towards of which see Gen vi 2, Am 11, Deut xxxv 2, 2 Sam vi 2 And so it may be understood of the famous Mount Gilead beyond Jordan, which I may mention here either, 1 Because many of his soldiers were of that half tribe of Manassch which dwelt there and so it was most proper for them to return thither or 2 Because that was their safest course to go furthest from the danger which they feared, or 3 Because though he would remove them from danger yet he would not have them dispersed but kept together in a body about Mount Gilead knowing that they who had not courage enough to fight their enemies, might have valour enough to pursue them when they were beaten by others, and suspecting that the Midianites if beaten would probably flee that way Twenty and two thousand who finding their whole army to be very small in comparison of their enemies who were a hundred and thirty five thousand Judg vii 10, and they no doubt, well armed and disciplined and encouraged by long success, whereas the Ephraimites were dispersed with long servitude, and many of them indurged with arms and provisions lost their courage which in the beginning they seemed to have

4 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people are yet too many, bring them down unto the water, and I will try them for thee there and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, This shall go with thee, the same shall go with thee, and of whomsoever I say unto thee, This shall not go with thee, the same shall not go

Unto the water, either that which ran from the well of Harod mentioned ver 1 or some other brook I will try them for thee, because thy proclamation hath not sufficiently tried them; for many who are fearful indeed will pass on the face, and desire the opinion of being valiant persons, I will take another course.

5 So he brought down the people unto the water and the LORD said unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue, as a dog lappeth, him shalt thou set by himself, likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink

It is true, there may be natural reasons given why some did only lap of the water, when others bowed down to drink, from the temperance, or fortitude, or patience, or strength or diligence of the one and the intemperance, or cowardice, or impatience, or weakness, or slothfulness of the other, but these seem to be mere conjectures the true reason and design of this course seems to be only this that God would reduce them to a very small number which was likely to be done by this means; for the season of the year being hot, and the generality of the soldiers weary and thirsty, and faint, they would most probably bow down upon their knees, that they might more fully refresh themselves by a liberal draught, as indeed they did, and it could be expected that there would be but few, who either could or would deny themselves in this matter especially when God concurred in the work, and so disposed of the minds and bodies of them, that all, except three hundred, should lie down to drink

6 And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men but all the rest of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water

Putting their hand to their mouth, taking up a little water in the palm of their hands to put into their mouths

7 And the LORD said unto Gideon, By the three hundred men that lapped will I save you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand and let all the other people go every man unto his place

10 To his own home is Numb xxv 11

8 So the people took victuals in their hand, and then trumpets and he sent all the rest of Israel every man unto his tent, and retained those three hundred men and the host of Midian was beneath him in the valley

And then trumpets i. e. the trumpets belonging to the whole army even to those who were gone away, which he retained for the use here following See ver 16

9 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the LORD said unto him, Arise, get thee down unto the host, for I have delivered it into thine hand

The same night after he had dismissed all but the three hundred That the Lord said unto him, in a dream or vision of the night

10 But if thou fear to go down, go thou with Phurah thy servant down to the host

If thou fear to go down, to wit, without some further assurance of thy success I will condescend so far to thee as to give thee another sign

11 And thou shalt hear what they say, and afterward shall thine hands be strengthened to go down unto the host Then went he down with Phurah his servant unto the outside of the fenced men that were in the host

Afterward shall thine hands be strengthened, thou wilt be encouraged to proceed, notwithstanding the smallness of thy number, which may deter thee

12 And the Midianites and the Amalekites and all the children of the east lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude, and their camels were without number, as the sand by the sea side for multitude.

13 And when Gideon was come, behold, there was a man that told a dream unto his fellow, and said, Behold, I dreamed a dream, and, lo, a cake of barley bread tumbled into the host of Midian, and came unto a tent, and smote it that it fell, and overturned it, that the tent lay along.

A cake of barley bread, a weak and contemptible thing, and in itself as unable to overthrow a tent as to remove a mountain, but being thrown by a Divine hand, bore down all before it, which fitly resembled Gideon's cast, which was mean and despicable, as himself saith, Judg vi 15, yet he was mighty through God, to destroy the Midianites.

14 And his fellow answered and said, This is nothing else save the sword of Gideon the son of Joash, a man of Israel for into his hand hath God delivered Midian, and all the host.

As there are many examples of significant dreams given by God to heathens, as Gen xli, Dan ii and iv so some of them had the gift of interpreting dreams, which they sometimes did by study and art, and sometimes by Divine direction, as in this case.

15 ¶ And it was so, when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and the interpretation thereof, that he worshipped, and returned into the host of Israel, and said, Arise, for the Lord hath delivered into your hand the host of Midian.

Gideon understood the telling of the dream, though spoken in the Midianitish language, either because it was near akin to the Hebrew being only a different dialect of it, or because the Israelites had now been accustomed to the Midianites' company and discourse for seven years. He worshipped, he praised God for this miraculous work and special encouragement, whereby he was confirmed in his enterprise.

16 And he divided the three hundred men into three companies, and he put a trumpet in every man's hand, with empty pitchers, and lamps within the pitchers.

Into three companies, to make a show of a vast army encompassing them. Lamps, or torches, made of such materials as would quickly take fire, and keep it for some time. Within the pitchers, partly to perceive the flame from the violence of wind and weather, and partly to conceal it, and surprise their enemy with sudden and unexpected flashes of light.

17 And he said unto them, Look on me, and do likewise and, behold, when I come to the outside of the camp, it shall be that, as I do, so shall ye do.

For though two hundred of his men were placed on other sides of the camp, yet they were so disposed, that some person or persons, set as watchmen might see what was done, and give notice to the rest to follow the example.

18 When I blow with a trumpet, I and all that are with me, then blow ye the trumpets also on every side of all the camp, and say, The sword of the Lord, and of Gideon.

He mentions his own name, together with God's, not out of vain ostentation or arrogance, as if he would equal himself with God, for he mentions God in the first and chief place, and himself only as his minister but from prudent policy, because his name was grown formidable to them, and so was likely to further his design, and their flight, as it did.

19 ¶ So Gideon, and the hundred men that were with him, came unto the outside of the camp in the beginning of the middle watch, and they had but newly set the watch and they blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers that were in their hands.

Of the middle watch, i. e. of the second watch, for though afterwards the night was divided into four watches by the Romans, Matt xiv. 25, yet in more ancient times, and in the eastern parts, it was divided into three. He chose the dark and dead of the night to increase their terror by the trumpets, whose sound would then be loudest and best heard, and the lamps, whose light would then shine most brightly, and seem biggest, to surprise them at disadvantage, and to conceal the smallness of their numbers.

20 And the three companies blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers, and held the lamps in their left hands, and the trumpets in their right hands to blow mital, and they cried, The sword of the Lord, and of Gideon.

Held the lamps and the trumpets, that they might be thought to be a mighty host, having as many troops or companies as there were trumpets and lights.

21 And they stood every man in his place round about the camp and all the host ran, and cried, and fled.

Every man in his place, as if they had only been torch-bearers to the several companies.

22 And the three hundred blew the trumpets, and the Lord set every man's sword against his fellow, even throughout all the host and the host fled to Beth-shittah in Zerieth, and to the border of Abel-meholah, unto Tabbath.

They slew one another, either because they suspected treachery and so fell upon those they first met with, which they might more easily do, because they consisted of several nations, as may be gathered from Judg vi 3, and Josephus affirms, or because the darkness of the night made them unable to distinguish friends from foes, or because the suddenness of the thing struck them with horror and amazement, or because God frustrated them as he hath done in many others. Comp. 1 Sam xiv 20, 2 Chr ix 16. 23 Abel-meholah, of which see 1 Kings iv 12, v 16.

23 And the men of Israel gathered themselves together out of Naphtali, and out of Asher, and out of all Manassah, and pursued after the Midianites.

24 ¶ And Gideon sent messengers throughout all mount Ephraim, saying, Come down against the Midianites, and take before them the waters unto Beth-barah and Jordan. Then all the men of Ephraim gathered themselves together, and took the waters unto Beth-barah and Jordan.

Take before them the waters unto Beth-barah, i. e. the passes over those waters to which they are like to come. And Jordan, the fords of Jordan, which river they must pass over into their own country.

25 And they took two princes of the Midianites, Oreb and Zeeb, and they slew Oreb upon the rock Oreb, and Zeeb they slew at the winepress of Zeeb, and pursued Midian, and brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon on the other side Jordan.

For Gideon in the pursuit had passed over Jordan as we read Judg viii 1, which, though mentioned after this, may seem to have been done before it such transpositions being frequent in sacred story. Or, on this side Jordan for the Hebrew word is indifferent to both sides see Gen i 10. And so this is opposed to what follows of his passing over Jordan, Judg viii 4. And then there is no anticipation here.

CHAP VIII

The Ephraimites are displeased with Gideon, he satisfies them, 1-3. He pursueth two kings of the Midianites beyond Jordan, where Succoth and Peniel refuse to relieve Gideon's army the kings being taken by him, in his return he pursueth those of Succoth and Peniel, 1-17. He revegeth his brethren's death on the two kings, 18-21. He refuseth government 22, 23, demandeth a present of the spoil, and thereof makes an ephod, places it in Ophrah, it is a cause of idolatry 24-27. Gideon's children, receive death, and burial 30-32. Israel revolts to idolatry, is ungrateful to Gideon's family, 33-35.

AND <sup>1</sup> the men of Ephraim said unto him <sup>2</sup> Why hast thou served us thus, that thou calledst us not, when thou wentest to fight with the Midianites? And they did chide with him <sup>3</sup> sharply.

Why hast thou neglected and despised us, in not calling us in to thy help as thou didst other tribes? These were a proud people. <sup>1</sup>st xii 13 puffed up with a conceit of their number and strength and the preference which Jacob by Divine direction gave them above Manassah, Gen xlviii 19, 20, of which tribe Gideon was, who by this act had seemed to advance his own tribe and to depress theirs.

2 And he said unto them, What have I done now in comparison of you? Is not the gleaming of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abiezzer?

What was done was done by God's immediate hand making them one to kill another, what I have done, in cutting off some of the fugitive common soldiers is not to be compared with your exploit in destroying their princes. I began the war but you have finished. The gleaming of the grapes of Ephraim, what you have gleamed or done after me. Of the vine, i. e. of the Abiezrites, to whom he modestly communicated the honour of the victory, and doth not ascribe it to himself as generals commonly do.

3 <sup>1</sup> God hath delivered into your hands the princes of Midian Oreb and Zebah and what was I able to do in companionship of you? Then their <sup>2</sup> anger was abated toward him, when he had said this.

His soft and humble answer allayed their rage and envy. <sup>1</sup>st Prov xv 1 xvi 15.

4 <sup>1</sup> And Gideon came to Jordan, and passed over, he and the three hundred men that were with him, and put <sup>2</sup> up <sup>3</sup> them.

Pass over, i. e. had passed over when he passed over, see on Judg vi 25.

5 And he said unto the men of Succoth, Give I pray you loaves of bread unto the people that follow me, for they be faint and I am pursuing after Zebah and Zalmunna kings of Midian.

Succoth, a place beyond Jordan Gen xxxiii 17, Josh xiii 27, <sup>1</sup>st xix 6. Kings of Midian, where before this time were two kings at once Numb xxxi 8 who either reigned separately in divers parts of the land, or governed by common counsel and consent as sometimes there were two or three Roman emperors together.

6 <sup>1</sup> And the princes of Succoth said, <sup>2</sup> Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in <sup>3</sup> thine hand, that we should give bread unto <sup>4</sup> thine army?

Art thou so foolish to think with thy three hundred faint and weary soldiers, to conquer and destroy a host of fifteen thousand men?

7 And Gideon said, Therefore when the Lord hath delivered Zebah and Zalmunna into mine hand, <sup>2</sup> then I will <sup>3</sup> tear your flesh with the thorns of the wilderness and with briers.

With the thorns which grow abundantly in the neighbouring wilderness, I will chastise or beat your naked bodies with thorny rods, even unto death. Or, I will lay you down upon thorns on the ground, and bring the cart-wheel upon you, which will both tear your flesh, and bruise you to death.

8 <sup>1</sup> And he went up thence <sup>2</sup> to Peniel, and spake unto them likewise: and the men of Peniel answered him as the men of Succoth had answered him.

Peniel, another city beyond Jordan, of which see Gen xxiii 30, 1 Kings xii 25.

9 And he spake also unto the men of Peniel, saying, When I <sup>1</sup> come again in <sup>2</sup> peace, <sup>3</sup> I will break down this tower.

Your confidence in which makes you thus proud and presumptuous. He implies that he would afterwards destroy their persons, as is expressed, ver 17.

11 <sup>1</sup> And Gideon went up by the way of them that dwell in tents on the east of Nobah and Jogbehah, and smote the host for the host was <sup>2</sup> secure.

Of them that dwell in tents, i. e. of the Arabians, so fetching a compass, and falling upon them where they least expected it. Nobah and Jogbehah, of which cities see Numb xxxi 42. The host was secure, being now got safe over Jordan, and a great way from the place of battle and probably supposing Gideon's men to be so tired with their hard service and the great slaughter which they had made that they would have neither strength nor will to pursue them so far.

12 And when Zebah and Zalmunna fled, he pursued after them, and <sup>2</sup> took <sup>3</sup> the two kings of Midian, Zebah and Zalmunna, and <sup>4</sup> discomfited all the host.

13 <sup>1</sup> And Gideon the son of Joash returned from battle before the sun <sup>2</sup> was up.

By which it may be gathered that he came upon them in the night, which was most convenient for him, who had so small a number with him and most likely both to surprise and terrify them by the remembrance of the last night's sad work, and the expectation of another like it.

14 And caught a young man of the men of Succoth, and enquired of him and he <sup>2</sup> described unto him the princes of Succoth, and the elders thereof, <sup>3</sup> even threescore and seventeen men.

He told him their names and qualities.

15 And he came unto the men of Succoth, and said, Behold Zebah and Zalmunna, with whom ye did <sup>2</sup> upbraid me, saying, <sup>3</sup> Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in <sup>4</sup> thine hand, that we should give bread unto thy men <sup>5</sup> that are weary?

16 <sup>1</sup> And he took the elders of the city, and thorns of the wilderness and briers, and with them he <sup>2</sup> taught the men of Succoth.

By that severe punishment (of which ver 7) he made the men, i. e. the elders of Succoth, to know their sin and folly though it was too late for their good, but not for the instruction and warning of others.

17 <sup>1</sup> And he beat down the tower of Peniel, and slew the men of the city.

18 ¶ Then said he unto Zebah and Zalmunna, What manner of men were they whom ye slew at Tabor? And they answered, As thou art, so were they, each one resembled the children of a king.

1 ch. 4. 2.
Ps. 68. 12.

+ Heb. according to the form.

What manner of men, i. e. for outward shape and quality? At Tabor; whether he understood they fled for shelter, upon the approach of the Midianites, and where he learnt that some were slain, which he suspected might be they. Each one resembled the children of a king, not for their garb, or outward splendour, for the family was but mean, but for the majesty of their looks, by which commendation they thought to ingratiate themselves with their conqueror.

19 And he said, They were my brethren, even the sons of my mother as the I ORU liveth, if ye had saved them alive, I would not slay you.

For being not Canaanites he was not obliged to kill them, but they having killed his brethren, and that in cool blood, he was, by law the avenger of their blood.

20 And he said unto Jether his firstborn, Up, and slay them. But the youth drew not his sword for he feared, because he was yet a youth.

Up, and slay them, partly that he might animate him to the use of arms for his God and country against their enemies, and to the exercise of justice, partly, that the death of those mischievous persons might be more shameful and painful, and partly, that he might have some share in the honour of the victory.

21 Then Zebah and Zalmunna said, Rise thou, and fall upon us for as the man is, so is his strength. And Gideon arose, and slew Zebah and Zalmunna, and took away the ornaments that were on their camels necks.

1 ch. 10. 11.

1 the ornaments like the moon.

As the man is, so is his strength, thou excellest him, as in age and stature, so in strength, and it is more honourable as well as easy, to die by the hands of a valiant man.

22 ¶ Then the men of Israel said unto Gideon, Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son also for thou hast delivered us from the hand of Midian.

Rule thou over us, not as a judge for that he was already made by God, but as a king, and let the kingdom be hereditary to thee and to thy family. This ridiculous and glorious deliverance by thy hands deserves no less from us.

23 And Gideon said unto them, I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you: the Lord shall rule over you.

1 ch. 4. 8.
1 ch. 11. 10.
1 ch. 12.

I will not rule over you, to wit, as a king which you desire. The Lord shall rule over you in a special manner, as he hath hitherto done, by judges whom God did particularly appoint and direct, even by Urim and Thummim, and assist upon all occasions, where as kings had a greater power and only a general dependence upon God, as other kings had. Compare 1 Sam. xiii. 6, 7.

24 ¶ And Gideon said unto them, I would desire a request of you, that ye would give me every man the earrings of his prey (for they had golden earrings,

1 ch. 25. 2.

because they were Ishmaelites.)

Object They are called Midianites before. Answer Here seems to have been a mixture of people, Judges vi. 3, which are all called by one general name, Ishmaelites or Arabians, who used to wear earrings, Gen. xxxv. 4, but the greatest, and the ruling part of them, were Midianites.

25 And they answered, We will willingly give them. And they spread a garment, and did cast thereon every man the earrings of his prey.

26 And the weight of the golden earrings that he requested was a thousand and seven hundred shekels of gold beside ornaments, collars, and purple raiment that was on the kings of Midian, and beside the chains that were about their camels necks.

1 Or, silver jewels.

27 And Gideon made an ephod thereof, and put it in his city, even in Ophrah; and all Israel went thither a whoring after it, which thing became a snare unto Gideon, and to his house.

1 ch. 17. 1.

1 ch. 6. 24.

1 ch. 10. 32.

1 ch. 7. 16.

Made an ephod thereof, not of all of it, for then it would have been too heavy for use, but of part of it, the rest being probably employed about other things agreeable and appertaining to it, which elsewhere are comprehended under the name of the ephod as Judges xvii. 5, xviii. 14, 18, Hos. iii. 1. Put it in his city, not as a monument of the victory, for such monuments were neither proper nor usual, but for religious use, for which alone the ephod was appointed. The case seems to be this, Gideon having by God's command erected an altar in his own city Ophrah Judges xi. 26, for an extraordinary time and occasion, thought it might be continued for ordinary use, and therefore as he intended to procure priests, so he designed to make priestly garments, and especially an ephod, which was the chief and most costly, which besides its use in sacred ministrations, was also the instrument by which the mind of God was inquired and discovered 1 Sam. xiii. 6, 9, xxx. 7, which might seem necessary for the judge to have at hand that he might consult with God upon all occasions. All Israel went thither a whoring after it, committing superstition or idolatry with it, or going thither to inquire the will of God, which they were drawn from the true ephod instituted by God for this end which was to be worn by the high priest only. A snare, an occasion of sin and ruin to him and his as the next chapter shows. Though Gideon was a good man, and did this with an honest mind and a desire to set up religion in his own city and family, yet here seems to be many sins in it. 1 Superstition and idolatry, worshipping God by a device of his own which was frequently and expressly forbidden. 2 Presumption, in wearing or causing other priests to wear, the ephod of ephod which was peculiar to the high priest. 3 Transgression of a plain command of worshipping God only but in one place, and in one altar, Deut. xii. 5, 11, 14, and withdrawing people from that place to his. 4 Making a fearful schism or division among the people. 5 Laying a stumbling block, or an occasion of superstition or idolatry, before that people whom he knew to be too prone to it.

28 ¶ Thus was Midian subdued before the children of Israel, so that they lifted up their heads no more. And the country was in quietness forty years in the days of Gideon.

Lifted up their heads no more, i. e. recovered not their former strength or courage, so as to conquer or oppress others, as they had done. Forty years, i. e. to the fortieth year, from the beginning of the Midianitish oppression seen on Judges iii. 11. In the days of Gideon, i. e. as long as Gideon lived.

29 ¶ And Jerubbaal the son of Joash went and dwelt in his own house.

Not in his father's house, as he did before, nor yet in a court like a king, as the people desired, but in a middle state as a judge for the preservation and maintenance of their religion and liberties.

30 And Gideon had threescore and ten sons of his body begotten for he had many wives.

1 ch. 25. 2.

1 ch. 11. 10.

1 ch. 12.

31 And his concubine that was in Shechem, she also bare him a son, whose name he called Abimelech.

1 ch. 9. 1.

1 ch. 10. 1.

In Shechem, she dwelt there, and he oft came thither, either to execute judgment, or upon other occasion. Abimelech, i. e. my father the king, so he called him probably to gratify his concubine, who desired it rather out of pride or design.

32 ¶ And Gideon the son of Joash died in a good old age and was buried in the sepulchre of Joash his father, in Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

In a good old age, his long and happy crown with the continuance of his honour, tranquillity and happiness.

33 And it came to pass, as soon as Gideon was dead, that the children of Israel turned again, and went a whoring after Baalim, and made Baal-berith their god.

The children of Israel turned again, whereby we see the wicked temper of this people who did no longer cleave to God then they were in a manner constrained to it by the presence and authority of their judges. Baalim this was the general name including all their idols, whereof one here is Baal-berith. The lord of the covenant so called either from the covenant wherewith the worshippers of this god bound themselves to maintain his worship or to do him one another therein, or rather because he was reputed the god and judge of all covenants and promises, and therefore to whom it belonged to maintain them and to punish the violators of them, and such a god both the Grecians and the Romans had.

34 And the children of Israel remembered not the Lord their God, who had delivered them out of the hands of all their enemies on every side.

35 Neither showed they kindness to the house of Jerubbaal, namely, Gideon, according to all the goodness which he had showed unto Israel.

CHAP. IX.

Abimelech Gideon's son, by conspiracy with the Shechemites, and the murder of his brethren, Iotham the youngest escaping is made King. 1-6. Iotham by a parable rebuketh them and foretelleth their ruin in flies and devils at their 7-21. The Shechemites conspire against Abimelech, 22-23. Gaal joins himself to the Shechemites, 26-29. Zebul reveals it, 30-33. Iotham's counsel, 34-38. Abimelech overcometh them, and smothereth the city with salt, 39-41. Sets the tower on fire, also the hold of the god-berith, 46-49. He subdues Thebez going near to the tower, 50-51. A woman casts down a mill-stone on his head and breaks his skull, 50-53. He commands his armour-bearer to thrust him through, 54. Iotham's curse is fulfilled, 55, 57.

AND Abimelech the son of Jerubbaal went to Shechem unto his mother's brethren, and communed with them, and with all the family of the house of his mother's father, saying,

2 Speak I pray you, in the ears of all the men of Shechem, (Whether is better for you, either that all the sons of Jerubbaal, which are threescore and ten persons reign over you, or that one reign over you?) remember also that I am your bone and your flesh.

He supposeth that the sons of Jerubbaal would take that government which then they justly refused, and that the multitude of his sons would occasion horrible divisions, and confusions, and contests about the sovereign power, all which they in spite would by choice reject, and so they might enjoy the monarchy which they had long and oft desired. Your bone and your flesh, your kinsman, of the same blood, and city with you, which will be no small honour and advantage to you.

3 And his mother's brethren spake of him in the ears of all the men of Shechem all these words and their hearts inclined to follow Abimelech, for they said, He is our brother.

His mother's brethren, i. e. kinsmen, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xiv. 16, xxix. 12. He is our brother, they were easily persuaded to believe and follow who served their own interest.

4 And they gave him threescore and ten pieces of silver out of the house of Baal-berith, wherewith Abimelech hired vain and light persons, which followed him.

Threescore and ten, agreeably to the number of his enemies, Gideon's seventy sons. Pieces of silver, not shillings is some fancy, which were too small a sum for this purpose, but far larger pieces, the exact worth whereof it is neither possible nor needful for us now to know. Out of the house of Baal-berith, out of his sacred treasury, for even they who were very parsimonious and base in their expenses about God's service, were liberal in their contributions to idols, having since Gideon's death built the temple, (which he would never have suffered whilst he lived,) and endowed it with considerable revenues. Vain and light persons, unsettled, idle, and necessitous persons, the most proper instruments for tyranny and cruelty.

5 And he went unto his father's house at Ophrah, and slew his brethren the sons of Jerubbaal, being threescore and ten persons, upon one stone, notwithstanding yet Iotham the youngest son of Jerubbaal was left, for he hid himself.

The sons of Jerubbaal, the only persons who were likely to hinder him in establishing his tyranny. Threescore and ten persons, not one, who is here expressed, and these synecdochical expressions are frequent in Scripture, see Gen. xxxv. 26, xlii. 13. Numb. xiv. 32, 33. John xv. 21. 1 Cor. xv. 5. Upon one stone, whereby he would signify that this was either, 1. An act of justice in cutting them all off in an orderly manner, for some supposed crime, probably as designing sedition and rebellion, or, 2. An act of religion in avenging the dishonour and injury done to Baal by Gideon, Judg. vi. 27-28, upon his children whom he offered up as so many sacrifices to Baal upon this stone which served for an altar, and for this reason it seems the money was taken out of Baal's house, because it was to be laid out in his service.

6 And all the men of Shechem gathered together, and all the house of Millo, and went, and made Abimelech king, by the plain of the pillar that was in Shechem.

O Millo, of a place or person so called, some eminent and potent family living in Shechem, or near to it, either the family of Abimelech's mother or some other. Or and all Beth millo, so Beth is not a house, but a part of the name of the place. Made Abimelech king, to wit, over all Israel, ver. 22, which was a strange presumption for so many subjects of one city to undertake, but they had many advantages and encouragements for it, as the rage, a general, and constant inclination of the Israelites to kingship, Abimelech's being the son of Gideon, to whom and to his sons they offered the kingdom, Judg. vii. 22, and though the father could and did refuse it for himself, yet they might imagine that he could not take away his son's right conveyed to them by the Israelites' offer, the universal election of the Israelites to God to Baal, whose great patron and champion Abimelech pretended to be, the power and prevalence of the tribe of Ephraim, in which Shechem was, Josh. xv. 7, whose proud and imperious spirit manifested Judg. vii. 1, xxi. 1, would make them readily close with a king of their own brethren, and Abimelech's getting the start of all others, having the crown actually put upon his head and an army raised to maintain his tyranny. By the plain of the pillar, or by the oak of the pillar, i. e. by the oak where Joshua created a pillar as a witness of the covenant renewed be-

For though the men of Shechem were the first authors of Abimelech's advancement, it is more than probable that the rest of the people easily consented to that form of government which they so much desired, or, at least, made no resistance against it.

21 Then God sent an evil spirit between Abimelech and the men of Shechem, and the men of Shechem dealt treacherously with Abimelech.

God gave the devil commission to enter into or work upon their minds and hearts, knowing that he of him self, and by his own inclination would fill them with mistakes, and jealousies and divisions, and heart burnings, which would end in civil wars and mutual ruin.

21 That the cruelty done to the three-score and ten sons of Jambbad might come, and their blood be laid upon Abimelech their brother, which slew them, and upon the men of Shechem, which aided him in the killing of his brethren.

The cruelty is the punishment of the cruelty.

25 And the men of Shechem set liars in wait for him in the top of the mountains, and they robbed all that came along that way by them, and it was told Abimelech.

They in wait for him to seize his person. All that came along that way by them, to wit, such as favoured or served Abimelech, for to such only their commission reached, though it may be they went beyond their bound, and by military licence robbed the prisoner promiscuously. It was told Abimelech, who, as it is here intimated, exerted hostility towards the men of Shechem.

26 And Gid the son of Ibed came with his brethren, and went over to Shechem, and the men of Shechem put their confidence in him.

It is not I own who or of what tribe Gid was, but it is evident that he was a man very considerable for wealth and strength and counsel, and interest, and all pleased with Abimelech, for he went over to Shechem by his presence and counsel to animate and assist them against Abimelech.

27 And they went out into the fields, and gathered their vineyards, and trode the grapes, and made merry, and went into the house of their god, and did eat and drink, and cursed Abimelech.

They went out into the fields which till his coming they durst not go, for fear of Abimelech, but now took confidence to do so in contempt of him. Made merry partly from the custom of rejoicing, and singing songs in vintage time Lev. xix. 24, Isa. xlv. 10, Jer. xxv. 30, and partly for the hopes of their redemption from Abimelech's tyranny. The hope of their god Baruch ver. 1, either to beg his help against Abimelech, or to give him thanks either for the fruits of the earth now received, or for the hope of recovering their former lost liberty. Did eat and drink to the honour of their idols, and out of the obligations made to them, as they used to do to the honour of Jehovah, and out of his sacrifices. Cursed Abimelech either by reviling and reproaching him in their manner, or rather in a more solemn and religious manner cursing him by their god, as Ishbath did David 1 Sam. xvi. 15, or calling upon their god to satisfy their enmities, and succeed against him.

28 And Gid the son of Ibed said, "Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we should serve him? is not he the son of Jambbad? and Zebul his officer? serve the men of Hamor the father of Shechem, for why should we serve him?"

Who is Abimelech? what is he but a base born person, an ambitious, imperious, and true tyrant, and one every way unfit and unworthy to govern you? Who is Shechem? Shechem is here the name, rather, of the place, or city of Shechem, and so the Hebrew particle mi, who, is for mah, what, as it is Judg. xii. 17, and then the sense of the place is this. Consider how obscure and unworthy a person Abimelech is, and what a potent and honourable city Shechem is, and judge you whether it be fit that such a city should be subject to such a person. Or rather, of a person, even of Abimelech named in the foregoing word, and described in those which follow, the son of Jambbad between which Shechem is named in, and therefore can not conveniently belong to any other. He is called Shechem for the Shechemite, by a metonymy of the subject, whereby the place is put for the person contained in it, and belonging to it, as Egypt, Ethiopia, Scythia, Judea, Macedonia, and Achaia, &c., are put for the people of those countries Job i. 15, vi. 19, Ps. lxxviii. 31, cv. 39, Isa. xlii. 3, Matt. iii. 5, Rom. xv. 26. Thus mi is taken properly, and the sense is, Who is this Shechemite? for so he was by the mother's side, son of a woman of your city, and she but his concubine and servant, why should you submit to one so basely descended? The son of Jambbad, a son of Gideon, a person obscure by his own confession Judg. vi. 15, and famous only by his boldness and fierceness against that Bial which you justly honour and reverence, whose aid he overtook, and whose worship he endeavoured to abolish. And Zebul his officer, and you are so unworthy and me spirited that you do not only submit to him, but suffer his very servant to be a rule over you, and enslave you, and particularly this ignoble and hateful person Zebul. Serve the men of Hamor the father of Shechem, if you love bondage, calling the old master and lord of the place, choose not amongst us Abimelech, but take one of the old stock one descended from Hamor Gen. xxxiv. 2, who did not carry himself like a tyrant, as Abimelech did, but like a father of his city of Shechem. The he might speak either sincerely, as being himself a Canaanite and Shechemite, and possibly come from one of those little ones whom Simeon and Levi spared when they slew all the Givonim Gen. xxxiv. 29. And it may be that he was one of the good blood, a descendant of Hamor, who hereby sought to insinuate himself into their minds, to overcome it as it follows, ver. 29. Would to God the people were under my hand! which he might judge the people more likely to do both because they were now united with the Canaanites in religion, and because their present distress might oblige them to put themselves under him, who seemed or pretended to be a vibrant and expert commander. Or 2. In way of derision, he being an Ishbath. If you are so ready to serve some of the children of Hamor, which because you rightly judge to be absurd and dishonourable, do not now submit to a far baser person, but cast off his yoke, and recover your lost liberties.

29 And would to God this people were under my hand! then would I remove Abimelech, and he said to Abimelech, Increase thine army, and come out.

Under my hand, i. e. under my command, I wish you would unanimously submit to me, as your captain and governor, for he found them divided and some of them heakening after Abimelech, whom they had lately rejected according to the levity of the people's humour. Then would I remove Abimelech, as you have driven him out of your city, I would drive him out of your country. He said to Abimelech, he sent this message or challenge to him, I do not to surprise thee at any advantage, strengthen thyself as much as thou canst, and come out into the open field, that thou and I may decide it by our arms.

30 ¶ And when Zebul the ruler of the city heard the words of Gai the son of Ibed, his anger was kindled.

It seems he had temporized and complied with the people's humour and plot against Abimelech, either in dissimulation and design, and by Abimelech's connivance or advice, or really, but when he heard Gai's words and himself traduced and struck at by them, he changed his mind, repented of his defection from Abimelech, and intended to return himself, and to bring the people again to the obedience of their lord and king.

31 And he sent messengers unto Abimelech <sup>Heb. secretly or, to Tormah.</sup> privily, saying, Behold, Gaal the son of Ebed and his brethren be come to Shechem, and, behold, they fortify the city against thee.

Printed so as Gaal and his confederates might not know it. Or, as Tormah, or, who was in Innah, for some make it the name of the place where Abimelech was which is called with some variation Arumah ver 11. They fortify the city against thee, they beset or guard the city of Shechem, so as none may go out to thee, nor come in from thee.

32 Now therefore up by night, thou and the people that is with thee, and lie in wait in the field.

33 And it shall be, that in the morning, as soon as the sun is up, thou shalt rise early, and set upon the city and, behold, when he and the people that is with him come out against thee, then mayest thou do to them <sup>as thou shalt find occasion.</sup> as thou shalt find occasion.

Behold when he, i. e. Gaal, mentioned ver 31

34 ¶ And Abimelech rose up, and all the people that were with him, by night, and they laid wait against Shechem in four companies.

35 And Gaal the son of Ebed went out, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city and Abimelech rose up, and the people that were with him, from lying in wait.

Stood in the entering of the gate of the city, to put his army in order, and to conduct them against Abimelech, whom he supposed to be at a great distance.

36 And when Gaal saw the people, he said to Zebul, Behold there come people down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul said unto him, Thou seest the shadow of the mountains as if they were men.

Zebul concealed the anger which he had conceived, ver 30, and pretended compliance with him in this expectation that he might drive him forth into the field where Abimelech might have the opportunity of fighting with him and overthrowing him. Thou seest the shadow of the mountains, for in the morning as this was and in the evening, the shadows are longest and move most quickly. He intimates that he was afraid of shadows.

37 And Gaal spake again and said, See there come people down by the middle of the land, and another company come along by the plain of Meonenim.

By the middle of the land, Heb. by the navel of the land. So he calls either first, The middle of it, is the middle part of Greece and of Sicily are called the navel of them by the Roman writers, because the navel is in the middle of men's body, or, secondly, The higher part of it called the mountains, ver 36, and here the navel, because it was raised above the other ground, as the navel is above the rest of the body.

38 Then said Zebul unto him, Where is now thy mouth, wherewith thou saidst, Who is Abimelech, that we should serve him? is not this the people that thou hast despised? go out, I pray now, and fight with them.

Thy mouth, i. e. thy brags. Now thou betrayest thy fears, and therefore now show thyself a man, and fight valiantly for thyself and people.

39 And Gaal went out before the men of Shechem, and fought with Abimelech.

40 And Abimelech chased him, and he fled before him, and many were overthrown and wounded, even unto the entering of the gate.

He fled before him, being surprised by the unexpected coming of Abimelech and possibly not fully prepared for the encounter. Many were overthrown and wounded, being pursued and overtaken by Abimelech.

41 And Abimelech dwelt at Arumah and Zebul thrust out Gaal and his brethren, that they should not dwell in Shechem.

Abimelech did not prosecute his victory, but retreated to Arumah partly to see the effect of this fight and whether the Shechemites would not of themselves return to his government, being either persuaded by Zebul upon this occasion or terrified by his strength and valour, or how by his clemency in proceeding no further against them, and partly that, being hereby grown more secure, he might have the greater advantage against them, which accordingly he here makes use of. Zebul thrust out Gaal and his brethren, which he was enabled to do, because the multitude which is generally light and unstable, and judgeth of all things by events were now engaged against Gaal suspecting him guilty either of treachery or cowardice, or ill conduct, and besides they thought the expulsion of Gaal would sweeten and satisfy Abimelech, and make him give over the war against them. But though they were offended with Gaal yet Zebul's interest was not so considerable with them, that he could prevail with them either to kill Gaal and his brethren or to yield themselves to Abimelech; and therefore he still complies with the people, and waits for a fairer opportunity though in vain.

42 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the people went out into the field and they told Abimelech.

The people went out into the field, either first, To renew the fight and advance themselves for their last loss the great God hardening their hearts to their destruction, and the accomplishment of his word delivered to them by Totham. But here is not one word about the people's arming, or resolving on fighting as they were before ver 39 but only of their laughter ver 43 44. Or, secondly, To their usual and then proper employment about their labours for though their venture was put off the seed time was now come and other things were to be done in the fields. Or, thirdly, Upon some solemn occasion of here expressed possibly to make a solemn prayer or perform some other rites in the fields to the honour of the god Baal berith, as the manner of the heathens is, to make application to him for his help and for better success or only to go to that end to the house of their god Baal berith which is thought to have been in the fields as may seem from ver 27 46, on a mountain up in the east side of the city.

43 And he took the people, and divided them into three companies, and hid wait in the field, and looked, and, behold, the people were come forth out of the city, and he rose up against them, and smote them.

Three companies, whereof he kept one with himself, ver 41 and put the rest under other commanders.

44 And Abimelech, and the company that was with him, rushed forward, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city and the two other companies ran upon all the people that were in the fields, and slew them.

Stood in the entering of the gate of the city to prevent their retreat into the city, and give the other two companies opportunity to cut them off.

45 And Abimelech fought against the city all that day, and he took the city, <sup>and</sup> and slew the people that was therein, and beat down the city, and sowed it with salt.

Not to make the place barren as salt will do for then he would have sowed the field, not the city, but in token of his detestation and desire of their utter and irrecoverable destruction, for salt is the symbol of ruin or perpetuity.

compare Numb xvii 19, Deut xxix 23, 2 Chron xiii 5, Zeph ii 9

46 ¶ And when all the men of the tower of Shechem heard that, they entered into an hold of the house of the god Berith

The tower of Shechem, a strong place belonging to the city of Shechem, and made for its defence or security, but without the city. It is thought this was that Milo which we considerate with Shechem in their design for Abimelech ver 6 which also Jotham cursed with Shechem, ver 20, and that this is noted to have its effect, ver 57. And this place may be called the tower of Shechem, either because those who possessed and defended it were sent from Shechem, or because it was built and kept for the safeguard of Shechem. The house of the god Berith, or Bethel ver 1. Hither they fled out of the town betaking to it from the same event with Shechem, and here they thought to be secure, partly by the strength of the place, the temples of idol were oftentimes built in the high and strongest places, as the capitol at Rome and the temple at Jerusalem and such this place seems to have been, because they fled there to save their lives, partly by the religion of it, thinking that either their god would protect them there, or that Abimelech would spare them there, if not out of pity to that god, yet out of thankfulness for the benefit which he received thence ver 4.

17 And it was told Abimelech, that all the men of the tower of Shechem were gathered together

18 And Abimelech got him up to mount Zalmon, he and all the people that were with him, and Abimelech took an ax in his hand, and cut down a bough from the trees, and took it, and laid it on his shoulder, and said unto the people that were with him, What ye have seen him do make haste, and do as I have done

Zalmon, a place so called for a shadow, because there were many trees there.

19 And all the people likewise cut down every man his bough, and followed Abimelech, and put them to the hold, and set the hold on fire upon them, so that all the men of the tower of Shechem died also, about a thousand men and women 20 ¶ Then went Abimelech to Thebez, and encamped against Thebez, and took it. Thebez, another town near to Shechem, and as it seems, within its territory.

21 But there was a strong tower within the city, and thither fled all the men and women, and all they of the city, and shut it to them, and put them up to the top of the tower.

All the men and women, all that were not slain in the taking of the town, or they all forsook the town and retired to the tower. hold, the top of the tower was flat and plain, and the tower of building.

22 And Abimelech came unto the tower, and fought against it, and went hard unto the door of the tower to burn it with fire.

23 And a certain woman cast a piece of a millstone upon Abimelech's head, and all to the ground his skull.

Such great towns did they build up with them, whereby they might defend themselves, or offend those who were united to them. Here the justice of God is remarkable in visiting the wickedness of his people. He slew his brethren upon a stone, ver 2, and he sought his own life by a millstone.

24 Then he died hastily unto the young man his armourbearer, and said unto him, Draw thy sword, and slay me, that men say not of me, A woman slew him. And his young man thrust him through, and he died.

A woman slew him, which was esteemed a matter of disgrace.

55 And when the men of Israel saw that Abimelech was dead, they departed every man unto his place.

56 ¶ Thus God rendered the wickedness of Abimelech, which he did unto his father, in slaying his seventy brethren:

The wickedness which he did unto his father, in rooting out, as far as he could, the name, and memory, and remainders of his father.

57 And all the evil of the men of Shechem did God render upon their heads: and upon them came the curse of Jotham the son of Jerubbaal.

CHAP X

Tola judgeth Israel, and Jair whose thirty sons had thirty cities 1-5. The people's idolatry, 6. The Philistines and Ammonites oppress them, 7-9. They cry to God, who sendeth them to their false gods, but upon their repentance punithe them 10-16. The Ammonites and Israelites encamp again one another 17-18.

AND after Abimelech there arose to defend Israel Tola the son of Puah, the son of Dodai a man of Issachar, and he dwelt in Shamir in mount Ephraim.

There arose, not of himself, but either chosen by the people, or rather raised by God, as the other judges were. To defend Israel, or to save, which he did not by fighting, but by a prudent and pious government of them, whereby he kept them from sedition and oppression and tyranny as also from idolatry, as may be gathered from ver 6, which if not restrained and purged out would have brought certain ruin upon them. In Shamir in Mount Ephraim, which was in the very heart and midst of the land.

2 And he judged Israel twenty and three years, and died, and was buried in Shamir.

3 ¶ And after him arose Jair, a Gileadite, and judged Israel twenty and two years.

Gileadite, of Gilead beyond Jordan.

4 And he had thirty sons that rode on thirty ass colts, and they had thirty cities, which are called Havoth-jair unto this day, which are in the land of Gilead.

Rode on ass colts, because horses were scarce there, and were not to be multiplied by the king himself, Deut xviii 16. Hence the kings and kings' children used to ride upon mules, 2 Sam xiii 29, xviii 9, 1 Kings i 33 vs 11. Compare Judg v 10, xii 11. Havoth-jair, Object the villages were called so before this time from another Jair, Numb xxviii 11, Deut iii 14. Anon They are not said to be now first called by that name, but to be still so called because the old name was revived and confirmed upon this occasion, as Sheba is said to be called Ben-sheba, upon an occasion mentioned Gen xxvi 33, though it was so called before upon a more ancient occasion, Gen xxi 31. Possibly this Jair had enlarged or fortified these towns and they were justly denominated from him, no less than from the former.

5 And Jair died, and was buried in Camon.

6 ¶ And the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the Lord, and served Baalim, and Ashtaroth, and the gods of Syria, and the gods of Zidon, and the gods of Moab, and the gods of the children of Ammon, and the gods of the Philistines, and forsook the Lord, and served not him.

He shows how they grew worse and worse, and so ripened in motives for the ruin which afterward came upon them before they worshipped God and idols together, now they utterly forsake God, and wholly cleave to idols.

7 And the anger of the Lord was hot against Israel, and he sold them into the hands of the Philistines, and into the hands of the children of Ammon.

The one on the west the other on the east, so they were molested on both sides.

8 And that year they vexed and oppressed the children of Israel eighteen years, all the children of Israel that were on the other side Jordan in the land of the Amorites, which is in Gilead.

(Or, that year they had vexed and oppressed the children of Israel eighteen years. Or, they vexed them in that year that was the eighteenth year, to wit, of that vexation. This was the eighteenth year from the beginning of that oppression. And these eighteen years, are not to be reckoned from Jair's death because that would enlarge the time of the judges beyond the just bounds, as may appear from 1 Kings vi 1, nor from Jephthah's beginning to reign, because he reigned but six years and in the beginning thereof put an end to this persecution, but from the fourth year of Jair's reign, so that the greatest part of Jair's reign was contemporary with this affliction. And although this oppression of the Ammonites and Philistines, and the cause of it the idolatry of the Israelites, he not mentioned till after Jair's death, because the sacred penman would deliver the whole history of this calamity entirely and together, yet they both happened before it, and Jair's death is mentioned before that only by a prolepsis or anticipation that which nothing is more frequent in Scripture. The case of Jem and Samson seem to be much alike. For as it is said of Samson, that he judged Israel in the days of the tyranny of the Philistines twenty years, Judg. xvi 20 by which it is evident that his judicature and their dominion were contemporary; the like is to be conceived of Jair, that he began to judge Israel, and endeavoured to reform religion and purge out all abuses, but being unable to effect this through the backwardness and baseness of the people, God would not enable him to deliver the people, but gave them up to this sad oppression, so that Jair could only perform one half of his office, which was to determine differences amongst the Israelites, but could not deliver them from their enemies.

9 Moreover the children of Ammon passed over Jordan to fight also against Judah, and against Benjamin, and against the house of Ephraim; so that Israel was sore distressed.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel cried unto the Lord, saying, We have sinned against thee, both because we have forsaken our God, and also served Baalim.

Because, not contented to add idols to thee, we have preferred them before thee, and rejected thee to receive and worship them.

11 And the Lord said unto the children of Israel, Did not I deliver you from the Egyptians, and from the Amorites, from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines?

The Lord said; either by himself, the Son of God appearing in a visible shape, which then was usual, or by some prophet whom he raised and sent to this purpose, or by the high priest, who was consulted in the case. The Amorites, both Sihon and Og, and their people, Nubim, and other kings of the Amorites within Jordan, Josh. xvi. The children of Ammon were confederate with the Moabites, Judg. xi 13, 11. The Philistines. See Judg. xvi. 31.

12 The Zidonians also, and the Amalekites, and the Moabites, did oppress you; and ye cried to me, and I delivered you out of their hand.

The Zidonians also; for though we do not read of any oppression of Israel, particularly, by the Zidonians, yet there might be such a thing, as many things were said and done, both in the Old and New Testament, which are not recorded there, or they might join their forces with the king of Mesopotamia, Judg. iii 8, or with some other of their oppressors, for it is certain these were left among others to prove Israel, Judg. ii 1-3. Of the Amalekites, see Judg. iii 13; vi 3. Moabites, either, first, Those who lived in or near the wilderness of Moab, in the south of Judah, 1 Sam. xxv 25, xxvi. 2, whether Edomites or others. Or, secondly, The Meunim, a people living near the Arabians, of whom 2 Chron. xxvi. 7. For in the Hebrew the letters of both names are the same, only the one is the singular the other the plural number. Or, thirdly, The Midianites, whose oppression he would not omit, it being usual for one and the same person or persons to have two names, although the Midianites may be comprehended under the Amalekites, with whom they were joined Judg. vi 3, 31. Or, fourthly, Some other people now unknown and not expressed elsewhere in Scripture.

13 Yet ye have forsaken me, and served other gods: wherefore I will deliver you no more.

To wit except you repent in another manner than you yet have done, which when they performed, God suspends the execution of this threatening. Compare Jer. xviii. 7.

14 Go and cry unto the gods which ye have chosen, let them deliver you in the time of your tribulation.

You have not been forced to worship those gods by your oppressors and tyrants, but you have freely chosen those gods before me.

15 ¶ And the children of Israel said unto the Lord, We have sinned: do thou unto us whatsoever seemeth good unto thee, deliver us only, we pray thee, this day.

Do not give us up into the hands of the cruel men, but do thou chastise us with thine own hand as much as thou pleasest, to wit, if we be not more faithful and constant to thee than we have hitherto been.

16 And they put away the strange gods from among them, and served the Lord: and his soul was grieved for the misery of Israel.

They put away the strange gods: this was an evidence of the sincerity of their sorrow, that they did not only confess and bewail their sins, but also forsake them, and loathe themselves for them. His soul was grieved, not properly, as to inward affliction, for God being infinitely happy, is not capable of grieving, but figuratively, and as to outward expression. He acted towards them like one that felt their sufferings, he had pity upon them, repented of his severe proceedings against them, and quite changed his carriage towards them and punished their enemies as sorely as if they had grieved and injured his own person.

17 Then the children of Ammon were gathered together, and encamped in Gilead. And the children of Israel assembled themselves together, and encamped in Mizpeh.

That Mizpeh which was beyond Jordan in Gad or Manasseh, of which see Gen. xxxi 49, Josh. xviii 26, Judg. x 17, x 11, 29, 31. There were other cities of that name in Scripture.

18 And the people and princes of Gilead said one to another, What man is he that will begin to fight against the children of Ammon? he shall be head over all the inhabitants of Gilead

CHAP XI

Jephthah dwells in the land of Tob, 1-3, is called by the elders of Gilead to command in chief against the Ammonites, 4-6. He demands to be continued head after the war should cease, they swear it shall be so, 7-11. He sends two messengers to the king of the Ammonites to treat of peace, but in vain 12-28. Jephthah moves with against him, maketh a vow, smiteth the Ammonites, performeth his vow on his daughter, 29-40.

NOW Jephthah the Gileadite was a mighty man of valour, and he was the son of an harlot, and Gilead begat Jephthah.

And Gilead's wife bare him sons, and his wife's sons grew up and they thrust out Jephthah, and said unto him, Thou shalt not inherit in our father's house, for thou art the son of a strange woman.

The Gileadite, so called either from his father Gilead Josh xxi 1-2 or from the mountain or city of Gilead, the place of his birth or abode. The son of an harlot is a bastard for though such were not commonly to enter into the congregation of the Lord Deut. xxi 2 yet God can dispense with his own laws, and hath sometimes done him our to have born persons of us that some of them were admitted to be the progenitors of the Lord Jesus Christ Gilead, one of the children of that ancient Gilead Numb xxvii 1, Josh xxvii 1.

Then Jephthah fled from his brethren and dwelt in the land of Tob and there were gathered vain men to Jephthah, and went out with him.

The land of Tob the name either of the land or territory of the man who was the owner or ruler of it. This place was in or near Gilead it appears by the speedy intercourse which here was between Jephthah and the Israelites. Vain men idle persons who desire to get their living, rather by spoil and rapine than by honest and diligent labour. These evil minded persons Jephthah managed well employing them against the enemies of God and of Israel that bordered upon them, and particularly, upon parties of the Ammonites which made the Israelites more forward to choose him for their chieftain in this war. Went out with him when he made excursions and attempts upon his and their enemies.

And it came to pass in process of time, that the children of Ammon made war against Israel.

In process of time Heb. after some ways, or, after a year, may be more fit put for a year, is hath been showed after that is mentioned Judg. x 8. The Ammonites had vexed and oppressed them sixteen years and now that the Israelites began to make opposition they commenced a war against them. Or some time after Jephthah had been banished and after he had taken up arms and given them some disturbance. Or, after the Israelites assembled together, as is said Judg. x 16.

And it was so that when the children of Ammon made war against Israel, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah out of the land of Tob.

By direction or instruction from God who both qualified him for and called him to the office of a judge. See Judg. xii 7, Heb. xi 2. Otherwise it might not have been chosen a bastard. Don't xxii 2. Unless we will say, that there being no other person among them fit for and willing to this work, necessity dispensed with this law, as it did with other positive laws, as those of the sabbath and sacrifices.

And they said unto Jephthah, Come, and be our captain, that we may fight with the children of Ammon.

Our captain they say not our king, for the experience of Abimelech's kingship had cooled their appetite in that particular, but our captain.

And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, Did not ye hate me, and expel me out of my father's house? and why are ye come unto me now when ye are in distress?

Did not ye expel me out of my father's house, and deprive me of all share in my father's goods which though a bastard, was due to me? Thus expulsion of him was the act of his brethren, but he here ascribes it to the elders of Gilead, either because some of them were among these elders, it is very probable from the dignity of this family, or because this act though desired and prompted by his brethren was executed by the decree of the elders to whom the determination of all controversies about inheritances belonged, and therefore it was their fault that they did not protect him from the injuries of his brethren, as their duty was.

And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, Therefore we turn again to thee now, that thou mayest go with us, and fight against the children of Ammon, and be our head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

Therefore we turn again to thee now being sensible that we have done thee injury we come now to make thee full reparations.

And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, If ye bring me home again to fight against the children of Ammon and the Lord deliver them before me, shall I be your head?

If ye bring me home again, if you recall me from this place where I am now settled to the place whence I am expelled. Shall I be your head? will you really make good the promise? Jephthah was so solicitous in this case either from his zeal for the public good, which required that he should be so, or from the law of self preservation that he might secure himself from his brethren whose ill will he had experienced and whose injuries he could not prevent if they had saved their ends he had been reduced to his private capacity or there might be some threat of unbelief in him, for which God therefore severely, though paternally chastised him as we see afterwards.

And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, The Lord be witness between us, if we do not so according to thy words.

They confirm their promise by a solemn and sacred oath.

Then Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him head and captain over them and Jephthah uttered all his words before the Lord in Mizpeh.

Jephthah uttered all his words objectively so called, i.e. all that was spoken, not only by him, but also by the elders of Gilead concerning him, and concerning this whole transaction, and the conditions of it, or, all his matters the whole business. Before the Lord, i.e. before the public congregation, where with God was usually and then especially present see Exod. xx 24, Deut. vi 20, Matt. xviii 10. Or, before the altar, which possibly they did erect upon this special occasion, by God's permission Or, in God's presence, calling him to be present, as a witness and judge between them.

And Jephthah sent messengers unto the king of the children of Ammon, saying, What hast thou to do with me, that thou art come against me to fight in my land?

Messengers, i. e. ambassadors, to prevent bloodshed, and make peace, as far as in him lay, that so the Israelites might be acquitted before God and men from all the sad consequences of this war; herein he showed great prudence, and no less piety. What hast thou to do with me? what pretence or reasonable cause hast thou for this invasion? My land, he speaks this in the name of all the people, whose the land was

13 And the king of the children of Ammon answered unto the messengers of Jephthah, 'Because Israel took away my land, when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon even unto <sup>1</sup>Jabbok, and unto Jordan now therefore restore those lands again peacefully

My land, i. e. this land of Gilead which was mine but unjustly taken from me by Sihon and Og the kings of the Amorites; and the injury perpetuated by Israel's detuning it from me. This land before the conquests of Sihon and Og, belonged partly to the Ammonites as is affirmed Josh xiii 26, and partly and principally to the Moabites as appears from Numb xxi 24, 26, Deut iii 11. And indeed Moab and Ammon did for the most part join their interests and their forces, as appears from Scripture story, and as Balak the king of the Moabites acted for the Ammonites so now the king of Ammon seems to act for the Moabites, either as being now his subjects, or as his confederates, whence it comes to pass that Moab and Ammon are here promiscuously mentioned, as vii 15, 17, 18, 23, and Chemosh the known god of the Moabites Numb xxi 29 1 Kings xi 33, 2 Kings xxiii 13, Jer xliiii 13. 16 is here called the god of the Ammonites ver 24 though to speak strictly, Moloch or Milcom was their god, 1 Kings xi 5, 7, 33, 2 Kings xxiii 13

14 And Jephthah sent messengers again unto the king of the children of Ammon

15 And said unto him, Thus saith Jephthah, 'Israel took not away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon.'

16 But when Israel came up from Egypt, and 'walked through the wilderness unto the Red sea, and 'came to Kadesh,

Unto the Red Sea, unto which they came three times, see Exod xiii 18, again a little after their passage over it Exod xv 22 and a third time, long after when they came to Eziongeber Numb xxxiii 35 Deut ii 8 which was upon the shore of the Red Sea 1 Kings ix 26 2 Chron xiii 17 from whence they went to Kadesh, Numb xx of this time he speaks here

17 Then 'Israel sent messengers unto the king of Edom, saying, Let me, I pray thee, pass through thy land: 'but the king of Edom would not hearken therefore. And in like manner they sent unto the king of Moab but he would not consent and Israel 'abode in Kadesh

Peaceably, and did not revenge their unkindness and inhumanity, as they could have done

18 Then they went along through the wilderness, and 'compassed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, and 'came by the east side of the land of Moab, 'and pitched on the other side of Arnon, but came not within the border of Moab for Arnon was the border of Moab

19 And 'Israel sent messengers unto Sihon King of the Amorites, the king of Heshbon, and Israel said unto him, 'Let us pass, we pray thee, through thy land into my place

20 'Unto the land of Canaan, which God hath given to me.

21 But Sihon trusted not Israel to pass through his coast but Sihon gathered all his people together, and pitched in Jahaz, and fought against Israel

So Sihon was the aggressor or beginner of the war, and the Israelites were forced to it for their own defence

22 And the Lord God of Israel delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Israel, and they 'smote them so Israel possessed all the land of the Amorites, the inhabitants of that country

23 And they possessed 'all the coasts of the Amorites, from Arnon even unto Jabbok, and from the wilderness even unto Jordan

The coasts or borders together with all the land included within those borders, for so that word is oft used as Exod xii 2 Paul xlviii 11, Jer xvi 13, xvi 3 The wilderness, to wit, the desert of Arabia

24 So now the Lord God of Israel hath dispossessed the Amorites from before his people Israel, and shouldst thou possess it?

God, the sovereign Lord of all lands, hath given us this land: this he adds as a further and a convincing reason, because otherwise it might have been alleged against the former argument that they could gain no more right to that land from Sihon than Sihon himself had, and he had but an unjust claim to it

25 Wilt not thou possess that which 'Chemosh thy god giveth thee to possess? So whosoever 'the Lord our God shall drive out from before us, them will we possess

He speaks according to then fond and absurd opinion The Ammonites and Moabites got their land by right of war and conquest of the old inhabitants, whom they drove out and thus success, though gotten thus by the true God, for Iots like Deut ii 19 of a commonly and ridiculously ascribe to their god Chemosh whose gift they owned to be a firm and sufficient title

26 And now at thou any thing better than 'Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab? did he ever strive against Israel, or did he ever fight against them,

Art thou better than Balak? art thou wiser than he? or art thou more right than he had Balak, though he plotted against Israel in defence of his own land, which he thought they would invade and conquer, Numb xxi 1, yet he never contended with them about the restitution of those lands which Sihon took from him or his predecessors, after the Israelites had conquered them

27 While Israel dwelt in 'Heshbon and her towns, and in 'Aroer and her towns, and in all the cities that be along by the coasts of Arnon, three hundred years? why therefore did ye not recover them within that time?

Three hundred years, not precisely, but about that time, either from their coming out of Egypt, or from their first conquest of those lands and thus numbers are oft expressed see Numb i 46, ii 32, xi 21, Judg xi 16 He urges this prescription, which is by all men reckoned a just title, and it is fit it should be so for the good of the world, because otherwise the door would be opened both to kings and to private persons for infinite contentions and confusions

28 Wherefore I have not sinned against thee, but thou doest me wrong to war against me the Lord 'the Judge: 'be judge this day between the children of Israel and the children of Ammon

I have not sinned against thee, I have done thee no wrong. The Lord be judge this day, let him determine this controversy by the success of this day and war.

28 Howbeit the king of the children of Ammon hearkened not unto the words of Jephthah which he sent him.

29 ¶ Then the Spirit of the Lord came upon Jephthah, and he passed over Gilead, and Manassah, and passed over Mizpeh of Gilead, and from Mizpeh of Gilead he passed over unto the children of Ammon.

The Spirit of the Lord came upon Jephthah, endued him with a more than ordinary courage and resolution. Manassah, i.e. Bashan, which the half tribe of Manassah beyond Jordan, inhabited, Josh. xx. 9, xxi. 6. Mizpeh of Gilead, so called to distinguish it from other cities of that name. Having gathered what forces he suddenly could, he came hither to the borders of the Ammonites.

30 And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands,

Of this and the following verse see the notes on ver. 39. 31 Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering.

32 ¶ So Jephthah passed over unto the children of Ammon to fight against them, and the Lord delivered them into his hands.

33 And he smote them from Aroer, even till thou come to Minnith, even twenty cities, and unto the plain of the vineyards, with a very great laughter. Thus the children of Ammon were subdued before the children of Israel.

Minnith, a place not far from Rabbah, the chief city of the Ammonites.

34 ¶ And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and behold, his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances, and she was his only child, beside her he had neither son nor daughter.

With timbrels and with dances, as in consort with other virgins as the manner was. See Exod. xv. 20, 1 Sam. xviii. 16. Beside her, Heb. of herself, i.e. proceeding from his own body, which may imply that he had other children either by adoption, or through his wife, who had the child by a former husband.

35 And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: for I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I cannot go back.

Thou art one of the women who, before this I was troubled by my brethren, and since by the Ammonites, and now most of all thou hast troubled me only by thyself. I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, i.e. I have vowed, which was done by words, Num. xxx. 2, 6. I cannot go back, i.e. not retract my vow, I am indispen- sibly obliged to perform it.

36 And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the Lord, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth, forasmuch as the Lord hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon.

Do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth, do not for my sake make thyself a transgressor, I freely give my consent to thy vow, wherewith, and with the success of his arms, he had now acquainted her, though it be not here expressed. Forasmuch as the Lord hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, I am willing to bear my burden, being abundantly satisfied with the great deliverance which God hath given to his people by thy hands.

37 And she said unto her father, Let this thing be done for me: let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and bewail my virginity, I and my fellows.

She chose the mountains as a solitary place, and there fore fitted both for lamentations, and for her preparation for her approaching calamity. Bewail my virginity, that I shall die childless, which was esteemed both a curse and a disgrace for the Israelites, Gen. xxx. 23, 1 Sam. i. 6, 7, Isa. iv. 1, because such were excluded from that great privilege of increasing the holy seed, and contributing to the birth of the Messiah, who was to be born of an Israelitish woman.

38 And he said, Go. And he sent her away for two months, and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains.

39 And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who said with her according to his vow which he had vowed, and she knew no man. And it was a custom in Israel.

Quest. What was it which Jephthah vowed and performed concerning his daughter? Answer. Many, especially of modern writers, conceive that Jephthah's daughter was sacrificed, but only devoted to perpetual virginity, which then was esteemed a great curse and reproach. Thus they gather 1. From ver. 37, 38, where we read that she bewailed not her death, which had been the chief cause of lamentation if that had been vowed, but her virginity. 2. From this ver. 39, where after he had said that he did with her according to his vow, he adds by way of declaration of the matter of that vow, and who knew no man. But for the first there may be a fair reason given, That she could not with honour bewail her death, which she had so generously and cheerfully accepted of, because it was attended with and occasioned by the public good, and her father's honour and happiness, ver. 36, and was a kind of martyrdom, and moreover, an act of religion, the payment of a vow, which ought to be done cheerfully, but only bewailed the circumstance of her death, that it was in some sort accursed and opprobrious, she having had no husband to take away her reproach, as they speak, Isa. iv. 1, and leaving no posterity to her father's comfort, and the increase of God's people. And for the second, that clause, and she knew no man, is plainly distinguished from the execution of his vow, which is here mentioned before, and this is added, not as an explanation of the vow, but as an aggravating circumstance, that this was executed when she had not yet known any man. Besides, this opinion seems liable to weighty objections. 1. There is no example in all the Scripture of any woman that was obliged to perpetual virginity by any vow of her own, much less by the vow of her parents, nor have parents any such power over their children, either by the law of nature or by the Holy Scripture. 2. The express words of the vow, ver. 31, mention nothing of her virginity, but only that she should surely be the Lord's, i.e. devoted to the service of the Lord, which might be without any obligation to perpetual virginity, for even Samuel, who was as fully devoted to the Lord by his parents as she could be, 1 Sam. i. 11, and Samson, who was devoted not only by his parents, but by God himself, and that in the highest degree, even to be a perpetual Nazirite. Judg. xii 7. yet were not prohibited marriage nor were any of the most sacred persons. Levites, or priests, or high priests though they wore the Lord's in a singular manner obliged to perpetual virginity and therefore if she was not offered up for a burnt-offering, as the authors of this opinion say, but only was consecrated to God, there was no occasion to bewail her virginity, which, for any thing that appears, she was not tied to. If this were all here was no sufficient cause why so wise and valiant a man as Jephthah should so bitterly and passionately lament over himself or his daughter. And therefore it may seem most probable that Jephthah did indeed sacrifice his daughter, as he had vowed to do; which was the opinion of Josephus the Jew and of the Chaldee Paraphrast, and of divers of the Jewish doctors and almost all the ancient fathers and many eminent writers; and this best agrees with the words of the vow delivered ver 31, It hathsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me—shall surely be the Lord's and I will offer it for a burnt-offering. Nor is there one word in all the following verses which denies that she was thus offered, only the execution of the vow is delivered in more ambiguous and general terms, ver 39, which in all reason and by the laws of good interpretation ought to be limited and explained by the more plain and particular description of it. It is true, those words may seem capable of another interpretation, the conjunctive particle and may be here put for the disjunctive or as it often is, as Exod. xvi 17, Lev. vi 3, 5. 2 Sam. ii 19 &c., and so the meaning is That what I first meet shall surely be the Lord's, or I will offer it up for a burnt-offering, to wit if it be a creature fit to be offered otherwise, say they if a dog or a ass should have met him first he should have been offered to offer them which was against the law. But it is sufficiently evident that he speaks of a human person, from the very phrase of coming forth to meet him at his return which plainly argues a design to meet him, purposely to congratulate his return this phrase of going to meet a person coming being very oft used in Scripture, and constantly of one person meeting another as Gen. iv 17. xviii 2. xxii 17 &c. and never of any brute creature. And although and is sometimes put for or, yet it is not to be so used without necessity, which seems not to be in this place nor is it very proper to distinguish two sentences in this manner, where the one is more general and the other being more special is comprehended within it which is the case here, for it shall surely be the Lord's is the general, and its being offered up for a burnt-offering is the particular way or manner how it was to be the Lord's it is very improper to say, This is either a virgin or it is my servant John, because the latter branch is contained in the former and therefore in all the alleged instances where and is put for or they are two distinct persons or things, and not one comprehended within another as Exod. xvi 17, father or mother, 2 Sam. ii 19, right hand or left. But the great objection against this opinion is this, That it seems a most horrid act directly contrary to the law of nature and to plain Scripture thus to sacrifice his own daughter, and that it seems altogether incredible, either that such a man as Jephthah, so eminent for piety and wisdom, and zeal, and faith should either make so barbarous a vow, or pursue it for above two months' space and that none of the priests of that time should inform him of the unlawfulness of executing so wicked a vow and of the liberty he had to redeem such a vow by virtue of Lev. xxvii 2, 3, &c., or that Jephthah would not willingly receive information, especially where it was so agreeable to his own interest and natural affection, or that the priests and people would suffer him to execute his own daughter and not rather hinder him by force, as they afterwards did when he had sworn the death of Jonathan. These and other such difficulties I confess there are in the case, but something may be truly and fairly said to allay the seeming monstrousness of this fact. 1 These were times of great and general ignorance and corruption of religion, where is the Israelites had apostatized from God, and learnt and followed the practices and worship of the heathen nations, Judg. x 6, whereof this was one, to offer up human sacrifices to Moloch, and although they seem now to have repented and forsaken their idols, Judg. x 16, yet they seem still to have retained part of the old leaven, and this among the rest, that they might offer human sacrifices, not to Moloch, as they had done, but unto the Lord. And whereas some of the Jewish writers pretend that Phinehas was alive at this time, and tell a fine story concerning him and Jephthah, that both stood upon their terms, and neither would go to the other to advise about the matter, yet it is more than probable that Phinehas was dead long before this time, and whosoever was the high priest then, he seems to be guilty either of gross ignorance or negligence, so that a late learned writer conceives that this was the reason why the priesthood was taken from him and from that line, and translated to the line of Ithamar which was done in the time of the judges, as may be gathered from 1 Sam. viii. 35, 36. Moreover Jephthah, though now a good man, may seem to have had but a rude and barbarous education, having been banished from his father's house, and forced to wander and dispose himself in the utmost borders of the land of Gilead, beyond Jordan at a great distance from the place of worship and instruction nor is it strange that the priests and people did not resist Jephthah in this enterprise, partly because many of them might be under the same ignorance and mistake that Jephthah did, and partly because they knew Jephthah to be a stout and resolute, and hoisterous man and were afraid to oppose him in a matter wherein he seemed to be so prompt, and their persons and families were not much concerned. 2 This mistake of Jephthah's, and of the rest of that age was not without some plausible appearance of warrant from the holy text, even from Lev. xxviii 28, 29, where it is expressly provided, that no devoted thing, whether man or beast should be redeemed, but should surely be put to death a place which it is not strange that a soldier in so ignorant an age should mistake, seeing even some learned divines in this knowing age, and Capellus amongst the rest, have fallen into the same error, and justified Jephthah's action from that place, and though I doubt not they run into the other extreme as men commonly do, those words being to be otherwise understood than they take them, (of which see my note on that place,) yet it must be granted that place gave Jephthah a very tolerable pretext for the action, and being pushed on by zeal for God, and the conscience of his vow he might easily be induced to it, and though this was a sin in him yet it was but a sin of ignorance which therefore was overlooked by a gracious God and yet proved by my holy men of Gilead. It is probably conceived that the Greeks, who used to seal sacred histories by turning them into fables hid from this history their relation of Phigeneia (which may be put for Jephthah's) sacrificed by her father Agamemnon which is described by many of the same circumstances where with this is accompanied. She knew no man, to wit, civilly, she died a virgin.

10 That the daughters of Israel went daily to lament the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.

Went yearly to a place appointed for their meeting to the end, possibly to the place where she was sacrificed. To lament the daughter of Jephthah, to express their sorrow for her loss, according to the manner. Or, to dance (so the Hebrew lamed is sometimes used) the daughter of Jephthah, to celebrate her praises, who had so willingly yielded up herself for a sacrifice.

CHAP. XII

The Ephraimites wage war against Jephthah are smitten by the Gileadites, and being discerned by Shubbelet, are slain to the number of two and forty thousand, 1. 6. Jephthah dies, 7. After him Ibzan, 8—10, Ithan, 11, 12, Abdon, 13—15, were judges over Israel.

AND the men of Ephraim gathered themselves together, and went northward, and said unto Jephthah, Wherefore pass thou over to fight against the children of Ammon, and didst not call us to go with thee? we will burn thine house upon thee with fire

5 Heb. 8.1
6 Heb. 8.1

Northward, over Jordan so northward to vards Mizpeh where Jephthah was Judg xi 34 and which was in the northern part of the land beyond Jordan Said unto Jephthah, through pride and envy contending with him is the deed before with Gideon, Judg viii 1 Wherefore passadst thou over? not over Jordan, for there he was already, but over the borders of the Israelites land beyond Jordan as appears by comparing this with Judg xi 29, where the same phrase is used

2 And Jephthah said unto them, I and my people were at great strife with the children of Ammon, and when I called you, ye delivered me not out of their hands

Hence it appears that he craved their assistance which they denied though that be not elsewhere expressed

3 And when I saw that ye delivered me not, I put my life in my hands and passed over against the children of Ammon, and the Lord delivered them into my hand wherefore then are ye come up unto me this day, to fight against me?

I put my life in my hands, i.e. I exposed myself to at most danger, as a man that enters a battle and precious thing in his hand which may easily either fall to the ground or be snatched from him The same phrase is used 1 Sam xix 5, xxviii 21, Job xiii 11, Psal cxxx 10 Wherefore then are ye come up unto me? why do you thus requite my kindness in running into such hazard to preserve you and yours?

4 Then Jephthah gathered together all the men of Gilead, and fought with Ephraim and the men of Gilead smote Ephraim, because they said, Ye Gileadites are fugitives of Ephraim among the Ephraimites and among the Manassites

According to this translation these words are scoffing and contemptuous expression of the Ephraimites concerning the Gileadites, whom they call fugitive of Ephraim, the word Ephraim being here taken figuratively as it is elsewhere, as Isa vii 2 5 so as it comprehends the other neighbouring tribe of which Ephraim was in some sort the head or chief, and especially their brethren of Manasseh who lived next to them and were descended from the same father, Joseph by reason whereof both these tribes are sometimes reckoned for one and called by the name of the tribe of Joseph And this large signification of Ephraim may seem probable from the following words where instead of Ephraim is put the Ephraimites and the Manassites By Gileadites here they seem principally to mean the Manassites beyond Jordan who dwell in Gilead as appears in Deut iii 13 Josh xvi 1 5 6 And although other Gileadites were joined with them yet they sent their passion against the Ephraimites principally because they envied them most partly because they seemed to have had a chief hand in the victory Judg xi 29, and partly because they were more nearly related to them, and therefore more obliged to declare their communion with them in the war These they here opprobriously call fugitives i.e. such as had deserted their brethren of Ephraim and Manasseh and for some worldly advantage planted themselves beyond Jordan at a distance from their brethren and were alienated in affection from them, and carried a dishonest and separate interest of their own, as appears by their magnifying the glory of this success to themselves, and excluding their brethren from it According to the Hebrew words he and may be rendered thus, Therefore (i.e. as rendered) they said, I fugitives of Ephraim are ye i.e. Ye Ephraimites ye are fugitives, for the words next to come are the men of Gilead smote Ephraim And having added unto what they said, because the pronoun they was added he adds by way of explication, who and it was the Gileadites (and they said it when they had got the advantage over them, and got between them and home as the next verse shows) being between Ephraim and Manasseh, i.e. having taken the passages of Jordan, as it follows, which lay between

Ephraim and that part of Manasseh which was beyond Jordan Or these latter words may be rendered thus, And the Gileadites were between Ephraim and Manasseh so there is only an ellipsis of two small words, which are all defective, and to be understood in Scripture Or thus And the Gileadites were in the midst of the Ephraimites and in the midst of the Manassites to wit, those Manassites who ordinarily lived within Jordan who possibly were contiguous with the Ephraimites in this quarrel And so the meaning is, they followed close after them, and overtook them, and fell upon the midst of them, and smote them, and they sent a party to intercept them at the passages of Jordan, as it here follows

5 And the Gileadites took the passages of Jordan before the Ephraimites and it was so that when those Ephraimites which were escaped said, Let me go over, that the men of Gilead said unto him, Art thou an Ephraimite? If he said, Nay,

Those Ephraimites which were escaped Heb the fugitives of Ephraim as before, for the Hebrew words are the same, which may make the latter exposition of the foregoing words more probable to wit, that it is not the Gileadites but the Ephraimites, who are there as well as here so called because they are smitten before Jephthah, and fled from him If he said, Nay, to avoid the present danger

6 Then said they unto him, Say now

Shibboleth and he said Sibboleth for he could not learn to pronounce it right Then they took him, and slew him at the passages of Jordan and there fell at that time of the Ephraimites forty and two thousand

Shibboleth signifies a stream or river, which they desired to pass over so it was a word proper for the occasion, and gave them no cause to suspect the design because they were required only to express their desire to go over the Shibboleth or river He said Sibboleth It is well known that not only divers nations but divers provinces or parts of the same nation, who use the same language, differ in their dialect and manner of pronunciation He could not frame to pronounce it right or rather, he did not frame or direct himself to speak so or to spell right, i.e. so as he was required to do it The Hebrew text doth not say that he could not do it but that it he did it not, because he suspecting not the design of it, uttered it speedily according to his manner of expression At that time, not in that place, at the passages of Jordan but in that expedition, being slain either in the battle, or in the pursuit, or at Jordan

7 And Jephthah judged Israel six years Then died Jephthah the Gileadite, and was buried in one of the cities of Gilead

In one of the cities, Heb in the cities, the plural number put for the singular, as Gen xix 29, where Lot is said to dwell in the cities, i.e. one of the cities, and 1 Sam xviii 21, the twain is put for one of the twain, and 1 Judg xviii 11, houses for house, and Jonah i 5, the sides for one of the sides

8 And after him Ibzan of Beth-lehem judged Israel

Of Bethlehem, either that in Judah, of which Matt ii 6, or that in Benjamin, Josh xix 15

9 And he had thirty sons, and thirty daughters whom he sent abroad, and took in thirty daughters from abroad for his sons And he judged Israel seven years

Took in thirty daughters, i.e. took them home for wives to his sons See Gen xxiv 67, xxxi 50, Deut xxi 12, 2 Sam xi 27

The Philistines again oppress Israel, 1 An angel appeareth to Manoah's wife, promising her a son that should be a Nazarite, and deliver Israel, 2-5 She informs her husband herof he prayeth, and obtuneth a return of the angel, 6-11 Manoah is desirous to provide food for the angel, and inquireth after his name 15-18 He sacrificeth to the Lord, and the angel ascendeth to heaven in the flame of the burnt offering 19-21 He sees Manoah is affrighted, but comforted by his wife, who beareth him a son, his name Samson, in whom is the spirit of the Lord, 22-25

Did not, i. e. fell into idolatry, &c., not now after the death of Abdon the last judge, but in the days of the former judges Forty years, to be computed not from Abdon's death, but before that time as is evident both from ver 5 where it is declared that Israel was under the power of the Philistines, and from Judg xv 20, where only twenty of these years are said to have been in Samson's days And it is probably conceived that that great slaughter of the Philistines made by Jephthah did greatly encourage the Philistines to rise against Israel when one of their chief bulwarks was so much weakened and therefore that the Philistines began to dominate over them not long after Jephthah's death

2 ¶ And there was a certain man of Zorah, of the family of the Danites, whose name was Manoah, and his wife was barren, and bare not ch 113b

3 And the angel of the Lord appeared unto the woman, and said unto her, Behold now, thou art barren, and bearest not but thou shalt conceive, and bear a son

The angel of the Lord, the Son of God, oft so called in the Old Testament as may be gathered from ver 18, yet distinguished from the Lord, because he appeared here as it were in the form of a servant, as a messenger sent from God, and was really a distinct person from God the Father

4 Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and drink not wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean thing

8 ¶ Then Manoah intreated the Lord, and said, O my Lord, let the word of God which thou hast said come again unto us, and teach us what we shall do unto the child that shall be born

9 And God hearkened to the voice of Manoah, and the angel of God came again unto the woman as she sat in the field but Manoah her husband was not with her

10 And the woman made haste, and ran, and showed her husband, and said unto him, Behold, the man hath appeared unto me, that came unto me the other day

11 And Manoah arose, and went after his wife, and came to the man, and said unto him, Art thou the man that spakest unto the woman? And he said I am

Let thy words come to pass, or, thy words shall come to pass I firmly believe that thy promise shall be fulfilled How shall we order the child? what rules shall we observe about his education

13 And the angel of the Lord said unto Manoah, Of all that I said unto the woman let her beware

Whilst the child is in her womb, and after the child is born, let him observe the same orders

14 She may not eat of any thing that cometh of the vine, neither let her drink wine or strong drink, nor eat any unclean thing: all that I commanded her let her observe

15 ¶ And Manoah said unto the angel of the Lord, I pray thee, let us detain thee, until we shall have made ready a kid for thee

Supposing him to be a man and a prophet, to whom he could in this manner express his respect, as was usual to strangers. See Gen xviii 5. Judg vi 18

16 And the angel of the Lord said unto Manoah, Though thou detain me, I will not eat of thy bread: and if thou wilt offer a burnt offering, thou must offer it unto the Lord. For Manoah knew not that he was an angel of the Lord

Bread is a meat, as bread is commonly taken in Scripture. Unto the Lord, not unto a man, as now thou apprehendest me to be. But unto the Lord, as thou wilt by and by perceive me to be 17 And Manoah said unto the angel of the Lord, What is thy name, that when thy sayings come to pass we may do thee honour?

Either by making honourable mention of thee, or by performing respect and service to thee by a present which they usually gave to prophets, 1 Sam ix 7, 8, 1 Kings xiv 3

18 And the angel of the Lord said unto him, Why askest thou thus after my name, seeing it is secret?

Or, hidden from mortal men, or wonderful such as thou canst not comprehend, my nature or essence (which is oft signified by name in Scripture) is incomprehensible. This shows that this was the Angel of the covenant, the Son of God

19 So Manoah took a kid with a meat offering, and offered it upon a rock unto the Lord: and the angel did wonderfully, and Manoah and his wife looked on

Meat offerings were generally joined with the chief sacrifices. Offered it upon a rock, the angel's presence and command being a sufficient warrant for the offering of sacrifice by a person who was no priest, and in a place otherwise forbidden

20 I or it came to pass, when the flame went up toward heaven from off the altar, that the angel of the Lord ascended in the flame of the altar. And Manoah and his wife looked on it, and fell on their faces to the ground

The flame, either arising from the fire which Manoah brought for the offering, or produced by the angel out of the rock in a miraculous manner. From off the altar, i.e. from that part of the rock which served instead of an altar, upon which the sacrifice was laid. The angel ascended in the flame, to manifest his nature and essence to be spiritual, because not capable of hurt by the fire, and celestial. Fell on their faces, partly in reverence to that glorious presence manifested in so wonderful a manner, and partly out of a religious horror and fear of death upon this occasion, as is expressed ver 22 for the prevention whereof they fell down in way of supplication to God

21 But the angel of the Lord did no more appear to Manoah and to his wife. Then Manoah knew that he was an angel of the Lord

22 And Manoah said unto his wife, We shall surely die, because we have seen God

23 But his wife said unto him, If the Lord were pleased to kill us, he would not have received a burnt offering and a meat offering at our hands, neither would he have shewed us all these things, nor would as at this time have told us such things as these.

Or, at this time, the particle at noting here, not likeness, but the truth and reality of the thing, as it doth Numb. xi 1, Deut. ix 10, and elsewhere. This expression seems to have some emphasis in it, to enhance God's mercy to them, as being afforded them in a time of such public and grievous calamity, and in a time when the word of the Lord was precious, and there was no open vision as it was afterwards, 1 Sam. iii. 1.

24 ¶ And the woman bare a son, and called his name Samson: and the child grew, and the Lord blessed him.

Endowed him with all those graces and gifts of mind and body which were necessary for the work he was designed for 25 And the Spirit of the Lord began to move him at times in the camp of Dan between Zorah and Eshtaol,

To move him at times, i.e. to stir him up to heroic designs, to show forth its power in him in the frame of his mind, and in the strength of his body, discovered to his neighbours in extraordinary actions, to incline his heart to great attempts to the help and deliverance of God's people; and to give some essays of it to his brethren, and to seek all opportunities for it, as he did in the next chapter. In the camp of Dan, a place so called, either from the expedition of the Danites, Judg xviii 11, 12, which though placed after this history, was done before it; or from some other camp which the Danites had formed there at this time, to give some check to the incursions of the Philistines

CHAP. XIV

Samson desires to wife a daughter of the Philistines of Timnath, and this of the Lord for an occasion against them 1-11. His parents go down with him to Timnath a young lion meets him he kills it 5-7, in his return he findeth him in the cave, 8-9. Keepeth a marriage feast hath thirty companions adjointed to him, to whom he propoundeth a riddle, with promise of a present, 10-15. His wife entreats from him the explanation, and discovereth it 16-18. He slayeth thirty Philistines of Ashkelon and therewith payeth his present, 19. His wife is given to another, 20

AND Samson went down to Timnath, and saw a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines

After he was come to mature age. Timnath, a place not far from the sea, of which see Gen xxxviii 12, Josh xv 57, xix 43

2 And he came up, and told his father and his mother, and said, I have seen a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines: now therefore get her for me to wife

3 Then his father and his mother said unto him, Is there never a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the uncircumcised Philistines? And Samson said unto his father, Get her for me, for she pleaseth me well

The uncircumcised Philistines, with whom the Israelites were forbidden to marry, Exod xxxiii 12, &c. And although the Philistines were not Canaanites in their original Gen x 14, Deut ii 23, yet they were so in their habit, and concurrences with them in wickedness, and therefore were liable to the same censures and judgments with them. Get her for me, this action of Samson's though against common rules, seems to be warranted partly by the greatness and goodness of his design in it, and principally by the instinct and direction of God, which 14 mentioned in the following words, which was known to Samson, but not to his parents. She pleased me well, not so much for her beauty, as for the design mentioned in the next verse.

15 ¶ But his father and his mother knew not that it was of the Lord, that he sought an occasion against the Philistines for at that time the Philistines had dominion over Israel

He sought an occasion against the Philistines, which he knew by very probable conjecture if not by particular inspection that marriage would give him many ways

16 ¶ Then went Samson down, and his father and his mother, to Timnath, and came to the vineyards of Timnath and, behold, a young lion roared † against him

His father and his mother accompanied him, either because they were now acquainted with his design or to order the circumstances of that action which they saw he was set upon, or to watch if they could find any occasion to take him off from his intention. Came to the vineyards of Timnath, whither he had turned aside, either by a Divine impulse, or upon some real or pretended occasion

17 ¶ And the Spirit of the Lord came mightily upon him, and he rent him as he would have rent a kid, and he had nothing in his hand but he told not his father or his mother what he had done

Came mightily upon him, stirred up and increased his courage and bodily strength. As he would have rent a kid, as soon and as safely. He told not his father or his mother, lest by their means it should be publicly known, for he wisely considered that it was not yet a fit time to awaken the jealousies and fears of the Philistines concerning him, as this would have done

18 ¶ And he went down, and talked with the woman, and she pleased Samson well

19 ¶ And after a time he returned to take her, and he turned aside to see the carcase of the lion and, behold, there was a swarm of bees and honey in the carcase of the lion

After a time, Heb. after days, i. e. either after some days, or rather, after a while, as that word oft signifies, as Exod. xiii. 10. Lev. xxv. 29. Numb. ix. 22. Judg. xvii. 10. 1 Sam. i. 3. xxvii. 7, when the flesh of the lion which by its strong smell is offensive to and avoided by bees, was wholly consumed, and nothing was left but the bones. There was a swarm of bees, not generated of the dead lion's body. But elsewhere, and settling themselves there, as they have sometimes done in a man's skull, and in a sepulchre, and such like places

20 ¶ And he took thereof in his hands, and went on eating, and came to his father and mother, and he gave them, and they did eat but he told not them that he had taken the honey out of the carcase of the lion

He took thereof in his hands, out of the lion's carcase. Quest Did not Samson transgress in touching a carcase? Answer It was in itself a legal pollution but some such pollutions were involuntary and unavoidable, as in one that hath an issue running in his sleep, and some were necessary duties, as in those who were to attend upon a woman in her menses, or upon the burial of a dead body. And such was this pollution, being contracted by Divine instant and direction, and in order to God's honour, and therefore dispensed with by the author of that law, and required by him for his service. Came to his father and mother, from whom he had turned aside for a season, ver. 8. upon some pretence or other

21 ¶ So his father went down unto the woman and Samson made there a feast, for so used the young men to do that they brought thirty companions to be with him.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, when they saw him,

When they saw him, or, observed or considered him, his stature, and strength, and countenance and carriage, which were extraordinary. They brought thirty companions to be with him, partly in compliance with the custom of having bride-men; of which see Matt. ix. 15; Mark ii. 19. John iii. 29, though they were not so numerous, and principally by way of caution, and as a guard put upon him under a pretence of respect and affection

23 ¶ And Samson said unto them, I will now put forth a riddle unto you. if ye can certainly declare it me within the seven days of the feast, and find it out, then I will give you thirty sheets, and thirty change of garments

A riddle, i. e. an obscure sentence for you to resolve and explain. The seven days of the feast, for so long marriage feasts lasted. See Gen. xxix. 27. Thirty sheets, fine linen cloths, which were used for many purposes in those parts. See Matt. xxiii. 59. Mark vi. 51. Thirty change of garments, i. e. changeable suits of apparel, as below ver. 19. Gen. xli. 22

24 ¶ But if ye cannot declare it me, then shall ye give me thirty sheets and thirty change of garments. And they said unto him, Put forth thy riddle, that we may hear it

25 ¶ And he said unto them, Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. And they could not in three days expound the riddle

Out of that strong and devouring creature, the lion, came forth sweet meat to wit, honey. whilst it is covertly implied, that the Philistines, though now they had strength on their side, and dominion over Israel, whom they did devour upon all occasions, yet at last they should become meat to the Israelites

26 ¶ And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they said unto Samson's wife, Notice thy husband, that he may declare unto us the riddle, lest we burn thee and thy father's house with fire have ye called us † to take that we have? † it not so?

On the seventh day, they had doubtless spoken to her before this time, but with some remissness, supposing that they should find it out, but now their time being nigh slipped, they press her with more vehemency, and put her under a necessity of revealing it out. To take that we have, i. e. to strip us of our garments, and so your civility will end in gross unkindness and injustice

27 ¶ And Samson's wife wept before him, and said, Thou dost but hate me, and lovest me not. thou hast put forth a riddle unto the children of my people, and hast not told it me. And he said unto her, Behold, I have not told it my father nor my mother, and shall I tell it thee?

Though I have had much more experience of their fidelity and taciturnity than of thine

28 ¶ And she wept before him the seven days, while their feast lasted and it came to pass on the seventh day, that he told her, because she lay sore upon him. and she told the riddle to the children of her people

The seven days, while their feast lasted, i. e. on the 1. day of the seven days, to wit, after the third day. It is a familiar synecdoche. Or, on the seventh of the days on which the feast was, and then the following clause on the seventh day, is only the noun repeated for the pronoun, on that day, as is most frequent, as 1 Kings vii 1, Solomon assembled—unto Solomon, &c unto himself

18 And the men of the city said unto him on the seventh day before the sun went down, What is sweeter than honey? and what is stronger than a lion? And he said unto them, If ye had not plowed with my heifer, ye had not found out my riddle

If you had not employed my wife to find it out, as men plough up the ground with a heifer thereby discovering its hidden parts, he calls her heifer, either because he now suspected her wantonness and too much familiarity with that friend which she afterwards married, or because she was joined with him in the same yoke, or rather, because they used such in ploughing

19 ¶ And the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he went down to Ashkelon, and slew thirty men of them, and took their spoil, and gave change of garments unto them which expounded the riddle. And his anger was kindled, and he went up to his father's house

The Spirit of the Lord came upon him, though he had a constant habit of eminent strength and courage yet that was exceedingly increased upon special occasions by the extraordinary influences of God's Spirit. To Ashkelon either to the territory, which oft comes under the name of the city, or to the city itself where he had both strength and courage enough to attempt what here follows, and upon the doing hereof they were doubtless struck with such a terror that every one sought only to preserve himself and none durst oppose or pursue him. Change of garments, together with their shirts or shifts, which it sufficed to imply here being expressed above, ver 15. His anger was kindled, for the treachery of his wife and companions. And he went up to sit alone, or without his wife

20 But Samson's wife was given to his companion, whom he had used as his friend

Samson's wife was given by her father to the chief of the bride-men to whom he had showed most respect and kindness

BUT it came to pass within a while after, in the time of wheat harvest, that Samson visited his wife with a kid and he said, I will go in to my wife into the chamber. But her father would not suffer him to go in

In the time of wheat harvest, which circumstance is noted in the proper season for the following exploit. Into the chamber into her proper chamber, which women had distinct and separate from the men's

2 And her father said, I verily thought that thou hadst utterly hated her, therefore I gave her to thy companion: is not her younger sister later than she? Take her, I pray thee, instead of her

I verily thought that thou hadst utterly hated her, because thou didst desire her in great wrath but this was not sufficient cause for thee should have endeavored a reconciliation, or waited for it, and not have disposed of another man's wife without his consent; which is not only against the law of God, but of nature also

3 ¶ And Samson said concerning them, ¶ Now shall I be more blameless than the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure

Because they have first provoked me by an irreparable injury. But although this may look like an act of private revenge, yet it is plain enough that Samson acted as a judge, (for so he was) and as an avenger of the public injuries and oppressions of his people, as plainly appears from hence, that Samson designed this very thing before he had received any personal injury, Judg. xiv 4.

4 And Samson went and caught three hundred foxes, and took firebrands, and turned tail to tail, and put a firebrand in the midst between two tails.

There were great numbers of foxes in Canaan, as appears from Neli iv 3, Psal lxxii 10; Cant ii 15, Lament i 18, Ezek xiii 4. So that divers places there have their names from the foxes which abounded there, as Job xv 28, xix 12, 1 Sam xiii 17. Add to this, that some learned men conceive that the Hebrew name shekul is more general, and contains not only the foxes, but another sort of creature very like to them, called thoes, whereof there were so many there, that sometimes two hundred of them have been met together in one company, as some who have lived in those parts have left upon record. But misdeeds are much so indulged at this history, and pretend it incredible that Samson should catch so many foxes together, so nice and delicate as the faith of these men in things concerning God and Scripture, that can devour things ten times more difficult and absurd, concerning the production of the world and of men, &c. But there is no cause of wonder here, for any man that is tolerably wise for it is not odd that Samson caught them all, either at one time or by his own hands, for being so eminent a person and the judge of Israel he might require assistance of as many persons as he pleased and all his people would readily assist him, not on it at all perplex any man's reason or faith if it be allowed that the God who made the world and by his singular providence watched over Israel, and intended their deliverance at this time could easily dispose things so that they might be taken. He chose to do this exploit not by his brethren, whom he would preserve from the envy and hatred and mischief which that might have occasioned to them but by brute creatures, thereby to add scorn and contempt to their calamity, and particularly by foxes, partly because they were fittest for the purpose being creatures very fearful of fire, and having such tails the firebrands might most conveniently be tied to and not going directly forward but crookedly and involv'd whereby the fire was likely to be dispersed in more places. The brands, made of such matter is would quickly take fire and keep it for a long time, which was easy to procure. Between two tails, that the foxes might not make too much haste nor run into their holes, but one of them might delay and stop another in his course, and so continue longer in the places where they were to do execution

5 And when he had set the brands on fire, he let them go into the standing corn of the Philistines, and burnt up both the shocks, and also the standing corn, with the vineyards and olives

He let them go, to wit, successively at several times, and in divers places, with great care and discretion, so is they might not hinder one another, nor all run into the same field, but being dispersed in all parts, might spread the plague further, and withal might be kept at a distance from the fields and vineyards of the Israelites. It is not worthy of our inquiry what became of these foxes afterwards whether they were burnt by the firebrands, or run into holes or were taken and killed by the Philistines. The truth of this history is notably attested by a custom of the Romans, which it is very probable they had from the Phœnicians, upon this occasion, for every year they had a solemnity in April, the very time of Canaan's wheat harvest wherein foxes were let loose with burning torches fastened to their backbones, &c.

6 ¶ Then the Philistines said, Who hath done this? And they answered, Samson, the son in law of the Timnites, because he had taken his wife, and given her to his companion. And the Philistines came up, and burnt her and her father with fire.

b ch. 16. 14

Partly for her adultery, which divors heathens punished with death; and partly for that mischief which she had occasioned to them, thus she brought upon herself that mischief which she studied to avoid, Judg. xiv. 15, as wicked persons often do, Prov. x. 24.

7 ¶ And Samson said unto them, Though ye have done this, yet will I be avenged of you, and after that I will cease.

Whereby it appears, that it was not his private injuries, but the public, which he did revenge.

8 And he smote them hip and thigh with a great slaughter: and he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam.

Hip and thigh, upon their hips and thighs peradventure not designing to kill them, but to make them incapable of military employment or of doing hurt to the Israhelites. Or, He smote them with his leg upon their thigh i. e. without any other weapon but his leg and foot he kicked them and made them lame and useless for war. With a great slaughter Heb. with a great stroke, for so it was even to them whom it did not kill. He dwelt in the top of the rock Etam, partly because there he could better defend himself from his enemies, and partly because he would not involve his brethren in the same danger with himself but, like a worthy magistrate, would secure them even with his own greater hazard.

9 ¶ Then the Philistines went up, and pitched in Judah, and spread themselves in Lehi.

c ver. 10

The rock Etam was in Judah, see 1 Chron. iv. 32, 2 Chron. xi. 5, 6. Spread themselves, as coming in great numbers with a powerful host. Lehi, a place so called by anticipation ver. 17.

10 And the men of Judah said, Why are ye come up against us? And they answered, To bind Samson: are we come up, to do to him as he hath done to us?

d ch. 16. 4

11 Then three thousand men of Judah went to the top of the rock Etam, and said to Samson, Knowest thou not that the Philistines are rulers over us? where is this that thou hast done unto us? And he said unto them, As they did unto me, so have I done unto them.

What is this that thou hast done unto us? thou hast by these actions punished not them, as thou intendest, but us, who being under their dominion, are sure to smart for it.

12 And they said unto him, We are come down to bind thee, that we may deliver thee into the hand of the Philistines. And Samson said unto them, Swear unto me, that ye will not fall upon me yourselves.

Not that he feared them, or could not so easily have conquered them, as he did the whole host of the Philistines, but because he would be free from all obligation or temptation of doing them any harm, though it were in his own just and necessary defence.

13 And they spake unto him, saying, No, but we will bind thee fast, and deliver thee into their hand: but surely we will not kill thee. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him up from the rock.

i. e. From the cave or hole in the rock, in which he had secured himself, out of which he was first brought up, and then carried down from the rock to the place.

14 ¶ And when he came unto Lehi, the Philistines shouted against him: and the Spirit of the Lord came mightily upon him, and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands were loosed from off his hands.

e ch. 16. 15

+ Heb. were melted

The Philistines shouted against him, for joy and triumph, because they had now their great enemy, as they supposed, in their hands. His bands loosed, Heb. were melted i. e. were dissolved, as things are which are melted in the fire.

15 And he found a new jawbone of an ass, and put forth his hand, and took it, and slew a thousand men therewith.

+ Heb. new

f ch. 16. 16

A new jawbone, and therefore more tough and strong.

16 And Samson said, With the jawbone of an ass I heaps upon heaps, with the jaw of an ass have I slain a thousand men.

+ Heb. an heap, two heaps

This though it might seem difficult, yet is not at all impossible or incredible, especially seeing the learned affirm of the asses of Syria, that they were larger and stronger than ours, and so consequently were their bones. And whilst it must be acknowledged that there was something extraordinary and miraculous in this, as there was unquestionably in Samson's strength, and so all the difficulty vanishes.

17 And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking, that he cast away the jawbone out of his hand, and called that place Ramath-lehi.

g that is the (strong) up of the jawbone, calling an up of the jawbone

And by contraction Lehi ver. 14 it being used so to construct proper names, as Salem is put for Jerusalem, Psal. lxxvi. 2, Sheba for Ber sheba, Josh. vi. 2, and many other.

18 ¶ And he was sore athirst, and called on the Lord, and said, Thou hast given this great deliverance into the hand of thy servant: and now shall I die for thirst, and fall into the hand of the uncircumcised?

He was sore athirst as he was ready to faint and die with thirst, which was partly natural, from his excessive toil and heat, partly sent by God, that by the experience of his own impotence he might be forced to ascribe the victory to God only, and not to himself. Now shall I die for thirst? Wilt thou not finish what thou hast begun? Wilt thou undo what thou hast done?

19 But God clave an hollow place that was in the jaw, and there came water therout, and when he had drunk, his spirit came again, and he revived: wherefore he called the name thereof En-hakkore, which is in Lehi unto this day.

h Or Lehi i ch. 16. 17

Clave an hollow place, i. e. by cleaving a place, made it hollow: an expression like that Isa. xlvii. 2, grind meal, i. e. grind corn into meal, and that Psal. lxxiv. 15, thou didst cleave the fountain, i. e. cleave the rock so as to make a fountain in it. In the jaw, in the jawbone which he had used, which God could easily effect, either by causing the jawbone to send forth water, as the rock formerly did, the miracle being in effect the same, though in a differing subject, causing a spring to break forth in Lehi or in that Lehi mentioned before, ver. 11, for Lehi is both the name of a place and signifies a jawbone. In hakkore i. e. the fountain of him that cried for thirst, or, that called upon God for deliverance, i. e. the fountain or well which was given in answer to my prayer. Which is in Lehi unto this day. According to this translation Lehi is the name of a place and not a jawbone, because it seems improbable that a jawbone should continue there so long which every traveller ought to take away and would be forward enough to carry a fountain with them in those hot countries, although it is not incredible that passing waters would generally forbear to meddle with or remove so great a monument of God's power and goodness, or that the same God who made it instrumental to so great a wonder, should add one circumstance more, to wit, fix it in the earth, as a testimony to posterity of the truth of this glorious work. But these words may be otherwise rendered thus which fountain was in that jawbone, and for the following words unto this day, they may not be joined with the words next and immediately foregoing, as if the fountain was there to this day, but with the former words, he called, &c., and so the sense may be this, that it was so called unto this day, and the place may be thus read, he called the name thereof, or, the name thereof was called (such active verbs being frequently put passively and impersonally,) The well or fountain of him that called or cried (which was in Ichi) unto this day

ch 13 1

1. He pleaded their cause and avenged them against the Philistines. In the days of the Philistines, i. e. whilst the Philistines had the power and dominion, from which he was not fully to deliver, but only to begin to deliver them, as it was foretold Judg xiii 5. From this place it is manifest that in the computation of the times of the judges, the years of servitude or oppression are not to be separated from the years of the judges and added to them but are comprehended within them, which proposition is of great importance for clearing this difficult part of Scripture chronology, and for justifying that account of times given 1 Kings vi 1

Samson goeth in to a harlot, is hemmed in, riseth at midnight, taketh the city gates, posts and bars on his shoulders, and carrieth them up to a mountain. 1. Is in love with Delilah, she enticeth him to discover wherein his strength lay, is thrice deceived, at last she overcomes him, 1-20. They put out his eyes, and cast him into prison. 21. He hath grouns again. 22. He is of the Philistines and the people gather together to make sport with him to the honour of their idols, and sacrifice. 2-23. Samson setteth them to place his hands on the pillars of the house, he prays to God, pulls down the house, and dieth, but more shameful is death than in his life. 24-30. He is buried, 31.

THEN went Samson to Gaza, and saw there a harlot, and he went in unto her.

Samson went to Gaza a chief city to make some new attempt upon the Philistines whom he feared not that in their cities or in their camps having had such true experience of his own strength and of God's assistance, possibly he came in thither by night unknown and observed till drawn out. Saw the harlot, going into a house of public entertainment to refresh himself as the manner was Josh i 1. He there saw this harlot, which implies that he did not go thither upon so evil a design, but accidentally saw her there, not by giving way to lustful looks upon her, was insured by her.

2 And it was told the Gazites, saying, Samson is come hither. And they compassed him in and had wait for him all night in the gate of the city, and were quiet all the night, saying, In the morning, when it is day, we shall kill him.

This they chose to do rather than to seize upon him in his house and bed by night, either because they knew not certainly in what house or place he was, or because they thought that might cause great terror and confusion, and mischief among their own people, whereas in the day time they might more fully discover him and more unexpectedly assault him, and more certainly direct their blows and use their weapons against him.

3 And Samson lay till midnight, and arose at midnight, and took the doors of the gate of the city, and the two posts, and went away with them, and bar and all,

† Heb. with the bar and put them upon his shoulders, and carried them up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron.

Arose at midnight, being either smitten in conscience for his sin, when he first awoke, and thence fearing danger as he had just cause to do; or being secretly warned by God in a dream, or by an inward impulse, for the prevention of his designed destruction. The doors of the gate of the city, not the great gates, but lesser doors made in them, and strengthened with distinct posts and bars. Went away with them, the watchmen not expecting him till morning, and therefore being now retired into the sides or upper part of the gate house, as the manner now is, to get some rest, whereby to fit themselves for their hard service intended in the morning, or if some of them were in his way, he could easily and speedily strike them dead, and break the door, whilst the rest were partly astonished with the surprise, and partly preparing themselves for resistance nor durst they pursue him, whom they now again perceived to have such prodigious strength and courage; and to be so much above the fear of them, that he did not run away with all speed, but went leisurely, having so great a weight on his shoulders, wherewith they knew he could both defend himself and offend them. Up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron, either, 1. To a hill near Hebron, which was above twenty miles from Gaza, or, 2. To the top of a high hill not far from Gaza, which looked towards Hebron, which also stood upon another high hill, and might be seen from this place, though it was at a great distance from it. And Samson did this not out of vain ostentation, but as an evidence of his great strength, for the encouragement of his people to join with him more vigorously for their own deliverance than yet they had done, or durst do, and for the greater terror and contempt of the Philistines. It may seem strange that Samson immediately after so foul a sin should have the courage in himself, and the strength from God, for so great a work. But, 1. It is probable that Samson had in some measure repented of his sin, and begged of God pardon and assistance, which also he perceived by instinct that God would afford him. 2. This singular strength and courage was not in itself a grace, but a gift, which might have been in a graceless person, and therefore might continue in a good man, notwithstanding a heinous act of sin, and it was such a gift as did not depend upon the disposition of his mind but upon the right ordering of his body, by the rule given to him, and others of that order.

¶ And it came to pass afterward, that he loved a woman in the valley of Sorek, whose name was Delilah.

Or, by the brook

He loved a woman, either, first, With conjugal love, so as to marry her, as divers both Jews and Christians have thought. Or secondly, With lustful love, as a harlot, which though not certain, because the phrase is here ambiguous she being neither called a harlot, as she of Gaza was yet 1, nor yet his wife, as she of Timnath was, Judg xiv 2 3 20 yet it may seem more probable, partly because the dreadful punishment now inflicted upon Samson for this sin, whom God spared for the first offence is an intimation that this sin was not inferior to the former, partly because the confidence which the Philistine lords had in her and then bold and frequent treating with her, and the whole course of her carriage towards Samson, show her to be a mercenary and pernicious harlot, and not a wife whose affection and interest would have obliged her to better things, and partly because Samson did not carry her home to his house as husbands use to do their wives, but lodged in her house, as appears from the whole story.

5 And the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and said unto her, Entice him, and see wherein his great strength lieth, and by what means we may prevail against him, that we may bind him to afflict him, and we will give thee every one of us eleven hundred pieces of silver.

The lords of the Philistines, the lords of their five principal cities, who seem to have been united together at this time in one aristocratical government, or at least were leagueed together against him as their common enemy. To afflict him, to chastise him for his injuries done to us. They even to punish him severely, as they did; but they express it in mild words, lest the horror of it might move her to pity him. Pieces of silver, i. e. shekel, as that phrase is commonly used, as Numb vii 13, 85, 2 Sam xvii 12; 2 Kings i 25.

6 ¶ And Delilah said to Samson, Tell me, I pray thee, wherein thy great strength lieth, and wherewith thou mightest be bound to afflict thee.

Wherewith thy great strength lieth, what is the cause of this prodigious strength, or wherewith doth it consist? She seems to ask merely out of curiosity, to understand the state of a person whom she so highly values.

7 And Samson said unto her, If they bind me with seven † green withs that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as † another man.

Samson is guilty both of the sin of lying, though he dress up the lie in such circumstances as might make it most probable, and of great folly, in encouraging her inquiries which he should at first have checked; but as he had forsaken God, so God had now forsaken him, and deprived him of common prudence, otherwise the frequent repetition and vehement urging of this question might easily have raised suspicion in him.

8 Then the lords of the Philistines brought up to her seven green withs which had not been dried, and she bound him with them.

9 Now there were men lying in wait, abiding with her in the chamber. And she said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it toucheth the fire. So his strength was not known.

With her in the chamber, with her, i. e. in the same house, in a chamber, i. e. in a secret chamber within her cell. Nor is it strange that they did not fall upon him in his sleep; partly because they feared to awake a sleeping lion, and partly because they expect an opportunity for doing their work more certainly and with less danger.

10 And Delilah said unto Samson, Behold, thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: now tell me, I pray thee, wherewith thou mightest be bound.

11 And he said unto her, If they bind me fast with new ropes that never were occupied, then shall I be weak, and be as another man.

12 Delilah therefore took new ropes, and bound him therewith, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And there were hers in wait abiding in the chamber. And he brake them from off his arms like a thread.

13 And Delilah said unto Samson, Hitherto thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: tell me wherewith thou mightest be bound. And he said unto her, If thou weavest the seven locks of my head with the web.

Or, thead which is woven about a weaver's loom, or with a weaver's beam. If my hair, which is all divided into seven locks, be fastened about a weaver's beam, or interwoven with weaver's threads, understand out of the foregoing verses, then I shall be weak as another man.

14 And she fastened it with the pin, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and went away with the pin of the beam, and with the web.

Having done what Samson directed, she adds this for earnestness sake; she fastened the hair thus woven with a pin.

15 ¶ And she said unto him, How canst thou say, I love thee, when thine heart is not with me? thou hast mocked me three times, and hast not told me wherein thy great strength lieth.

When thine heart is not with me, when thy love consists only in outward expression, not in affection, and thou wilt not open thy heart to me, as one true friend doth to another.

16 And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him, so that his soul was vexed unto death;

Being tormented by two contrary and violent passions, desire to gratify her whom he so much doted upon, and fear of betraying himself to utmost hazard. But being deserted by God, it is no wonder that he chooseth the worst part.

17 That he told her all his heart, and said unto her, There hath not come a razor upon mine head, for I have been a Nazerite unto God from my mother's womb: if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man.

Not that his hair was in itself the seat or cause of his strength; but because it was the chief condition of that vow or covenant, whereby as he stood obliged to him, so God was pleased graciously to engage himself to fit him for, and assist him in, that great work to which he called him; but upon his violation of his condition, God justly withdraws his help, and leaves him to himself.

18 And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart, she sent and called for the lords of the Philistines, saying, Come up this once, for he hath shewed me all his heart. Then the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and brought money in their hand.

It was not hard for her to discover that he had told her all his heart by the change of his countenance, and the matter of his discourse, and the whole carriage of the business.

19 And she made him sleep upon her knees, and she called for a man, and she caused him to shave the seven locks of his head, and she began to afflict him, and his strength went from him.

She made him sleep, by some sleepy potion, which it is like she gave him upon other pretences, agreeably enough to his present and vitiated inclination. Upon her knees; resting his head upon her knees. She caused him to shave off, with a gentle hand, as if she herself had been but sporting with him. She did this more surely, partly because she had cast him into a deep sleep, and partly because if he had discovered it before it was finished, she would have said it was only an innocent intimation to try the sincerity of his affection to her, and the truth of this relation which she had so just reason to doubt of from his frequent dissimulation and lies. She began to afflict him, i. e. to disturb, and awaken, and allight him as by other ways, so particularly by crying out in a terrible manner, The Philistines are upon thee, as she had done before, and as it follows, ver 20. His strength went from him, which as is here implied, she perceived, because he could not now shake himself as he did before, i. e. with equal vigour and might, as is intimated in the next verse, or because she had bound him, though it be not here expressed, and found him unable to break his bands.

20 And she said, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that the Lord was departed from him.

He awoke out of his sleep, and said with himself, I will he purposed and attempted. Shake myself, i. e. put forth my strength to crush them, and to deliver myself. He wist not, being not yet well awake and not distinctly feeling the loss of his hair, or not duly considering what would follow upon it The Lord was departed from him, in respect of the strength and help he had formerly given him

21 ¶ But the Philistines took him, and put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and bound him with fetters of brass, and he did grind in the prison house

The Philistines now durst apprehend him because they rested in the assurance which Delilah had given them that now all was discover'd and done. Put out his eyes which was done by them out of revenge and policy to disable him from doing them much harm, in case he should recover his strength but not without God's providence, punishing him in that part which had been greatly instrumental to his sinful lusts. Brought him down to Gaza because this was a great and strong city where he would be kept safely, and upon the sea coast at sufficient distance from Samson's people and to repair the honour of that place upon which he had fastened so great a scorn. Judge xvi. 3. God also ordering thus that where he first sinned, Judge xvi. 1. there he should receive his punishment. He did grind in the prison house as captives and slaves use to do see 1. Cor. xvi. 5. 1st. xlvii. 2. Matt. xxv. 41. He made himself a slave to vile lusts and humors and now God suffers men to use him like a slave.

22 Howbeit the hair of his head began to grow again ¶ after he was shaven

This circumstance though in itself inconsiderable is noted as a sign of the recovery of God's favour and his former strength in some good degree upon his latter repentance and his renewing of his vow with God which was allowed for Nineteen to do Numb. vi. 9. &c. and which it is here supposed he did and by the effects proved.

¶ Then the lords of the Philistines gathered them together for to offer a great sacrifice unto Dagon their god and to rejoice for they said, Our god hath delivered Samson our enemy into our hand

The lords of the Philistine gathered them together either upon some annual or extraordinary solemnity or rather upon this special occasion to praise Dagon for this manifestation. And they did not appoint this solemn service soon as Samson was taken but some considerable time after as appears by the growth of Samson's hair in the meantime because they would give sufficient time and warning for all their friends and allies to come thither and for the making of all necessary preparations for so great an occasion. Dagon is by most supposed to be an idol whose upper part was like a man and whose lower part was like a fish whence there is mention of Pagan's hands but not of his feet, in 1. Sam. v. 3. And this place being near Egypt, where some of their gods were worshipped in the form of fishes and being near the sea it seems most probable that it was one of the sea gods of the heathens, and that it had in some part the resemblance of a fish.

24 And when the people saw him, they praised their god for they said, Our god hath delivered into our hands our enemy, and the destroyer of our country, ¶ which slew many of us

25 And it came to pass, when their hearts were merry, that they said Call for Samson that he may make us sport And they called for Samson out of the prison house and he made them sport and they sat down between the pillars

He made them sport either in a Passively being made by them the matter of their sport and diversion and of many bitter scoffs, and other indignities or uprisings, or secondly Actively by some ridiculous actions or some plots of more than ordinary strength yet remaining in him like the ruins of a great and resplendent building whereby he lulled them in a deep security and by this seeming compliance he prepared the way for that which he designed other- wise his generous soul would never have been forced to make them sport, save in order to their destruction

26 And Samson said unto the lad that held him by the hand, Suffer me that I may feel the pillars whereupon the house standeth, that I may lean upon them

27 Now the house was full of men and women, and all the lords of the Philistines were there, and there were upon the roof about three thousand men and women, that beheld while Samson made sport

The roof after the manner of the times, was flat, and had windows through which they might see what was done in the lower parts of the house

28 And Samson called unto the Lord, and said, O Lord God, remember me, I pray thee, and strengthen me, I pray thee, only this once, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes

This prayer was not an act of malice and revenge, but of faith and zeal for God who was there publicly dishonoured, and justice in punishing their insolences, and vindicating the whole commonwealth of Israel, which was his duty, as he was judge to do. And this is manifest from hence because God, who heareth not sinners, and would never use his omnipotency to gratify an man's impotent malice did manifest by the effects that he accepted and owned his prayer, is the dictate of his own Spirit. And that in this prayer he mentions only his personal injury, the loss of his eyes and not their indignities to God and his people must be ascribed to that prudent care which he had and declared upon former occasions of driving the rage and hatred of the Philistines upon himself alone, and diverting it from the people. For which end I conceive this prayer was made with an audible voice, though he knew they would entertain it only with scorn and laughter which all of them would quickly be turned to mourning.

29 And Samson took hold of the two middle pillars upon which the house stood, and ¶ on which it was borne up, of the one with his right hand, and of the other with his left

Quest. How could so great a building containing so many thousands of people, rest upon two pillars so near placed together? Here is his triumph, as if they had got an insurmountable argument against the truth of the Scripture. But it is a far more incredible and ridiculous thing to imagine that the penman of this book should feign such a circumstance as this is if it had been false, whereby he would have utterly overthrown the credit of the whole book and that he should do this before a people that could easily have confuted him, and that people should have so high a veneration for that book in which they knew so notorious a falsehood to be these things, I say, are far more absurd to believe, than the truth of this relation. But to this I shall add two answers. First, It is no sufficient argument to prove that this was not true, because we do not at this day understand how it was done. There were many great works and excellent pieces of art some footsteps whereof are left in ancient writers, but the exact way and particular manner of them is wholly, or in a great measure unknown and lost, so that Pausanias hath written a whole book of such things. Particularly, the old way of architecture is much in the dark, as is confessed by the learned. It may be pretended, that though there might be curious arts of building in the learned and ingenious part of the world, it is not probable they were among such a rude and barbarous people as the Philistines. But this is certainly a very great mistake, for these people were either a part of, or very near neighbours to, the Phoenicians from whom it is confessed the arts came to the Grecians. And inasmuch as many things which were concluded by the ancients to be impossible, are by the wit and industry of later ages found to be possible and certainly true, it cannot be strange if some things now seem impossible to some men, which were then known to be practicable. And he that will venture his faith and salvation upon this proposition, That such a building as this was simply impossible, because he doth not see the possibility of it, or which is all one, that no man understands more than he doth, will find few admirers of his wisdom. And to question the truth and divinity of the Holy Scriptures, which is so fully and clearly proved by sundry arguments upon such a meetly as this, is but a more learned kind of dotage. Answer 2 Instances are not wanting of far more large and capacious buildings than this that have been supported only by one pillar. Particularly, Pliny, in the 15th chapter of the 36th book of his Natural History, mentions two theatres built by one C. Curio, who lived in Julius Cæsar's time, each of which was supported only by one pillar or pin, or hinge, though very many thousands of people did sit in it together. And much more might two pillars suffice to uphold a building large enough to contain three thousand persons, which is the number mentioned, ver 27. Or the pillars might be made two in the lower part merely for ornament sake, which might easily be so ordered as to support a third and main pillar in the middle, which upheld the whole fabric.

my soul

30 And Samson said, I et me die with the Philistines. And he bowed himself with all his might, and the house fell upon the lords and upon all the people that were therein. So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life.

Let me die with the Philistines i. e. I am contented to die so I can but therewith contribute any thing to the vindication of God's glory here trampled upon, and to the deliverance of God's people. This is no example nor encouragement to those that wickedly murder themselves for Samson did not desire nor procure his own death voluntarily but only by mere force and necessity because he did die, and by his office was obliged to seek the destruction of these enemies and blasphemers of God, and oppressors of his people, which in these circumstances he could not effect without his own death and his case was not much unlike theirs that in the heat of battle run upon the very mouth of the cannon, or other evident and certain danger of death, to execute a design upon the enemy, or others who go in a fire ship to destroy the enemy's best ships, though they are sure to perish in the enterprise. Moreover, Samson did this by Divine instinct and approbation as God's answer to his prayer manifest, and that he might be a type of Christ, who by voluntarily undergoing death destroyed the enemies of God and of his people.

31 Then his brethren and all the house of his father came down, and took him, and brought him up, and buried him between Zorah and Eshtaol in the buryingplace of Manoah his father. And he judged Israel twenty years.

His brethren, either, first, Largely so called his kinsmen. Or, secondly, Strictly so called, Samson's parents having had other children after him, as it was usual with God when he gave an extraordinary and unexpected power of procreating a child, to continue that strength for the generation or conception of more children, as in the case of Abraham, Gen. xxv. 1, 2, and Hannah, 1 Sam. ii. 21. They adventured to bury him, partly, because the most barbarous nations allowed burial even to their enemies, and would permit this offence to be done by their friends, partly, because Samson had taken the blame of this action wholly to himself, for which his innocent relations could not upon any pretence be punished, and principally because they were under such grief, and perplexity, and consternation for the common calamity, that they had neither heart nor leisure to revenge themselves of the Philistines, but for their own sakes were willing not to dispute or offend them, at least, till they were in a better posture to resist them. He judged Israel twenty years this was said before, Judg. xv. 20. and is here repeated, partly to confirm the relation of it, and partly to explain it; and to show when these twenty years ended, even at his death, as is here noted.

CHAP XVII.

Micah stealeth money of his mother, then consecrath and storeth it. She dedicates it to the Lord, maketh images, he sets them up in the house of his gods, and consecrates one of his sons for his priest, there being then no magistrates in Israel, 1-6. A Levite travelling that way, he huseth and consecrateth him to be his priest 7-12, is confident that God would therefore favour and bless him, 13.

AND there was a man of mount Ephraim, cir 1406 whose name was Micah.

The things mentioned here, and in the following chapters, did not happen in the order in which they are put, but much sooner even presently after the death of the elders that overlived Joshua. Judg. ii. 7, as appears by diverse passages, as first, Because the place called Maianah-dan, or the camp of Dan. Judg. xiv. 25, was so called from that which was done, Judg. xiii. 12. Secondly, Because the Danites had not yet got all their inheritance, Judg. xviii. 1, which is not credible of them above three hundred years after Joshua's death. Thirdly, Because Phineas is the High Priest at this time. Judg. xx. 28 who must have been about three hundred and fifty years old if this had been done after Samson's death, which is more than improbable.

2 And he said unto his mother, The eleven hundred shekels of silver that were taken from thee about which thou cursedst and spakest of also in mine ears, behold the silver is with me, I took it. And his mother said, Blessed be thou of the Lord, my son.

About which thou cursedst, i. e. didst curse the person who had taken them away, and that in my hearing, as it follows. I took it, the fact of this cure makes me acknowledge a mine offence and beg thy pardon. Blessed be thou of the Lord, I willingly consent to and beg from God the removal of the curse and a blessing instead of it. Be thou free of my curse, because thou hast so honestly restored it.

3 And when he had restored the eleven hundred shekels of silver to his mother, his mother said, I had wholly dedicated the silver unto the Lord from my hand for my son, to make a graven image and a molten image: now therefore I will restore it unto thee.

The Lord, in the Hebrew it is Jehovah, the incommunicable name of God whereby it is apparent that neither she nor her son intended to forsake the true God or his worship, as appears from his rejoicing when he had got a priest of the Lord's appointment of the tribe of Levi, ver 13. but only to worship God by an image, which also it is apparent that both the Israelites, Exod. xxxv. 1, &c. and Jeroboam afterwards, designed to do. For my son, either first, for the honour and benefit of himself and family, that you need not be continually going to Shiloh to worship, but may do it as well at home by these images. Or, secondly, that thou mayst cure these things to be made, to which end she restored all the money to him, as it here follows. A graven image and a molten image, many think this was but one image, partly graven, and partly molten. But it seems more probable that they were two distinct images, because they are so plainly distinguished, ver 17. 18, where also some other words come between them. It is true, the graven image alone is mentioned Judg. xviii. 20, 30, 31, not exclusively to the other, as appears from what is said just before. But by a common synecdoche, whereby one is put for all, especially where that one is esteemed the chief. I will restore it unto thee to dispose of, as I say.

4 And he restored the money unto his mother, and his mother took two hundred shekels of silver, and gave them to the founder, who made thereof a graven image and a molten image: and they were in the house of Micah.

Yet he restored the money unto his mother, though his mother allowed him to keep it, yet he persued in his resolution to restore it, that she might dispose of it as she pleased, and did actually restore it, as was said before, and now confirms the former restitution, and therefore is twice said to restore it. His mother took two hundred shekels of silver, reserving nine hundred shekels, either for the ephod and teraphim, or for other things relating to this worship, or for her own private use, being, it seems, cooked in her first zeal, and willing to have as cheap a religion as she could, as also her son Micah was, ver 10. Who made thereof, made them, either first, of that matter, or secondly, for that money.

5 And the man Micah had an house of gods, and made an ephod, and teraphim, and he consecrated one of his sons, who became his priest.

An house of gods, i. e. an house or place consecrated for the service of God in this manner. An ephod, an eminent part of the priestly garments. Exod. xxviii. 4, which, some think, is here put for all of them. Teraphim, some sort of images so called, of which see Gen. xxxi. 19. Hos. iii. 4. Who became his priest, because the Levites in that corrupt estate of the church neglected the exercise of their office, and therefore were neglected by the people and other put into their employment. But this kind of priesthood was condemned, Numb. xvi. 10, xxiii. 2, 7.

6 In those days there was no king in Israel, but every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

No king, i. e. no judge to govern and control them. The word king being here used largely for a supreme magistrate, as Gen. xlviii. 31, Deut. xxxiii. 5. God raised up judges to rule and deliver the people when he saw fit, and at other times for themselves he suffered them to be without them, and such a time this was, and therefore they fell into their idolatry from which the judge usually kept them as appeared by that solemn and oft repeated promise in this book, that after the death of such or such a judge the people forsook the Lord, and turned to idols. That which was right in his own eyes, i. e. not what pleased God, but what best suited his own fancy or lusts.

7 ¶ And there was a young man in out of Beth-lehem-judah of the family of Judah, who was a Levite, and he sojourned there.

Out of Beth-lehem-judah, or of Beth-lehem-judah, so called here as Matt. ii. 15, to difference it from Beth-lehem in Zebulun Josh. xix. 41. There he was born and bred. Of the family of Judah, i. e. of one belonging to the tribe of Judah, not by birth for he was a Levite, nor by his mother for though that might be true the mother's side is not recorded in genealogy, but by his habitation in the tribe of Judah. For the Levites, especially in times of confusion and irreligion, were dispersed among all the tribes, and this man is not left to the tribe of Judah, which seems to be here noted by way of reflection upon that tribe, and as an evidence of the general defection that a Levite could not find entertainment in that great and famous tribe, which God had put so much honour upon Gen. xlix. 8-11, and therefore was forced to wander and seek for subsistence elsewhere. He sojourned there, so he expresseth it because this was not the proper nor usual place of his abode, this being no Levitical city.

8 And the man departed out of the city from Beth-lehem-judah to sojourn where he could find a place, and he came to mount Ephraim to the house of Micah, as he journeyed.

If here he could find a place for employment and a livelihood, for the tribes and offerings, which were their main income, not being brought in to the house of God the Levites and priests must needs be reduced to great straits.

9 And Micah said unto him, Whence comest thou? And he said unto him, I am a Levite of Beth-lehem-judah, and I go to sojourn where I may find a place.

10 And Micah said unto him, Dwell with me, and be unto me a father and a priest, and I will give thee ten shekels of silver by the year, and a suit of apparel, and thy victuals. So the Levite went in.

A father and a priest, for, a father; that is, a spiritual father, a teacher or instructor, for such are called fathers see 2 Kings vi. 21, vii. 9, xiii. 14, Amos. ii. 11. He pretends reverence and submission to him; and what is wanting in his wages he pays him in empty titles.

11 And the Levite was content to dwell with the man, and the young man was unto him as one of his sons.

The Levite was content, being constrained by necessity, and infected with the common contagion of the superstition and idolatry of the times. Was unto him as one of his sons, i. e. treated with the same degree of kindness and affection.

12 And Micah consecrated the Levite; and the young man became his priest, and was in the house of Micah.

Consecrated the Levite to be a priest, for which he thought consecration necessary, as knowing that the Levites were no less excluded from the priest's office than the people became his priest, instead of his son, whom he had consecrated for want of a fitter, ver 5, but now seems to return him from the exercise of that office, and to devolve it wholly upon the Levite, who was nearer akin to it.

13 Then said Micah, Now know I that the Lord will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest.

Now as we used God will bless me. So blind and grossly partial he was in his judgment to think that one right circumstance would answer for all his substantial errors in making and worshipping images against God's express command in worshipping God in a forbidden place, and in this he, being an Ephraimite, presumed to make a priest, &c.

CHAP. XVIII.

Those of the tribe of Dan, having not sufficient inheritance, send forth five men to spy out a place, they come to the house of Micah, and desire the Levite to ask counsel of God touching their journey, 1-5. He encouraging them, they spy out the city Laish, and at their return instigate their brethren to set upon the city, 6-10. Six hundred go forth armed in their march they seize upon Micah's priest and idols, which he in vain demandeth again 11-23. They pull down Laish, build it again, inhabit it, and call it Dan, 26-29, consecrate their priest, and set up Micah's images, 30, 31.

IN those days there was no king in Israel, and in those days the tribe of the Danites sought them an inheritance to dwell in, for unto that day all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Israel.

In those days, not long after Joshua's death of which see on Judg. xv. 6. The tribe of the Danites, a part or branch of that tribe, consisting only of six hundred men of war, ver 16, with their families, ver 21, or, a family of the Danites, for the word shebet, which properly signifies a tribe, is sometimes taken for a family, as Judg. x. 12, as elsewhere family is put for a tribe, as Zech. xii. 13. All their inheritance had not fallen unto them, the lot had fallen to them before this time Josh. xix. 40, &c, but not the actual possession of their lot because they in the Philistines and Amorites oppressed them, not without success. See Josh. xix. 40, Judg. i. 31.

of flour, from Zorah, and from Eshtaol, to spy out the land, and to search it; and they said unto them, Go, search the land, who when they came to mount Ephraim, to the house of Micah, they lodged there of their family, which shows that it was but one, though a large family, which was engaged in this expedition. Eshtaol of which see Josh. xix 41, Judg. xii. 2, 25. They lodged there, not in the same house but near it, as appears from the next verse, in a neighbouring place.

For say, 1 e your journey or design is under the eye of God 1 e under his care, and protection, and direction which the eye of God being upon a person commonly notes in Scripture, as Psal. cxlii 8, xxxiv 15. Compare Jer. xxix 12, xl 4. So the phrase is here taken in a strained sense which is elsewhere taken more largely, as Prov. i 21. This answer he either feigns to gratify their humour or did indeed receive from the devil, who transformed himself into an angel of light, and in God's name gave them answers, and those not seldom very true, which God suffered for the trial of his people. See Deut. xii 1-3. But it is observable that his answer was as the devil's oracles usually were, ambiguous, and such as might have been interpreted either way, as they had success or disappointment.

ch 13-24
Num 13-24
Josh 13-24

Laish, called also Leshem, Josh. xix 47. After the manner of the Zidonians, who living in a very strong place, were abounding in wealth, and understanding that they were not a part of that land which God gave to his people, and perceiving that the Israelites never attempted any thing against them, were grown secure and careless. That might put them to shame in any thing, or, that might reprove or punish any thing, 1 e any crime, Heb. that might put any thing to shame, or, make any thing shameful. Putting to shame seems to be used metonymically for inflicting civil punishment, because shame is generally the adjunct or effect of it. They were far from the Zidonians, who otherwise could have succoured them, and would have been ready to do it. Had no business with any man, no league of confederacy, nor much converse with other cities, it being in a pleasant and plentiful soil, between the two rivulets of Issachar and Dan, not needing supplies from others, and therefore minding only their own ease and pleasure.

8 And they came unto their brethren to Zorah and Eshtaol and their brethren said unto them, What say ye?

9 And they said, Arise, that we may go up against them: for we have seen the land, and, behold, it is very good and are ye still? be not slothful to go, and to enter to possess the land.

Are ye still Ubb silent? Silence is oft put for slothfulness or cessation from action or motion as Exod. xiv 14, Isa. lxii 1. I am ii 18. For they do not accuse them for want of speaking, for that they did, but for want of doing, and putting their words and resolves into execution.

10 When ye go, ye shall come unto a people secure, and to a large land for God hath given it into your hands, a place where there is no want of any thing that is in the earth.

God hath given it into your hands this they gather partly from God's word or promise, which they supposed they had from the Levite's mouth and partly from his providence, which hath so disposed of them, that they will be easy prey to you.

11 ¶ And there went from thence of the family of the Danites, out of Zorah and out of Eshtaol, six hundred men appointed with weapons of war.

Of the family, by which it again appears, that the tribe, ver. 1 is put for family.

12 And they went up, and pitched in Kujath-jearim, in Judah, wherefore they called that place Mahanah-dan unto this day behold, it is behind Kujath-jearim.

Kujath-jearim, called 1 th-baal, Josh. xv 60 a city lying in the northern part of Judah, in the road to Laish, yet not in the city, but in the fields belonging to it, as the following words evince. Behind Kujath-jearim, 1 e westward from it, as the western sea is called the hindermost sea Deut. xi 21, and as on the contrary, the east is called Arden, which signifies the forefront.

13 And they passed thence unto mount Ephraim, and came unto the house of Micah.

1 e to the town in which his house was, for they were not yet entered into it.

14 ¶ Then answered the five men that went to spy out the country of Laish, and said unto their brethren, Do ye know that there is in these houses an ephod, and teraphim, and a graven image, and a molten image? now therefore consider what ye have to do.

Then answered, 1 e spake, the word answering being oft used in Scripture of the first speaker as 1 Kings i 28, xiii 6, Ezra x 2, Isa. xiv 10. In those houses 1 e in one of these houses, the plural number for the singular, as Judg. xii 7. Consider what ye have to do, 1 e what it is to be not expeditious, either, 1 To consult them again for your own satisfaction, or rather, 2 To take them away for your further use, as you shall have occasion, for their action is the best comment upon their words.

15 And they turned thitherward, and came to the house of the young man the Levite, even unto the house of Micah, and saluted him.

Heb. asked him of peace. Josh. vi 17. 1 Sam. xiv 22.

Heb asked him if peace 1 c if he were in peace, judges being commonly put for health and prosperity

16 And the <sup>16</sup>six hundred men appointed with their weapons of war, which were of the children of Dan, stood by the entering of the gate

17 And the five men that went to spy out the land went up, and came in thither, and took the graven images and the ephod and the teraphim and the molten image and the priest stood in the entering of the gate with the six hundred men that were appointed with weapons of war

Enter in thither to wit into the house, and that part of it where these things were. In the entering of the gate, where they had drawn him forth, that they might without noise or disturbance take them away.

18 And these went into Micah's house, and fetched the carved image, the ephod, and the teraphim and the molten image. Then said the priest unto them, What do ye?

Then to wit the five mentioned ver 17. What do ye? what do you mean to do? I hope you will not do so impious and impuduous an action.

19 And they said unto him, Hold thy peace, lay thine hand upon thy mouth, and go with us, and be to us a father and a priest, as it better for thee to be a priest unto the house of one man, or that thou be a priest unto a tribe and a family in Israel?

Lay thy hand upon thy mouth 1 c he silent as this place is used Job xvi 5 xxxix 9, xl 1, Prov xxx 32. The same thing repeated in other words. A father and a priest see on Judge xvi 10. A family in Israel to wit a tribe that is (and being oft put for that is) a family. For it is certain this was not an expedition of the whole tribe, which numbered 61000 men. Numb xvi 1, but only of one family which it seems were more vexed with the Philistines or Amorites, and therefore resolved to seek new habitation at a great distance from them. And after this time we find the body of the Danites in their old and proper positions in Samson's time which though placed before this, was long after it.

20 And the priest's heart was glad, and he took the ephod and the teraphim, and the graven image, and went in the midst of the people.

The priest's heart was glad being wholly governed by his own interest and making all his obligations of justice and gratitude give place to it. But it is not strange, if he who was before perfidious to God should prove so to men. In the midst of the people 1 c among the people, or properly in the midst both for the greater security of such precious things, and that Micah might not be able to come at him, either to injure or upbraid him, and it may be, because that was the place where the ark used to be carried.

21 So they turned and departed, and put the little ones and the cattle and the carriage before them.

For their greater security if Micah should pursue them.

22 ¶ And when they were a good way from the house of Micah the men that were in the houses near to Micah's house were gathered together and overtook the children of Dan.

23 And they came unto the children of Dan. And they told their faces, and said unto Micah, What aileth thee, that thou comest with so small a company?

24 And he said, Ye have taken away my gods which I made, and the priest, and ye are gone away: and what have I more? and what is this that ye say unto me, What aileth thee?

So far was he bristled with super-lights and idolatry that he esteemed those gods which were made by work. He could not be so stupid as to think these were gods, but only a lower sort of gods, by whom as mediators, he offered up his worship unto the true God, as it is manifest by ver 24. What aileth thee? I value nothing I have in comparison of what you have taken away. A high zeal for idolatrous trash may shame multitudes that call themselves Christians, and yet apparently value their worldly conveniences more than all the comforts even of the true religion, and of their own salvation.

25 And the children of Dan said unto him, Let not thy voice be heard among us, lest angry fellows run upon thee, and thou lose thy life, with the lives of a thy household.

Thy voice, thy complaints and reproaches. Angry fellows, the soldiers, who are in themselves sharp and fierce, and will soon be inflamed by thy provoking words. And thou lose thy life, which, notwithstanding all thy pretences, thou dost value more than thy images, as indeed appeared from his following practice.

26 And the children of Dan went their way, and when Micah saw that they were too strong for him, he turned and went back unto his house.

27 And they took the things which Micah had made, and the priest which he had, and came unto Laish, unto a people that were at quiet and secure, and they smote them with the edge of the sword, and burnt the city with fire.

Not wholly but in great measure, to strike the greater terror into the inhabitants, and to make their conquest of the place more easy.

28 And there was no deliverer, because it was far from Zidon, and they had no business with any man, and it was in the valley that hath by Beth-rehob. And they built a city, and dwelt therein.

Beth-rehob, a place in Labanus and Hamath, of which see Numb xvi 21, Josh xix 28, xxi 31, Judge 1 31.

29 And they called the name of the city Dan, after the name of Dan their father, who was born unto Israel, howbeit the name of the city was Laish at the first.

30 ¶ And the children of Dan set up the graven image and Jonathan, the son of Gershom, the son of Manasseh, he and his sons were priests to the tribe of Dan until the day of the captivity of the land.

Having succeeded in their expedition according to the prediction which, as they supposed, they had from the image, they had a great veneration for it. Until the day of the captivity of the land, either, 1. When the ark and the Israelites were taken captives by the Philistines, 1 Sam iv 10 11, though there is no mention of any who were taken captives, or that the Philistines did pursue the victory, and conquer the land at that time, for their victory was quickly damped, and turned to mourning, 1 Sam vi. 2. After that time, when the Philistines slew Saul and Jonathan, and discomfited the whole host of Israel, made the rest of the people flee out of their cities, and possession of their cities and land. Or, 3. When the wi- land of the ten tribes, whereof Dan was one, was conquered, and the people carried captive by the Assyrian, 2 Kings xviii. 6, 23, which is called by way of eminency the captivity 1 Chron. i. 22. But against this it is objected, that it is not probable that this idolatry should continue so long in such a public place and manner, or that David and Solomon would suffer it. Ans. It is not said that the graven images was there so long, for that is restrained to a shorter date, even to the continuance of the ark in Shiloh, ver. 31, which was removed thence, 1 Sam. iv., but only that fourthly's posterity were priests to this tribe or family v. Dan, which they might be under all the changes, even till the Assyrian captivity, sometimes more openly and allowedly, sometimes more cunningly, sometimes more secretly, sometimes in one way of superstition or idolatry, and sometimes in another, and in and after Jeroboam's time in the worship of the calves, for which service though he did make priests of the meanest of the people, 1 Kings vii. 41, yet that was not by choice, but out of necessity, because the priests and Levites generally forsook him, 2 Chron. xi. 13, 14, and therefore when he could engage any of the priests or Levites in that service, he was doubtless very glad of them to gain reputation to his impious and absurd device.

31 And they set them up Micah's graven image, which he made, 'all the time that the house of God was in Shiloh

CHAP. XIX.

1 Levite's concubine runs from him to her father's house at Beth-lehem, he goeth to fetch her back, is kindly entertained by her father, he departs, and comes to Gibeah of Benjamin and his concubine with him, 1-11. An old man of Mount Ephraim entertains them, 15-21. The men of the city encompass the house, to detain the Levite who through necessity delivers unto them his concubine, whom they abuse to death, 22-28. He carrieth her body home divideth it into twelve parts, sendeth them unto all the coasts of Israel, 29, 30.

AND it came to pass in those days, when there was no king in Israel, that there was a certain Levite sojourning on the side of mount Ephraim, who took to him a concubine out of Beth-lehem-judah.

In those days, of which see on Judge xvii. 1. On the side of Heb. in the side i.e. in one of the sides. ver. 15. Concubine, Heb. a wife a concubine i.e. such a concubine as was also his wife, as appears from ver. 3, 7, 9, 26, 27, Judge xx. 1. See of these Gen. xxxi. 21. xxx. 1.

2 And his concubine played the whore against him, and went away from him unto her father's house to Beth-lehem-judah, and was there four whole months.

Against him, i.e. against her father given to him or to her wrong, or, with him, i.e. in his house or whilst she lived with him, which is opposed to her going away which her father follows. Went away from him, either for fear of his severe rebukes or punishment or because her heart was alienated from him. Four whole months, Heb. some days to wit four months, or, a year (so days commonly signify) and four months, wherein not only she sinned but her father by some indulgence and connivance at her sin and neglect of just endeavours for her reformation to her husband, the ill effects whereof he speedily felt in the loss of his daughter in so dreadful a manner.

3 And her husband arose, and went after her, to speak friendly unto her, and to bring her again, having his servant with him, and a couple of asses, and she brought him into her father's house, and when the father of the damsel saw him, he rejoiced to meet him.

To speak friendly unto her, or, to speak to her heart, i.e. kindly and comfortably, as that phrase is taken Gen. i. 21, Hos. ii. 14, to offer her pardon and reconciliation, and restitution to her former state. To bring her again to wit, to his own house. I couple of asses; partly for himself or his wife to ride upon, if there was occasion, and partly for carrying their provision, as appears from ver. 19. He rejoiced to meet him, hoping the breach would be made up by this means.

4 And his father in law, the damsel's father, retained him, and he abode with him three days, so they did eat and drink, and lodged there.

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the fourth day, when they arose early in the morning, that he rose up to depart, and the damsel's father said unto his son in law, Comfort thine heart with a morsel of bread, and afterward go your way.

6 And they sat down, and did eat and drink both of them together for the damsel's father, had said unto the man, Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thine heart be merry.

7 And when the man rose up to depart, his father in law urged him, therefore he lodged there again.

8 And he arose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart, and the damsel's father said, Comfort thine heart, I pray thee. And they tarried until afternoon, and they did eat both of them.

9 And when the man rose up to depart, he, and his concubine, and his servant his father in law, the damsel's father, said unto him, Behold, now the day draweth toward evening, I pray you tarry all night, behold, the day groweth to an end, lodge here, let thine heart be merry, and to-morrow get you early on your way, that thou mayest go to home.

The day groweth to an end. Heb. it is the encamping time of the day i.e. the evening, when armies having marched in the day began to pitch their camp, or, when the sun set, it makes the day begins to encamp himself and go to rest. So it is a poetical expression taken from hence, of the sun, when he sets, seems to vulgar eyes to go to rest.

10 But the man would not tarry that night, but he rose up and departed, and came over against Jebus, which is Jerusalem, and there were with him two asses saddled, his concubine also was with him.

11 And when they were by Jebus, the day was far spent, and the servant said unto his master, Come, I pray thee, and let us turn in into this city of the Jebusites, and lodge in it.

12 And his master said unto him, We will not turn aside hither into the city of a stranger, that is not of the children of Israel, we will pass over to Gibeah.

Of a stranger, i.e. of a strange nation, which the Canaanites possess, for though the city Jerusalem had been taken by Caleb, Judge i., yet the strong fort of Zion was still in their hands, 2 Sam. v. 6, 7, whence it is likely the Lord did much molest, and afterwards, by God's permission, and for the punishment of their sin, drive out the Israelites who dwelt there.

13 And he said unto his servant, Come and let us draw near to one of these places to lodge all night, in Gibeah, or in Ramah.

Both which places lay in Benjamin's portion, a little northward from Jerusalem and in the road from Bethlehem-judah to Gibeah.

14 And they passed on and went their way, and the sun went down upon them when they were by Gibeah which belongeth to Benjamin.

This is added to differentiate it from another Gibeah in Judah, Josh. xv. 7. Possibly this is that which was called Gibeah of Saul I Sam. vi. 1.

15 And they turned aside thither, to go in and to lodge in Gibeah: and when he went in he sat him down in a street of the city: for there was no man that took them into his house to lodging.

Though they were soft and effeminate in other respects yet they were hard hearted towards strangers or indigent persons. Lather there were no public houses to receive and entertain travellers, it may be gathered from Gen. xxviii. xlii. iv. Josh. ix. &c. or, if there were such a one here they might perceive it to be a very wicked house as being in so low a place and therefore might decline it and expect that some private person would exercise hospitality to them as persons of my worth used to do, as Gen. xviii. 1, 3, xiv. 1, 2. Heb. xiii. 2.

16 ¶ And, behold, there came an old man from his work out of the field at even, which was also of mount Ephraim, and he sojourned in Gibeah: but the men of the place were Benjamites.

Of Mount Ephraim whence also the Levite was, which obliged and induced him to show the more kindness to his countryman. The men of the place were Benjamites: this was indeed one of the cities belonging to the priests Josh. xxi. 1. Chron. vi. but you can not see that the city which were given to the priests and who of they were possessors and owners were not inhabited by the priests or Levites only especially at this time when they were but few in number, but in many other persons of differing professions and callings, which was necessary for their convenience.

17 And when he had lifted up his eyes he saw a waylaring man in the street of the city: and the old man said, Whither goest thou? and whence comest thou?

18 And he said unto him, We are passing from Beth-lehem-judah toward the side of mount Ephraim, from thence am I: and I went to Beth-lehem-judah, but I am now going to the house of the Lord: and there is no man that receiveth me to house.

The house of the Lord was in Shiloh Josh. xviii. 1, xxi. 12. Thence he went either because he lived there, for that was in the tribe of Ephraim: or rather because he would there offer prayers and praises and sacrifices unto God, for his mercy in reconciling him and his wife together and for his blessing upon him and to make atonement for his wife.

19 Yet there is both straw and provender for our asses; and there is bread and wine also for me, and for thy handmaid: and for the young man which is with thy servant there is no want of any thing.

20 And the old man said, Peace be with thee: howsoever let all thy wants be upon me: only lodge not in the street.

It matters not whether thou wantst nothing or everything I will take care to supply all thy wants.

21 So he brought him into his house, and gave provender unto the asses: and they washed their feet, and did eat and drink.

They washed their feet, as they used to do to travellers in those hot countries, Gen. xviii. 4, xix. 2, xxix. 32, &c.

22 ¶ Now as they were making their hearts merry, behold, the men of the city, certain sons of Belial, beset this house round about, and beat at the door, and spake to the master of the house, the old man, saying, Bring forth the man that came into thine house, that we may know him.

Making their hearts merry i.e. refreshing themselves with the provisions set before them. Certain sons of Belial, wicked and licentious men see Deut. xiii. 13. That we may know him, an ambiguous expression whereby they pretended only a desire to know and see what person he had brought among them, and yet carry on their wicked design of knowing him carnally. Compare Gen. xix. 3, where the same phrase is used in that sense upon a like occasion. But though they name only the man, yet it is plain from the following relation that their design was principally upon the woman and therefore under the name of the man they comprehended those that belong to him.

23 And the man, the master of the house, went out unto them, and said unto them, Nay, my brethren, nay I pray you, do not so wickedly, seeing that this man is come into mine house, do not this folly.

This man is come into mine house, and therefore I am obliged to protect him by the laws of hospitality. Comp. Gen. xix. 8.

24 Behold, here is my daughter a maiden, and his concubine, them I will bring out now, and humble ye them, and do with them what seemeth good unto you: but unto this man do not do so vile a thing.

He offers this to avoid a greater and more shameful sin, which he thought they designed, but it seems they did not then abuse being confined to the woman, and not extended to the man, who also was in their power if they had lust after him. But this offer was sinful, because he offered that which was not in his nor in the man's power to dispose of, even the chastity of his daughter and the man's wife: and because no man must do any evil thing never so small for the prevention of any evil of sin or misery, or for the procuring of the greatest good, Rom. vii. 5. though his sin was much mitigated by his ignorance, by his honest and generous intention of protecting a stranger, by the force which was in some sort put upon him, and by the suddenness and violence of the temptation.

25 But the men would not hearken to him: so the man took his concubine, and brought her forth unto them, and they knew her, and abused her all the night until the morning: and when the day began to spring, they let her go.

The man took his concubine, being willing to expose her rather than the daughter of his host, who had expressed such a singular care and affection for him.

26 Then came the woman in the dawning of the day, and fell down at the door of the man's house where her lord was, till it was light.

Fell down, to wit, dead, as the following words show and as that word is oft used, as Exod. vii. 21, Psal. lxxviii. 7, xci. 7, Hos. v. 5, killed, partly with grief of heart, and partly with excessive abuse of her body, of which there have been divers instances. Thus the sin she formerly chose, viz. 2 is now her destruction, and though her husband partly pardoned her, God would punish her, at least as to this life. Her lord, he is called, either because he was her husband, for which cause Sarah called Abraham lord, 1 Pet iii. 6, or because she had been his maid-servant, as concubines often-times were; as Gen xxx. 3, 9

27 And her lord rose up in the morning, and opened the doors of the house, and went out to go his way: and, behold, the woman his concubine was fallen down at the door of the house, and her hands were upon the threshold

The posture either of one that had fallen down, or of one that was laid down to sleep, her hands or arms (for the Hebrew word signifies both) leaning upon the threshold, and being put under her head, and therefore he thought to awake her and raise her up

28 And he said unto her, Up, and let us be going. But none answered. Then the man took her up upon an ass, and the man rose up, and gat him unto his place

None answered, for she was dead, as is said, Judg xx. 5

29 ¶ And when he was come into his house, he took a knife, and laid hold on his concubine, and divided her, together with her bones, into twelve pieces, and sent her into all the coast of Israel

Together with her bones, or, according to her bones, according to the joints of her body, for there he made a division. This might seem to be a barbarous and inhuman act in itself, but may seem excusable if it be considered that the madness of the spectacle did highly contribute to stir up the zeal of all the Israelites to avenge his concubine's death and to execute justice upon such profligate offenders, and was necessary especially in this time of anarchy and general corruption, Judg xiii. 6 to awaken them out of that lethargy in which all the tribes lay. Into twelve pieces, that one piece might be sent to every tribe, whereof none to Levi because they would meet with it in every tribe, being dispersed among them, but one to Benjamin, for he might well presume, that they would as much abhor so villainous an action though done by some of their own tribe, as any of the rest. Sent her into all the coasts of Israel, by several messengers, by whom also he sent a particular relation of the fact

30 And it was so, that all that saw it said, There was no such deed done nor seen from the day that the children of Israel came up out of the land of Egypt unto this day: consider it, take advice, and speak your minds

No such deed, so wicked and abominable. Consider of it, take advice, and speak your minds, let us meet together and seriously consider, and every one freely speak what is to be done in this case

CHAP XX

The Israelites assemble at Mizpeh: the Levite declares his wrong, 1-7. Their decree, 8-11. They require the delinquents of the Benjamites to do justice on them, they demand 12-17. Whereupon, having consulted God, they march to fight against them, are twice foiled, and lose forty thousand men, 18-25. Being humbled and receiving clearer revelation from God, they, by a stratagem, destroy the whole tribe, six hundred men excepted, (who fled away,) and burnt their cities, 26-48

THEN all the children of Israel went out, and the congregation was gathered together as one man, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, with the land of Gilead, unto the Lord in Mizpeh

All the children of Israel, is a great number, and especially the rulers of all the tribes, except Benjamin, ver. 3,

12. Hear out from their several habitations. As one man, with one consent. From Dan even to Beer-sheba, Dan was the northern border of the land, near Lebanon, and Beer-sheba the southern border. Gen xxi. 31. Compare 1 Kings iv. 25. The land of Gilead, beyond Jordan where Reuben, Gad, and half Manasse were. Into the land, as to the Lord's tribunal, for God was not only present in the place where the ark and tabernacle was, but also in the assemblies of the gods, or judges, Psalm lxxviii. 1, and in all the places where God's name is recorded. Exod. xx. 21, and where two or three are met together in his name. Matt. xviii. 20, for his service, and to seek for counsel and mercy from him. Compare Judg. xi. 11. In Mizpeh, a place in the borders of Judah and Benjamin, and therefore ascribed to both of them, Josh. xv. 38, xviii. 26. Thus they chose as a place most fit and proper in many respects. First As a place they used to meet in upon solemn occasions. See Judg. x. 17, xi. 11. 1 Sam. vii. 5, 16, x. 17. Secondly, for its convenient situation for all the tribes within and without Jordan. Thirdly, As being near the place where the fact was done, that it might be more thoroughly examined and not far from Shiloh, where the tabernacle was: whether they might go or send, if need were

2 And the chief of all the people, even of all the tribes of Israel, presented themselves in the assembly of the people of about four hundred thousand footmen that drew sword

The chief Heb. the corners are the nobles and rulers, which are oft so called, because, like corner stones they both unite, and support, and adorn the whole building. Four hundred thousand or and four hundred thousand. It is an ellipsis of the phrase [and] of which examples have been given before. For the chief of the people were not so many, but the common soldiers: and these were all footmen, whereas many of the rulers rode upon horses or asses, Judg. x. 10, x. 1, xii. 14. The number is here set down, to show both their zeal and forwardness in punishing such a villany, and the strange blindness of the Benjamites that durst oppose so great and united body, and that the success of battles depends not upon great numbers, nor this great host was twice defeated by the Benjamites, wholly upon God's blessing. Footmen, for horsemen they had few or none in that time

3 (Now the children of Benjamin heard that the children of Israel were gone up to Mizpeh) Then said the children of Israel, Tell us, how was this wickedness?

The children of Benjamin heard like persons unconcerned and resolved, they neither went nor sent thither, far from their own pride and stubbornness and self-conceit, partly because as they were loth to give up any of their brethren to justice, so they presumed the other tribes would never proceed to a war against them, and partly from a Divine imputation hardening that wicked tribe to their own destruction. Tell us, the verb is of the pharisee number, because they spoke to the Levite, and his servant, and his host, who doubtless were present upon this occasion

4 And the Levite, the husband of the woman that was slain, answered and said, I came into Gibeah that belongeth to Benjamin, I and my concubine, to lodge

The Levite, to whose relation the other two gave their consent

5 And the men of Gibeah rose against me, and beset the house round about upon me by night, and thought to have slain me: and my concubine have they forced, that she is dead

I thought to have slain me, except I would either submit to their unbecomming lust, which I was resolved to withstand even unto death, or deliver up my concubine to them, which I was forced to do

6 And I took my concubine and cut her in two her in pieces, and sent her throughout all the country of the inheritance of Israel for they have committed lewdness and folly in Israel.

Josh 7:15

A lewd folly, most ignominious and impudent wickedness.

7 Behold, ye are all children of Israel, give here your advice and counsel.

Lev 19:20

Children of Israel, the sons of that holy man, who for one filthy action left in eternal brand upon one of his own sons, a people in covenant with the holy God, whose honour you are obliged to vindicate, and who hath expressly commanded you to punish all such notorious enormities.

8 ¶ And all the people arose as one man, saying, We will not any of us go to his tent, neither will we any of us turn into his house.

We will not any of us go to his tent i.e. his habitation, to wit, until we have avenged this injury.

9 But now this shall be the thing which we will do to Gibeah, we will go up by lot against it.

10 And we will take ten men of an hundred throughout all the tribes of Israel, and an hundred of a thousand, and a thousand out of ten thousand, to fetch victual for the people, that they may do when they come to Gibeah of Benjamin, according to all the folly that they have wrought in Israel.

That they may do according to all the folly that they have wrought, that we may punish them for such a wickedness deserves. In Israel this is added in mitigation, that they should do this in Israel or among God's peculiar people, which was esteemed abominable even among the heathen.

11 So all the men of Israel were gathered against the city, for knit together is one man.

Gen 11:1

12 ¶ And the tribes of Israel sent men through all the tribe of Benjamin saying, What wickedness is this that is done among you?

The tribe He' tribes either the plural number for the singular, or rather tribe is put for family, as was noted before in families are elsewhere put for tribes. They take a wife and a just course in sending to all the parts and families of the tribe to scourge the innocent from the guilty and to give them a fair opportunity of preventing their ruin by doing nothing, but what their duty, honour, and interest obliged them to, even by delivering up these vile misdoers, whom they could not keep without heinous guilt and shame, and bringing the curse of God upon themselves.

13 Now therefore deliver us the men, the children of Belial, which are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death, and put away evil from Israel. But the children of Benjamin would not hearken to the voice of their brethren the children of Israel.

Put away i.e. both the guilt and the punishment where in all Israel will be involved if they do not punish it. The children of Benjamin would not hearken, partly, from the pride of their hearts, which made them seem to submit to their brethren only to suffer them to meddle in their territories partly from the conceit of their own wisdom and military skill, and partly from covetousness and ambition.

14 But the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together out of the cities unto Gibeah, to go out to battle against the children of Israel.

15 And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time out of the cities twenty and six thousand men that drew sword, beside the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbered seven hundred chosen men.

Object. This agrees not with the following numbers; for all that were slain of Benjamin were 25,100 men, ver. 35, and there were only 600 that survived, ver. 47, which make only 25,700. Answer. The other thousand men were either left in some of their cities, where they were slain, ver. 48, or were cut off in the two first battles, where it is unreasonable to think they had an unbloody victory, and as for these 25,100 men, they were all slain in that day, i.e. the day of the third battle, as is affirmed, ver. 35.

16 Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men left-handed, every one could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss.

Left-handed, Heb. shut up on their right hand, i.e. using their left hand instead of their right. Every one could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss, an hyperbolical expression, signifying that they could do this with great exactness. There are many parallel instances in historians of persons that could throw stones or shoot arrows with great certainty, so is wisdom or never to miss, of which see my Latin Synopsis. And this was very considerable, and one ground of the Benjamites' confidence, because in those times they had no guns.

17 And the men of Israel, beside Benjamin, were numbered four hundred thousand men that drew sword: all these were men of war.

The men of Israel, to wit, such as were here present, ver. 2 for otherwise it is most probable they had a far greater number of men being 600,000 before their entrance into Canaan Num. 1:2.

18 ¶ And the children of Israel arose, and went up to the house of God, and asked counsel of God, and said, Which of us shall go up first to the battle against the children of Benjamin? And the Lord said, Judah shall go up first.

The children of Israel i.e. some sent in the name of all to the house of God to wit to Shiloh which was not far from Mizpah where they were. Which of us shall go up first to the battle? thus they ask to prevent civil dissensions and contentions, but they do not ask whether they should go against them or no for that they knew they ought to do by the will of God already revealed. Nor yet do they seek to God for his help by prayer, and fasting, and sacrifice, as in all reason they ought to have done, but were confident of success because of their great numbers and righteous cause.

19 And the children of Israel rose up in the morning and encamped against Gibeah.

20 And the men of Israel went out to battle against Benjamin: and the men of Israel put themselves in array to fight against them at Gibeah.

21 And the children of Benjamin were forth out of Gibeah, and destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and six thousand men.

Quest. Why would God suffer them to have so great a loss in so good a cause? Answer. Because they had many and great sins reigning upon themselves, and they should not have come to seek a work of God with polluted hands, but should have purified the beam out of their own eye before they attempted to take that out of their brother Benjamin's eye, which because they did not, God doth it for them, making them by this loss more clearly to see their own sins and their need of God's help, without which their great numbers were insupportable, and bringing them through the fire, that they might be purged from their dross, it being probable that the great God who governs every stroke in battles, did so order things, that their worst and rotten members should be cut off, which was a great blessing to the whole commonwealth.

22 And the people the men of Israel encouraged themselves, and set their battle again in array in the place where they put themselves in array the first day.

Encouraged themselves. Heb strengthened themselves partly by supporting themselves with the conscience of the justice of their cause, and the hopes of success, and partly by putting themselves in better order for defending themselves, and annoying their enemies. In the place where they put themselves in array the first day, hereby showing their freedom from that heathenish superstition, whereby they might have been apt to have rejected that as an unlucky place. Compare 1 Kings xx. 23, 28.

23 (* And the children of Israel went up and wept before the LORD until even, and asked counsel of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up again to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother? And the LORD said, Go up against him.)

Went up and wept, not so much for their sins as for their defeat and loss, as appears by the sequel. Against the children of Benjamin my brother, they impute their ill success not to their own sins, as they had great reason to do, but to their taking up arms against their brethren, the lawfulness whereof they now begin to doubt of. But still they persist in their former neglect of seeking God's assistance in the way which he had appointed, as they themselves acknowledge presently, by doing those very things which now they justly neglected, ver 26 and therefore are again justly punished. Go up against him God answers to their question, but as they did not desire his assistance and success so he doth not promise it.

24 And the children of Israel came near against the children of Benjamin the second day.

25 And Benjamin went forth against them out of Gibeah the second day, and destroyed down to the ground of the children of Israel again eighteen thousand men, all these drew the sword.

26 ¶ Then all the children of Israel, and all the people, "went up, and came unto the house of God and wept, and sat there before the LORD, and fasted that day until even, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the LORD.

Sat there before the Lord and fasted, being now sensible of their former slowness and not being truly humbled for their sins, which now they discover to be the true cause of their ill success. Offered burnt offerings to make atonement to God for their own sins. Peace offerings partly to bless God for sparing so many of them, which as he might justly have cut off all of them when their brethren were slain, and partly to express his assistance for the future and to give him thanks for the victors, which now they were confident he would give them.

27 And the children of Israel enquired of the LORD, (for the ark of the covenant of God was there in those days,

Inquired of the Lord, to wit, by Urim and Thummim. Num. xxvii. 21. Was there, in Shiloh, where they were now assembled.

28 * And Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, stood before it in those days,) saying, Shall I yet again go out to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother, or shall I cease? And the LORD said, (Go up for to morrow I will deliver them into thine hand.

Phinehas the son of Eleazar this is added to give us some light about the time of this history, and to show it was not done in the order in which it is here placed, after Samson's death, but long before. Stood, i. e. ministered, as the word stand oft signifies, as Deut. x. 8, xxiii. 7, Prov. xxii. 29, Jer. li. 12, compared with 2 Kings xxi. 8, because standing is the usual posture of servants. Before it i. e. before the ark, or, before him, i. e. the Lord's face, or presence, which shows that he was the high priest, in none else might appear there. Or shall I cease? which, if thou requirest, we are willing to do, notwithstanding the provocation they have given us, and our own inclination to revenge. To-morrow I will deliver them into thine hand, now, when they had sought God after the due order and truly humbled themselves for their sins, he gives them a full and satisfactory answer to their desires.

29 And Israel "set liers in wait round about Gibeah.

Though they were assured of the success by a particular and absolute promise, yet they do not neglect the use of means, as well knowing that the certainty of God's purposes or promises doth not excuse, but rather require man's diligent use of all fit means for the accomplishment of them. Round about Gibeah, i. e. on several sides of it, as may be gathered from the following verses.

30 And the children of Israel went up against the children of Benjamin on the third day, and put themselves in array against Gibeah, as at other times.

The children of Israel i. e. a considerable part of them, who were ordered to give the first onset and then to counter-attack if flight, to draw the Benjamites forth of their strong hold. See ver. 32. On the third day, to wit, after the second battle for the first day after it they spent in perplexing thoughts and going up to the house of the Lord, the second, in fasting and prayer there; and this third, in the fight. Or this is so called with respect unto the two several long-going days of battle and so this was the third day of battle.

31 And the children of Benjamin went out against the people, and were drawn away from the city, and they began to smite the people, and kill as at other times, in the highways, of which one goeth up to the house of God, and the other to Gibeah in the field, about thirty men of Israel.

Drawn away from the city by the dissembled flight of the Israelites. At other times, with the same kind, though not with the same degree of success. Gibeah in the field, so called to distinguish from that Gibeah which was upon a hill wherefore they are constantly said to ascend or go up upon it as ver. 23, 30. See Josh. xxiii. 21, 28.

32 And the children of Benjamin said, They are smitten down before us, as at the first. But the children of Israel said, Let us flee, and draw them from the city unto the highways.

33 And all the men of Israel rose up out of their place, and put themselves in array at Baal-tamar, and the liers in wait of Israel came forth out of their places, even out of the meadows of Gibeah.

Out of their place, where they had disposed themselves, that they might fall upon the Benjamites, when they were drawn forth to sufficient distance from their city, and when they were pursuing that party, mentioned ver. 30. Came forth out of their places, to execute what was agreed upon even to take Gibeah, and burn it, as they actually did ver. 37.

34 And there came against Gibeah ten thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and the battle was sore but they knew not that evil was near them.

Ten thousand out of all Israel, selected out of the main body which was at Baal-tamar, and the were to march directly to Gibeah on the one side whilst the liers in wait stationed at on the other side, and whilst the great body of the army laboured to intercept the Benjamites who, having pursued the Israelites that pretended to flee, now endeavoured to retreat to Gibeah. They knew not that evil was near them, they were so puffed up with their former successes, that they were unreasonable of their danger.

35 And the Lord smote Benjamin before Israel and the children of Israel destroyed of the Benjamites that day twenty and five thousand and an hundred men all these drew the sword

This is the total sum whereof the particulars are related ver 43, 45, and for the odd hundred not there mentioned, they were killed in other places not there expressed

36 So the children of Benjamin saw that they were smitten for the men of Israel gave place to the Benjamites, because they trusted unto the liers in wait which they had set beside Gibeah

37 And the liers in wait hastened, and rushed upon Gibeah, and the liers in wait drew themselves along, and smote all the city with the edge of the sword

Draw themselves along, or, extended themselves, i. e. who were before they lay close and contracted into a narrow compass now they spread themselves and marched in rank and file as armies do Or, marched or went, Heb draw their feet So this verb is oft used as Gen xxxviii 28, Exod xii 21, Judg iv 6, Job xxi 33

38 Now there was an appointed sign between the men of Israel and the liers in wait, that they should make a great flame with smoke rise up out of the city

39 And when the men of Israel retired from the battle, Benjamin began to smite and kill of the men of Israel about thirty persons for they said, Surely they are smitten down before us, as in the first battle

40 But when the flame began to arise up out of the city with a pillar of smoke, the Benjamites looked behind them, and, behold, the flame of the city ascended up to heaven

41 And when the men of Israel turned again, the men of Benjamin were amazed for they saw that evil was come upon them

The men of Benjamin were amazed, because of their great disappointment and the present danger wherewith they were surrounded on every side

42 Therefore they turned their backs before the men of Israel into the way of the wilderness, but the battle overtook them and them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them

The battle i. e. the men of battle or war, the abstract for the concrete is mostly 2 Kings xxi. 11 prubi, Psal xxxvi 11 the v. Prov. xii 5 dreams, Jer xxvii 9, election, Rom xi 7 are put for persons that are poor proud deceitful dreamers &c. Them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them so the sense may seem to be this That the Israelites did not only kill the inhabitants of Gibeah and all the Benjamites that came into the field against them six hundred excepted, but in the midst of them or together with them, they killed also the rest of the Benjamites who when they saw their army was wholly destroyed made haste to get out of their several cities or towns, that so they might escape the sword which was coming towards them But this word may be rendered thus And them who were in the other cities to wit, of Benjamin, i. e. who abode in their own cities and did not go up to Gibeah, they destroyed in the midst of them, i. e. in their several cities, or, in the midst of it i. e. of every city, for so it is said, ver 45, where it is said that they smote the men of every city But this I submit to the learned

43 Thus they inclosed the Benjamites round about, and chased them, and took them down with ease over against Gibeah toward the sunrise

With ease, without great difficulty. Now that God gave them his presence and assistance, they easily did that which before they found too hard for them Or, unto Mennebah, or, as far as Mennebah; a place so called. See Jeron. u. 52, Jer li 59

44 And there fell of Benjamin eighteen thousand men, all these were men of valour

There fell, to wit, in the field or battle

45 And they turned and fled toward the wilderness unto the rock of Rimmon and they gleaned of them in the highways five thousand men, and pursued hard after them unto Gidom, and slew two thousand men of them

They gleaned, i. e. they cut off the remainders in the pursuit, and spared none, a metaphor from those who gather grapes, or corn so clearly and fully, that they leave no relic for those who come after them

46 So that all which fell that day of Benjamin were twenty and five thousand men that drew the sword, all these were men of valour

Twenty and five thousand besides the odd hundred expressed ver 45, but here only the great number is expressed the less being omitted as inconsiderable, which way of numbering is frequent in Scripture as Judg xi 26, 2 Sam xvi and in other authors and in vulgar usages, as when they are called the seventy interpreters who in truth and exactness were seventy-two Here are also a thousand more omitted because here he speaks only of them who fell in that third day of battle See on ver 15

47 But six hundred men turned and fled to the wilderness unto the rock Rimmon, and abode in the rock Rimmon four months

In a cave within that rock, where they fortified themselves and latched in provision as they had opportunity, which they could easily do when the heat of the battle was over and the Israelites were not solicitous to pursue them farther

48 And the men of Israel turned again upon the children of Benjamin, and smote them with the edge of the sword, as well the men of every city, as the beast, and all that came to hand also they set on fire all the cities that they came to

Having destroyed those that came to Gibeah, and into the field now they follow them home to their several habitations The men of every city, comprehensively taken so as to include women and children If the act is harsh and bloody, either it may be ascribed to military fury, or rather it may be justified, partly, from the high guilt brought upon the whole tribe, in which it is no wonder if the infants suffer, which was not unusual in such cases, as Numb xxxi 17, 1 Sam xv 3, Josh vii 15 partly, from the command of God in a parallel case, Deut xxi. 15, and partly, from that solemn oath by which they had a ratified or devoted to death all that came not up to Mizpah, Judg xxi. 5, which none of the Benjamites disobeyed for which cause also they destroyed all the men, women, and children of Jabesh-gilead, Judg xxi 10

The people bewail the desolation of Benjamin, 1-7 The inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead, for not coming up to this battle are all destroyed excepting four hundred damels, whom the Israelites bestow for wives on the remaining Benjamites, 8-15 They advise the rest to seize on the hanging maidens at the front in Shiloh, and to carry away as many as they had need of, 16-21 The answer concerning them should pacify their relations, 22

the men of Israel had sworn in Mizpeh, saying, There shall not any of us give his daughter unto Benjamin to wife.

The men of Israel had sworn, in the beginning of this war, after the whole tribe had espoused the quarrel of the men of Ephraim, Judg xx 13, 14 They do not (as some supposed) here swear the utter extirpation of the tribe, which fell out beyond their expectation ver 3, 6, but only not to give their daughters to those men who should survive, justly esteeming them for their barbarous villany to be as bad as the worst of heathens, with whom they were forbidden to marry In this case the Benjamites might have married among themselves, if any of their men and women were left alive

2 And the people came to the house of God, and abode there till even before God, and lifted up their voices, and wept sore;

The people came to the house of God, partly to mourn for the common loss, and partly to ask counsel from God about the repairing of it

3 And said, O Lord God of Israel, why is this come to pass in Israel, that there should be to day one tribe lacking in Israel?

Why hast thou given them up to such wickedness, and us to such rage, that the whole tribe should be in a manner lost? Hence it appears that they did not swear to root them all out, as is further manifest from the different matter and words of this oath, ver 1 which only denied them their daughters in marriage, and that concerning the people of other tribes who joined not with them in this business, which was, that they should be put to death ver 5 And their sparing of those six hundred men in the rock Rimmon, ver 13, 14, plainly shows that they were not obliged by any oath or vow to extirpate them

4 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the people rose early, and built there an altar, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings

Built there an altar, not for a monument of the victory as some say, but for sacrifices, as the next words show Quest What need was there of this when the ordinary altar was there, to which also they seem to be returned Deut xvi 2? Answer They are not there returned to one altar, but to one place of worship as is expressed, and therefore there might be in that place more altars than one, when the multitude of sacrifices so required which was the case 1 Kings viii 61, and probably at this time when all the tribes being met, they had many sacrifices to offer, some in common for all, and some peculiar to every tribe Nay, other altars might be, and oftentimes were erected in other places, by Divine direction or dispensation as Judg vi 24, 26, 1 Sam vii 9, 17, xi 15, xvi 2, 5

5 And the children of Israel said, Who is there among all the tribes of Israel that came not up with the congregation unto the Lord? <sup>41</sup> or they had made a great oath concerning him that came not up to the Lord to Mizpeh, saying, He shall surely be put to death

A great oath, i.e. a solemn oath, joined with some terrible exhortation against the offenders herein He shall surely be put to death, because by refusing to execute the vengeance due to such malefactors, they were justly presumed guilty of the crime, and therefore liable to the same punishment as was the case of that city that would not deliver up an idolater dwelling among them to justice

6 And the children of Israel repented them for Benjamin their brother, and said, There is one tribe cut off from Israel this day

Children of Israel repented them, not for the war, which was just, and necessary, and good; but for their immoderate severity in the execution of it, and for the dreadful consequences of it

7 How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing we have sworn by the Lord that we will not give them of our daughters to wives?

8 ¶ And they said, What one is there of the tribes of Israel that came not up to Mizpeh to the Lord? And, behold, there came none to the camp from Jabesh-gilead to the assembly

A city in Gilead, and in the tribe of Manasseh, of which see 1 Sam xi 1, 3, 9, &c., xxxi 11, &c.

9 For the people were numbered, and, behold, there were none of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead there

10 And the congregation sent thither twelve thousand men of the valiantest, and commanded them, saying, Go and smite the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead with the edge of the sword, with the women and the children

Who in such public and scandalous crimes were for the greater terror of such transgressors and prevention of the like sins oft involved in the same punishment with the men as Deut xii 15, Josh vii 24 &c.

11 And this is the thing that ye shall do, Ye shall utterly destroy every male, and every woman that hath lain by man

But not the virgins as appears from the next verses It is questionable whether they were not obliged to destroy these also by virtue of their oath, and of God's express command concerning devoted persons such as these certainly were, that they should surely be put to death Lev xxvii 29, which was also particularly enjoined and practiced in such cases, as Deut xii, Josh vii, &c. But the natural and necessary duty of preserving a tribe from total ruin, might seem to render the case doubtful and doubtful, and incline them opinionous, as well as their affections to the more favourable side And it may be, the Lord, whom they were here consulting with upon all their occasions, gave them a dispensation thus to do, though that be not expressed, which is the case of many other things which were done, though not recorded, as this very oath was omitted in its proper place and had not been recorded if this extraordinary occasion had not been offered

12 And they found among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead four hundred young virgins that had known no man by lying with any male and they brought them unto the camp to Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan

Young virgins, not married, yet marriageable It is probable there were other and younger virgins, but whether they were slain or spared Scripture determines not, and the Israelites do not agree But these could not serve the present and urgent occasion, and therefore he takes notice only of these four hundred which were of ripe age

13 And the whole congregation sent some to speak to the children of Benjamin that were in the rock Rimmon, and to call peaceably unto them

14 And Benjamin came again at that time, and they gave them wives which they had saved alive of the women of Jabesh-gilead and yet so they suffered them not

Benjamin, the poor remainders of the tribe of Benjamin

15 And the people repented them for Benjamin, because that the Lord had made a breach in the tribes of Israel

The people repented them for Benjamin were yet more grieved upon this unhappy disappointment, for they supposed here would have been wives sufficient for them. The Lord had made a breach, the Benjamites were the only authors of the sin, but God was the chief author of the punishment, and the Israelites were but his executioners.

16 ¶ Then the elders of the congregation said, How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing the women are destroyed out of Benjamin?

For them that remain, for the two hundred who are yet unprovided of wives.

17 And they said, There must be an inheritance for them that be escaped of Benjamin, that a tribe be not destroyed out of Israel.

The inheritance promised by Jacob and Moses, and given by Joshua to the tribe of Benjamin, doth all of it belong to those few which remain of that tribe, and cannot be possessed by any other tribe; and therefore we are obliged to procure wives for them all, that they may make up this breach, and be capable of possessing and inheriting all their land, and that this tribe and their inheritance may not be confounded with or swallowed up by any of the rest. Heb the inheritance (to wit, belonging to the whole tribe of Benjamin) is or belongs to them that be escaped of Benjamin.

18 Howbeit we may not give them wives of our daughters. For the children of Israel have sworn, saying, Cursed be he that giveth a wife to Benjamin.

1 e To this generation of Benjamites who have made themselves guilty of this foul wickedness, but this oath did not extend to their posterity. And some think it had another exception, to wit, unless the surviving Benjamites could not otherwise be supplied with wives.

19 Then they said, Behold, there is a feast of the Lord in Shiloh yearly in a place which is on the north side of Beth-el || on the east side || of the highway that goeth up from Beth-el to Shechem, and on the south of Labanah.

Yearly, on the three solemn feasts, in which they used some honest and holy recreations, among which dancing was one, 1 eod xv 20, 1 Sam xviii 6, 2 Sam vi 14 and probably it was the feast of tabernacles which they did celebrate with more than ordinary joy, Deut xvi 13.

15 Which is on the north side of Beth-el. Heb which is on the north of Beth-el. Which doth not relate to Shiloh which was so known a place, that it was frivolous to describe it by such circumstances, even by places much less known than itself, but to the feast which as to that part or exercise of the feast here especially concerned and mentioned to wit, the dancing of the virgins was not celebrated in Shiloh, but in a neighbouring place more convenient for that purpose.

20 Therefore they commanded the children of Benjamin, saying, Go and lie in wait in the vineyards.

21 And see, and, behold, if the daughters of Shiloh come out to dance in vineyards, then come ye out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife of the daughters of Shiloh, and go to the land of Benjamin.

The daughters of Shiloh, by whom I may possibly understand not those only who were born or settled inhabitants there, (as many conceive,) but all those who were come thither upon this occasion and for a time sojourning there, for although only the males were obliged to go up to the three solemn feasts yet it is apparent that the women had liberty to go, and hence who were most frequent did usually go, and others, upon special occasions. see 1 Sam i 7, 21, 22, 24, 1 eod ii 22, 23, 31, 35. And it may be justly presumed, especially concerning the women that lived at no great distance from the place of public worship that they came thither in great numbers. Met over the daughters of Shiloh, strictly so called, are not only they that lived in that town or city, but in the country belonging to it, which on comes under the name of the city to which it belongs. And these may be here particularly named, because though others might come yet they were under great obligations to come, because of their nearness to the place. The vineyards were near to their dancing place, Catch ye every man his wife, take them away by force or violence, which they might the better do, because the dances were not used by the people of God in their solemnities, but the women danced by themselves, and therefore were more liable to this rape.

22 And it shall be, when their fathers or their brethren come unto us to complain, that we will say unto them, ¶ Be favourable unto them for our sakes because we reserved not to each man his wife in the war for ye did not give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty.

Be favourable unto them, pass by their offence, if not for their sakes, whom necessity forced to this course, yet for our sakes, and indeed for your own sakes, for both you, and we have done them a great injury in prosecuting them with so much fury as to endanger the utter extinction of the whole tribe, and therefore this is the least we can do by way of reparation. In the war, either first in the war with Jabin king of the Canaanites, when they should have taken care to reserve a sufficient number which they might have done by sparing either so many of the married women as were necessary, who their former husbands being slain, might have been married to those Benjamites, or is many of the younger virgins who within a little time, might have been married to them whom many suppose that they slew. Or, secondly, in the war with the Benjamites in which they acknowledge their cruelty in destroying the women with such fury as not to leave a competent number for the men which were left. See Judg xx 18. Ye did not give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty. Quest Whether this did really discharge them from their oath. Ans First it seems to excuse those parents of these virgins who were not acquainted with the plot and did neither directly nor indirectly give their daughters to them but they were taken away by force, without their knowledge and consent. If it be said those parents might and should have taken their daughters from them, it may be replied that they could not do so before they were corrupted and the rulers of Israel would not assist them with their power to recover them. And it is a maxim, that many things which ought not to be done, when once they are done should not be undone. And for those parents who were conscious of the design, it is probable they kept their daughters at home to avoid this. Secondly, further the oath was made with an exception of the case of the total extirpation of a tribe or it was a rash oath to do what was out of their power or what they could not lawfully do to wit utterly to destroy a tribe out of Israel, which therefore they here speak of with horror, ver 3, 6, and if so, is they sinned in making it, so they were not obliged to keep it. It being an acknowledgment of truth that rash and sinful oaths are better broken than kept. Thirdly, Yet they cannot be wholly excused from sin in this matter for as it was folly to take such an oath as it is expressed so the manner of freeing themselves from their own snare is fraudulent and injurious to the parents, in disposing of their children without their consent.

23 And the children of Benjamin did so, and took them wives, according to their number, of them that danced, whom they caught, and they went and returned unto their inheritance, and repaired the cities and dwelt in them.

According to their number i. e. each man his wife, as is said, ver 22. By which we may see they had no very favourable opinion of polygamy, because they did not allow it in this case, when it might seem most necessary for the reparation of a lost tribe. Returned unto their inheritance, which being very near the place, they could speedily do before the parents could obtain redress. Repaired the cities, and dwell in them; not at that instant, which could not be, but by degrees, increasing their buildings as their number increased.

24 And the children of Israel departed thence at that time; every man to his tribe and to his family, and they went out from thence every man to his inheritance.

25 In those days there was no king in Israel; every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

THE BOOK OF RUTH.

THE ARGUMENT

THIS little Book, by whosoever written, which is not material to know, is annexed to the Book of Judges, and by some of the Hebrew doctors made a part of it. It is useful as for many other points, so especially to show the genealogy of David, and consequently of Christ, and the rise of Christ from a Moabitish woman, which was a useful document, and a great encouragement to the Gentiles to believe in Christ.

CHAP. I.

1 famine in Canaan. Elimelech removes to Moab, with Naomi his wife, and his two sons who marry Orpah and Ruth there, and die, 1-5. Naomi returns to Judah, her daughters-in-law accompany her on her way, 6-13. Orpah returns home to her people and gods. Ruth remains being converted, 14-18. They come to Beth-lehem, 19-22.

NOW it came to pass in the days when the judges ruled, that there was a famine in the land. And a certain man of Beth-lehem-judah went to sojourn in the country of Moab, he, and his wife, and his two sons.

In the days when the judges ruled, which is noted as the cause of the following famine, because in much of that time they were guilty of great defection from God. But under which of the judges this happened. Scripture being silent it seems presumptuous to determine, nor is it necessary to know. What is said about this matter from the genealogy, mentioned chap. iv 12 &c. it will be most proper to consider it there. In the land on in that land to wit of Canaan. The country of Moab, a fruitful land beyond Jordan, eastward.

2 And the name of the man was Elimelech, and the name of his wife Naomi, and the name of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion, Ephrathites of Beth-lehem-judah. And they came into the country of Moab, and continued there.

Ephrathites, so called, because this Beth-lehem is either called Ephrath or Ephrathah Gen xxxv 19. Mich v 2, either from Caleb's wife of that name, 1 Chron ii 19, iv 4, or from the fertility of the soil about it, which title may therefore be used here, to show the greatness of the famine, which affected even fertile parts. Of Beth-lehem-judah see the notes on Judg xiii 7. Continued there, to wit, during the famine.

3 And Elimelech Naomi's husband died, and she was left, and her two sons.

4 And they took them wives of the women of Moab, the name of the one was Orpah, and the name of the other Ruth: and they dwelled there about ten years.

Of the women of Moab, either they were proselytes when they married them, which may well be doubted, from ver 15, or they sinned in marrying them, as appears from Deut vi 3, xiii 3, Ezra ix 1, 2, Neh xiii 23, and therefore were punished with short life and want of issue, ver 5, 19, 21. About ten years, as long as the famine lasted.

5 And Mahlon and Chilion died also both of them, and the woman was left of her two sons and her husband.

6 ¶ Then she arose with her daughters in law, that she might return from the country of Moab: for she had heard in the country of Moab how that the Lord had visited his people in giving them bread.

1. Food, so she staid no longer there than necessity forced her.

7 Wherefore she went forth out of the place where she was, and her two daughters in law with her: and they went on the way to return unto the land of Judah.

8 And Naomi said unto her two daughters in law, Go, return each to her mother's house: the Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead, and with me.

Each to her mother's house, not that they wanted father's Ruth ii 11, but because daughters used to converse more frequently with their mothers, and to be most endeared to them, and to dwell in the same apartments with them, which then were distinct from those parts of the house where the men dwelt. With the dead, with my sons, your husbands whilst they lived.

9 The Lord grant you that ye may find rest, each of you in the house of her husband. Then she kissed them, and they lifted up their voice, and wept.

Rest is a quiet and happy life free from those cares, vexations, encumbrances, and troubles which widows are in a special manner exposed unto. She kissed them as the manner there was when friends parted.

10 And they said unto her, Surely we will return with thee unto thy people.

11 And Naomi said, Turn again, my daughters: why will ye go with me? are there yet any more sons in my womb, that they may be your husbands?

According to the ancient custom, Gen xxxviii and the express law of God, Deut. xxv. 5, which doubtless she had acquainted them with before, among other branches of the Jewish religion, where in she did instruct them.

12 Turn again, my daughters, go your way, for I am too old to have an husband. If I should say, I have hope, || yf I should have an husband also to night, and should also beir sons,

Go your way Quest Why doth she dissuade them from this journey and not rather persuade them to go with her, and to embrace the Jewish religion? Ans 1. Possibly she thought such dissuasion might be the best way to persuade them as it oft happens, especially in that sex. 2. She would not have them rashly and inconsiderately to embrace the Jewish religion, in hopes of some advantage from it which she justly thought they would be disappointed of, and withal, exposed to many straits and troubles, and on that occasion revolt from the true religion which would be far worse than never to have embraced it. And therefore she doth justly, and wisely and piously in representing to them the truth of the business and the outward inconveniences which would accompany the change of their place and religion, as also our blessed Lord Christ did, Matt viii. 20.

13 Would ye tarry for them till they were grown? would ye stay for them from having husbands? nay, my daughters, for I grieve me much for your sakes that the hand of the Lord is gone out against me.

Would ye stay for them from having husbands * it is unreasonable for me to expect it, or for you to perform it. For your sakes that you are left without the comfort of husbands or children, that I must put with such dear and affectionate daughters, and that my circumstances are such that I cannot invite nor encourage you to go along with me. For her condition was so mean at this time that Ruth, when she came to her mother's city was forced to glean for a living, chap. ii. 2.

14 And they lifted up their voice, and wept again, and Orpah kissed her mother in law, but Ruth departed unto her.

Orpah kissed her mother in law * i.e. departed from her with a kiss, as the manner was, Gen. xxxi. 28, 1 Kings xix. 20.

15 And she said, Behold, thy sister in law is gone back unto her people, and unto her gods: return thou after thy sister in law.

Unto her people and unto her gods, which she saith partly to try Ruth's sincerity and constancy, partly, that by upbraidings Orpah with her idolatry she might consequently turn her from it, and partly, that she might intimate to her that if she went with her she must embrace the true God and religion.

16 And Ruth said, Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following thee: for whither thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.

I renounce those idols which my sister hath returned to, and I will worship none other but thee, who is indeed the only true God.

17 Where thou dost will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me.

18 When she saw that she was stedfastly minded to go with her, then she left speaking unto her.

19 So they two went until they came to Beth-lehem. And it came to pass, when they were come to Beth-lehem, that all the city was moved about them, and they said, Is this Naomi?

Is this she that formerly lived in so much plenty and honour? Oh how marvellously is her condition changed, that she is returned in this forlorn and desolate condition!

20 And she said unto them, Call me not Naomi, call me Mara: for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me.

Naomi signifies pleasant, or cheerful, or amiable. Mara signifies bitter or sorrowful.

21 I went out full, and the Lord hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the Lord hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

I went with my husband and sons, and a plentiful estate for our support. Hath testified against me, i.e. hath borne witness, as it were, in judgment, and given sentence against me, and declared my sin by my punishment.

22 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter in law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and they came to Beth-lehem in the beginning of barley harvest.

CHAP. II.

Ruth gleaning in the fields of Boaz her deceased husband's near kinsman he taketh knowledge of her, 1-7. He sheweth her great kindness, and blesseth her, 8-16. That which she got she brings to Naomi, and telleth her what had befallen her. She giveth God thanks, and exhorteth Ruth to continue in the field, 17-23.

AND Naomi had a kinsman of her husband's, a mighty man of wealth, of the family of Elimelech, and his name was Boaz.

2 And Ruth the Moabitess said unto Naomi, Let me now go to the field, and glean ears of corn after him in whose sight I shall find grace. And she said unto her, Go, my daughter.

Gleaning was permitted to the poor and the stranger, Deut. xxiv. 19, both which she was, nor was she ashamed to confess her poverty, nor would she eat the bread of idleness, whereby she sheweth herself to be a prudent and diligent, and virtuous woman, as she is called, Ruth in 11. In whose sight I shall find grace, for though it was their duty to permit this, Lev. xix. 9, xxiii. 22, yet either she was ignorant thereof, or thought that, being a stranger, it might be grudged or denied to her, or, at least, that it became her modestly and humbly to acknowledge their kindness herein.

3 And she went, and came, and gleaned in the field after the reapers: and her hap was to light on a part of the field belonging unto Boaz, who was of the kindred of Elimelech.

Her hap was, for it was indeed a chance in reference to second causes, but ordered and designed by God's providence.

4 And, behold, Boaz came from Beth-lehem, and said unto the reapers, The Lord be with you. And they answered him, The Lord bless thee.

They expressed and professed their piety, even in their civil conversation and worldly transactions, which now so many are ashamed of, and call it hypocrisy or vain ostentation thus to do.

5 Then said Boaz unto his servant that was set over the reapers, Whose damsel is this?

6 And the servant that was set over the reapers answered and said, It is the Moabitish damsel that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab

7 That came with Naomi when she came back, for otherwise, as Ruth did not go from thence, so she could not properly be said to come back

7 And she said, I pray you let me glean and gather after the reapers among the sheaves so she came, and hath continued even from the morning until now, that she tarried a little in the house

She said I pray you let me glean, she did not boldly intrude herself, but modestly ask leave of us. Hath continued even from the morning until now, she is not retired through idleness for she hath been diligent and constant in her labours. In the house, not in Naomi's house, as many understand it, as may be gathered from ver 18, 19 but in the little house or tent, which was set up in the fields at these times and was necessary in those hot countries where the labourers or others might retire for a little repose or rest at fit times. Being weary with her continued labours, she comes hither to take a little rest

8 Then said Boaz unto Ruth Hearst thou not, my daughter? Go not to glean in another field, neither go from hence, but abide here fast by my maidens

Not by the young men, to avoid both occasion of sin and matter of scandal. He that shows his pity and prudence

9 Let thine eyes be on the field that they do reap, and go thou after them have I not charged the young men that they shall not touch thee? and when thou art athirst, go unto the vessels, and drink of that which the young men have drawn

That they shall not touch thee so as to offer any incivility or injury to thee. Touching is oft taken for hurting Gen xvi 11, Psal cx 15

10 Then she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldst take knowledge of me, seeing I am a stranger?

She fell on her face this was the humblest posture of reverence, either civil when performed to men, or religious, when to God. See Gen xxii 2, xxiii 3, xlii 6; Matt ii 11, xii 2. Take knowledge of me i. e. show any respect and kindness to me, for words of knowledge in Scripture commonly include affection

11 And Boaz answered and said unto her, It hath fully been shewed me that thou hast done unto thy mother in law since the death of thine husband and how thou hast left thy father and thy mother, and the land of thy nativity, and art come unto a people which thou knewest not heretofore

Which thou knewest not, of whom thou hadst no experience for otherwise in general she could not be ignorant of this people

12 The Lord recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust

Wings, i. e. protection and care, as Deut xxxii 11, Psal xvi 8, xxxvi 7, xci 4. An allusion either to hens, which protect and cherish their young ones under their wings, or to the wings of the cherubims, between which God dwelt

13 Then she said, ¶ Let me find favour in thy sight, my lord, for that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken friendly unto thine handmaid, though I be not like unto one of thine handmaidens

Let me find favour in thy sight, I humbly implore the continuance of thy good opinion of me, though I do not deserve it. Not like unto one of thy handmaidens, a person more mean, and necessitous, and obscure, being a stranger, and one born of heathenish parents, and not of the holy and honourable people of Israel, as they are

14 And Boaz said unto her, At meal-time come thou hither, and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the vinegar And she sat beside the reapers, and he reached her parched corn, and she did eat, and was sufficed, and left

Bread in those simple and frugal times was the usual food of servants and the meaner sort, it least when they were engaged in such works as this which requires despatch, and therefore must be quick in the eating as well as in their work. Or bread may be here put for any food, as it oft is. Vinegar either simple vinegar, in which the poorer sort used to dip their bread, and so eat it in hot countries, as they did not only in Canaan but afterwards in Italy, it being very proper especially in those parts for cooling them in those hot seasons, for strengthening their sinews, &c., or vinegar mixed with other things to make some kind of sauce. Beside the reapers, not with or among them but at some little distance from them, and as one inferior to them, as she had acknowledged before in words, and now sheweth by her actions. Parched corn, a food in frequent use and some esteem with them. See 2 Sam xvii 28

15 And when she was risen up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men saying, Let her glean even among the sheaves, and reproach her not

As if she were rude or impudent in so doing, as otherwise they should have thought. Or, Why did he not rather give her as much corn as she could eat, and send her away? Answer Because he would not have her to eat the bread of idleness but honestly to get it with the sweat of her brow, according to her duty and present condition

16 And let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, and rebuke her not

17 So she gleaned in the field until even, and beat out that she had gleaned and it was about an ephah of barley

An ephah is thought to contain about a bushel. See Exod xii 36, Lev v 11

18 ¶ And she took it up, and went into the city and her mother in law saw what she had gleaned and she brought forth, and gave to her that she had reserved after she was sufficed

Or, that which she had left of her fulness, or after she was satisfied. She did eat as much as she desired of what she had gleaned, and her mother, as I suppose, with her, and the residue she gave to her mother to lay up for future use

19 And her mother in law said unto her, Where hast thou gleaned to day? and where wroughtest thou? blessed be he that did take knowledge of thee And she shewed her mother in law with whom she had wrought, and said, The man's name with whom I wrought to day is Boaz.

20 And Naomi said unto her daughter in law, ¶ Blessed be he of the Lord, who hath not left off his kindness to the living and to the dead. And Naomi said unto her, The man is near of kin unto us, <sup>1</sup> || one of our next kinsmen

And to the dead, i. e. which he formerly showed to those who are now dead, to wit my husband and his sons whilst they were living, and now continues to us, their wives who are now alive. One of our next kinsmen, i. e. one of our redeemers or avengers to whom it belongs to avenge our persons, and to redeem our lands and to marry thee, the widow and relict of his next kinsman as is expressed, Ruth ii 9. She saith one of them not that there were many who were immediately such, but that he was a very near kinsman and one to whom that office belonged, in case of the refusal of one person of whom she rightly conjectured that he would refuse as he did.

21 And Ruth the Moabitess said He said unto me also, Thou shalt keep fast by my young man, until they have ended all my harvest

Both barley harvest and wheat harvest as is said ver 23

22 And Naomi said unto Ruth her daughter in law, It is good, my daughter, that thou go out with his maidens, that they || meet thee not in any other field

Whereby thou wilt both expose thyself to many inconveniences, which thou mayst expect from strangers and incur his displeasure as if thou didst either despise his proffered kindness, or doubt of the sincerity of his affection, and others

23 So she kept fast by the maidens of Boaz to glean unto the end of barley harvest and of wheat harvest, and dwelt with her mother in law

Heb set or continued at home when she had despatched her occasions abroad and did not wander or gad abroad after the manner of idle persons and harlots, Prov vii 11, 12

CHAP III

By Naomi's advice, Ruth lieth at Boaz's feet 1-7. He awaking commendeth what she had done, and acknowledgeth the right of a kinsman tells her there is a nearer kinsman to whom he would offer her who refusing, he would redeem her, 8-13. Sends her away with six measures of barley 14-18

THEN Naomi her mother in law said unto her, My daughter shall I not seek rest for thee, that it may be well with thee?

Rest i. e. a life of rest, and comfort and safety, under the care of a good husband. The question supposeth an affirmative answer. I will seek it as my duty binds me

2 And now is not Boaz of our kindred, with whose maidens thou wast? Behold, he winnoweth barley to night in the threshingfloor

Which was in a place covered at the top, but open elsewhere whether Ruth might easily come. And this work of winnowing corn was usually begun or ended with a feast as may be gathered both from ver 7, and from other instances, wherein they used to do so upon like occasions, and this work was to be in this evening and as some think was done only in the evenings when the heat grew less and the wind began to blow. See Gen iii 8

3 Wash thyself therefore, and anoint thee, and put thy raiment upon thee, and get thee down to the floor but make not thyself known unto the man, until he shall have done eating and drinking

Thy raiment is, to wit, thy best raiment. All this was done to render herself more amiable in the eyes of Boaz. Observe But Boaz could not see her the whole hour as being to be transacted by night. When Ruth. It was begun in the beginning of the night, as soon as Boaz had supped and composed himself to rest, as appears from ver. 4, 7, when there was so much light left as might discover her to him. Secondly, There being a solemn feast this evening, as is said, and she thought, and the master of the feast having invited his labouring people to it, and Ruth among the rest, it is likely that both she and the rest did put themselves into their best dress upon that occasion, as the manner is even at this day, and so he had opportunity enough to see her. Note she herself known unto the man, to wit, not in so familiar a way, as she was appointed to do, so as he might know her, in the sense in which that word is sometimes used.

4 And it shall be, when he lieth down, that thou shalt mark the place where he shall lie, and thou shalt go in, and uncover his feet, and lay thee down; and he will tell thee what thou shalt do.

When he lieth down, to rest or sleep, as upon such occasions they used to do in those hot countries. Thou shalt go in though Naomi and Ruth seem to be virtuous and modest women, and their intent was lawful and honest, yet there seems to be a manifold irregularity in the manner of it. First, It seems to be against that modesty which should be eminent in that sex, and in unmarried persons. Secondly, Against honesty, both because it was an injury to another person who was nearer akin, whose right this was, which Naomi could not be ignorant of, and because it was a preposterous and precipitant method, not agreeable either to the rules of Scripture, or the usage of well manured nature or that decency which even nature requires. Thirdly, Against prudence, for it might have proved the occasion, as of many sins, so of great shame to all of them, and a means to abate his affection from her, which she ought to engage. And though there be some circumstances which alleviate the fact, as the experience which Naomi had of the wisdom and sobriety both of Boaz and of Ruth yet she knew not what the event would be, and that there was something of shamefulness in the thing may be gathered both from Naomi's choice of the night for it as if it were a work of darkness and from Boaz's fear lest this should be known, ver 14. And it is an aggravation of it that this course was unnecessary and she had a plain and likely way, which was directly to address herself to Boaz or the next kinsman, and to require the duty which by God's law he was bound to perform, and this before witnesses, as Boaz did. And her clandestine proceeding seems to have arisen from a distrust of God's providence to bring about what she desired in the ordinary way. To cover his feet, remove the clothes which were upon his feet, thereby to awaken him. What thou shalt do, how thou shouldst carry thyself, or what course thou shalt take to obtain that marriage which belongs unto thee. Only there were some rites to be observed, and circumstances to be done before they came to the conclusion of the marriage about which Boaz would instruct her.

5 And she said unto her, All that thou sayest unto me I will do

The confidence she had in Naomi's wisdom and piety, and true love to her, made her ready to follow her advice, wherein she was the more excusable, because she did not understand the laws and customs of the country, as Naomi did.

6 ¶ And she went down unto the floor, and did according to all that her mother in law bade her

7 And when Boaz had eaten and drunk, and his heart was merry, he went to lie down at the end of the heap of corn and she came softly, and uncovered his feet, and laid her down

Had eaten and drunk, to wit, liberally, as the manner was upon those occasions. See Judg ix 27, Psal ix 7. Isa ix 3 8 ¶ And it came to pass at midnight, that the man was afraid, and turned himself and, behold, a woman lay at his feet.

At midnight, he did not discover her sooner, though she did not uncover his feet, being it seems in a deep sleep, as usual after feasts, and she doing no more than her mother commended her, and using no words or gestures which might provoke his lust, wherein she showed her temperance and modesty, and that what she did was only by her mother's instigation and advice, which plainly appeared from her desire expressed, ver 9, which he knew, she being a stranger, was unacquainted with. And this was the reason why Boaz was not in the least offended with her, but only commends her virtue, without any reflection upon her for this fact. Turned himself, from the place where he lay, he raised and turned himself towards the feet to learn who or what was there. Or he was troubled, or afraid, or wondered; for the Hebrew word being but once used is diversely rendered. A woman lay at his feet which he might understand, either by some glimmerings of light which were after midnight, which discovered her, or rather, by her voice, or out of his own mouth who being asked, told him so much in general, before he made particular inquiry.

9 And he said, Who art thou? And she answered, I am Ruth thine handmaid. Spread therefore thy skirt over thine handmaid for thou art my near kinsman.

Spread thy skirt over thine handmaid, i. e. take me to be thy wife and perform the duty of an husband to me. This phrase is used in this sense Deut xxii 30, xxvii 20. Ezek xvi 8. Luther just because the wife is admitted into the same bed with her husband, and both are covered with one and the same covering. Or secondly From an ancient ceremony of the husband's throwing the skirt of his garment over her head, in token both of her subjection. 1 Cor xi 5 6 10 and appropriation to him being her by as it were hid from the eyes of others see Gen xx 16, and also of that protection which he oweth to her see Ruth ii 12.

10 And he said, Blessed be thou of the Lord, my daughter for thou hast shewed more kindness in the latter end than at the beginning, inasmuch as thou followedst not young men, whether poor or rich.

Thou hast shewed more kindness, both to thy deceased husband, the continuance of whose name and memory thou preferrest before the satisfaction of thy own lust, and to thy mother-in-law whose commands thou hast punctually obeyed, even with thy own hazard in so doubtful an enterprise. Thou followest not young men to seek the marriage either here, or in thy own country as thou wouldst have done if thou hadst not preferred obedience to God's command, before the pleasing of thyself.

11 And now, my daughter, be it not, I will do to thee all that thou request for all the city of my people doth know that thou art a virtuous woman.

Fear not, think not that I despise and reject thee because I do not immediately comply with thy desire. I will do to thee all that thou request, i. e. marry thee, upon the condition here following.

12 And now it is true that I am thy near kinsman howbeit there is a kinsman nearer than I.

13 Tarry this night, and it shall be in the morning, that if he will perform unto thee the part of a kinsman well, let him do the kinsman's part but if he will not do the part of a kinsman to thee, then will I do the part of a kinsman to thee, as the Lord liveth he shall lie down until the morning.

If he will perform unto thee the part of a kinsman i. e. take thee to wife, to raise up seed to his brother, as he ought to do.

14 ¶ And she lay at his feet until the morning: and she rose up before one could know another. And he said, Let it not be known that a woman came into the floor.

Before one could know another, i. e. while it was yet so dark that one person could not discern another. Or before one did know the other, i. e. before they were carnally known to one another. Let it not be known that a woman came into the floor, he takes care to preserve not only his conscience towards God, but his reputation, and here also, among men.

15 Also he said, Bring the veil that thou hast upon thee, and hold it. And when she held it, he measured six measures of barley, and laid it on her and she went into the city.

The veil, or the apron, such as women ordinarily wear, six measures known and usual measure it is not determined how large those measures were, but this the nature of the thing shows that they were no larger than one woman could carry in her veil or apron.

16 And when she came to her mother in law, she said, Who art thou, my daughter? And she told her all that the man had done to her.

Who art thou my daughter? either first, She did not distinctly know who she was, because it was dark, and she calls her daughter only in general as older women call the younger. But he could not easily have discerned who she was, as what her name was. Or, secondly This is not a question of doubting but of wonder as if she had said Art thou in very deed my daughter? I can hardly believe it. How comest thou hither in this manner and thus early?

17 And she said, These six measures of barley gave he me, for he said to me, Go not empty unto thy mother in law.

18 Then said she, Sit still, my daughter, until thou know how the matter will fall for the man will not be in rest, until he have finished the thing this day.

CHAP IV

Boaz goeth up to the gate, call his kinsman, inquire whether he would redeem and buy Ruth 1-5. He refuseth 6-8. Feels the people witnessing and congratulating buyeth the inheritance, and marryeth Ruth 9-12. She beareth Obed the grandfather of David 13-17. The genealogy from Pharez unto David, 18-22.

THE N went Boaz up to the gate, and sat down there and behold, the kinsman of whom Boaz spake came by, unto whom he said, Ho, such a one! turn aside, sit down here. And he turned aside, and sat down.

The gate, the place where controversies were decided, and the people assembled, and where they used to go out and come in to the town, where he was most likely to find his kinsman. Ho such a one! doubtless Boaz both knew his name, and called him by it, but it is omitted by the holy writer partly because it was unnecessary to know it, and principally in way of contempt, as is usual, and as a just punishment upon him, that he who would not preserve his brother's name might lose his own and be buried in the grave of perpetual oblivion. Sit down here, I have some business of importance with you.

2 And he took ten men of the elders of the city, and said, Sit ye down here. And they sat down.

He took ten men, to be umpires or witnesses between them, for though two or three witnesses were sufficient yet in weighty matters they used more. And ten was the usual number among the Jews, in cases of matrimony and divorce, and translation of inheritances, who were both judges of the causes, and witnesses of the fact. See 1 Kings xxi, 8.

3 And he said unto the kinsman, Naomi, that is come again out of the country of Moab, selleth a parcel of land, which was our brother Elimelech's.

Both Naomi and Ruth had an interest in this land during their lives, but he mentions only Naomi, partly because all was done by her direction, to which Ruth wholly submitted herself, and partly lest the mention of Ruth should raise a suspicion of the necessity of his marrying Ruth, before he had given his answer to the first proposition. Selleth a parcel of land, which she might do because of her poverty, Lev xxv 2.

1 And I thought to advertise thee, saying, Buy it before the inhabitants, and before the elders of my people. If thou wilt redeem it, redeem it; but if thou wilt not redeem it, then tell me, that I may know: for there is none to redeem it beside thee, and I am after thee. And he said, I will redeem it.

Before the elders of my people, before this assembly, that it may be legally and firmly made over to thee.

5 Then said Boaz, What day thou buyest the field of the hand of Naomi, thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance.

The wife of the dead, according to the law Deut xxv 5 &c, Matt xxii 24. To raise up the name of the dead, to revive his name which was lost and buried with his body, by raising up a seed to him, to be called by his name.

6 And the kinsman said, I cannot redeem it for myself, lest I hurt mine own inheritance: redeem thou my right to thyself, for I cannot redeem it.

Let I may mine own inheritance. Either first, because having no children of his own, he might have one and lost one: son by Ruth, who, though he should carry away his inheritance, yet should not bear his name: but the name of Ruth's husband, and so by preserving another man's name he should lose his own. Or secondly, because as his inheritance would be but very little increased by this marriage, so it might be much diminished by being divided amongst his many children, which he possibly had already, and might probably have more by Ruth. Redeem thou my right, which I freely renounce and resign to thee.

7 Now this was the manner in former time in Israel concerning redeeming and concerning changing: for to confirm all things, a man plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour: and this was a testimony in Israel.

For to confirm all things, i.e. in all alienation of lands. So that it is no wonder if this ceremony differ a little from that Deut xxv 9, because that concerned only one case, but this is more general. Besides, he pleads not the command of God, but only ancient custom for this practice. A man plucked off his shoe and gave it to his neighbour, he who relinquished his right to another plucked off his own shoe, and gave it to him. This was symbolic, and a significant and convenient ceremony, as if he said, Take this shoe, wherewith I used to go and tread upon my land, and I will do thou enter upon it and take possession of it. This was a testimony in Israel, this was admitted for sufficient evidence in all such cases.

8 Therefore the kinsman said unto Boaz, Buy it for thee. So he drew off his shoe.

9 And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are witnesses this day, that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi.

10 Moreover Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, that the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place: ye are witnesses this day.

From the gate of his place, i.e. from among the inhabitants dwelling within the gate of this city, which was Bethlehem-judah.

11 And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders, said, We are witnesses. The Lord make the woman that is come into thine house like Rachel and like Leah, which two did build the house of Israel: and do thou worthily in Ephrath, and be famous in Bethlehem.

Like Rachel and like Leah, amiable and fruitful. Those two are singled out, partly because they were of a foreign and heathenish original, and yet ingrafted into God's people, as Ruth also was, and partly because of that singular fertility which God vouchsafed unto them above their predecessors, Sarah and Rebekah. Rachel is placed before Leah, because she was his most lawful, and only intended, and chosen, and best beloved wife. Build the house, i.e. increase the posterity. See Gen xvi 2, Exod i 21. Ephrath and Bethlehem, two names of one and the same place, of which see on Ruth i 2.

12 And let thy house be like the house of Pharez, whom Tamar bare unto Judah, of the seed which the Lord shall give thee of this young woman.

Like the house of Pharez, as honourable and numerous as his family was, whom, though he also was born of a stranger, God so far blessed, that his family was one of the twelve tribes to which all the tribe of Judah belonged, and the progenitor of the inhabitants of this city.

13 So Boaz took Ruth, and she was his wife: and when he went in unto her, the Lord gave her conception, and she bare a son.

Boaz took Ruth, which he might do, though she was a stranger, because the prohibition against marrying such, to be returned to those who continue in the heathenish state, is evident from the reason of it, whereas Ruth was sincere proselyte and convert to the God and faith of Israel. He went in unto her, i.e. had conjugal converse with her. See Gen vi 4. Conception, i.e. strength to conceive and retain seed.

14 And the women said unto Naomi, Blessed be the Lord, which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel.

Without a kinsman, which is understood, either, first, Of the son now born. Or rather, secondly, Of Boaz, for the name of gail, which is translated kinsman or redeemer is never, that I know of, given to the child born, but always to the person begetting him of his brother's or near kinsman's wife. And whereas it is objected, that there was no cause for this congratulation at this time in reference to Boaz, because that was done divers months before this time, it may be replied, that the memory of that generous action was revived upon this occasion, and therefore is fitly mentioned as the foundation of this child's birth, and thus happy effect justly leads them to the cause and original of it, which was this, that Boaz had shown himself to be a kinsman or redeemer, not only in name and title, as the other kinsman was, ver 6, but in truth and reality. The words may be rendered, which hath not made or suffered thy kinsman to fail to thee, i.e. to neglect or refuse the performance of his duty to thee and thine, as the other kinsman did. That his name may be famous in Israel, Heb and his name shall be famous in Israel for this noble and worthy action, wherein he gave so great an example of piety, charity, humility, and self-denial.

15 And he shall be unto thee a restorer of thy life, and † a nourisher of † thine old age : for thy daughter in law, which loveth thee, which is † better to thee than seven sons, hath born him

A restorer of thy life, i.e. of the comfort of thy life, which was in a great measure dead and gone. Hath born him, to wit, a son, the pronoun for the noun understood, which is frequent in the Hebrew tongue. On hath born to him, i.e. to thy kinsman to wit a son which is easily understood, and so the pronoun affix is put for the separate, of which there are instances, as Josh xi 19 1 Kings xix 21; Job xxvi 37, Eccl xxix 3

16 And Naomi took the child, and laid it in her bosom, and became nurse unto it

17 And the women her neighbours gave it a name, saying, There is a son born to Naomi, and they called his name Obed, he is the father of Jesse, the father of David

Gave it a name i.e. they gave her advice about the name, for otherwise they had no power or right to do so. Obed a servant, to wit to thee to nourish and comfort and assist thee, which duty children owe to their progenitors

18 ¶ Now these are the generations of Pharez Pharez begat Hezron,

19 And Hezron begat Ram, and Ram begat Aminadab,

20 And Aminadab begat Nahshon, and Nahshon begat Salmon, 21 And Salmon begat Boaz, and Boaz begat Obed, 22 And Obed begat Jesse, and Jesse begat David.

How can this be a true genealogy, seeing by this means four persons take up three hundred and eighty years, which were between Salmon and David, and consequently every one of them must beget a son when he was very old? 1. It is not certain that each of these was the immediate parent of him whom he is said to beget, for sometimes grandfathers are said in Scripture to beget their grandchildren to wit, by the intervention of their immediate sons whereof instances have been given. And sometimes in genealogies whole generations are omitted as may appear by 1. 2. vii 2 compared with 1 Chron xi 1 and by Matt i 8, which might be done here for divers reasons now unknown. 2. There are many examples even in profane writers both ancient and modern, of persons that have not only lived one hundred and twenty and one hundred and thirty years and upwards, but have been vigorous and have begotten children at above one hundred years old and of women that have conceived and born children at the age of fifty sixty, seventy years. And therefore it is not so in these more ancient times, when men were longer lived and under the law, when long life was expressly promised to the obedient, and in persons of strong constitutions and sober conversations, such as some of these are known to have been, and the others may justly be presumed to be such. It is not strange, nor in the least incredible

THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL,

OTHERWISE CALLED

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE KINGS

THE ARGUMENT

It is not certainly known who was the penman of the Book, or whether it was written by one or more hands, nor is it of any great importance for since there are sufficient evidences that God was the chief author of it, it matters not who was the instrument. As when it appears that such a thing was really an act of parliament or of the council table it is not considerable who was the clerk or which the pen that wrote it. And this is the less material in such historical books, wherein there is but little which concerneth the foundation of faith and good life, and therefore it was not necessary to name the writer of them. It may abundantly suffice that there were in these times divers prophets and holy men of God, as Samuel, and Nathan and Gad and David himself, who might each of them write some part of this and the following book. But if any man will out of perverseness doubt or deny that these wrote it, yet thus I suppose no direct and impartial man will deny that it is wholly incredible that such books should be written in their times and recommended to the church as a part of the Holy Scripture and so received by the succeeding generation, without their approbation, who had so great a power and authority in the church and commonwealth of Israel.

CHAP I

Elkanah goeth yearly up to the feast at Shiloh with his two wives Hannah is barren, Peninnah upbraudeth her, 1—6. Hannah prayeth fervently to the Lord for a son, promising to separate him a Nazarite unto God, 7—12. He thinking her drunk rebuketh her, upon her answer, blesseth her, 13—18. She returneth home with Elkanah, and consecrath, Feareth Samuel, offereth her sacrifice, performs her promise concerning him, 19—28

2 L

NOW there was a certain man of Ramathaim-zophim, of mount Ephraim, and his name was Elkanah, the son of Jerobam, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph, an Ephraimite

Ramathaim zophim, called Ramah ver 19 and here is the dual number Ramathaim i.e. double Ramah, probably her use it consisted of two parts whereof the one might be called the old city, the other the new, both being united

1. 1. 1

1. 1. 1

into one, and the additional title of ropanim which signifies watch-towers, or watchmen may refer either the height of its situation, which made it fit for that use, or that the prophets, who are called watchmen as Jer. i. 17 had a school or college there. In Iphrodote i. e. one of Bethlehem-judah Ruth i. 2, to wit by his birth and habitation, though by his original Levite. Thus divers Jews by nation are called Modes, Flambis, Cristians &c., Acts ii. 9—11, because they were born and bred there.

2 And he had two wives, the name of the one maas Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah and Peninnah had children but Hannah had no children.

He had two wives, i. e. divers other good men had in those ages. And it is probable that he took a second wife, to wit Peninnah because Hannah, who being first named seems to have been his first wife, was barren.

3 And this man went up out of his city yearly to worship and to sacrifice unto the Lord of hosts in Shiloh. And the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, the priests of the Lord, were there.

Yearly to wit, at one of the solemn feasts, which probably was the passover, when he not only went up himself but carried his wife and children with him. Compare ver. 7. Or at the appointed days or times Heb. from days to days, or from time to time i. e. at the three solemn feasts, when he together with all other males were obliged to go to worship God in the place appointed, and at other times, when he as a Levite was to go thither in his course. To sacrifice, not in his own person which the Levites could not do, but by the priest in which sense David, and Solomon, and Absalom are said to offer sacrifices 2 Sam. xv. 8, 1 Kings vi. 63. 1 Chron. xvi. 26. In Shiloh where the tabernacle had long been, and now was set to be xxiii. 1, Judges xviii. 31. xxi. 19. The priests of the Lord were there, or were the priests of the Lord there to wit under their father Eli who is generally conceived to have been the high priest, but being very old and infirm, 1 Sam. iv. 15 and unfit for service his son ministered in his stead being as it were second priest. See 2 Kings xxi. 19. And the clause seems to be added to show that this good man did not run into the vulgar error, of neglecting his duty of offering to God for the wickedness of the priests, of which see chap. ii. 17. 21.

4 And when the time was that Elikanah offered, he gave to Peninnah his wife, and to all her sons and her daughters portions.

To wit, out of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings the greatest part which he fell to the offering and was eaten by him and his friends or gave it before the Lord Lev. xvi. vii. Deut. xii. 12. xvi. 11. and out of this he gave them all part or portions as the manner of the feast used to do to wit.

5 But unto Hannah he gave a worthy portion, for he loved Hannah but the Lord had shut up her womb.

A worthy portion, or an honourable or select part such as the master of the feast usually gave to the person most respected or beloved. See Gen. xliii. 34, 1 Sam. ix. 23. 21. He loved Hannah with a singular and eminent love. Compare Gen. xxxix. 20.

6 And her adversary also provoked her sore for to make her fret because the Lord had shut up her womb.

Her adversary, or her wife's wife or enemy, for so her envy is denoted, and her trouble so much related. Compare Gen. xxxix. 20. 1 Sam. ix. 18. To make her fret, against her husband or a vexation within herself.

7 And as he did so year by year, when she went up to the house of the Lord, so she provoked him, therefore she wept, and did not eat.

At he did so, i. e. either as often as he went and carried them with him to worship or as often as he expressed peculiar kindness to Hannah as was said ver. 5. Year by year, i. e. every year, at the days or times mentioned, ver. 3. When she went up to the house of the Lord. This circumstance is noted first, As the occasion of the contention, because at such times they were forced to more society with one another by the way, and in their lodgings, whereas at home they had distinct apartments, where they might be asunder, and then her husband's extraordinary love and kindness was showed to Hannah, whereby Peninnah was the more exasperated; then also Hannah prayed earnestly for a child, which hitherto she had done in vain, and thus possibly she reproached her with. Secondly, As the aggravation of her sin, that when she came to worship God, and to offer sacrifices, when she should have been reconciled even to her enemies, Matt. v. 23, 24 she did quarrel with so near a relation. Did not eat, either little, or rather nothing at all as being overwhelmed with grief and therefore unfit to eat of that sacred food, according to Deut. xii. 7.

8 Then said Elikanah her husband to her, Hannah, why weepest thou? and why eatest thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? am not I better to thee than ten sons?

Oughtest thou not to value my hearty love to thee, more than the having of as many sons as Peninnah hath? She would willingly change conditions with thee.

9 ¶ So Hannah rose up after they had eaten in Shiloh and after they had drunk. Now Eli the priest sat upon a seat by a post of the temple of the Lord.

After they had eaten, i. e. Elikanah and his company except Hannah. Or she, for though at first she sat at nothing yet upon her husband's invitation and encouragement she might eat afterwards though the former may seem more probable. Upon a seat or throne, for it is manifest it was an exalted higher than ordinary, chap. ix. 18. Here he might sit either as the judge, or rather as high priest to hear or answer such as came to him for advice, and to inspect and direct the worship of God as need was. By a post of the temple, i. e. of the tabernacle, which is called the temple here and chap. iii. 2. 2 Sam. xxii. 7, Psal. xxviii. 6. In the contrary, the temple is called the tabernacle, Lev. x. 20, 1 Sam. ii. 6. And although this tabernacle was but a tent yet it was supported by boards and posts, and especially at the entrance by which Eli sat even by the entrance into the outward court otherwise he could not have seen Hannah. See more on chap. iii. 15.

10 And she was in bitterness of soul, and prayed unto the Lord, and wept sore.

She was in bitterness of soul, i. e. oppressed with grief. At that phrase is used, Job vii. 11, & i. 1, Ruth i. 20.

11 And she vowed a vow, and said, O Lord of hosts if thou wilt indeed look on the affliction of thine handmaid, and remember me, and not forget thine handmaid but wilt give unto thine handmaid a man child, then I will give him unto the Lord all the days of his life and there shall no razor come upon his head.

She vowed a vow, knowing that her husband would not willingly consent to it otherwise she had not power to do it. If thou wilt indeed look on, to wit, favourably, so as to remove it. The affliction, i. e. the barrenness and upon which attends it. Give him unto the Lord, i. e. consecrate him to God's service in his temple as far as in me lies, if he had my blessing he might not do it. All the days of his life, not only from his twenty fifth to his fiftieth year, all the Levites, and so he himself were obliged by God Num. iv. 3, vii. 21, but for his whole time, which is still to be understood with a reservation of God's right which his vow must give place to as indeed it did, for God called him to be a prophet and a general of the army, and a judge. There shall no razor come upon his head, i. e. he shall be perpetual Nazirite, for under this one rule, as the chief of the rest are contained, as elsewhere the whole Mosaic law is understood, under the title of circumcision.

+ Heb. multiplied to pray

12 And it came to pass as she continued praying before the Lord, that Eli marked her mouth

As she continued praying Heb multiplied to pray By which it appears that she said much more than is here expressed. And the like you are to judge of the prayers and petitions of other holy persons recorded in Scripture, which gives us only the sum and substance of them, which consideration may help us much in the understanding of some passages of the Bible Her mouth, i.e. the motion of her lips as it follows

13 Now Hannah, she spake in her heart, only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard therefore Eli thought she had been drunken

Her voice was not heard, partly to avoid the suspicion of vain-glory, partly, because she would not have others acquainted with her hairiness which was matter of reproach, and partly, because she would not disturb others who at this solemn feast were probably employed there in the same work I thought she had been drunken because of the multitude of her words, and those uncouth gestures and motions of her face and body which the vehemency of her passion, and her fervency in prayer, caused in her, as it doth frequently in others, and because she was but newly come from a feast wherein the manner was to eat and drink liberally, (though not to excess) which he knew very well both from the general custom of that season and from the time of the day

14 And Eli said unto her, How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy wine from thee

Come not before the Lord in this drunkenness, but go and sleep it out, and repent of this thy sin

15 And Hannah answered and said, No, my lord, I am a woman of a sorrowful spirit I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have poured out my soul before the Lord

I am a woman, in whom drunkenness is most abominable so that the Romans punished it with death therefore judge me not so severely Of a sorrowful spirit and therefore not likely to give up myself to drink and pollity and far from that merry temper which drunkards have I am drunk with affliction not with wine as he said Isai 21 I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink to wit, this day see above ver 7, 8 I have poured out my soul, have been breathing forth the griefs and sorrows and desires of my soul The like phrase is Job xxx 16 Psal lxxviii 8, cxlii 2

16 Count not thine handmaid for a daughter of Belial for out of the abundance of my complaint and grief have I spoken hitherto

For a daughter of Belial, for such a wicked monster as a drunken woman is The oppression of my spirits hath forced me to speak, and that so liberally at this time for the relief of my sinking heart

17 Then Eli answered and said, Go in peace and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of him

Go in peace, I recall my censure and give thee my blessing, and wish thee peace i.e. a quiet and composed mind, free from whatsoever it is that grieves and oppresses thee, and withal, good success and prosperity in what thou desirest, for peace is a very comprehensive word among the Hebrews Grant or will grant, for it may be either a prayer or a prediction, which he might deliver, either from the consideration of God's known goodness and readiness to hear prayers, or he might be directed to say so by a special instinct of God's Spirit, which sometimes was given to the high priests, even when they were wicked men as John xi 51, and much more when they were holy men as Eli was

And some add, that he was a prophet

18 And she said, Let thine handmaid find grace in thy sight So the woman

2 i 2

went her way, and did eat, and her countenance was no more sad

Grace in thy sight, that favourable opinion, and good will, and gracious prayer, which thou hast expressed on my behalf, be pleased to continue toward me Her countenance was no more sad, her heart being cheered by the priest's comfortable words and especially by God's Spirit setting them home upon her, and assuring her that both his and her prayers should be heard it quickly appeared in her countenance Heb her indignation, or vexation, (as the word face is sometimes understood, as Gen xxxii 20, Psal xxi. 9, xxxiv 16,) was no more, i.e. it vanished away

19 ¶ And they rose up in the morning early, and worshipped before the Lord, and returned, and came to their house to Ramah and Elkanah knew Hannah his wife, and the Lord remembered her

They rose up in the morning early, partly for their journey, and partly for prayer as it follows for which this was a very fit and usual time Psal v 3, cxix 147. Remembered her, i.e. manifested his remembrance of her by the effect

20 Wherefore it came to pass, when the time was come about after Hannah had conceived that she bare a son, and called his name Samuel, saying, Because I have asked him of the Lord

So the sense is When the usual time from the conception to the birth was past she brought forth her son Heb in or after the revolut on or expiration of some days, Hannah conceived and in due time bare a son So the meaning is That although her husband knew her conjugally at his return and God was mindful of her and intended in his time to give her his blessing yet she did not conceive at first but after some days or time afterwards And called, i.e. she called not doubting of her husband's consent to the name The names of children were given to them sometimes by the fathers and sometimes by the mothers See Gen iv 1, 26, v 29, xxi 3, xix 37, 38 &c

21 And the man Elkanah, and all his house, went up to offer unto the Lord the yearly sacrifice, and his vow

All his house i.e. his wife Peninah, and his children, which sometimes called a man's house in Scripture, Hannah only and her child excepted as it here follows The yearly sacrifice, that solemn sacrifice which was offered up once every year probably the paschal lamb which is oft called a sacrifice Exod xii 27, xxxiv 25 And his vow by which it appears though it was not expressed before that he heard and consented to her vow, which was necessary to make it obligatory, Numb xxx, and that he added a vow of his own, of some singular sacrifice to be offered that God answered his prayers

22 But Hannah went not up, for she said unto her husband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will bring him, that he may appear before the Lord and there abide for ever

Hannah went not up, to wit, at that sacred anniversary feast to which he went up before, but now did not, because she could not get with satisfaction to her mind and conscience appear before the Lord empty, or without paying her vow, nor bring her child thither to God, and then carry him away from God to her own house Nor did she sin by not going up, for the women were not obliged to go up at the solemn feasts, but the men only, Exod xxxii 17 Until the child be weaned, not only from the breast and the milk, which was done within two or three years at most, but also from the mother's knee and care, and from childish food, till the child be something grown up, and fit to do some service in the tabernacle, for it seems, that as soon as he was brought up, he worshipped God, ver 28 and presently offered ministered to Eli, 1 Sam ii 11 And this may further appear from the very nature of the vow which must needs design a service and an advantage to the tabernacle, and not a burden and encumbrance, as it would have been if a young child had been brought up to it, and left upon it that he may appear before the Lord and there abide for ever, that when once he is presented to the Lord he may continue in his service as long as he liveth, as is said, ver 28

23 And Elkanah her husband said unto her, Do what seemeth thee good, tarry until thou have weaned him, 'only the Lord establish his word. So the woman abode, and gave her son suck until she weaned him.

The Lord established his word, either first The word of God made known to them by Eli, above ver 17, which being delivered by God through priest, and that in answer to her and her wife's prayers he took to be a kind of oracle sent from God. But that word was already fulfilled in the birth of Elkanah. Or secondly Some other word or message from God to Elkanah or his wife concerning Samuel for such revelation were frequent in those ages of the church, and were oft vouch'd by God, concerning such children as were extraordinary persons, or in a special manner devoted to God as concerning Isaac, Gen xiii and Samson, Judges xiii and John Baptist Luke i 13, 14, &c. and others. And so it might be here, though it were not mentioned before, there being many such things in Scripture omitted in their proper places which afterwards are expressed or implied upon other occasions. Or rather thirdly, It may be rendered his matter in thing i.e. the business concerning the child that which thou hast promised or vowed concerning him, that he may grow up and be accepted and employed by God in his service, and that he, when he is fully grown may not break thy vow but confirm it.

24 And when she had weaned him, she took him up with her with three bullocks, and one ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine, and brought him unto the house of the Lord in Shiloh and the child was young.

Three bullocks either first One to be offered at that time the other two presented to the priest whether for his own use or to be offered afterwards, as he saw fit. Or secondly One for a burnt offering the second for a sin offering the third for a peace offering, of which they might all use together, for all these sorts seem expedient for this work and time. One ephah of flour, for the meat offering, before me to the principal sanctities, which to each bullock were three tenth deals or three tenth parts of an ephah as appears from Numb xv 9 xxxiii 12, and so nine homers or nine parts of the ephah were spent and the tenth part was either a separate meat offering or given to the priest. A bottle of wine for drink offering according to the manner.

25 And they slew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli.

Bullock either first One of the three at the present receiving thereof for the future. Or secondly The three bullocks mentioned ver 24 to which the article here added in the Hebrew, seems manifestly to relate there being no one bullock there mentioned to which it can belong. And as it is only an enclitic of the singular number for the plural, which is frequent.

26 And she said, Oh my lord, 'as thy soul liveth, my lord I am the woman that stood by thee here praying unto the Lord.

Oh my lord a familiar and very favourable attestation. As thy soul liveth i.e. as I form of an oath is Gen xli 15 I Sam xvi 5, &c. as surely as thou livest which assurances are necessary, because thus was some years after it was quite forgotten by him.

27 For this child I prayed, and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him.

28 Therefore also I have lent him to the Lord; as long as he liveth (he shall be lent to the Lord. And he worshipped the Lord there.

I have lent him to the Lord, or, given him, &c. i.e. do now give or offer him, for she did not lend him for a time, with a purpose or right to require him again. The words may be rendered thus, And I also asked him, or made myself to ask him (a usual Hebrewism,) for the Lord, i.e. I prayed for this child, not only for myself, and to take away my reproach, but especially that I might have a child to serve and devote to the Lord. And so the following words, as long as he liveth, are not to be joined with this foregoing clause, but with those which come next after them, and that whole clause may be thus rendered, as a consequent upon the former. And, or therefore all the days in which he is or shall be, he is or shall be lent or given to the Lord, or, as one begged for the Lord and for his service and therefore justly given to him. He shall be lent, or rendered, or used as one given in my prayer, for this was the condition of my prayer, that he should be the Lord's. He worshipped, not Eli who is not mentioned but ver 25, and then only passively not as speaking or doing any thing, nor Elkanah, of whom here is no mention, but young Samuel who is the subject spoken of in this and the foregoing verse, and who was capable of worshipping God in some sort at least with external adoration, of which see ver 22. And so the particle there is emphatic, signifying that hereby he entered himself into the worship and service of God in that place, to which he was devoted by his parents, and now did devote himself.

CHAP II

Hannah's song, 1—10. Samuel ministers before the Lord. 11. His sons are weaned, 12—17. Hannah beareth more children, 20, 21. Eli reprimands his sons but unavailingly, 22. God by a prophet foretelleth the destruction of Eli's house, 27.

AND Hannah prayed and said, My heart rejoiceth in the Lord, 'mine horn is exalted in the Lord. my mouth is enlarged over mine enemies, because I rejoice in thy salvation.

Hannah prayed, i.e. praised God, which is a part of prayer Col iv 2 1 Tim ii 1 so it is a synecdochical expression. My heart rejoiceth, or, leapeth for joy, for the words note not only inward joy but also the outward demonstrations of it. In the Lord as the author and minister of my joy, that he hath heard my prayer, and accepted my son for his service. Mine horn is exalted, my strength and glory (which are oft signified by a horn 1 Pet i xxxix 17, 24 xxi 10) are advanced and manifested to my vindication, and the confusion of mine enemies. My mouth is enlarged, i.e. opened wide to pour forth abundant praises to God and to give a full answer to all the reproaches of mine adversaries, whereas before it was shut through grief and confusion. Over mine enemies i.e. more than theirs, or so as to get the victory over them as she saith afterwards. Here she manifests her great prudence, and piety, and modesty, that she doth it in name of the Lord but only her i.e. mine in the general. Because I rejoice in thy salvation, because the matter of my joy is not trivial or worldly thing but that strange and glorious salvation or deliverance which thou hast given me from my own oppressing care and grief and from the insolencies and reproaches of mine enemies in giving me a son, and such a son as this who shall be serviceable to God and to his people in helping them against their enemies, which she presaged as may be guessed from ver 10.

2 'There is none holy as the Lord, for there is none beside thee: neither is there any rock like our God.

There is none holy as the Lord, none so perfectly, unchangeably, and constantly holy, as God hath showed himself to be in this act of grace to me whereby he hath both checked the proud and mighty, and pleaded the cause of his afflicted servant that trusted in him, and also fulfilled his promise in giving me a son whom he hath sanctified by his grace to his service, all which are the proper effects of God's holiness. There is none beside thee, not only none as so holy as thou art, but in truth there is none holy (which word is easily understood out of the former clause) beside thee, to wit, entirely or independently, but only by participation from thee. Or, as none have any holiness like thine, so none have any being besides thee unless by derivation from thee. Neither is there any rock like our God, thou only art a sure defence and refuge to all that flee to thee, and trust in thee, as I have found by my experience.

3 Talk no more so exceeding proudly, let not farrogancy come out of your mouth for the LORD is a God of knowledge, and by him actions are weighed.

Talk no more so exceeding proudly, thou Peninnah boast no more of thy numerous offspring, and speak no more proudly and scornfully of me as thou hast done. She speaks of her in the plural number, because she would not expose her name to censure, but only instruct and reprove her for her good. Arrogancy, Heb hard speeches as these are called, Jude 15, harsh, heavy, and not to be borne. Or, the old sayings, either the old proverb concerning barren women, which thou appliedst to me, or the old approaches, to which for a long time thou hast accustomed thyself. The Lord is a God of knowledge, he knoweth thy heart, and all that pride, and envy, and contempt of me which thy own conscience knoweth, and all thy perverse carriage towards me. By him actions are weighed, i.e. he pondereth or trieth all men's thoughts and actions (for the Hebrew word signifies both) as a just Judge, to give to every one according to their works, and therefore he hath pitied my oppressed innocency and rebuked her arrogancy. Or by him counsels or actions or events are disposed or ordered and not by ourselves, and therefore he brings many things to pass contrary to men's expectations as now he hath done. He maketh one barren and another fruitful when and how it pleaseth him. In the Hebrew text it is to the adverb and so the words may be rendered thus: His actions are not or cannot, be detected or rectified, or corrected by any others, none can mend his work, he doth every thing best and in the best season as now he hath done. or weighed or numbered his ways are unsearchable. Or thus: Are not his works right and straight who can blame his actions? So to is for hale as it is 2 Sam xii 26, 2 Km xv 26 Job ii 10.

4 The bows of the mighty men are broken, and they that stumbled are girded with strength.

Plus notes either 1 The strength of which they boasted See Psal xlv 6, xlv 9. Or 2 Their malicious and malicious designs. See Psal vii 12 xi 2 xxxvi 11. Or 3 Their violent tongues, which are compared to him that shoot their arrows even bitter words, as it is said Psal lxxv 3 compare Jer ix 3. Or 4 Their persecuting violence, which may well be compared to a bow both because it is called a man's strength, Gen xlv 3 and because children, which are the effects of it and are as it were shot from that bow, are compared to arrows. Psal xxxvi 15. And this seems best to agree with the following verse. They that stumbled are now up or uphold in body and spirit, that had no strength to conceive which was once Sarah's case, Heb xi 11, or to bring forth which was Israel's condition under Hazeckiah 2 Kings xix 2. He girded with strength, are enabled both to conceive and to bring forth, as the church was, Isa lxxvi 9.

5 They that were full have hired out themselves for bread, and they that were hungry ceased so that the barren hath born seven, and she that hath many children is waxed feeble.

Have hired themselves out for bread, through extreme necessity, into which they are fallen from their greatness. It is the same thing which is expressed both in diverse metaphors in the foregoing, and following verses, and properly in the latter branch of this verse. ceased to be such, to wit, hungry, the hungry failed, there was none of them hungry or indigent. Seven, i.e. many, as seven is oft used. She speaks in the prophetic style, the past time for the future, for though she had actually born but once, yet she had a confident persuasion that she should have more, which was grounded either upon some particular assurance from God, or rather upon the prayer or prediction of Eli, which, though it be mentioned after this song, ver 20, yet in all probability was spoken before it, even upon the parents' presentation of the child to Eli chap 1 25, it not being likely that she would sing this song in Eli's presence, or before he had given his answer to her speech delivered chap 1 26-28 there being nothing more frequent than such transpositions in Scripture. And the experience she had of the strange and speedy accomplishment of his former prophecy made her confidently expect the same issue from the latter. She that hath many children i.e. Peninnah. Is waxed feeble, either because she was now past child bearing and unprofit for procreation, or because divers of her children, which were her strength and her glory, were dead, as the Hebrew doctors relate.

6 The LORD killeth, and maketh alive he bringeth down to the grave, and bringeth up.

Killeth and maketh alive, either 1 Diverse persons, he killeth one and maketh another alive. Or, 2 The same person whom he first killeth or bringeth very nigh unto death he afterward raiseth to life. He, who was almost overwhelmed and consumed with grief he hath revived. The name of death both in sacred Scripture and profane writers is oft given to great calamities, as Isa xxvi 19, 1 zek xxxiii 11, Rom viii 36.

7 The LORD maketh poor, and maketh rich he bringeth low, and lifteth up.

8 He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory.

for the pillars of the earth are the LORDS, and he hath set the world upon them. Out of the dust i.e. out of their low and miserable condition as this phrase is used, 1 Km xxi 2, Psal cxvii 7. Compare Job xvi 13 Psal v 5. From the dunghill, from the most sordid place of man's estate. Compare 1 Kings xvi 2 Job xxxvi 11 Psal lxxv 5. Dunghill which the poor are said to embrace Lam ii 5. To move them up, not only possess themselves, but to mount them to their posterity, is both oft happened in the world, or possibly. The throne of glory, i.e. a glorious throne. the pillars either 1 The foundations of the earth which God created and upholds and where with he sustains the earth and all its inhabitants as a house is supported with pillars, and therefore it is not strange if he disposed of persons and things therein as he pleased. Or 2 The princes or governors of the earth, which are called the corners or corner-stones, of a land or people. Jude xx 2, 1 Sam xiv 38, Zeph iii 6 and are called pillars because they uphold the world and keep it from sinking into confusion. See Psal lxxv 2, Jer i 18, Rev iii 12. And these are here said to be the LORDS, by creation and constitution because he advanced them to their state, and preserves them in it, Prov viii 1, 16 and sets the world or the kingdoms of the world upon them as burdens upon their shoulders. See Isa ix 6.

9 He will keep the feet of his saints, and the wicked shall be silent in darkness, for by strength shall no man prevail.

The feet, i.e. the steps or paths, their counsels and actions, he will keep i.e. both uphold that they may not fall at least into mischief or utter ruin, and direct and preserve from wandering, and from those fatal mistakes and errors that wicked men duly run into. Shall be silent, shall be put to silence they who used to pervert the mouths wide against heaven, and against the saint shall be so confounded with the unexpected disappointment of all their hopes, and with God's glorious appearance and operations to his people, that they shall have their mouths quite stopped and sit down in silent amazement and consideration. See Isa. x. 1, Jer. viii. 1, xlviii. 5, 6. In darkness, both inward, in their own minds which are wholly in the dark, perplexed by their own choice and counsels, not knowing what to say or do, and outward in a state of deep distress and misery. By strength shall no man prevail, to wit, against God, or against his saints: as the wicked were confident they should do because of their great power and wealth and numbers: whereas God's people were weak and impotent and helpless. And particularly, Peninnah shall not prevail again to me by that strength which she thinks or thinks to have, from her numerous offspring. But it is to be observed, that although Hannah takes the rise of this song from her own condition, yet she extends her thoughts and words further even to the usual methods of God's providence in the government of the world.

10 The adversaries of the Lord shall be broken to pieces, "out of heaven shall he thunder upon them: the Lord shall judge the ends of the earth, and he shall give strength unto his king, and exalt the horn of his anointed."

The adversaries of the Lord, and of his people, especially the Philistines, who at this time were the chief oppressors of Israel. Shall be broken to pieces, the following words are prophetic of what God was about to do: they who are now our lords shall be subdued. Out of heaven, i. e. out of the clouds or air, which is oft called heaven. Shall he thunder upon them, is wisdom. I Sam. vii. 10. Shall judge, i. e. shall condemn and punish is there verb by a synecdoche is oft used. Of the ends of the land, to wit the Philistines who dwelt in the utmost borders of Canaan, even upon the sea coast. Unto his king, either 1. Unto the judge or ruler whom he shall set up for the protection and deliverance of his people, the word king being elsewhere so taken. Or 2. The king properly so called, and so he propheseth that David should have a king and that there should be great difference between king and king, between the people king Saul whom they would of tumult and passionately desire, by whom therefore they should have but little relief, and God king David, whom God would choose as a man after his own heart, and whom he would sustain and assist so as by his hand to break all his enemies to pieces. Exalt the horn, i. e. increase or advance the strength. Of his anointed, i. e. of his king. The same thing is repeated in other words, although it may have a mystical sense, and respect to Christ the singular anointed one of God, and the special King of his people, whom all the other kings did typify and represent, and from whom they received authority and power.

11 And Elkanah went to Ramah to his house. And the child did minister unto the Lord before Eli the priest.

In some way agreeable to his tender years, i. e. in singing or playing, upon instrument, or music, as they used then to do in God's service, or in honouring the temples or some other way. For I suppose Samuel was not brought to the tabernacle in such tender years as some think, of which see on I Sam. i. 22. Before the Lord, i. e. under the inspection and by the direction and instruction of Eli.

12 ¶ Now the sons of Eli were "sons of Belial," i. e. they knew not the Lord.

To wit, practically, i. e. they did not acknowledge him, as we guard against, and so words of knowledge are commonly used in Scripture. See Rom. i. 28. I Cor. xv. 31. Tit. i. 16.

13 And the priests custom with the people was, that, when any man offered sacrifice, the priest's servant came, while the flesh was in seething, with a fleshhook of the flesh in his hand,

Offered, i. e. presented it to the Lord, i. e. offered by the priest. While the flesh was in seething, for the Lord's part of the peace-offerings was burnt upon it. So the priest's and offerer's parts were to be added.

14 And he struck it into the pan, or kettle, or caldion, or pot, all that the fleshhook brought up the priest took for himself. So they did in Shiloh unto all the Israelites that came thither.

All that the fleshhook brought up the priest took for himself, not contented with the breast and shoulder which were allotted them by God. Exod. xxix. 27, 28, Lev. vii. 31, they took also part of the offerer's share, and besides, they snatched their part before it was heaved and waved, contrary to Lev. vii. 31.

15 Also before they burnt the fat, the priest's servant came, and said to the man that sacrificed, Give flesh to roast for the priest, for he will not have sodden flesh of thee, but raw.

The fat, and the other parts to be burnt with it. See Lev. vii. 31, 32, vii. 31. So this was an additional injury, for he that took should mistake and injure them, they took such parts as they best liked whilst it was raw when it might be better discerned.

16 And if any man said unto him, Let them not fail to burn the fat presently, and then take as much as thy soul desireth, then he would answer him, Nay, but thou shalt give it me now, and if not, I will take it by force.

Take as much as thy soul desireth, we are content to relinquish our parts to thee, only let not God be wronged of his due.

17 Wherefore the sin of the young men was very great before the Lord, for men abhorred the offering of the Lord.

The sin of the young men was very great, because they violently to take away both man's and God's dues, and thus before them, and that with manifest contempt of God and man, and all this merely for the gratifying of their sensual appetite. Before the Lord, i. e. even in the place of God's special presence, where he saw and observed all their misdeeds, which argues the height of impiety and impudence. Men abhorred the offering of the Lord, they neglected and abhorred the practice of carrying out sacrifices to be offered, which they knew would be so grossly abused, and which as they might think, would be rejected and abhorred by God himself, and therefore they would not contribute to the priest's sin, and the corruption of God's worship, but judged it better to neglect the thing than to expose it to the priest's depravation, wherein yet they erred as we see, ver. 24.

18 ¶ But Samuel ministered before the Lord, being a child, guided with a linen ephod.

Ministered, i. e. performed his ministry carefully and faithfully, not corrupting nor abusing it, as Eli's sons did. Before the Lord, in God's tabernacle, or as in God's presence, sincerely and regularly, with God's approbation. Comp. Gen. xxi. 1, 2 Chron. xxxi. 1. Linen ephod, a garment used in God's service, and allowed not only to the inferior priests and Levites, but also to eminent persons of the people, as 2 Sam. vi. 14 and therefore to Samuel who though no Levite, was a Nazirite, and that from birth.

19 Moreover his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when she came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice.

Little coat, suitable to his age and stature, to be worn ordinarily, for coats were their usual garments. See Gen. iii. 21, xxxviii. 3, 2 Sam. xvi. 32, Cant. v. 3, Dan. iii. 21, Luke ix. 41, ix. 3. Knowing that he could not yet do much service, she would not have him too burdensome to the tabernacle, and therefore she yearly provided him with a coat which was the chief and upper garment, and under it his other garments possibly are comprehended

1 Ch. 1 36

As their superior, and God's high priest Eli blessed them in God's name, and they received his blessing by faith, which made it effectual, ver 21 Seed, i. e. a child, or rather children, as the event showed. For the loan which is lent to the LORD, or, for the petition: i. e. the thing desired, to wit, the child, which she, thy wife asked of the LORD, or, for the LORD, as chap 1 28 to whom accordingly she hath given them. And therefore as she asked him not so much for herself, for she seldom sees him as for the LORD, to whose service she hath wholly devoted him so now I pray that God would give you other children, for both your comfort and enjoyment visited, to wit, in mercy, and with his blessing as that word is used, Gen xxi 1, Exod xiii 19. Jer xv 15 not in anger, as it is taken Exod xxxiii 14. Lev xxxi 16 grew, not only in age and stature but especially in wisdom and goodness, as Luke 1 15. Or was magnified, or grew great, famous and acceptably as ver 26 Before the LORD, not only before men, who might be deceived but in the presence and judgment of the all seeing God

22 ¶ Now Eli was very old, and heard all that his sons did unto all Israel, and how they lay with the women that assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation

1 Ch 13
1 Ch 13
1 Ch 13
1 Ch 13

He was very old, and therefore unfit either to manage his office himself, or to make a diligent inspection into the carriage of his sons in holy administrations which gave them opportunity for their wickedness. All that his sons did unto all Israel, whom they injured in their offerings and all manner from the service of God. Assembled or waited, which expression is used of them either because they came to the service and worship of God in the tabernacle which is often called a waiting, or because they came in considerable numbers and due order like to an army. At the door, the place where all the people both men and women, waited when they came up to the service of God. 1 Sam 1 9 12 Luke 1 10 because they could not have admittance into the tabernacle, and because the altar on which their sacrifices were offered was at the door. Hence it is probable that these women were not such as devoted themselves to the service of God and of his tabernacle either by fasting and prayer, &c. or by sewing, spinning &c. which if then there were any such had their stations not at the door but in divers places allotted to them round about the tabernacle but of such as came up to worship God in his tabernacle, as women oftentimes did with their husbands as here Hannah did, and the blessed Virgin Mary. 1 Ch 11 or with their parents. And this expression may receive strength from Exod xxxiii 8 where the very same phrase is used and that when the great tabernacle was not yet built and so there was no occasion for any women to come to the other less tabernacle then used save only to pray or offer sacrifices

23 And he said unto them Why do ye such things? for I hear of your evil dealings by all this people

1 Ch 13
1 Ch 13
1 Ch 13

Such things as those above mentioned ver 13 22 Eli's sin in this matter was not only that he reproved them too gently and generally and sparingly but especially that he contented himself with a verbal rebuke and did not reprove them, as is said chap vi 13 and inflict those punishments upon them of putting them out of their priest's office, and cutting them off from God's people which such such crimes deserved by God's law, and which he as judge and high priest ought to have done without all respect of persons. Fly all this people, that dwell here or come hither to worship

24 Nay, my sons, for it is no good report that I hear ye make the LORD's people to transgress

Words too mild for such diabolical actions. Ye make the LORD's people to transgress, either, 1 The women that by your instigation were drawn to folly. Or, 2 Others who are easily brought to follow your pernicious example. Or, 3 Other persons of pious and honest minds, whom therefore he calls the LORD's people by way of distinction from the children of Belial, who were so highly offended with the great dishonour done to God and to his worship, and with the horrible wickedness of the priests, that upon that occasion they were hurried into the other extreme, and lived in the neglect and contempt of their own indispensable duty of offering sacrifices, because they came through the priests' hands

25 If one man sin against another, the judge shall judge him: but if a man sin against the LORD, who shall intreat for him? Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto the voice of their father, because the LORD would slay them

1 Num 16

If one man sin against another by doing any injury. The judge shall judge him the magistrate shall by his sentence and the difference and both parties shall acquiesce in his determination and so the breach shall be made up. The sense is if only man be wronged, man can right it and reconcile the persons. If a man sin against the LORD to wit in such manner as you have done directly and immediately in the matters of his worship and service wilfully and presumptuously. Who shall intreat for him? the offence is of so high a nature that few or none will dare to intercede for him but will leave him to the just judgment of God. He speaks after the manner of men, who do oft intercede with the prince for such as have injured any private person, but will not presume to do so when the injury is committed against his own person. The words are and may be thus understood. Who shall judge for him? Who shall interpose himself as mediator or arbitrator between God and him. Who shall compound that difference? None can or dares to do it and therefore he must be left to the dreadful but righteous judgment of God which is your case and misery. Because the LORD would slay them i. e. because God hath determined to destroy them for their many and great sins, and therefore would not and did not give them grace to hearken to Eli's counsel and to repent of their wickedness, but hardened the hearts to their destruction

27 ¶ And there came a man of God unto Eli, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Did I plainly appear unto the house of thy father, when they were in Egypt in Pharaoh's house?

A man of God, i. e. a prophet or preacher sent from God. See 1 Tim vi 11, 2 Tim iii 17, 2 Pet i 21. Who this was is not revealed by God, and therefore it is vain to inquire and impossible to determine. Did I plainly appear? did I indeed show such a favour and appear so evidently and gloriously to thee, and for thee and is this thy request? Into the house of thy father i. e. unto Aaron the chief of thy father's house. When they were in Egypt see Exod iv 27 Pharaoh's house i. e. either, 1 In Pharaoh's land, the whole kingdom being as it were, one great family whereof Pharaoh was the master. Or, 2 In Pharaoh's court where Aaron might probably be at the time of this revelation, either to answer to some accusation against him or his brethren, or to beg some relaxation of his labour, or for some other occasion 28 And did I *choose him out of all the tribes of Israel to be my priest, to offer upon mine altar, to burn incense, to wear an ephod before me? and did I give unto the house of thy father all the offerings made by fire of the children of Israel?

Did I choose him, to wit, Aaron thy father? whereby he shows what he meant by his father's house. An ephod, that golden ephod which was peculiar to the high priest. All the offerings made by fire, i. e. all the priest's part of the offerings. He only had the office and he had the whole benefit.

29 Wherefore *kick ye at my sacrifice and at mine offering, which I have commanded in my habitation, and honour-est thy sons above me, to make yourselves fat with the chiefest of all the offerings of Israel my people?

Wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice, using them unworthily, contemptuously, and profanely both by abusing them to your own luxury, and by causing the people to abhor and neglect them. He chargeth Eli with his sons' faults. Honourest thy sons above me, permitting them to dishonour and injure me by taking my part to themselves, choosing rather to offend me by thy communion at their sin than to displice them by severe rebukes and effectual restraint and just punishments, and so prefer them will and pleasure and honour before mine. To make you selves fat, to pamper your selves. This you did not out of any necessity but out of mere luxury. The chiefest of all the offerings, not contented with those parts which I had allotted you you invaded those choice parts which I reserved for my self.

30 Wherefore the Lord God of Israel saith, I said indeed that thy house and the house of thy father should walk before me for ever, but now the Lord saith, Be it far from me, for they that honour me, I will honour, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed.

I said indeed. Once. When or when did God say this. Answer. Either 1. When he made that promise for the perpetuation of the priesthood in Aaron's family Exod. xxviii 43, xxix 9. Or 2. That Eli and all his family had been cut off yet that promise had been made good in the Aaron's family, how then was that promise recalled by this sentence against Eli. Answer. It was recalled and made void though not directly and universally to all Aaron's family, yet to pervertly to Eli and his family, which were wholly excluded from the benefit of it wherein otherwise they should have shared, even as God's keeping of the Israelites out of Canaan and in the wilderness for forty years, and destroying them there, called his breach of promise. Numb. xiv 31. Although the promise of Canaan was not simply made void to all the Israelites, but only to that evil generation of them, or as God's covenant with David and with his seed of which God saith that it should stand fast Psal. lxxxix 28, and that he would not break nor alter it yet is said to be made void, yet 2. To wit, in regard of some particular branches or men of that family. Or 2. To Eli himself, or to his father when the priesthood was translated from Eleazar to his firstborn for some cause not mentioned in Scripture, but not probably for some great miscarriage of some of them. If it be so, and that there is no such promise recorded in Scripture, it may be so replied, That there are many solemn and things noted in Holy Scripture which are not spoken of in their proper times and places as Gen. xxiv of the 21. Hos. xi 1, Luke xi 49. Acts xii 25. So it is so of the place may be thus, That promise and privilege of the perpetuation of the priesthood in Phinehas and his family made to them Numb. xxi 12, 13, namely, upon occasion of his and their faithfulness in their office, which is plainly understood, is now taken away from that family for their wickedness, and

I transfer it to thee and thine, and will put it upon the same condition. Should walk before me, i. e. minister unto me as high priest. Walking is oft put for discharging one's office, before me may signify that he was the high priest, whose sole prerogative it was to minister before God, or before the ark in the most holy place. For ever; as long as the Mosaic law and worship lasted, as that phrase is oft used. Be it far from me, to wit, to fulfil my promise, which I repent of, and hereby retract. Them that honour me, that worship and serve me with reverence and godly fear and according to my will, which I esteem as an honour done to me. I will honour, I will advance them to honour, and maintain them in it. They that despise me, not formally and directly, for so Eli's sons did not despise God, but indirectly and by consequence, by presumptuous disobedience of my commands, by defiling and disgracing my worship and ordinances either by transgressing the rules I have given them, or by their ungodly and shameful conversation, and by making my service contemptible and abominable to others through their scandals, all which are manifest arguments of contempt of God, and are so called as Numb. xi 20, 1 Sam. xii 9, 10; Mal. i 8, and all which were eminently found in Eli's sons. Shall be lightly esteemed, both by God and men.

31 Behold, the days come, that I will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thine house.

I will cut off thine arm, i. e. I will take away thy strength, which is oft signified by the arm as Job xvi 8, Psal. xxxviii 17, or all that in which thou placest thy confidence and security, either, 1. The ark, which is called God's strength Psal. lxxviii 61 and was Eli's strength, who therefore was not able to bear the very tidings of the loss of it chap. iv 18. Or 2. His priestly dignity or employment, whence he had all his honour and substance. Or rather 3. His children to whom the words following here, and in the succeeding verses seem to continue it, who in the strength of parents' see Gen. xlii 3, Dent. xxi 17, Psal. cxxviii 1. The arm of thy father's house, i. e. thy children's children, and all thy family, which was in great measure accomplished 1 Sam. xxi 16 &c. There shall not be an old man in thine house, they shall generally be cut off by an untimely death before they be old.

32 And thou shalt see an enemy in my habitation in all the wealth which God shall give Israel, and there shall not be an old man in thine house for ever.

So the sense is. Thou shalt see, not in thy person, but in thy posterity, (it being most frequent in Scripture to attribute that to parents which properly belongs to their posterity only, as Gen. xxi 8, xxviii 29, 40,) an enemy, i. e. thy competitor, or him who shall possess that place of high trust and honour which now thou enjoyest, (such persons being, through men's corrupt nature, esteemed as a man's worst enemy) in my habitation, i. e. in the sanctuary. And then he adds by way of aggravation, that this sad accident should happen in all the wealth which God shall give Israel, i. e. in a time when God should eminently bless Israel, and make good all his promises to them, which was in Solomon's days, when Abiathar of Eli's race was put out of the high priesthood, and Zadok was put in his place 1 Kings ii 27, 35, when the priesthood was most glorious and most profitable, and comfortable, and therefore the loss of it more deplorable. But the words may be otherwise rendered, as is noted in the margin of our English Bibles. Thou shalt see, to wit in thy own person the affliction, or oppression, or calamity of my habitation, i. e. either of the land of Israel, which I dwell, or of the sanctuary, called the habitation by way of eminency, whose greatest glory the ark was, 1 Sam. iv 21, 22 and consequently, whose greatest calamity the loss of the ark was, for, or instead of all that good wherein with God would have blessed Israel, or was about to bless Israel, having raised up a young prophet, Samuel, and thereby given good grounds of hope that he intended to bless Israel, if thou and thy sons had not hindered it by your sins, which God was resolved severely to punish. So this clause of the threatening concerning Eli's posterity, as the following concerns his posterity. And this best agrees with the most proper and usual signification of that phrase, Thou shalt see. For ever, i. e. as long as the priesthood continues in thy family, or as long as the Levitical priesthood lasts.

33 And the man of thine, whom I shall not cut off from mine altar, shall be to consume thine eyes, and to grieve thine heart: and all the increase of thine house shall die in the flower of their age.

The man of thine, i. e. those of thy posterity. From mine altar, i. e. from attendance upon mine altar, whom I shall not destroy, but suffer to live and wait at the altar. Shall be to consume thine eyes, and to grieve thine heart. Shall be so forlorn and miserable, that if thou wast alive to see it, it would grieve thee at the very heart, and thou wouldst consume thine eyes with weeping for their calamities. So the phrase is like that of Rachel weeping for her children. Gen. xxxi. 15, which were slain long after her death. The increase of thine house i. e. thy children. In the flower of their age, about the thirtieth year of their age, when they were to be admitted to the plenary administration of their office. Numb. iv. 3, then they shall die.

34 And this shall be a sign unto thee, that shall come upon thy two sons on Hopim and Phinchas, in one day they shall die both of them.

This shall be a sign unto thee to wit of the certain truth of the said predictions, and it was fulfilled chap. iv. 11.

35 And I will raise me up a faithful priest, that shall do according to that which is in mine heart and in my mind: and I will build him a sure house: and he shall walk before mine anointed for ever.

A faithful priest to wit, of another line, as is necessarily implied by the total removal of that office from Eli's line before threatened. The person designed is Zadok, one eminent for his faithfulness to God and to the king, who when Abiathar the last of Eli's line, was deposed by Solomon was made high priest in his stead. 1 Kings ii. 27. 35. 1 Chron. xxi. 22. That shall do according to the which is in mine heart, and shall not dishonour or disobey me to gratify his sons, as thou hast done. I will build him a sure house i. e. give him a numerous posterity as that phrase is used Exod. i. 21, 2 Sam. vii. 11, 1 Kings xi. 38 and confirm that sure covenant of everlasting priesthood made to Phinehas of Eleazar's line, Numb. xxv. 13 and interrupted for a little while by Eli and his of the line of Phinehas unto him and his children for ever. And this was manifestly verified until the Babylonish captivity. 1 Zech. xvi. 13, and there is no reason to doubt of its continuance in the same line till Christ came. He shall walk i. e. minister as high priest. Before mine anointed, either, first, Before king Solomon who was anointed King, 1 Kings, i. 39 and before the succeeding kings who were commonly called anointed or the Lord's anointed. As 1 Sam. xii. 3. 5, xiv. 6, 10, Psal. lxxxix. 38. 51. 1 Sam. ix. 20. Or rather, secondly, Before Jesus Christ first Called by this title of Anointed or Christ or Messias (both which words signify only the Anointed,) is most frequently and eminently ascribed to Christ, both in the Old and New Testament, and therefore it is most reasonable to understand it of him, when there is nothing in the text or context which determines it to any other. Secondly, Christ is the main scope and design, not only of the New but of the Old Testament, which in all its types and ceremonies represented Christ, and particularly, the high priest was an eminent type of Christ, and did represent his person and act in his name and stead, and did mediately what John Baptist did immediately go before the face of the Lord Christ: and when Christ did come that office and office was to cease. Thirdly, The high priest is seldom or never said to walk or minister before the kings of Israel or Judah, but constantly before the Lord, and consequently before Christ, who as he was God blessed for ever, Rom. ix. 5, was present with, and the Builder and Governor of the ancient Church of Israel, as is manifest from Acts. vi. 35. 1 Cor. x. 4: Heb. in 3-6, and many other places; and their temple is particularly called his temple Mat. in 1, because all the temple worship was performed in his presence and had a special respect unto him, and therefore the high priest is most properly said to walk before him.

36 And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left in thine house shall come and crouch to him for a piece of silver and a morsel of bread, and shall say, Put me, I pray thee, into one of the priests' offices, that I may eat a piece of bread.

Crouch to him in way of humble supplication. See 1 Kings ii. 26, A morsel of bread, whereas before they were so nice and delicate that my liberal allowance could not satisfy them but they must have their meat raw and fat, &c. above ver. 15. 16, so the punishment is suited to the nature of their sin. Intimation of the priests' offices, into the most other belonging to it. See 1 Zech. xvi. 10. 11. &c. Quest. How could they be reduced to so great straits, seeing, though they lost the high priesthood they still were inferior priests, and had still to those plentiful provisions which belonged to that order. Answer. First, They might be degraded not only from the office of the high priest, but also from that of the inferior priests, and consequently might forfeit and lose all the privileges belonging to their office. Secondly, This might be from the tyranny and violence of some of the succeeding priests of Eli's line towards that other line, which had long stood in competition with them, and had for a season got away the priesthood from them. for this text only relates the matter of fact but doth not express an approbation of it.

CHAP. III

The Lord callth Samuel three times, he knows not God's voice but thinks it to be Eli who calls him, runs to him, who instructs him 1. 9. At the fourth call he answers, 10. God acquainteth Samuel with the destruction of Eli's house 11. 14. Samuel in the morn. surreys it to Eli, at his request. Eli's subversion 1. 28. All Israel acknowledged Samuel for a prophet.

AND the child Samuel ministered unto the Lord before Eli. And the word of the Lord was precious in those days, there was no open vision.

But Eli, a young man, he needed. The word of the Lord, to wit the word of prophecy or the revelation of God's will to and by the prophets. Was precious i. e. rare or scarce such things being most precious in men's esteem, whereas common things are generally despised. There was no open vision, God did not impart his mind by way of vision or revelation openly, or to any public person to whom others might resort for satisfaction though he might or did privately reveal himself to some pious persons for their particular direction. This is here premised as a reason why Samuel understood not when God called him once or twice.

2 And it came to pass at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, and his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see.

In his place, in the court of the tabernacle. He could not see to wit, clearly and distinctly. This is added as evidence of his old age, partly to show God's contempt of him notwithstanding his venerable age, and his preferring the child Samuel before him in the vision, and partly as the reason why Samuel so readily yielded to him upon the first call because his great age made him more to need his servants' help.

3 And ere the lamp of God went out in the temple of the Lord, where the ark of God was, and Samuel was laid down to sleep.

The lamp of God went out, before the lights of the golden candlestick were put out in the night season, or before the morning when they were put out, as they were lighted in the evening 1st Cor. xxi 21, Lev. xxiv 3 2nd Chron. xiii 11 In the temple i.e. in the tabernacle, which is sometimes called the temple, as being of the same use and significance. Samuel was laid down to sleep, not that this happened when he first lay down but whilst he was lying there.

4 That the LORD called Samuel and he answered, Here am I.

5 And he ran unto Eli, and said, Here am I, for thou caldest me. And he said, I called not, he down again. And he went and lay down.

He ran showing his great faithfulness and diligence in the service either of the Lord, or of his master Eli.

6 And the LORD called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I, for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son, he down again.

7 ¶ Now Samuel did not yet know the LORD, neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him.

Either, first, He was not acquainted with God in that extraordinary or prophetic way. Or rather secondly. He did not yet understand any more than before that it was not Eli but God who spoke to him. And this ignorance of Samuel's served God's design, that his simplicity might give Eli the better assurance of the truth of God's call and message to Samuel.

8 And the LORD called Samuel again the third time. And he arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I, for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child.

He arose and went to Eli he persists in the same readiness to obey and serve him and was not discouraged or driven from his duty by his double mistake and disappointment. Li perceived by the consideration of Samuel's piety, of the sanctity of the place adjoining, from whence God had oftentimes spoken, and of the solitude of the place where there was no human person besides himself who could or would have called Samuel in that manner.

9 Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down, and it shall be if he call thee, that thou shalt say, Speak, LORD, for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

Any servant heareth to thee I.e. ready to hear what thou speakest and to do what thou requirest.

10 And the LORD came and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak, for thy servant heareth.

The Lord came before he spoke to him at a distance even from the holy oracle between the cherubims. But now to prevent all further mistakes the voice came near to him, as if the person speaking had been present with him. And stood, before the voice passed by him now the speaker fixeth his abode with him for a time till he had uttered his whole mind to him. As at other times i.e. as he had done before. Samuel's name his name is here doubled to engage him to the more pious and diligent attention.

11 ¶ And the LORD said to Samuel, Behold, I will do a thing in Israel at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle.

I will do a thing those things which are related in the next chapter, which thou shalt see by the Philistines God here ascribes to himself because he was the first and chief cause of it by withdrawing his blessing from them, and by delivering the ark, and thus two sons, and the rest of people, into his and their enemies' hands. Both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle which will be so terrible, that not only those that feel it shall groan under it, but those that only hear the report of it shall be struck with such amazement and horror, which will make their heads and hearts ache. A metaphor from him, who being surprised with some great and hideous noise, such as thunder or great guns, his head is much affected with it, and the sound or tingling of it abides in his ears a good while after it. This phrase is used also 2 Kings xxi 12, Jer xix 3.

12 In that day I will perform against

Eli all things which I have spoken concerning his house: for when I begin, I will also make an end.

In that day, in that time which I have appointed for this work which was about twenty or thirty years after this threatening. So long space of repentance God allows to this wicked generation to make their peace with God, and prevent the execution, as others did in like cases. All things which I have spoken, by that prophet, chap. ii 27. When I begin I will also make an end, though this sentence may and shall be delayed for a season, yet manifest my patience, and invite them to repentance, yet when once I begin to inflict, I shall certainly go on with it, and not desist till I have made a full end.

13 ¶ For I have told him that I will judge his house for ever for the iniquity which he knoweth, because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not.

I will judge, i.e. condemn and punish or destroy. as the word judge is oft used, as Gen. xv 14, John iii 18, xvi 11.

His house, his children and posterity as is manifest by the story, is the word house is frequently taken as 2 Sam. vii 11 1 Kings xvi 29. So the house of David of David is oft taken for their posterity. And to build a house in Scripture use, is to increase their posterity, as Exod. i 21, Deut. xiv 9, Ruth iv 11. Compare Gen. xvi 2, xxx 3. For ever, till they be utterly rooted out, or for a long time as that phrase is oft used. Which he knoweth either by the information of the prophet, chap. ii 27 &c. or by his own guilty and self-accusing conscience. But these and the foregoing and following words may well be and are rendered thus, for this iniquity because he knoweth (both by common fame and by his own observation) that his sons &c. He cannot pretend ignorance, or want of proof of their wickedness, which aggravates his sin. Vile, not only hateful to God, but contemptible to all the people, whom they also brought their sin and offence and God's holy ordinances into contempt. He cursed himself or made himself execrable or accursed, both to God and men. by their lewd and cursed practices they put themselves under the curse of God by such a gross violation of God's commands. Compare Josh. vi 16 vii 12 13. This expression may be used by way of reflection upon him further, because he did not denounce the curse of God against them, nor put them out of the priest's food, as accursed persons although they were so vile that they had prevented their father's censure, and meritoriously cast themselves out, and cut themselves off from the priesthood and congregation of the Lord, which their father should have done judiciously. He restrained them not, he contented himself with a cold and gentle reproof and did not severely rebuke and punish, and effectually restrain them from their abominable courses, nor use that authority which God had given him, as a father, as a high priest and as a judge, or chief magistrate, against them as by the law of God he was obliged to do.

14 And therefore I have sworn unto the house of Eli, that the iniquity of Eli's house shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offering for ever.

I have sworn, which might be done before, though it is mentioned here only. Or, I do swear, the present tense being commonly put for the present in the Hebrew language. Unto his house, or, concerning, as the prefix kenani is oft used as Exod. xiv 3 xxiii 7; 2 Sam. vii 7 Psal. xcvi 11, compared with Matt. iv 6. Shall not be purged with sacrifice is the punishment threatened against Eli and his family shall not be prevented or hindered by all their sacrifices, as they fondly imagine, but shall infallibly be executed

15 ¶ And Samuel lay until the morning, and opened the doors of the house of the Lord and Samuel feared to shew Eli the vision

Opened the doors of the house of the Lord although the tabernacle, whilst it was to be removed from place to place in the wilderness, had no doors, but consisted only of curtains and had only hangings before the entrance instead of doors, yet when it was settled in one place, as now it was in Shiloh where it had been for a long time, it is more than probable, both from this place, and by comparing I Sam. i. 9 2 Sam. vi. 17, and from the nature and reason of the thing, that it was enclosed within some solid building, which had doors, and posts and other parts belonging to it. The vision, i. e. the matter of the vision or revelation put by upon the reverence and respect he bore to his person to whom he was both to be a messenger of such said tidings, fully lest if he had been hasty to utter it Eli might think him guilty of arrogance or secret complacency in his callings, which was like to tend to Samuel's advancement And not being commanded by God to acquaint Eli therewith he prudently suspended the publication of it till a fit opportunity was offered which he might reasonably expect in a very little time knowing that Eli would be greedy to know the matter of that revelation the picture whereof he was acquainted with, and that it would be less offensive and therefore more useful to Eli when he saw that Samuel was not put up with it, nor forward to vent it, until Eli forced it from him

16 Then Eli called Samuel, and said, Samuel, my son And he answered, Here am I

17 And he said, What is the thing that the LORD hath said unto thee? I pray thee hide it not from me. God do so to thee, and to more also, if thou hide any thing from me of all the things that he said unto thee

God inflict the same evils upon thee which I suspect he hath pronounced against me and greater evils too. Or God do so to thee let God deal with thee so severely as I cannot, or am loth to express. So it is a kind of apostrophe as usual in oaths and in adjurations. The same phrase is in Ruth i. 17. Thus he addresses him to utter the whole truth as was usual among the Hebrews, see I King. x. 16, Matt. xxvi. 63

18 And Samuel told him every whit, and hid nothing from him And he said, It is the LORD let him do what seemeth him good

This severe sentence is from the sovereign Lord of the world, who hath an absolute power and right to dispose of me and all his creatures as he pleaseth, to whom I therefore freely submit. From Israel's God who was known by this name of Jehovah who is in special manner the ruler of the people of Israel, to whom it properly belongs to punish all mine offences, whose chastisement I therefore accept

19 ¶ And Samuel grew, and the LORD was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground

Samuel grew, as in stature, so in wisdom and piety and God's favour, and reputation with the people. Fall to the ground, i. e. want its effect or success, God made good all his predictions. A metaphor from precious liquors, which when they are spilt upon the ground, are altogether useless and ineffectual. This phrase is oft used, see Josh. xvi. 15, Josh. vi. 10, &c

20 And all Israel from Dan even to Beer-sheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the LORD

From Dan even to Beer-sheba, through the whole land, from the northern bound, Dan, to the southern, Beer-sheba, where was the whole length and largest extent of the land. See Judg. x. 1, 2, 2 Sam. xvi. 11. Know, both I and Eli's testimony, and particular relation of the foregoing history, to the people that came from all parts, and by succeeding revolutions made to him, whereof mention is made in the next verse, which though placed after, might be done before

21 And the LORD appeared again in Shiloh for the LORD revealed himself to Samuel in Shiloh by the word of the LORD

Or did use to reveal his mind to Samuel By the word of the LORD, i. e. by his word the noun for the pronoun, which is frequent, as Lev. xvi. 15, &c., by his word of command which he chose to deliver to Israel by his mouth, as it here follows, or by his word of prophecy concerning future events

CHAP. IV

The Israelites are smitten by the Philistines at Eben-ezer, 1-2 They fetch the ark from Shiloh, receive it with a great shout to the terror of the Philistines, 3-8, who get courage and a second time beat the Israelites the ark is taken, the two sons of Eli are slain 9-11, which Eli hearing falleth backward from his seat and breaketh his neck 12-14 His daughter-in-law falls in labour, nameth her son Ichabod and dieth 15-22

AND the word of Samuel came to all Israel. Now Israel went out against the Philistines to battle and pitched beside Beth-aven and the Philistines pitched in Aphek

The word of Samuel i. e. the word of the LORD revealed to Samuel and by him to the people, either first, The prophetic word mentioned before chap. iii. 11 &c. which is here said to come or to come to pass, as it was foretold, to all Israel. But the subject of that prophecy was not all Israel but Eli and his house as is evident. Or rather, secondly A word of command that all Israel should go forth to fight with the Philistines. The following words explain it that so they might be in a better mind and pushed for their sins and so prepared by desires for their future deliverance. Against the Philistines to meet the Philistines who having by this time increased the number, after their great loss by Samson Judg. xvi. 30 and perceiving an eminent prophet rising among them by whom they were likely to be united, counselled, and assisted, thought fit to supplant them in the beginning of their hope and design of rescuing themselves from their power. Eben-ezer a place so called here (by anticipation) from a following event chap. vi. 12. Aphek, a city so called in the tribe of Issachar Josh. xv. 53 upon the borders of the Philistine country, not that Aphek in Asher, Josh. xix. 30, Judg. i. 31, which was very remote from them

2 And the Philistines put themselves in array against Israel and when they joined battle, Israel was smitten before the Philistines and they slew of the army in the field about four thousand men

When they joined battle, Heb. when the battle was spread, i. e. when the two armies had drawn forth themselves into military order and put themselves into the usual posture for fighting and began to fight in their several places

3 ¶ And when the people were come into the camp, the elders of Israel said, Wherefore hath the LORD smitten us to day before the Philistines? Let us fetch the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of Shiloh unto us, that, when it cometh among us, it may save us out of the hand of our enemies

Wherefore hath the LORD smitten us to day before the Philistines, seeing our cause is no just, our own just and necessary defence from God's and our enemies, and we came not forth to hattle by our own motion but by God's command delivered by Samuel.<sup>12</sup> This was strange blindness that when there was so great a corruption in their worship and manners, chap. vi and such a defection to idolatry, chap. xv 1. Psal. lxxviii 58 they could not see sufficient reason why God should allow them to fall by their enemies. The ark of the covenant of the Lord, that great pledge of God's presence and help, by whose conduct our ancestors obtained grace. Numb. x 35. xiv 14. Josh. vi 1. In token of the performance of moral duties humbling themselves deeply for and purging themselves speedily and thoroughly from all their sins for which God was displeased with them. And now had chastised them they take no easier and cheeper course but put their trust in their ceremonial observance not doubting but the very presence of the ark would ensure them the victory, and therefore it is no wonder they met with so sad a disappointment.

4 So the people sent to Shiloh, that they might bring from thence the ark of the covenant of the Lord of hosts, which dwelleth between the cherubims and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there with the ark of the covenant of God.

That they might bring from thence the ark, which it may seem they should not have done without asking counsel of God, which they might easily have done by Samuel. Hophni and Phinehas were there, either first in the camp, or rather secondly in Shiloh. With the ark, attending upon it instead of their aged father.

5 And when the ark of the covenant of the Lord came into the camp, all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again.

Partly from their great joy and confidence of success, and partly from their design to encourage themselves and terrify their enemies.

6 And when the Philistines heard the noise of the shout they said, What meaneth the noise of this great shout in the camp of the Hebrews? And they understood that the ark of the Lord was come into the camp.

They understood by information from the Israelites who would readily tell them of it to frighten them.

7 And the Philistines were afraid, for they said, God is come into the camp. And they said Woe unto us! for there hath not been such a thing hitherto.

God is come to war in and with his ark, or they use the name of God to the ark before which he was worshipped as they used to do to the images of their false gods. There hath not been such a thing heretofore, not to our knowledge or not in our time, for the for mentioned removal of the ark were before it came to Shiloh.

8 Woe unto us! who shall deliver us out of the hand of these mighty Gods? these are the Gods that smote the Egyptians with all the plagues in the wilderness.

These are the Gods, they boldly contest the Lord to be higher and more than their gods, and yet against their knowledge presume to oppose him. They mention the wilderness not as if the plagues of the Egyptian came upon them in the wilderness but because the first and secret of all which is the secret pattern to wit the destruction of Pharaoh and all his host happened in the wilderness, namely in the Red Sea which lay in the wilderness on both sides of it. Exod. xiv 18. 20. 11. xx 22 &c., may well be said to be in the wilderness. Although it is not strange if these heathens did mistake and misreport some circumstance in relation of the Jewish gods especially some hundreds of years after they were done such mistakes being frequent. Who shall deliver us in author treating of these matters, is in our good Lucius and others.

9 Be strong, and quit yourselves like men, O ye Philistines, that ye be not servants unto the Hebrews, for they have been to you: quit yourselves like men, and fight.

Quit yourselves like men, since you can expect no relief from your gods, who are not able to resist theirs, it concerns you to put forth all your strength and courage, and once for all to act like brave and valiant men.

10 And the Philistines fought, and Israel was smitten, and they fled every man into his tent, and there was a very great slaughter, for there fell of Israel thirty thousand footmen.

Into his tent i. e. to his habitation, called by the ancient name of his tent. Before they lost but four thousand, now in the presence of the ark thirty thousand to teach them that the ark and ordinances of God were never designed for sanctuaries or refuges to impudent sinners, but only for the comfort and relief of those that repent. How many are not mentioned, either first Because they had few or none. God having forbidden the multiplication of their horses. Dent. xvi 16 and the Philistines then lords and oppressors, having taken away what they had. Or, secondly Because they fled away as is usual in such cases, whilst the footmen were more easily overtaken.

11 And the ark of God was taken, and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were slain.

The ark of God was taken, which God justly and wisely permitted partly to punish the Israelites for their profanation of it partly that by taking away the pretence of their foolish and impious confidence he might more deeply humble them and bring them to true repentance, partly that the Philistines might by this means be more effectually convinced of God's almighty power, and of their own and their gods impotence, and so a stop might be put to their triumphs and incursions, and so their rage against the poor Israelites whom otherwise in human appearance they might easily have molested. Thus is God was no loser by this event to the Philistines were no gainers by it, and I judge, if they considered received more good than hurt by it, as we have seen.

12 And there remained of Benjamin out of the army, and came to Shiloh the same day with his clothes rent, and with earth upon his head.

The usual rites in great sorrows. See Gen. xxxviii 29. Josh. vi 6 &c. 2 Sam. i 2. 11.

13 And when he came to, Eli sat upon a seat by the wayside watching for his son, he sat trembling for the ark of God. And when the man came into the city, and told of all the city cried out.

He sat upon a seat, placed there on purpose for him that he might so receive the tidings which he longed for. His heart trembled for the ark of God, whereby he discovered a public and generous spirit and a fervent zeal for God and for his honour and service which he preferred before all his natural affections and worldly interests, not regarding his own children in comparison of the ark though otherwise he was a most indulgent father, and had reason to believe that they went out like sheep for the slaughter according to Samuel's prediction.

14 And when Eli heard the noise of the crying, he said, What meaneth the noise of this tumult? And the man came in hastily, and told Eli.

15 Now Eli was ninety and eight years old, and his eyes were dim, that he could not see.

16 And the man said unto Eli, I am he that came out of the army, and I fled to dry out of the army. And he said, What is there done, my son?

I am he that came out of the army, I speak not what I have by uncertain rumours, but what mine eyes were witnesses of.

17 And the messenger answered and said, Israel is fled before the Philistines, and there hath been also a great slaughter among the people, and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead, and the ark of God is taken

18 And it came to pass, when he made mention of the ark of God, that he fell from off the seat backward by the side of the gate, and his neck brake, and he died: for he was an old man, and heavy

¶ And he had judged Israel forty years. He fell from off the seat backward being so oppressed with grief and astonishment that he had no strength left to support him. By the side of the gate to wit the gate of the city which was most convenient for the speedy understanding of all occurrences. He was an old man and heavy, old, and therefore weak, and apt to fall heavy and therefore his fall more dangerous and painful. He had judged Israel, he was their supreme governor both in civils and spirituals.

19 ¶ And his daughter in law, Phinehas wife, was with child, near ¶ to be delivered: and when she heard the tidings that the ark of God was taken, and that her father in law and her husband were dead, she bowed herself and travailed for her pains: came upon her

To wit before her time: which is off the effect of great terror, both in women in many other creatures. Psalm xxix 9

20 And about the time of her death ¶ the women that stood by her said unto her, I fear not: for thou hast born a son. But she answered not: neither did she regard it.

Being overwhelmed with sorrow, and so incapable of comfort.

21 And she named the child ¶ Ichabod, saying ¶ The glory is departed from Israel: because the ark of God was taken: and because of her father in law and her husband.

The glory is the glorious type and assurance of God's presence the ark which is oft called God's glory. 1 Samuel vi 8, xxviii 61, 1 Samuel xii 11 of which was the great safeguard and ornament of Israel: which they could glory in above all other things.

22 And she said, The glory is departed from Israel: for the ark of God is taken.

This is repeated to show her pain: and that the public and spiritual loss lay heavier upon her spirit than her personal or domestic calamity.

CHAP V

The Philistines place the ark of God at Ashdod in the house of Dagon, which falls down once and again.

They of Ashdod are smitten with encrods, they send the ark to Gath 6-8. They are also smitten with encrods and send the ark to Ekron, they resolve to return it back to the Israelites, 9-12

AND the Philistines took the ark of God, and brought it from Eben-ezer unto Ashdod.

Quest Why were not they immediately killed who touched the ark, as afterwards Uzzah was? 2 Samuel vi 7. In answer first, Because the sin of the Philistines was not so great, because the law forbidding this was not given or at least was not known to them, where Uzzah's act was a transgression, and that of a known law. Secondly, Because God designed to reserve the Philistines for a more public and more shameful punishment, which had been prevented by this. From Eben-ezer, where they found it in the camp of the Israelites, chap. iv 1. Ashdod, called also Agosus, whether they brought it, either because it was the first city in their way, or rather because it was a great and famous city, and most eminent for the worship of their great god Dagon.

2 When the Philistines took the ark of God, they brought it into the house of Dagon, and set it by Dagon.

Either, first, Out of respect to it, that it might be worshipped together with Dagon. Or rather secondly, By way of reproach and contempt of it, as a spoil and trophy set there to the honour of Dagon, to whom doubtless they ascribed this victory as they did a former, Judg. xvi 23. And though they had some reverence for the ark before, chap. iv 7 &c. yet that was certainly much diminished by their success against Israel, notwithstanding the presence and help of the ark.

3 ¶ And when they of Ashdod arose early on the morrow behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the earth before the ark of the Lord. And they took Dagon, and set him in his place again.

They of Ashdod i. e. the priests of Dagon. First early on the morrow rather to worship Dagon according to their manner of being curious and greedy to know whether the neighbourhood of the ark to Dagon had made any alteration in either of them that it, on had received any damage they might if possibly they could repair it before it came to the people's knowledge: in which they did, to prevent their contempt of that idol by which the priests had all their reputation and advantage. Set him in his place again supposing or pretending that his fall was wholly casual.

4 And when they arose early on the morrow morning behold Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the ark of the Lord: and the head of Dagon and both the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threshold, only the stump of Dagon was left to him.

The head i. e. seat of wisdom: he hands the instruments of action: both are cut off to show that he had neither wisdom nor strength to defend himself nor his worshippers. Thus the people by concealing Dagon's fall before made it more evident and infamous. Only the stump of Dagon i. e. the stump of Dagon, i. e. that part of it from which it was called Dagon: to wit the fishy part, for dag i. e. Hebrew signifies a fish. And hence there open can seem most probable that this idol of Dagon had in appearance a human shape, and in its lower parts the form of a fish, for such was the form of divers of the heathen gods, and particularly of a god of the Phoenicians, (under which name the Philistines are comprehended) as Diodorus Siculus and Lucian both witness though they call it by another name. Was left to him i. e. upon the threshold, there the trunk abode in the place where it fell but the head and hand being violently cut off were flung to distant and several places.

5 Therefore neither the priests of Dagon, nor any that come into Dagon's house, tread on the threshold of Dagon in Ashdod unto this day.

Out of a religious reverence, supposing this place to be a sanctified by the touch of their god, who first fell here, and being broken here, touched it more thoroughly than he did other parts. This superstition of theirs was noted and censured long after, Zeph. i 9. Herein they manifested their stupendous folly, both in making a perpetual monument of their own and idol's shame, which in all respects they should rather have buried in eternal oblivion: and in turning a plume and certain argument of contempt into an occasion of further veneration. Unto this day, when the history was written, which if written by Samuel toward the end of his life, was a sufficient ground for this expression, this superstitious usage having then continued for many years.

6 But <sup>the</sup> hand of the LORD was heavy upon them of Ashdod, and he <sup>destroyed</sup> them, and smote them with emerods, <sup>even</sup> Ashdod and the coasts thereof.

The hand of the Lord was heavy upon them of Ashdod, for their iniquities as by the foregoing documents. He destroyed them, partly by wasting their land chap vi 5, and partly by killing many of their persons as is sufficiently implied here ver 10. Emerods, a disease mentioned only here and Dent xxviii 27 it was in the hinder parts. It is needless to inquire into the nature of it. It may suffice to know that it was a very sore disease and not only very vexatious and tormenting, but also pernicious and mortal.

7 And when the men of Ashdod saw that it <sup>was</sup> so, they said, The ark of the God of Israel shall not abide with us for his hand is sore upon us, and upon Dagon our god.

8 They sent therefore and gathered all the lords of the Philistines unto them, and said, What shall we do to the ark of the God of Israel? And they answered, Let the ark of the God of Israel be carried about unto Gath. And they carried the ark of the God of Israel about thither.

Supposing that the plague was confined to Ashdod for some particular reasons, or that it came upon them by chance or from some bad influence of the air or of the stars, or for putting it into Dagon's temple, which they resolved they would not do.

9 And it was so that, after they had carried it about, <sup>the</sup> hand of the LORD was against the city with a very great destruction, and <sup>he</sup> smote the men of the city, both small and great, and they had emerods in their secret parts.

Or in their hidden parts, to wit in the inward of their hinder parts, which is the worst kind of emerods as all physicians acknowledge both because its pain affords more sleep and keeps them the other, and because the malady comes out of the reach of remedies.

10 Therefore they sent the ark of God to Ekron. And it came to pass, as the ark of God came to Ekron that the Ekronites cried out, saying, They have brought about the ark of the God of Israel to slay us and our people.

Not that they intended this but because this would be the event of it.

11 So they sent and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines, and said, Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it go again to his own place, that it slay us not, and our people for there was a deadly destruction throughout all the city. <sup>the</sup> hand of God was very heavy there.

Throughout all the city, to wit, the city of Ekron during its short stay there. Or in every city to wit where the ark of God came, for it came also to Gaza and Ashkelon and produced the same effects there as may be gathered from chap vi 4 17 though for brevity sake it be here omitted.

12 And the men that did not were smitten with the emerods, and the city of the city went up to heaven.

The men that did not, either of some other plague or ulcer, it may be the ulcers of the emerods, which infected and tormented even those whom it did not kill. The cry of the city, or of that crew where the ark was, and the city is put for the people inhabiting it.

CHAP. VI.

The Philistines consult with the priests how they shall return the ark they advise to send with it for a trespass offering five golden emerods and mice, on a new cart which they do the king tied to the cart, go straightway to Beth-shemesh, which was for a sign to the Philistines 1-12 They of Beth-shemesh rejoice the Levites offer sacrifice for it, 13-15 The people are smitten for looking into the ark, and request them of Kirjath-jearim to fetch it thence into their own city, 19-21

AND the ark of the LORD was in the country of the Philistines seven months.

So long they kept it, as loth to lose so great a prize, and willing to try all ways to keep it, and yet free themselves from the mischiefs accompanying its presence.

2 And the Philistines called for the priests and the diviners, saying, What shall we do to the ark of the LORD? tell us wherewith we shall send it to his place.

The diviners, whose art was in great esteem with heathen nations, and especially with the Philistines and their neighbours the Canaanites and Egyptians. Wherewith, in what manner and with what gifts, for to send it they had decreed before chap v 11.

3 And they said if ye send away the ark of the God of Israel send it not empty but in any wise return him a trespass offering then ye shall be healed, and it shall be known to you why his hand is not removed from you.

Empty, without a present which they judged necessary from the common opinion and practice both of Jews and Gentiles. Return him a trespass offering, then by to acknowledge our offence and obtain his pardon. It shall be known to you, you shall understand what is the cause doubtful, whether he was the author of these calamities, and why they continued so long upon you. Compare ver 7-9.

4 Then said they, What shall be the trespass offering which we shall return to him? They answered, Five golden emerods, and five golden mice, according to the number of the lords of the Philistines for one plague was on you all, and on your lords.

What shall be the trespass offering? they desire particular information because they were ignorant of the nature and manner of the worship of Israel's God, and they might easily understand that there were some kinds of offerings which God would not accept. Golden emerods, i.e. figures of that part of the body which was the seat of the disease, which by its swelling or some other way, represented also the disease itself, which they offered not in contempt of God, for they sought to gain his favour hereby, but in testimony of their humiliation, that by leaving this monument of their own shame and misery they might obtain pity from God and freedom from their disease. Golden mice, which marred their land (as it is related ver 5,) by destroying the fruits thereof, is the other plague affected their bodies.

5 Wherefore ye shall make images of your emerods, and images of your mice that mar the land, and ye shall give glory unto the God of Israel peradventure he will lighten his hand from off you, and from off your gods, and from off your land.

Glory unto the God of Israel, the glory of his power in conquering you, who seemed and pretended to have conquered him, of his justice in punishing you; and of his goodness if he shall relieve you. From off your gods, so speak, either because not only Dagon, but their other gods also, were thrown down by the ark, though that he not related; or because the plural number in that case was commonly used for the singular.

Wherefore then do ye harden your hearts, as the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? when he had wrought wonderfully among them, did they not let the people go, and they departed?

Do ye harden, or should ye harden, the future tense of the indicative mood being put potentially as is not unusual. This expresses themselves thus either because they perceived that some opposed the decree of sending home the ark, though the most had consented to it, or because they thought they would hardly send it away in the manner prescribed, by giving glory to God and taking shame to themselves. As the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts, which they might easily learn, either by tradition from their ancestors, or by the reports of the Hebrews.

7 Now therefore make a new cart, and take two milch kine, on which there hath come no yoke, and tie the kine to the cart, and bring their calves home from them.

Make a new cart, as David did for the same use. 2 Sam. vi. 3, in reverence to the ark. On which there hath come no yoke, partly in respect to the ark, and partly for the better discovery, because such untamed heifers are wont and apt to wander, and keep no certain and constant paths, as oxen accustomed to the yoke do, and therefore were most unlikely to keep the direct route to Israel's land. Bring their calves home from them, which would stir up natural affection in their dams, and cause them rather to return home than to go to a strange country.

8 And take the ark of the Lord, and lay it upon the cart, and put the jewels of gold which we return him for a trespass offering, in a coffer by the side thereof, and send it away, that it may go.

I lay it upon the cart, which God worked at in them, both because they were ignorant of God. Now to the contrary and because they had no Levites to carry it upon their shoulders. In a coffer by the side thereof, for they durst not presume to open the ark, to put the men within it.

9 And see, if it goeth up by the way of his own coast to Beth-shemesh, then he hath done us this great evil: but if not, then we shall know that it is not his hand that smote us, it was a chance that happened to us.

His own coast, or, border, i. e. the way that led to his coast or border viz. the country to which it belong. Then he hath done us this great evil, which they might well conclude, if such heifers should against the common use and natural instinct, go into a strange path and peculiarly and constantly proceed in it, without any man's conduct. It was a chance that happened to us, this evil came to us from some influences of the stars or other unknown causes, which was a weak and foolish inference, depending upon mere contingency, it being uncertain whether God would please to give them this sign, and probable that he would deny it both to punish their superstition and to hinder their hearts to their further and utter destruction. But wicked men will sooner believe the most uncertain and ridiculous things than own the visible demonstrations of God's power and providence.

10 ¶ And the men did so, and took two milch kine, and tied them to the cart, and shut up their calves at home:

11 And they laid the ark of the Lord upon the cart, and the coffer with the mice of gold and the images of their emerods.

12 And the kine took the straight way to the way of Beth-shemesh, and went along the highway, lowing as they went, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left, and the lords of the Philistines went after them unto the border of Beth-shemesh.

To the way of Beth-shemesh i. e. leading to Beth-shemesh, a city of the priests, Josh. xxi. 16, who were by office to take care of it. Lowing as they went, testifying it once both their natural and vehement inclination to their calves, and the supernatural and Divine power which overruled them to a contrary course. The lords of the Philistines went after them, under pretence of an honourable dismission of it, but in truth to prevent all imposture, and to get assurance of the truth of the event, all which circumstances tended to their greater confusion, and illustration of God's glory.

13 And they of Beth-shemesh were reaping their wheat harvest in the valley, and they lifted up their eyes, and saw the ark, and rejoiced to see it.

14 And the cart came unto the field of Joshua, a Beth-shemite, and stood there, where there was a great stone, and they clave the wood of the cart, and offered the kine a burnt offering unto the Lord.

They clave, not the lords of the Philistines, but the Beth-shemites, to wit, the priests that dwell there. A burnt offering unto the Lord, there may seem to be a double error in this. First, That they offered females for a burnt offering, contrary to Lev. i. 3, xxi. 19. Secondly, That they did it in a forbidden place, Deut. xii. 5, 6, into which they might easily be led by excess of joy, and eager desire of returning to their long interrupted course of offering sacrifices. And some think these irregularities were partial causes of the following punishment. But this case being very extraordinary, may in some sort excuse it, if they did not proceed by ordinary rules. As for the first, though they might not choose females for that use, yet when God himself had chosen, and in a manner consecrated the men to his service, and employed them in so sacred and glorious a work, it may seem tolerable to offer them to the Lord, as being his peculiar and improper for any other use. And for the latter, we have many instances of sacrifices offered to God by prophets and holy men in other places beside the tabernacle upon extraordinary occasions, such as this certainly was, it being fit that the ark should at its first return be received with thank-sacrifices and sacrifices, and this place being sanctified by the presence of the ark, which was the very seat of the tabernacle, and that by which the tabernacle itself was sanctified, and for whose sake the sacrifices were offered at the door of the tabernacle.

15 And the Levites took down the ark of the Lord, and the coffer that was with it, wherein the jewels of gold were, and put them on the great stone, and the men of Beth-shemesh offered burnt offerings and sacrificed sacrifices the same day unto the Lord.

And the Levites took down, or for the Levites had taken down, for this though mentioned after, was done before the sacrifices were offered.

16 And when the five lords of the Philistines had seen it, they returned to Ekron the same day.

To wit, when they had seen that prodigious return of the ark to its own country, and the entertainment it found there.

17 And these are the golden emerods, which the Philistines returned for a trespass offering unto the Lord, for Ashdod one, for Gaza one, for Askelon one, for Gath one, for Ekron one.

18 And the golden mice, according to the number of all the cities of the Philistines belonging to the five lords, both of fenced cities, and of country villages, even unto the great stone of Abel, <sup>or great stone</sup>

whereon they set down the ark of the Lord which ~~stone~~ remaineth unto this day in the field of Joshua, the Beth-shemite

Both of fenced cities, and of country villages this is added for explanation of that foregoing phrase all the cities, either to show that under the name of the five cities were comprehended all the villages and territories belonging to them in whose name and at whose charge these presents were made, or to express the difference between this and the former present the emuloes being only five, according to the five cities mentioned ver 17 because it may seem the cities only, or principally were pestered with that disease, and the moor being many more, according to the number of all the cities is is here expressed, the word city being taken generally so as to include, not only fenced cities, but also the country villages, as is here added and the fields belonging to them, so being the parts where the moor did most mischiefe. The great stone of Abel, which is mentioned as the utmost border of the Philistines territory to which the plague of moor did extend, the word stone being easily understood out of ver 11 where this great stone is expressly mentioned as the place on which the ark was set which is also here repeated in the following words. And this place is here called Abel, by interpretation, from the great mourning mentioned in the following verse.

1 Sam. vi. 19
2 Sam. vi. 19
3 Sam. vi. 19

19 ¶ And he smote the men of Beth-shemesh because they had looked into the ark of the Lord, even he smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men, and the people lamented, because the Lord had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter.

They had looked into the ark of the Lord, having now an opportunity which they never yet had, not were ever like to have it, as it is strange they had a vehement curiosity and desire to see the contents of the ark, or whether the Philistines had taken their way, and put other things in their place, and they thought they might now perceive the more, because the ark had been polluted by the Philistines, and was now exposed to open view, and not set put in to that most holy place, which they were not allowed to approach. Of the people, i. e. of the people living in the land of Beth-shemesh, coming thither from all parts upon this great and glorious occasion. Heb. and so also he smote of the people to wit, of or belonging to other places, though now here so the men distinguished from the men of Beth-shemesh of whom he speaks only in general, and indistinctly he smote the men, i. e. some of many of them, and then sets down the number of the persons smitten or slain, either excluding the Beth-shemites, or including them. Fifty thousand and threescore and ten men, this may seem an incredible relation both because that place could not afford so great a number, and because it seems an act of great inhumanity that God should so severely punish those people who came with so much zeal and joy to contribute to the return of the ark, and that for so great a doleable reason. For the latter branch of the objection it may be said, 1. That God, by assuring to be most severe in punishing his own people, is aiming against more knowledge, and warning than others, especially for such sins as immediately concern his own worship and service. 2. That men are very incompetent judges of these matters, because they do not understand all the reasons and causes of God's judgments. For although God took just occasion to punish them for that crime, why I was so severe is forbidden even to the common Levites, but particularly of which see Num. ix. 18-20, yet it is open that the people were at this time guilty of many other and greater misdeeds, for which God might justly inflict the heaviest punishment upon them; and moreover there are many secret sins which escape men of civility but are seen by God, before whom many prayers may be deeply guilty when men esteem innocent and virtuous. And though men should take heed of committing the sins of which God of which it is most truly said, that they are secret but never in vain. And for the former branch of the objection, in many things are or may be said. 1. That the land of Israel was extremely populous. See 2 Sam. xxiv. 9. 2. Chron. xiii. 3.

2. That all these were not the settled inhabitants of this place, but most of them such as did, and in all probability would, resort thither in great numbers upon such occasions as occasion. 3. That all these were not struck dead in the very fact, and upon the place, which would have terrified others from following their example, but were severely struck with some disease or plague, which killed them in a little time. 4. That divers learned men translate a id understand the place otherwise, and make the number much smaller. Josephus the Jew, and the Hebrew doctors, and many others, contend that only seventy persons were slain, which though it seem but a small number, yet might justly be called a great slaughter, either for the quality of the persons slain, or for the greatness and extraordinaryness of the stroke, or because it was a great number, considering the smallness of the place, and the sadness of the occasion. The words in the Hebrew are these, and thus plaid he smote of or among the people seventy men, fifty thousand men, whereas, say they, the words should have been otherwise placed, and the greater number put before the less, if this had been meant that he smote fifty thousand and seventy men. And one very learned man renders the words thus, He smote of the people seventy men, even fifty of a thousand, the particle mem, of, being here understood as it is very frequently. So the meaning is, that God smote every twentieth man of the transgressors, as the Romans used to cut off every tenth man in case of the general guilt of war. On the words may be rendered thus, He smote of or among the people seventy men out of fifty thousand men, the particle mem, of, or out of, being understood before the word fifty, which Bochart puts before a thousand, and it may be thus expressed, to show that God did temper his severity with great clemency, and what is there were many thousands of transgressors, (every one following his brother's example, as is usual in such cases) God only singled out seventy of the principal offenders, who either sinned most against their light or office, or were the ringleaders or chief encouragers of the rest. To which may be added that the ancient translators the Syriac and Arabic read the place five thousand and seventy men, being supposed to have read in their Hebrew copies chamish five for chamisham fifty, which is no great alteration in the word.

20 And the men of Beth-shemesh said, 'Who is able to stand before this holy Lord God?' and to whom shall he go up from us?

To stand before this holy Lord God, i. e. to minister before the ark where the Lord is present. Since God is so severe to mark whatsoever is amiss in his servants, who is sufficient and worthy to serve him? who dare presume to come in to his presence. It seems to be a complaint or expostulation with God, concerning this last and great instance of his severity. To whom shall he go up from us? who will dare to receive the ark with so much hazard to themselves?

21 ¶ And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim, saying, The Philistines have brought again the ark of the Lord, come ye down, and fetch it up to you.

They sent to Kirjath-jearim either because the place was not far off from them and so it might soon be removed, which they much desired, or because it was a place of eminency and strength, and somewhat further distant from the Philistines, where therefore it was likely to be better preserved from any new attempts of the Philistines, and to be better attended by the Israelites, who would more freely and frequently come to it at such a place, than in Beth-shemesh, which was upon the border of their enemies' land, or because they thought they would gladly receive it, being a pious and zealous people; or because it was in the way to Shiloh, its ancient habitation, and whither they might suppose it was to be carried by degrees and several stages, whereof this was one.

The ark is brought to Kirjath-jearim; Eleazar's son is consecrated to be a Levite. Samuel exhorts them to repent, and put away their idols; they obey him. A fast at Mizpah. The Philistines willing to set upon the Israelites, who were afraid. Samuel offereth and prayeth for Israel. God heareth, terrifieth the Philistines with thunder, and their idols are subdued, and the cities which they had taken from the Israelites are recovered. Samuel gathereth all the cities of Israel, and returns to Ramah, there builds an altar to the Lord, 15-17.

AND the men of Kirjath-jearim came, and fetched up the ark of the LORD, and brought it into the house of Abinadab in the hill, and sanctified Eliazar his son to keep the ark of the LORD

The men of Kirjath-jearim gladly embraced the motion as wisely considering that this great calamity was not to be charged upon the ark, but upon themselves and their own carelessness, irreverence, and presumption in looking into the ark. This place is elsewhere called Baalah and Kirjath-barak, as is evident from Josh xv 9 60 xiv 14, 1 Chron xii 6, 7. Etched up the ark, i.e. caused it to be brought up, to wit, by the priests appointed to that work, whom they could easily procure, and undoubtedly would do so, especially having been so lately warned of the great danger of violating God's commands in those matters. In Scripture use, men are commonly said to do that which they order or cause others to do. They chose the house of Abinadab in the hill, because it was both a strong place, where it would be most safe, and a high place, and therefore visible at some distance, and to many persons, which was convenient for them, who were at that time to direct their prayers and faces towards the ark. 1 Kings vii 24, 30 35; Psal xxxiii 2 xxxviii 2, Dan vi 10. And for the same reason David afterwards placed it in the hill of Zion. Some translate the word in Gibeon. But this was in the tribe of Benjamin Josh xviii 28, Judg x 11 whereas this Kirjath-jearim was in the tribe of Judah, 1 Chron xii 6, 7. Sanctified Eliazar, not that they made him either Levite or priest as some would have it, for in Israel persons were not made but born such, and since the institution of Levites and priests none were made such that were born of other tribes or families but that they devoted or set him apart (as this verb sometimes signifies) wholly to attend upon this work. They chose the son rather than his father because he was younger and stronger, and probably freed from domestic cares, which might divert him from or disturb him in his work, or because he was more innocent for piety or piety. To keep the ark of the Lord, i.e. to keep the place where it was clean and neat, and to guard it, that none might approach or touch it but such as God required or allowed to do so.

2 And it came to pass, while the ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, that the time was long, for it was twenty years and all the house of Israel lamented after the LORD

The ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, and was not carried to Shiloh, its former place, either because that place was destroyed by the Philistines when the ark was taken, or may be gathered from this history, compared with Jer vii 12, 14 xxi 6, 9, or because God would hereby punish the wickedness, either of that particular place of Shiloh, or of the people of Israel, by keeping it in a private and obscure place, and that near to the Philistines, whither the gentility of the people neither durst nor could safely come. It was twenty years; he saith not that this twenty years was all the time of the ark's abode there, for it continued there from Eli's time till David's reign, 2 Sam vi 2, which is forty years. Acts xiii 21, but that it was so long there the Israelites were sensible of their sin and misery, ere they lamented, &c. as it follows. The house of Israel lamented after the Lord, i.e. they followed after God with lamentation for his departure and so long estrangement from them, and with prayers for his return and favour to them.

3 ¶ And Samuel spake unto all the house of Israel, saying, If ye do return unto the LORD with all your hearts, then put away the strange gods and Ashtaroth from among you, and prepare your hearts unto the LORD, and serve him only and he will deliver you out of the hand of the Philistines

Into all the house of Israel, to all the rulers and people too, as he had occasion in his circuit, described below, ver 16, mixing exhortations to repentance with his judicial administrations. If ye do return unto the Lord, if you do indeed what you profess, if you are resolved to go on in that which you seem to have begun. With all your hearts; sincerely and in good earnest. Put away the strange gods out of your houses, where some of you keep and worship them; and out of your hearts and affections, where they still have an interest in many of you. And Ashtaroth, and particularly or especially Ashtaroth which he mentions as a god, whom they together with the neighbouring nations did more commonly worship. See Judg ii 13. Prepare your hearts by purging them from all sin, and particularly from all inclinations to other gods. On direct your hearts, having alienated your hearts from your idols, turn them to God, and not to other idols or vanities. And he will deliver you, or, then, upon these conditions you may confidently expect it.

1 Then the children of Israel did put away Baalim and Ashtaroth, and served the LORD only

5 And Samuel said, Gather all Israel to Mizpah, and I will pray for you unto the LORD

6 And they gathered together to Mizpah, and drew water, and poured it out before the LORD, and fasted on that day, and said there. We have sinned against the LORD. And Samuel judged the children of Israel in Mizpah

To Mizpah, not that beyond that, of which Judg xi 11 29, but another in Canaan, where the Israelites used to assemble Judg xi 1 Sam x 17. Draw water, and poured it out, which they did either, 1 figuratively, they drew tears out of their hearts, and poured out of their eyes as it were rivers of water, such descriptions of penitential sorrow being not unusual. See Psal vi 7 cxlv 136. Jer i 1 Sam ix 48, 19. Or rather, 2 Properly, because they are said first to draw it and then to pour it out. And this agrees well with the state of those times, wherein such rites as this were very customary. Now this course they seem to have used either, 1 As a mean or instrument of their purification. So they washed themselves in this water, thereby acknowledging their filthiness and cleansing themselves as the law prescribed. But this seems not probable. 1 Because here is only mention of drawing and pouring, both this water before the Lord, but not of any washing themselves with it. 2 Because this was not a fit time and place to purify themselves in this great and general assembly. Or, 2 As an external sign, whereby they testified and professed both their own great filthiness and need of washing by the grace and Spirit of God, and blood of the covenant, which are oft signified by water; and their sincere desire to pour out their very hearts before the Lord in true repentance, and to cleanse themselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit. Before the Lord, i.e. in the public assembly, where God is in a special manner present as hath been noted before. Samuel judged the children of Israel, i.e. governed them, reformed all abuses against God or man, took care that the laws of God should be observed and executed, and wilful transgressors punished.

7 And when the Philistines heard that the children of Israel were gathered together to Mizpah, the lords of the Philistines went up against Israel.

And when the children of Israel heard it, they were afraid of the Philistines

The lords of the Philistines went up, to wit, with an army, ver 10, suspecting the effects of their general convention, and intending to nip them in the bud. They were afraid, being a company of unarmed persons, and unfit for battle.

8 And the children of Israel said to Samuel, ¶ Cease not to cry unto the Lord our God for us, that he will save us out of the hand of the Philistines

We are ashamed and afraid to look God in the face, because of our great wickedness this day remembered and acknowledged, do thou therefore intercede for us, as Moses did for his generation

9 ¶ And Samuel took a sucking lamb, and offered it for a burnt offering wholly unto the Lord, and Samuel cried unto the Lord for Israel, and the Lord heard him

It might be a sucking lamb though it was more than eight days old and so that law Lev xxiii 19 was not violated. Offered it, either himself by Divine instinct which is a sufficient warrant, or rather by a priest as Saul is afterwards to have offered, 1 Sam xiii 9. A burnt offering wholly burning all the parts of it according to the law of the burnt offerings, whereas in other offerings some parts were reserved. The Lord heard him as appears by the effects, the following thunder, and the overthrow of the Philistines host

10 And as Samuel was offering up the burnt offering, the Philistines drew near to battle against Israel, but the Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines and discomfited them, and they were smitten before Israel

Either by the lightning or thunderbolts or other things which accompanied the cracks of thunder, or by the Israelites who pursuing them to be affrighted and fled away, pursued and smote them, as the next verse mentions

11 And the men of Israel went out of Mizpah, and pursued the Philistines, and smote them, until they came under Beth-el

Quest Whence had they weapons wherewith to smite them? Ans Divers of them probably brought them to the assembly, others borrowed them at Mizpah, or the neighbouring places, and the rest might be the arms of the Philistines which they threw away to hasten their flight, as is usual in such cases

12 Then Samuel took a stone, and set it between Mizpah and Shen, and called the name of it Eben-ezer, saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us

A stone, a rude unpolished stone which was not prohibited by that law Lev xxvi 1 there being no danger of worshipping such a stone and this being set up only as a monument of victory. There is, by which compared with chap v 1 it appears that this victory was gained in or near the very same place where the Israelites received their former fatal loss. Hitherto hath the Lord helped us he hath begun to help us in some measure, though not completely to deliver us, by which way expression he exclaims both their thankfulness for the mercy received and their holy fear and care to please and serve the Lord, that he might proceed to help and deliver them more effectually

13 ¶ So the Philistines were subdued, and they came no more into the coast of Israel, and the hand of the Lord was against the Philistines all the days of Samuel

They came no more into the coast of Israel as they came not with a great host, as it was they did but only molested them with struggling parties, garrisons, as 1 Sam x 5, and they came not, to wit, all the days of Samuel, as

14 And the cities which the Philistines had taken from Israel were restored to Israel, from Ekron even unto Gath, and the coasts thereof did Israel deliver out of the hands of the Philistines. And there was peace between Israel and the Amorites

*The cities were restored to Israel by the Philistines, who, it seems, were frightened into this restitution by their dread of Samuel, and of the Divine vengeance. Object The Philistines had cities and garrisons in Israel's land after this time, as 1 Sam x 5, xii 3. Ans Either therefore those places were not any of these here mentioned, for it is not said that all their cities were restored, but only indistinctly the cities, and those limited to a certain compass, from Ekron to Gath, or some of the cities now restored by the Philistines, were afterwards retaken by them. There was peace, an agreement for the cessation of all acts of hostility. The Amorites, i. e. the Canaanites, oft called Amorites, because these were formerly the most valiant and terrible of all those nations, and the first enemies which the Israelites met with when they went to take possession of the land. They made this peace with the Canaanites, that they might be more at leisure to oppose the Philistines, now their most potent enemies*

15 And Samuel judged Israel all the days of his life

*For though Saul was king in Samuel's last days, yet Samuel did not then quite cease to be a judge, being made by God's extraordinary call, which Saul could not destroy, and therefore Samuel did sometimes, upon great occasions, though not ordinarily, exercise the office of a judge after the beginning of Saul's reign; as chap xi 7 xv 32 33. And the years of the rule of Saul and Samuel are joined together Acts xiii 20 21. Quest How doth the office of a judge agree with Hannah's vow, whereby she devoted him to a perpetual attendance upon the Lord's service. Ans This was not inconsistent with her vow which consisted of two branches, the one more general that he should be given or lent to the Lord all his days 1 Sam i 11 28 which she faithfully executed, he gave him wholly to the service and disposal of the Lord who thought fit to employ him in this way, and if any thing therein was contrary to that vow, could undoubtedly dispose with it as being his own right only the other more particular, that no razor should come upon his head, nor doth it appear that this part was violated, or if it was, it was done by Divine dispensation*

16 And he went from year to year to Beth-el, and Gilgal, and Mizpah, and judged Israel in all those places

Beth-el, either a place known by that name, or the house of God, to wit, Kirjath-jearim, where the ark was. Gilgal, in the eastern border Mizpah, towards the west. Judged Israel in all those places, he went to those several places, partly in compliance with the people, whose convenience and benefit he was willing to purchase with his own trouble making himself an itinerant judge and preacher for their sakes, and partly that by his presence in several parts, he might the better observe and rectify all sorts of miscarriages against God or men

17 And his return was to Ramah, for there was his house, and there he judged Israel, and there he built an altar unto the Lord

*That by joining sacrifices with his prayers he might the better obtain direction and assistance from God upon all emergencies. Object It was unlawful to build an altar for sacrifice besides that before the tabernacle Deut xii 5, 13. Ans This was in part excused by the confusion of those times, wherein the tabernacle and its altar were destroyed, as is most probable, but most fully, because this was done by prophetic inspiration, and Divine dispensation, as appears by God's approbation and acceptance of the sacrifices offered upon it*

CHAP. VIII.

Samuel made his sons judges over Israel; their names, and of government, 1-3. The people and a king. Samuel is grieved, 4-6. God is displeased with the people, but commands Samuel to hearken to them, and to reprove to them the tyrannical government of kings, 7-9, which he doth, 10-12. The people continue in their request God commands Samuel to yield to them, 13-22.

AND it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he made his sons judges over Israel.

When Samuel was old, and so unable for his former travels and labours, he made his sons judges, not supreme judges, for such there was to be but one, and that of God's choosing, and Samuel still kept that office in his own hands, chap. vi. 15, but his viceregent or deputies, who might go about and determine matters but with reservation of a right of appeal to himself. He advanceth his sons to this place, not so much out of paternal indulgence the aid efforts whereof he had seen in Eli, but because he had doubtless instructed them in a singular manner and fitted them for the highest employments; and he hoped that the example he had set them, and the inspection and authority he still had over them, would have obliged them to diligence and faithfulness in the execution of their trust.

2 Now the name of his firstborn was Joel, and the name of his second, Abiah they were judges in Beer-sheba.

In the southern border of the Land of Canaan, where he placed his sons, because these parts were very remote from his house at Ramah where, and in the neighbouring places Samuel himself still executed the office of the judge, sending his sons to reside and judge in distant places, for the ease and convenience of the people.

3 And his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment.

Opportunity and temptation drew forth and discovered that corruption in them which till now was hid from their father, and, it may be, from themselves.

4 Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto Ramah,

The elders, either for age, or dignity and power.

5 And said unto him, Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations.

They feared that Samuel would not live long, and that either by through infirmity and indulgence might leave the government in his sons' hands, or that they would invade and keep it after their father's death, and therefore they jointly make their complaints against them and procure their removal from their places. Thus they are brought low and crushed by those very wicked ways by which they designed to advance and establish themselves. So true is it, that honesty is the best policy, and mightiest means the greatest folly. Make us a king to judge us: their conclusion outruns their promises, and their desires exceed their reasons or arguments, which extended no further than to the removal of Samuel's sons from their places, and the procuring some other just and prudent assistance to Samuel's age. Nor was the intent of their desire a remedy for their disease, but rather an aggravation of it, for the sons of their king might and were likely to be as corrupt as Samuel's sons; and if they were, would not be so easily removed as these were. Let all the nations, i. e. as most of the nations about us have. But there was not the like reason because God had separated them from all other nations, and cautioned them against the imitation of their examples, and had taken them into his own immediate care and government, which privilege other nations had not.

6 But this thing displeased Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel prayed unto the Lord.

The Lord displeased Samuel; not their complaint of his sons, but their desire of a king, as is apparent from the following words, and from the whole state of the story, which was so grievous to him partly because of their injustice and ingratitude to himself whose government, though it had been so sweet and beneficial to them they plainly show themselves weary of, and principally because God was hereby dishonoured and provoked, by that distrust of God and that vain-glory and ambition, and that rich after-changes, which were the manifest causes of this desire, and because of that great servitude and misery which he wisely foresaw the people would hereby bring upon themselves, as he particularly informs them, ver. 11, &c. Samuel prayed unto the Lord, for the pardon of their sin, and desires of direction and help from God in this great affair.

7 And the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them.

Hearken unto the voice of the people, God grants their desire in anger and for their punishment, as is affirmed Hos. xi. 11. Compare Num. xxi. 13, 20, Deut. i. 22, Psal. lxxviii. 20. They have not rejected thee: i. e. not this only, nor principally compare Gen. xxxii. 28, Exod. xxi. 7, Hos. vi. 6. Matt. x. 20. but this injury and contumely reflects chiefly upon me, and my government, that I should not reign over them: to wit by my immediate and peculiar government which was the great honour, safety, and happiness of this people, if they had had wit to know it, or hearts to prize it. And all the infelicities of Israel, under this kind of government, did not proceed from the nature of the government but from the ungodliness and wickedness of the people, which they might be sure, would produce the same or greater calamities under their kingly government. Quest. First, Did not God reign over them when they had kings? Answer Yes, in a general way, but not in such a peculiar manner as he did by the judges, who were generally raised and called by God's particular appointment, endowed and sanctified by his Spirit directed and assisted by his special providence upon all circumstances, whereas all theirs were for the most part contrary in their kings. Quest. Secondly, Was it simply useful for the people to desire a king? Answer No, is upon from Deut. xvi. 14, but herein was their sin that they desired it upon sinful grounds, of which see on ver. 7, and in an impetuous manner, and at an unseasonable time, and without asking leave or advice from God which in so weighty and difficult a case they could not neglect without great sin.

8 According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt even unto this day, wherewith they have forsaken me, and served other gods, so do they also unto thee.

Thou fastest no worse than myself. This he speaks for Samuel's comfort and vindication.

9 Now therefore hearken unto their voice: howbeit yet protest solemnly unto them, and shew them the manner of the king that shall reign over them.

Protest solemnly unto them, that, if it be possible, thou mayst yet prevent their sin and misery. The manner of the king, i. e. of the kings which they desire, like the kings of other nations. He speaks not of the just authority, or the right of their kings, but of their practice, as is evident from divers of the following particulars, which are expressly forbidden and condemned in Scripture, as we shall see.

10 ¶ And Samuel told all the words of the Lord unto the people that asked of him a king.

11 And he said, This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen, and some shall run before his chariots.

He will take your sons to wit, injuriously and by violence, as this Hebrew word is oft used as Gen xx 3, xxvii 36, Job v 5, and so it must be here, because otherwise the king would have no more privilege than any of his subjects, for any man might take a son with his own or parents' consent. And to be his horsemen or and for his horses, for so the Hebrew word ya'ash sam times signifies, as Isa xxi 7, 9, xxviii 25 to ride his horses.

12 And he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties, and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots.

He will appoint him Heb to or for himself, emphatically, i.e. for his own fancy, or glory or convenience or evil design, and not only when the necessities of the kingdom or commonwealth require it, as the judges did. And though this might seem to be no circumscription, as it is here presented but in honour and advantage to the persons so advanced yet even in them that honour was accompanied with great dangers, and pernicious sources of many kinds which those faint shadows of glory could not compensate and as to the public, their pomp and power proved very burdensome and oppressive to the people whose land and fruits were taken from them, and bestowed upon these, for the support of their state as it follows below, ver 11-15. And to reap his harvest at his own pleasure and without their consent when possibly their own fields required all their time and pain. To make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots. He will press them for all sorts of his work, and that upon his own terms.

13 And he will take your daughters to be concubines, and to be cooks, and to be bakers.

Which would be more grievous to the parent and more dangerous to their lives, because of the tenderness of that sex, and humbles to many injuries.

14 And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants.

He will take your fields to wit by fraud or force, as Ahab did from Naboth. And give them to his servants. He will not only take the fruits of your lands, for his own use but will take away your possessions to give to his servants.

15 And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers, and to his servants.

He will take the tenth. Besides the several tithes which God hath reserved for his service and servants, he will when he pleases impose another tenth upon you. To his officers Heb to his counsels, which may be properly understood, and may imply a further injury that he should, against the command of God make some of his people counsels, and take those into his court and favour which God would have cast out of the congregation.

16 And he will take your menservants, and your maid-servants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work.

By constraint, and without sufficient recompence.

17 He will take the tenth of your sheep, and ye shall be his servants.

He shall be as a slave, and deprive you of that liberty which you now enjoy.

18 And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you, and the Lord will not hear you in that day.

Ye shall cry out in that day. Ye shall bitterly mourn for the sad effects of this momentous and cruel yoking. The Lord will not hear you in that day. Because you will not hear him nor obey his counsel in this day. Compare Prov i 21 &c, Jerk vii 13.

19 Nevertheless the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel, and they said, Nay, but we will have a king over us;

They said, Nay, i.e. these things shall never be, these are but vain suppositions to affright us from our purpose. Thus they are not ashamed to give Samuel the lie, of whose modesty, integrity, and prophetic spirit they had so great assurance, as if he had signed those prophecies merely to keep the power in his own and his sons' hands. We will have a king over us, we will have a king, whatsoever it cost us, although all thy predictions should be verified.

20 That we also may be like all the nations, and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles.

That we also may be like all the nations. Foolish stupidity! whereas it was their glory and happiness that they were unlike all other nations, Numb xxi 9; Deut. xxxiii 28, as in other glorious privileges, so especially in this, that the Lord was their only and immediate King and Lawgiver.

21 And Samuel heard all the words of the people, and he rehearsed them in the ears of the Lord.

He repeated them privately between God and himself, partly for his own vindication and comfort, and partly as a foundation for his prayers to God, for direction and assistance in this difficult case.

22 And the Lord said to Samuel, Hearken unto their voice, and make them a king. And Samuel said unto the men of Israel, Go ye every man unto his city.

Behold your duty to your several occasions, till you hear more from me in this matter. For God hath heard your words and will give way to your irregular and obstinate desire, and accordingly I shall wait upon God for the determination of the person, which he hath wholly reserved to himself as for judges so for the king also, Deut xvi 1, and for the regulation of all the circumstances.

CHAP. IX.

The genealogy of Kish. 1. Saul's person, 2. He is sent to seek his father's asses. 3. He travels through the country and finds them not. 4-5. By the counsel of his servant. 6-10. and the direction of young maidens. 11-14. according to God's revelation. 15-17. he consults to Samuel who meets him, entertains him at the feast, telleth him the asses were found, and he should be king. 18-20. Saul's amazement, 21. Samuel gives him the highest place, and a peculiar dish, eats with him. 22-24. After secret communication leadeth him on the way, the servant goes before, Saul stands still with Samuel, 25-27.

NOW there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was Kish, the son of Abiel, the son of Zeror, the son of Bechorath, the son of Aphiah, a Benjaminite, a mighty man of power.

Whose name was Kish. Object. His name was Ner. 1 Chron viii 33, ix 39. Answer. Either his father had two names, as was usual among the Hebrews, or Kish was really his father that begot him, and Ner, the brother of Kish. 1 Sam xiv 51. 1 Chron ix 36, is called his father, because upon the death of Kish, he took the care of his education and brought him up as his own son. A Benjaminite, Heb the son of a man of Jemini, i.e. either of Benjamin or of a place, or of a man, called Jemini. A mighty man of power, i.e. a man of great courage and strength, which tends to Saul's commendation otherwise a man of great wealth. But that seems confuted by Saul's words below, ver 21, and the people's contempt of him, chap x 27.

2. And he had a son, whose name was Saul, a choice young man, and a goodly, and there was not among the children of Israel a goodlier person than he from his shoulders and upward he was higher than any of the people.

And a goodly, Heb. good & comely and personable, as that word is used, Gen vi 2, as enil is put for deformed, Gen xli. 19. He was higher than any of the people a tall stature was much valued in a king in ancient times, and in the eastern countries.

3 And the asses of Kish Saul's father were lost And Kish said to Saul his son, Take now one of the servants with thee, and arise, go seek the asses.

Which were there of great price and use. Judg x. 1. xii. 14 because of the scarcity of horses, Deut xviii. 16, and therefore not held unworthy of Saul's seeking, at least in those ancient times, when simplicity, humility, and industry were in fashion among persons of quality.

4 And he passed through mount Ephraim, and passed through the land of 'Shalisha, but they found them not: then they passed through the land of Shilim, and there they were not: and he passed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not.

Mount Ephraim, a part of the tribe of Ephraim which bordered upon Benjamin, and therefore they could soon pass out of the one into the other, and back again as they saw cause.

5 And when they were come to the land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return lest my father have caring for the asses, and take thought for us.

The land of Zuph, in which was Ramah called also Ramah or Ramathaim, a place of Samuel's birth and habitation, 1 Sam i. 1, vi. 17.

6 And he said unto him, Behold now, there is in this city a man of God, and he is an honourable man, all that he saith cometh surely to pass: now let us go thither: peradventure he can show us our way that we should go.

A man of God, a prophet, as that phrase is used, 1 Sam ii. 27. Josh xiv. 6. Judg xiii. 6. An honourable man, one of great reputation for his skill and faithfulness. All that he saith cometh surely to pass, his declaration of things secret or future are always certain and confirmed by the event. Our way that we should go, the course we should take to find the asses. He saith peradventure because he doubted whether so great a prophet would seek or God would grant him a revelation concerning such an matter, although sometimes God was pleased herein to condescend to his people, to cut off all pretence or occasion of seeking to withe or heathenish divination. See 1 Kings xv. 2, 2 Kings i. 3.

7 Then said Saul to his servant, But, behold, if we go, what shall we bring, the man? for the bread is spent in our vessels, and there is not a present to bring to the man of God: what have we?

The bread is spent in our vessels, thus he saith, because bread was not unusually given by way of present as we see 1 Sam x. 3, 4. Or bread is put for all manner of provisions, as is frequent, and among these they might have something not unfit in these plain times to make a present of as clusters of raisins, or cakes of figs, such as Abimelech presented to David 1 Sam xxv. 18. See also 1 Kings xv. 1, 2 Kings iv. 42. There is not a present, such presents were then made to the prophets, 1 Kings xiv. 2, 2 Kings iv. 42, vii. 8 either as a testimony of respect to him as their superior, upon which account subjects made presents to their kings, 1 Sam x. 27, and the Levites never came to their king without some gift or as a grateful acknowledgment of his favour, or for the support of the prophets themselves; or of the sons of the prophets, or of other persons in want known to them.

8 And the servant answered Saul again, and said, Behold, I have here at hand the fourth part of a shekel of silver: that will I give to the man of God, to tell us our way.

The fourth part of a shekel of silver was near a groat, which, though now it may seem a contemptible gift, yet in those ancient times it was certainly of far more worth, and better accepted than now it would be, when the covetousness and pride, and luxury of men have raised their expectations and desires to far greater things.

9 Beforetime in Israel, when a man went to enquire of God, thus he spake, Come, and let us go to the seer: for he that is now called a Prophet was beforetime called a Seer.

Of God, or a man of God, which signified the same thing. It was called a seer because he did discern and could discover things secret and unknown to others. And these are the words either first Of some later sacred writer, which, after Samuel's death insinuated that verity. Or secondly, Of Samuel who being probably fifty or sixty years old at the writing of the book and speaking of the state of things in his last days might call it beforetime. Or rather, thirdly Of Saul's servant who might be now thirteen or fourteen years old and might speak thus either by his knowledge of what was in his juvenile years or upon the information of his father or masters. And so it is fit argument to persuade Saul to go to the man of God that he might show them the way and where the asses were because he was likely to inform them for the prophets were inwardly called seers because they knew and could reveal hidden things. And the meaning is that anciently they were not vulgarly called prophets but seers only, whereas now and after wards they were called seers, yet they were more commonly called prophets.

10 Then said Saul to his servant, Well, and come, let us go. So they went unto the city where the man of God was.

11 ¶ And as they went up the hill to the city, they found young maidens going out to draw water, and said unto them, Is the seer here?

Coming out of the city, and down to the bottom of the hill where the fountain or river was.

12 And they answered them, and said, He is, behold, he is before you, make haste now, for he came to day to the city: for there is a sacrifice of the people to day in the high place.

He came to day to the city. He so speaks though this was his own constant habitation, because he had been travelling abroad, possibly in his circuit, described 1 Sam vii. 16, 17, and was now returned to his own house in Ramah as he used to do, and so he implies they come in a good and reasonable time to meet with him. There is a sacrifice, otherwise feast, but it seems to be understood of a sacrifice. First Because so the Hebrew word signifies most properly, and most frequently. Secondly Because this eating was in the high place, which was the common place for sacrifices, but not for private feasts. Thirdly, The prophet's presence was not so necessary for a feast as for a sacrifice. Of the people, so this sacrifice is called, because this was a public solemnity and possibly the new moon, when the people brought several sacrifices, to wit, peace offerings, whereof part fell to the offerer's share, and of these parts united together, they here made a common feast, not without Samuel's direction who being forewarned the day before, by God, of Saul's coming, intended this to be more solemn for his entertainment, ver. 22-24. In the high place, upon the hill mentioned ver. 11, and at the altar which Samuel built for this kind of use, 1 Sam. vi. 17 by Divine dispensation, as was there noted, otherwise to sacrifice in high places was forbidden by the law, after the building of the tabernacle.

13 As soon as ye be come into the city, ye shall straightway find him, before he go up to the high place to eat: for the people will not eat until he come, because he doth bless the sacrifice, and afterwards they eat that be bidden. Now therefore get you up, for about this time ye shall find him.

<sup>4 Heb to day</sup> Ye shall straightway find him, at home and it is sure. To eat the ribs of the sacrifices according to the manner. He doth bless the sacrifice: either first the meat left of the sacrifice which is the matter of the following feast, as this is commonly understood. Or rather secondly, The sacrifice itself. For what reason is there to depart from the proper signification of the word? For that the sacrifices under the law were accompanied with corn: in position of thanksgiving, may be gathered from divers places of Scripture, as Lev. v. 5, xvi. 21, Num. v. 7, Luke i. 10. And who so proper to perform this work as Samuel, an eminent prophet? And the blessing of this sacrifice seems to have consisted both of thanksgiving, the bringing of thank offering and of prayer to God for his acceptance. Psal. cx. 3. Now therefore get you up with speed: lest he be set down before you come.

14 And they went up into the city: and when they were come into the city, behold Samuel came out against them, for to go up to the high place.

Samuel came out, out of his own house: for as they passed by. <sup>15 ¶</sup> Now the Lord had told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, giving,

In his ear a secretly. A day before Saul came, that he might prepare himself for Saul's reception.

16 To morrow about this time I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin: and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel, that he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines: for I have looked upon my people, because their cry is come unto me.

I will send thee a man, I will by my secret providence so dispose of matters and of the hearts of Saul and his father that Saul shall come to thee though with another design. That he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines, for though they were now most pressed with the Ammonites, as we read, chap. xii. 12, yet they looked upon these as a land flood, which they hoped would be soon up, and soon down again: but the Philistines, then constant invaders, and nearest enemies they most dreaded. And from this Saul did in some measure save them: and should have saved them much more if he and the people's manyfold sins had not hindered it. I have looked upon my people with compassion and resolved to help them, a many synecdoche. Then came the earnest prayers to me for help.

17 And when Samuel saw Saul, the Lord said unto him, Behold the man whom I spake to thee of: this same shall reign over my people. <sup>18 ¶</sup> Then Saul drew near to Samuel in the gate, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, where the secret house is.

In the gate; the gate, after, first, Of Samuel's house. But he was come out thence before, ver. 14. Or rather, secondly, Of the city, for the word gate being put by itself, according to reason and common use, must be understood of the most eminent in its kind, which the gate of the city is. And through this gate Samuel seems now to have been passing to go to the high place, which probably was without the city, and there he makes a stand, to hear what these persons now approaching to him were about to speak.

19 And Samuel answered Saul, and said, I am the secret: go up before me unto the high place, for ye shall eat with me to day, and to morrow I will let thee go, and will tell thee all that is in thine heart.

Either all that thou desirest to know, as concerning the asses, or rather the secret thoughts of thy heart, or such actions as none know but God and thy own heart; that so thou mayst be assured of the truth and certainty of that which I am to acquaint thee with. And this might be done, though it be not here particularly related.

20 And as for thine asses that were lost three days ago, set not thy mind on them, for they are found. And on whom is all the desire of Israel? Is it not on thee, and on all thy father's house?

Set not thy mind on them, trouble not thy mind about them. On whom is all the desire of Israel? who is he that shall be that thing or person which all Israel desire to have, to wit, a king? Is it not on thee, and on all thy father's house? that honour is designed for thee, and, after thy death, for thy family or posterity: if by thy sin thou dost not cut off the entail.

21 And Saul answered and said, Am I not a Benjaminite, of the smallest of the tribes of Israel? and my family the least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? whence then speakest thou so to me?

The smallest of the tribes, for so indeed this was, having been all cut off except six hundred, Judg. xv, which blow they never recovered: and therefore they were scarce reckoned as an entire tribe: but only as a remnant or fragment of a tribe, and being ingrafted into Judah, in the division between the ten tribes and the two they in some sort lost their name: and they, together with Judah, were accounted but one tribe, 1 Kings xi. 32, &c. The least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin: as one of the least obscure and inconsiderable, in comparison of divers others: whence it may seem that Saul's family was not so noble and wealthy as some imagine, see on ver. 1. Whence then speakest thou so to me? why dost thou feed me with vain hopes of the kingdom?

22 And Samuel took Saul and his servant, and brought them into the parlour, and made them sit in the chiefest place among them that were bidden, which were about thirty persons.

He honoured his servant for Saul's sake, thereby both giving all the guests occasion to think how great that person was, or should be: whose very servant was advanced above the chief persons of the city, who were doubtless present upon this occasion, and showing how far himself was from envying Saul that honour and power, which was to be translated from him to Saul. Made them sit in the chiefest place, thereby to raise all their expectation, and to prepare them for giving that honour to Saul which his approaching dignity required.

23 And Samuel said unto the cook, Bring the portion which I gave thee, of which I said unto thee, Set it by thee.

Of which I appointed or disposed to thee, i. e. which I bade thee reserve for this use.

24 And the cook took up the shoulder, and that which was upon it, and set it before Saul. And Samuel said, Behold, that which is left: set it before thee, and eat; for unto this time hath it been kept for three, since I said, I have invited the people. So Saul did eat with Samuel that day.

The shoulder, to wit, the left shoulder, for the right shoulder was the priest's, Lev. vi. 32, 33. This he gives him, either, first, As the best and noblest part of the remainder of the sacrifice, the best parts being usually given by the master of the feast to such guests as were most honourable or best beloved, as Gen. xliii. 31. Or, secondly, As a secret symbol or sign of that burden which was to be laid upon Saul, and of that strength which was necessary for the bearing of it, the shoulder being both the seat of burdens, and the subject of strength. That which was upon it, something which the cook by Samuel's order was to put upon it when it was dressed, either for ornament, or in the nature of a sauce. That which is left, to wit, left of the sacrifice, but so all or most of the rest of their provisions were left - or rather, reserved, or laid by, by my order, for thy eating, when the rest of the meat was sent up and disposed of as the cook pleased. Unto this time, till thou shouldst come hither, and sit down here, whereby thou mayest know that thy coming hither was not unknown to me, and was designed by God for a higher purpose. Since I said, to wit, to the cook who was before mentioned as the person to whose care this was committed. I have invited the people, i. e. I have invited or designed some persons for whom I reserve this part. For since the word people is not here taken properly, but for some particular persons of the people, which were not in all above thirty ver. 22, why may not the same word be understood of two or three persons whom Samuel specially invited, to wit, Saul and his servant? So some learned men understand this word people of three men, 2 Kings xviii. 36. And they further note, that in the Arabic and Ethiopic and Persian languages, (all which are near akin both to themselves, and to the Hebrew, and do oftentimes communicate their signification each to other) the word that signifies people is it used for some few particular persons. Or if the word people be meant of the chief of the people mentioned above ver. 22 then Samuel was the principal author of this sacrifice and feast and it was not a sacrifice of the people as it is rendered, ver. 12, but a sacrifice and feast made by Samuel for the people as it should be rendered there, and the sense is, When I first spake or sent to the cook that I had invited the people, first to join with me in my sacrifice and then to partake with me of the feast I then bade him to give this part for this use.

25 ¶ And when they were come down from the high place into the city, Samuel communed with Saul upon the top of the house.

Samuel communed with Saul concerning the kingdom designed to him by God and his duty to expect it patiently till God actually called him to it, and to administer it piously and justly, and virtuously. The top of the house was flat after the manner, Deut. xxi. 8. and so fit for walking and for secret prayers, Dan. vi. 10, Acts x. 9, or any private and familiar discourses among friends.

26 And they arose early and it came to pass about the spring of the day, that Samuel called Saul to the top of the house, saying, Up, for I may send thee away. And Saul arose, and they went out both of them, he and Samuel, abroad.

Samuel called Saul to the top of the house and intended to impart something more to him. That I may send thee away, prepare thyself for thy departure and journey. He and Samuel, abroad, Samuel accompanying Saul part of his way.

27 And as they were going down to the end of the city, Samuel said to Saul, Bid the servant pass on before us, (and he passed on,) but stand thou still a while, that I may shew thee the word of God.

Did the servant pass on before us that thou and I may speak privately of the matter of the kingdom, which Samuel hitherto endeavoured to conceal, lest he should be thought now to impose a king upon them, as before he designed one to them; and that it might appear by the lot mentioned in the next chapter, that this kingdom was given to Saul by God's destination, and not by Samuel's contrivance. The word of God, i. e. a message delivered to me from God, which now I shall impart to thee.

CHAP. X

Samuel anointeth Saul, 1, confirms him by prediction of three signs, 2-8. Saul prophesies, 9-13. He cometh to his uncle, telleth him what Samuel had said concerning the asses, but concealeth the matter of the kingdom, 14-16. Samuel assemblith the people at Mizpah, 17-20. Saul is chosen king by lot, but hideth himself, is discovered by God, his stature, 21-23. Samuel presents him to the people, who receive him with shouting, 24. Samuel writeth the manner of the kingdom in a book, 25. God inspires the people with reverence towards Saul; but the children of Bethel despise him, 26, 27.

THEN Samuel took a vial of oil, and poured it upon his head, and kissed him, and said, Is it not because the LORD hath anointed thee to be captain over his inheritance?

This was the usual rite in the designation, as of priests and prophets, so also of kings, as 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 13, 1 Kings i. 39, 2 Kings i. 1, 3, 6, whereby was signified the pouring forth of the gifts of God's Spirit upon him, to enable him for the administration of his office, which he might expect and should receive upon the discharge of his duty. And heved him, partly in token of that reverence which he did owe, and that adoration which he and all the people were shewly to perform to him, whereof knowing was a sign as Gen. xli. 10, 1 Kings xvi. 18, and partly as a testimony of his sincere friendship and affection to him, and how far he was from envying his successor in the supreme dignity. Over his inheritance, i. e. over his own peculiar people, whereby he admonisheth Saul that this people were not so much his as God's, and that he was not to rule and manage them according to his own will and pleasure, but according to the will and mind of God.

2 When thou art departed from me to day, then thou shalt find two men by Rachel's sepulchre in the borders of Benjamin, and they will say unto thee, The asses which thou wentest to seek are found; and, lo, thy father hath left the care of the asses, and sorroweth for thee saying, What shall I do for my son?

In the borders of Benjamin, in the way to Bethlehem, Gen. xxxv. 19, which city was in Judah, and her sepulchre might be either in Judah or in Benjamin, for the possession of those two tribes were bordering upon one another, and oft intermixed together, see Josh. xviii. 11.

3 Then shalt thou go on forward from thence, and thou shalt come to the plain of Tabor, and there shall meet thee three men going up to God to Beth-el, one carrying three kids, and another carrying three loaves of bread, and another carrying a bottle of wine.

To the plain of Tabor, not that at the foot of Mount Tabor which was far from these parts, but another belonging to some other place or man called Tabor. Beth-el, properly so called, which was in Ephraim, where there was a noted high place, famous for Jacob's vision, Gen. xxviii. 19, where it is probable they offered sacrifices in this confused state of things, when the ark was in one place and the tabernacle, if not destroyed in another. Or, to the house of God, i. e. to Herpata parva, where the ark, the habitation of God, now was 1 Sam. vii. 1, 2. Loaves of bread might be offered either by the people, as Lev. ii. 1, or with other sacrifices. 1 bottle of wine, which was poured forth in drink-offerings: See Lev. xiii 13, Numb. xv. 5.

4 And they will salute thee, and give thee two loaves of bread, which thou shalt receive of their hands

Two loaves of bread, two of those three designed for sacrifice, supposing they could easily procure a supply of other loaves at Bethel. But the more strange the present was, the more fit it was for a sign of God's extraordinary providence in Saul's affairs.

5 After that thou shalt come to the hill of God, where is the garrison of the Philistines: and it shall come to pass, when thou art come thither to the city, that thou shalt meet a company of prophets coming down from the high place with a psaltery, and a tabret, and a pipe, and a harp, before them, and they shall prophesy.

To the hill of God, a hill near Gaba, or Gibeah of Benjamin, where a garrison of Philistines was 1 Sam. xiii 3 called here the hill of God because it was a place devoted to the service of God, either for sacrifice: thus being a high place, as it here follows, or for a school or college of prophets. In the city, adjoining to that hill. A company of prophets by prophets here, and in such like places he understands persons that did wholly devote themselves to religious studies and exercises such as preaching, praying, praising of God &c. For the term of prophesying is not only given to the most eminent set of it, viz. foretelling things to come, but also to preaching, as Rom. xii 6, 1 Cor. xiv 31, 32, 1 Thess. v 20 and to the making or singing of psalms or songs of praise to God as 1 Chron. xxi 13. And these that wholly attended upon these things are oft called sons of the prophets which were commonly combined into companies or colleges. 2 Kings i 3 5 that they might more conveniently edify and assist one another in God's work, which institution God was pleased so far to honour and bless, that sometimes he communicated into those persons the knowledge of future things as 2 Kings ii 3, 5. From the high place, where either their habitation was, or they had now been offering sacrifices. And although they used to perform the following exercise, either in their college or in the place of their sacrifices, yet now they did it in the descent of the hill which probably was beside their custom and therefore more proper for a sign to Saul of a more than ordinary kind of God towards him. A psaltery and a tabret, and a pipe, and a harp before them: such instruments of music being then used by prophets and other persons for the exaltation and exultation of their spirits in God's service. See 2 Kings iii 1. They shall prophesy either sing God's praises, or speak of the things of God.

6 And the Spirit of the Lord will come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into another man.

Will come upon thee. Heb. will lay or rush upon thee to wit, for a reason. So it may be opposed to the Spirit's rest upon a man as Numb. ix 2. Isa. xli 2. Shall be turned into another man: i.e. thou shalt be suddenly enlivened and acted with another spirit filled with skill of Divine things, with courage, and wisdom and magnanimity and other qualifications befitting thy dignity.

7 And let it be, when these signs are come unto thee, that thou do as occasions serve thee, for God is with thee. These signs were either either as of God's calling of him to the kingdom, because they were all future contingencies, which I say but God could infallibly know or foretell. As at occasion shall will the Heb. do what thy hand findeth to do, i.e. as thou shalt have a full and opportunity. He doth not intend that he should rule the kingly government upon him, before his call to it was known to and owned by the people, which had been propositions and dangerous; but that he should dispose his mind to it.

readiness of obeying any commandment which he required it, and he should be called to his office.

8 And thou shalt go down before me to Gilgal, and behold, I will come down unto thee, to offer burnt offerings, and to sacrifice sacrifices of peace, offerings: seven days shalt thou tarry, till I come to thee, and shew thee what thou shalt do.

Seven days shalt thou tarry till I come to thee. This is now mentioned and commanded, not was as formerly to be performed, as is evident, partly from the whole course of the story, which shows that Saul and Samuel and the people first met at Mizpeh, ver. 13, &c. where Saul was chosen by God and accepted by the people as king; and afterwards went to Gilgal, once before the time here spoken of chap. xi 14, 15, and partly by comparing this place with chap. xiii 8, &c. where we find Saul charged with the violation of this command two years after the giving of it, as appears from chap. xiii. 1, 2. Chap. xiii. then is this to be understood? Answer. 1. This may be taken as a standing rule for Saul to observe while Samuel was alive, that in case of any great future difficulty, or the invasion of enemies Saul should resort to Gilgal, and call the people thither, and tarry there seven days, which was but a reasonable and necessary time for the gathering of the people and for the coming of Samuel thither. For though this be related as but once done, chap. xiii. yet it is plain enough that it was to be constantly practised upon all such occasions. And Gilgal was chosen for this purpose as a very fit place, partly because that place was famous for the solemn renewing of the covenant between God and Israel Josh. iv, and for other eminent instances of God's favour to them in the remembrance whereof was a notable confirmation of their faith and partly because it was a very convenient place for the tribes within and without Jordan to assemble and consult, and unite their forces together upon such occasions. If you ask, Why then Saul did not practise this precept upon the first invasion of the Ammonites? it may be answered, that this was a rule for Saul when he and Samuel were together whereas they were together in that expedition chap. xi 7. And further, that necessity did excuse the violation of this precept then, because Saul could not wait for Samuel nor forbear his action for seven days, as is evident from chap. xi 3, 9, 10. Or 2. (which I propose with submission to the learned and judicious) This may be here added as another sign to confirm his faith which having strengthened by three foregoing signs he now fortifies it by another sign which was to follow afterwards, it being very usual for God to give men signs to confirm their faith from future events, as Exod. ix 12. 2 Kings xiv 29, Isa. vii 13, 11. So the meaning may be this. Another sign will I add to strengthen thy faith. Thou shalt in due time and upon a great occasion which shall then happen go down before me to Gilgal, and there I will come down unto thee to offer sacrifices, &c. But when thou comest thither, he said thou tarry there seven days and then I will come as I have said and give thee necessary instructions and assistance, as the matter shall require.

9 ¶ And it was so, that when he had turned his back to go from Samuel, God gave him another heart: and all those signs came to pass that day.

10 And when they came thither to the hill, behold, a company of prophets met him: and the Spirit of God came upon him, and he prophesied among them.

Then the accomplishment of the two former signs is supposed, and this only of the third is expressed, because this was more eminent and public than the former. The others were only transient acts, which passed in private between two or three persons meeting together, and passing by one another; but this was a more permanent and more solemn sign, done in a more solemn manner, and before many and very considerable witnesses. And it came to pass, when all that knew him before him saw that, behold, he prophesied.

19 And among the prophets, in whose people said unto him, in another, What is this that is done unto the son of Kish? Is Saul among the prophets?

What is this that is come unto the son of Kish? what means this strange and prodigious event? Saul, a man never distinguished nor elevated in, nor inclined to these matters, is now engaged to look to his father's house, and to be in the sacred exercises of the prophets.

And one of the same place answered, and said, But who is their father?

18 Therefore it became a proverb, Is Saul
among the prophets?

17 ¶ And one of the same place, Heb. one from thence, i. e. one of the company there present, or one of the prophets there present, said, Who is their father? who is the father of all these wonders of whom you speak, and among whom Saul now is? who is it that instructs and inspires them with this power, but God? They have it not from their natural talents, nor from their civil education, but by inspiration from God, who, when he pleaseth, can inspire Saul, or any other man, with the same skill. And therefore wonder not at this matter, but give God the glory of it. Father is here not for teacher or instructor, as it is used, as Gen. iv. 20 21, Matt. xxiii. 9, 1 Cor. iv. 15, And hence the scholars are called sons of the prophets. It became a proverb, used when any strange, unlikely, or unexpected thing happened.

18 And when he had made an end of prophesying, he came to the high place.

Returning thither with the prophets, there to praise God for those wonderful favours, and to beg counsel and help from God in this high business.

14 ¶ And Saul's uncle said unto him and to his servant, Whither went ye? And he said, To seek the asses: and when we saw that they were no where, we came to Samuel.

Said a uncle, being there present, and observing this great alteration in his nephew.

15 And Saul's uncle said, Tell me, I pray thee, what Samuel said unto you.

16 And Saul said unto his uncle, He told us plainly that the asses were found. But of the matter of the kingdom, whereof Samuel spake, he told him not.

Partly in obedience to Samuel who obliged him to secrecy, partly from a humble modesty which appeared in him, ver. 22, and partly in prudence, lest by an unseasonable publishing of it he should raise envy in some, dislike and contempt in others. &c.

17 ¶ And Samuel called the people together unto the Lord to Mizpeh,

(Into the Lord, to appear before the Lord. So he speaks further, 1. Because the ark was carried thither upon this occasion. Or, 2. Because God is present in all the assemblies of his people, whereof this was an eminent one. See 2 Chron. xix. 6, Psal. lxxviii. 1. Or, 3. Because this was in a manner erect a tribunal for God and intercession and consequently obtained, his presence there to supervise and direct the whole business by his sentence, which all who did ver. 19, &c. See of this phrase Judg. xi. 11, xx. 1. To Mizpeh, a city of Benjamin, Josh. xii. 2b, where all Israel had met before upon a public and solemn occasion, 1 Sam.
vii. 2.

18 And said unto the children of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I brought up Israel out of Egypt, and delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all kingdoms, and of them that oppressed

Of all kingdoms, i. e. of the neighbouring kingdoms, which molested and oppressed you.

19 And ye have this day rejected your God, who himself saved you out of all your adversities and your tribulations; and ye have said unto him, Nay, but set a king over us. Now therefore present yourselves before the Lord by your tribes, and by your thousands.

Ye have this day rejected your God, you this day declare that you persist in your former act of rejecting God's government, see on chap. viii. 7. Who himself saved you, who by his own special providence took care to raise up judges and saviours for you, and to deliver you at all times, when you needed his help, and did not by your own obstruct it. Ye have said unto him, i. e. unto me his prophet and ambassador, and consequently unto the Lord, whom I represented, and in whose name I spoke and acted. By your tribes, and by your thousands, for each tribe was divided into thousands, Numb. x. 36, Deut. xxxiii. 17, Josh. xxi.
11, 21, Mich. vi. 2, as in England counties are into hundreds.

20 And when Samuel had caused all the tribes of Israel to come near, the tribe of Benjamin was taken.

To come near unto the place appointed for the casting of lots. This title was now picked up before Judah, because the kingdom was freely promised by God to Judah, and was to be given to him in love, but now the kingdom was in a manner forced from God and given to them in anger. Hos. xiii. 11, and therefore conferred upon an obscure tribe.

21 When he had caused the tribe of Benjamin to come near by their families, the family of Matri was taken, and Saul the son of Kish was taken, and when they sought him, he could not be found.

22 Therefore they enquired of the Lord further if the man should yet come thither. And the Lord answered, Behold, he hath hid himself among the stuff.

They enquired of the Lord, either of Him or Thummim, which was the usual way of inquiring, Numb. xxvii. 21, 1 Sam. xiii. 9, xxviii. 6, or by Samuel, who by his power procured an answer. Among the stuff, among the curtains or baggage of the people there assembled. This he might do because he either hid, or at least would be thought to have a modest sense of his own unworthiness, which was a likely way to commend him to the people.

23 And they ran and fetched him thence, and when he stood among the people, he was higher than any of the people from his shoulders and upward.

24 And Samuel said to all the people,
See ye him whom the Lord hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people? And all the people shouted, and said, God save the king.

There is none like him among all the people, as to the height of his bodily stature, which was in itself commendable in a king, and some kind of indication of great endowments of mind. God save the king, Heb. Let the King live, to wit, long and prosperously, for an afflicted life is a kind of death, and is oft so called. Hence they accept and own him for their king, and promise subjection to him.

25 Then Samuel told the people the manner of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the Lord.
And Samuel sent all the people away, every man to his house.

The manner of the kingdom, not the manner of the king, of which he had spoken before, chap. viii. 11, &c., but of the kingdom, to wit, the laws and rules by which the king government was to be managed, agreeable to those mentioned Deut. xvii 16, &c. which providence, Samuel did expound and apply to their particular case. Before the Lord, before the ark, or in the sanctuary, where it was kept safe from desecration.

<sup>1 Judg. 11</sup> 26 ¶ And Saul also went home <sup>2</sup> to Gibeah, and there went with him a band of men, whose hearts God had touched.

To Gibeah not being actually inaugurated into his kingdom, he thought fit to retire to his former habitation, and to live privately till he had an occasion to show himself in a more public and illustrious manner, which he speedily obtained. And there went with him a band of men, to give him safe and honourable conduct to his house, though not to abate with him those which did not suit with his present circumstances. When hearts God had touched, either 1. Disposed or inclined to this work, or 2. Affected or renewed by his grace and good Spirit working upon their hearts: those that feared God and made conscience of their duty, for they are opposed to the children of Belial in the next verse. These though they did not desire a king as the generality of the people did yet when God had given them a king they were most forward to pay him that reverence and obedience which they owed him, both which proceeded from the same principle, that they were in both cases guided by God's will which was, that they should not desire a king in their circumstances: and yet they should obey him, when God had set a king over them.

This man, so mean a person, and of the weakest of all the tribes. Brought him no presents, a subjects in those times and places used to do to their kings, see 1 Kings x 25, 2 Chron. xvii 5, Matt. ii 11, and is Saul's men condition, wherein they upbraid him required. He held his peace, thereby manifesting his prudence and civility, which was of great use in the beginning of his government.

CHAP. XI

Nahash beseegeth them of Jabesh-gilead, offereth them a reproachful condition, they have seven days granted them to consult and seek relief: they send messengers to Saul 1. He is provoked sent messengers to all the Israelites to come in to their help: they come to the number of three hundred and thirty men and men 6-8. He sends word to the besieged, who desire Nahash, who with his army is slain 9-11. The people are ready to slay Saul's enemies, in which he opposeth them: he is interested in the kingdom at Gilead, 12-14.

Then, i. e. about that time the portule being used in some latitude, as is frequent, for that this happened before, and was the occasion of their desire of a king, may seem from chap. xii 17, although it is possible that Nahash's prepiration, and declared intention of war against them, might cause that desire: and that Nahash did not actually come against them (which is here related) till their king was chosen. Nahash the Ammonite, either the same with him, 2 Sam. x 2, or his father and predecessor. Came up to war, probably to revenge and to recover their former great loss by Jephthah. Judg. xi 3 Jabesh-gilead was beyond Jordan, and near the Ammonites, who dwelt in part of Arabia. Make a covenant with us, to wit upon good conditions, so as we shall enjoy our religion and properties. We will serve thee, in other things we will be thy subjects and tributaries. The occasion of this offer was, that they saw no likelihood of relief from their brethren the Israelites in Canaan, who were remote from them, and thus weak and divided, and scarce able to defend themselves from the Philistines.

<sup>2</sup> And Nahash the Ammonite answered them, On this condition will I make a covenant with you, that I may thrust out all your right eyes, and lay it for a reproach upon all Israel.

That I may thrust out all your right eyes, partly for a reproach, as it here follows; and partly to disable them from managing offensive weapons in battle; for their left eyes served only or chiefly for defence, being covered by those large shields which then they used, and held in their left hand. He leaves them one eye, that they might be fit to serve him in any mean and base office.

<sup>3</sup> And the elders of Jabesh said unto him, Give us seven days respite, that we may send messengers unto all the coasts of Israel: and then, if there be no man to save us, we will come out to thee.

Give us seven days' respite, which it is very probable, and Josephus and others affirm that Nahash granted, out of a foolish self confidence and contempt of the broken condition of the Israelites, which he thought utterly unable to give them any relief, at least, in so short a time.

<sup>4</sup> ¶ Then came the messengers to Gibeah of Saul, and told the tidings in the ears of the people: and all the people lifted up their voices, and wept.

Then came the messengers to Gibeah of Saul, partly, because it was not far from them, and partly, because it belonged to the Benjamites, who had a special obligation to take more care of that place, from whence they had their wives. Judg. xxi 10 &c., and partly because Saul, the new chosen king, was there. The people lifted up their voices, and wept both in compassion towards them, and for fear of themselves lest it should shortly be their own lot.

<sup>5</sup> And, behold, Saul came after the herd out of the field, and Saul said, What aileth the people that they weep? And they told him the tidings of the men of Jabesh.

Saul came after the herd out of the field, for being only anointed king and not publicly inaugurated, nor owned nor presented by the generality of the people, nor having yet had opportunity of doing any thing worthy of his place, he thought fit to forbear all royal state, and to retire to his former private and country life which, howsoever despised in these latter vain, ambitious, and slothful ages of the world was anciently in great esteem among the Greek and Romans, whose princes and generals did frequently exercise themselves in it, though some conceive that he now lived in some state, and that he had been in the field only to recreate himself and that his coming after the herd was but accidental and is mentioned only to usher in what follows of the yoke of oxen.

<sup>6</sup> ¶ And the Spirit of God came upon Saul when he heard those tidings, and his anger was kindled greatly.

The Spirit of God came upon Saul, inspiring him suddenly with more than ordinary courage, and zeal, and resolution to engage himself and the people for their rescue. Compare Judg. iii 10, vi 34, xi 29. His anger was kindled greatly against Nahash, for so insolent and barbarous a proposition.

<sup>7</sup> And he took a yoke of oxen, and hewed them in pieces, and sent them throughout all the coasts of Israel by the hands of messengers, saying, Whosoever cometh not forth after Saul and after Samuel, so shall it be done unto his oxen. And the fear of the Lord fell on the people, and they came out with one consent.

Sent them throughout all the coasts of Israel, which considering, that the sight of men's faces do much more affect their hearts than what they only hear with their ears. He joins Samuel with himself, both because he was present with him, as appears from ver 12, and that hereby he might gain the more authority to his command, and strike the greater terror into all despisers of it. The fear of the Lord, either, 1. A great fear, great things being oft thus expressed; as the fear of God, mountains of God, &c. Or, 2. A fear sent upon them by God, as Gen xxxi 5, that they should not dare to deny their help.

8 And when he numbered them in Bezek, the children of Israel were three hundred thousand, and the men of Judah thirty thousand.

This great terror drew so many forth which is not so strange to him that knows what time deny that the land of Canaan contained vast numbers of people in a little compass. The men of Judah are numbered apart to their honour, to show how readily they, to whom the kingdom was promised Gen xlii 19, submitted to the king, though of another and far meaner tribe and how willing they were to hazard themselves for their brethren's rescue although they might have excused themselves from the necessity of defending their own country from their ancient neighbours the Philistines.

9 And they said unto the messengers that came, Thus shall ye say unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, To morrow by that time the sun be hot, ye shall have help. And the messengers came and shewed it to the men of Jabesh and they were glad.

To-morrow to wit, the day after your departure hence or return home, for it seems probable that some few days had been spent in the gathering and disposing of the forces, and bringing them towards those parts.

10 Therefore the men of Jabesh said, To morrow we will come out unto you and ye shall do with us all that seemeth good unto you.

They did and might reasonably and justly understand their own condition before proposed ver 3, if none came to save them which they were not now obliged to repent, although they conjectured that their enemies would understand it absolutely, whose error there in they were no more obliged to correct than to prevent their destruction. Nor did they tell any lie herein but only concealed part of their intentions to render their enemy more secure and fit for ruin, which kind of stratagem is usual, and allowed by all persons.

11 And it was so on the morrow, that Saul put the people in three companies, and they came into the midst of the host in the morning watch, and slew the Ammonites until the heat of the day, and it came to pass, that they which remained were scattered, so that two of them were not left together.

Into three companies, that so invading them on several sides with a great force, he might both strike them with the greater terror, and prevent their escape. In the morning ver 14; having marched all the day and night before it.

12 ¶ And the people said unto Samuel, Who is he that said, Shall Saul reign over us? bring the men, that we may put them to death.

Shall Saul reign over us? they did not say so in terms as we may see, chap x 27, but this was the design and sequence of their speech, as they rightly construed it. That we may put them to death, which till this time they were not able to do, because that infiction was then almost universal.

13 And Saul said, There shall not a man be put to death this day: for to day the Lord hath wrought salvation in Israel.

I will not destroy any of those whom God hath so graciously preserved nor sully the mirth of this glorious and comfortable day with the slaughter of any of my subjects, and therefore I freely forgive them. Wherewith Saul showed his policy as well as his clemency, this being the most likely way to gain his enemies, and secure his friends, and stablish his throne in the hearts of his people.

14 Then said Samuel to the people, Comc, and let us go to Gilgal, and to new the kingdom there.

Then, whilst the people were together by Jabesh-gilead, wherein Samuel's great prudence and fidelity to Saul is evident. He suspended the confirmation to Saul at first, whilst the generality of the people were disaffected and discontented at the meanness of his person, and now when he had given such eminent proof of his princely virtues, and when the people's hearts were unanimously and eagerly set upon him he takes this as the fittest season for that work. Let us go to Gilgal this place he chose, both because it was new, and to most of them, in the way to their homes, and because it was rather the Israelites on this side, and beyond Jordan might more easily resort and because it was famous for public conventions there kept and particularly for the covenant then renewed by Joshua between God and the people. Renew the kingdom there, i.e. confirm our former choice to prevent all such seditions expressions and actions as we had experience of at the former election.

15 And all the people went to Gilgal, and there they made Saul king before the Lord in Gilgal and there they sacrificed sacrifices of peace offerings before the Lord and there Saul and all the men of Israel rejoiced greatly.

They made Saul king, i.e. they recognised him, or owned and accepted him for their king, by consent, for, to speak properly Saul was not made or constituted king by the people but by the Lord's immediate act. See chap viii 9, x 1. Before the Lord, who was then present in a special manner, both because the people and the Lord were there assembled, and because there was a sacrifice, as the following sacrifices show. The same phrase is used chap x 17, xi 15. They sacrificed sacrifices of peace offerings, partly to praise God for so glorious a victory and for the firm settlement of the distracted kingdom, and partly to implore the presence and assistance of God to the king and kingdom in all their affairs and enterprises.

CHAP XII

Samuel having appointed a king unto the people, watcheth his own integrity to which they witness 1-5. He telleth before them the sins of their ancestors and their own sin in asking a king 6-13, comforts them if they will obey the Lord, threateneth the disobedient, terrifies them by thunder in harvest, they confess their sin, and desire to be reconciled to the Lord, 14-19. He comforts and exhorts them to fear and serve the Lord, promising also to pray for them 20-25.

And Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, I have hearkened unto your voice in all that ye said unto me, and have made a king over you.

Samuel said this unto all Israel whilst they were assembled together at Gilgal. And this is another instance of Samuel's great wisdom and integrity. He would not reproach the people for their sin, in desiring a king, whilst Saul was raw and weak, and new to him in his kingdom, and in the people's hearts lest through their accustomed levity they should as hastily cast off their king as they had passionately desired him, and so add one sin to another, and therefore he chooseth this season for it, partly because Sam's kingdom was now confirmed and illustrated by an eminent victory, and so the danger of rejecting him was out of doors, which circumstance was also considerable for Samuel's vindication, that it might appear that his following reproach did not proceed from any selfish respects or desires, which he might be supposed to have of retaining the power in his own hands, but merely from the conscience of his duty, and a sincere desire of all their good, and partly because the people repented greatly as is said in the next foregoing verse, and upon this occasion applauded themselves for their desires of a king, and interpreted the success which God had now given them as a divine approbation of those desires, whereby they were like to be hardened in their impunity, and might be drawn to many other inconveniences. Samuel therefore thinks fit to temper their excessive joy, and to exhort them to that repentance and holiness for which he saw want in them, and which he knew to be absolutely necessary to prevent the curse of God upon their new king and the whole kingdom.

2 And now, behold, the king walketh before you, and I am old and gravenied, and, behold, my sons are with you, and I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day.

Behold before you, go forth and cometh in before you, I speak over you as that phrase signifies. Num. xxvii. 17. Deut. xxxi. 2. 2 Chron. i. 10. To him I have fully resigned all my power and authority, and do hereby renounce it, and own myself for a private person, and one of his subjects. I am old and gray-headed, and therefore unable to bear the burden of government, and feel myself greatly at ease to see it cast upon other shoulders, and therefore do not speak what I am about to say from envy of Sam's advancement, or from discontent at the diminution of my own power. My sons are with you, or among you in the same state and place private persons as you are, if they have injured any of you in the government as you once complained, the law is now open against them, any of you may accuse them, your king can punish them. I do not intrude for them, my king, neither power nor will to keep them from receiving the just fruits of their iniquity. I have walked before you, I have been your guide and governor, partly as a prophet, and partly as a judge.

3 Behold, here I am, witness against me before the Lord, and before his anointed, whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or of whose hand have I received any bribe, to blind mine eyes therewith? and I will restore it you.

Witness against me, I here present myself before the Lord, and before your king, being ready to give an account of all my administrations, and to make satisfaction for any injuries that I have done. And this protestation Samuel makes of his integrity, not out of ostentation or vain glory, but partly, for his own just vindication, that the people might not hereafter be the defence of their own irregularities, reproach his government, partly that being publicly acquitted from all faults, he as a government he might more freely and boldly reprove the sins of the people, and particularly that sin of theirs in demanding a king, when they had so little reason for it, and they had so just a government from whom they might have purchased themselves in effectual redress of his sons, and administrations, if they had acquainted him therewith. And partly that by his example he might tacitly admonish Sam of his duty, and prevent his misunderstanding of what he had formerly said chap. viii. 11, &c. and mistake that for a rule of his just power, which was only a prediction of his evil practices. If I have I oppressed? whom have I wronged either by fraud and false accusation, or by malice and envy? I say bribe, Heb. price of redemption, even a ransom, an unjust and lost cause, or person from the righteous sentence which they deserved. To blind mine eyes therewith, that I should not discern what was right and just, or dissemble it, as if I did not see it. Or, that I should hide or cover my face, I will wfully wink at the plain truth, for I will not take the bribe, or for him I will for his sake, I will not hide my face from you, or, and I will cover mine eyes for him, I will not take shame to myself, and cover my face as one ashamed to look upon him.

4 And they said, Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken ought of any man's hand.

5 And he said unto them, The Lord is witness against you, and his anointed.

6 Witness thus day, that ye have not found ought in my hand. And they answered, He is witness.

The Lord is witness against you, to wit, if you shall at any time hereafter reproach my government or memory. Or rather against you, that I gave you no cause to be weary of God's government of you by judges, or to desire a change of the government, and thereby the blame of it wholly rests upon yourselves. But this was only insinuated, and therefore the people did not fully understand his drift in it. Ye have not found ought in any thing which I have gotten by bribery or oppression. They answered, Heb. he answered, I, the whole people who are here spoken of as one person, because they answered thus with one consent.

7 And Samuel said unto the people, It is the Lord that advanced Moses and Aaron, and that brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt.

That for your sakes raised, constituted, and exalted Moses and Aaron to that great power and reputation which they had and used, to deliver you.

8 Now therefore stand still that I may reason with you before the Lord of all the righteous acts of the Lord, which he did for you and to your fathers.

That I may reason with you, since God hath laid so great obligations upon you, let us a little consider whether you have answered them. The righteous acts, Heb. the righteousnesses, are mercies or benefits for so that word is oft used, Psal. xvi. 5. xxxvi. 10, Prov. x. 2, xi. 1, and that is the chief subject of the following discourse, some of their calamities being but briefly named, and that for the illustration of God's mercy in their deliverances.

9 When Jacob was come into Egypt, and your fathers cried unto the Lord, then the Lord sent Moses and Aaron, which brought forth your fathers out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place.

In this land, in which Moses and Aaron are said to set the them, partly because they brought them into and seated them in part of it to wit, that without Jordan, partly because they were, under God the principal authors of their entering into the land of Canaan, inasmuch as they brought them out of Egypt, conducted them through the wilderness, and there by their prayers to God, and counsel to them preserved them from utter ruin, and gave command and direction from God for the distribution of the land among them, and encouraged them to enter into it by promises and assurances of success, and finally, Moses substituted Joshua in his stead, and commanded him to carry them thither, and seat them there, which also he did.

10 And when they forgot the Lord their God, he sold them into the hand of Sisera, captain of the host of Hazor, and into the hand of the Philistines, and into the hand of the king of Moab, and they fought against them.

They forgot the Lord, I, they revolted from him, as it is explained ver. 10, and turned themselves as ungrateful, and were worthy towards God, as if they had wholly forgotten his great and innumerable favours, and then intreated obligations to him. Forgetting of God is oft put for all manner of wickedness, whereof indeed that is the true cause. See Isa. xlii. 10, Jer. in 21, Ezek. xvi. 12. Thus he saith, partly to answer an objection, That the reason why they desired a king was, because in the time of the judges, they were at great uncertainties, and oftentimes oppressed with sharp afflictions, to which he answereth by concession that they were so, but adds, by way of retribution, that they themselves were the cause of it, by their forgetting of God; so that it was not the fault of that kind of government, but their transgressing the rules of it and partly to move them that thus their ungrateful carriage towards God was no new or strange thing, but an hereditary and inveterate disease, that so they might more easily be leave their own guilt herein, and be more deeply humbled, both for their own and for their parents sins. They fought against them, to wit, with success, and subdued them.

10 And they cried unto the Lord, and said, "We have sinned, because we have forsaken the Lord, and have served Baalim and Ashtaroth but now deliver us out of the hand of our enemies and we will serve thee."

11 And the Lord sent Jerubbaal, and Bedan, and Jephthah, and Samuel, and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every side, and ye dwelled safe.

Bedan is certainly one of the judges, and because there is no judge so called in the Book of Judges it is reasonably concluded that this was one of the judges there mentioned having two names, as was very frequent. And this was either, first, Samson, as most interpreters believe who is called Bedan, i. e. in Dan or of Dan or the son of Dan, one of that tribe, to signify that they had no reason to distrust that God, who could, and did raise so eminent a saviour out of so obscure a tribe. Or secondly, Juri the Galadite, of whom Judg. x. 3. which may seem best to agree, first With the time and order of the judges for Juri was before Jephthah but Samson was after him. Secondly, With other scriptures for among the sons of a more ancient and a famous Juri of whom see Num. xxxiii. 11, ye met with one called Bedan 1 Chron. vii. 17 which name seems here given to Juri the piece to distinguish him from that first Juri. Thirdly With the following words, which show that this Bedan was one of those judges who delivered them out of the hand of their enemies on every side and made them to dwell safely, which seems not so properly to agree to Samson who did only seem to have been out of the hand of the Philistines as was feared of him, Judg. xvi. 30. to Juri who kept them in peace and safety in the midst of all their enemies as may be gathered from Judg. x. 3-6, and so did all the rest of the judges here mentioned. And Samuel, he speaks of himself in the third person which is frequent in the Hebrew tongue as Gen. iv. 23, Psal. cxxxiii. 1-10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100. And he mentions himself not through vanity or flattery, but for his own just and necessary vindication and for the justification and enforcement of his following reproof, to show that he had not aggravated from him, the reasons nor had been so inconsiderable and unprofitable to them, as to give them any occasion to contrive or desire this change of government in his days. Ye dwelled safe, so that it was no necessity, but mere wantonness, that made you desire a change.

12 And when ye saw that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon came against you, ye said unto me, Nay, but a king shall reign over us when the Lord your God was your king.

A king shall reign over us see the notes on chap. xi. 1. When the Lord your God was your King, i. e. when God was your immediate King and Governor, who was both able and willing to deliver you, if you had cried to him, whereof you and your ancestors have had plentiful experience, so that you did not at all need any other king, and your desire of another was a manifest reproach against God, as if he were either grown impotent, or unfaithful, or unmerciful to you.

13 Now therefore behold the king whom ye have chosen, and whom ye have desired and, behold, the Lord hath set a king over you.

How ye have chosen though God chose him by lot, ye the people are said to choose him, either generally because they chose that kind of government or particularly, because they approved of God's choice. chap. x. 24, and confirm it chap. xi. 15. The Lord hath set a king over you, he hath yielded to your inordinate desire.

14 If ye will fear the Lord, and serve him, and obey his voice, and not rebel against the commandment of the Lord, then shall both ye and also the king that reigneth over you continue following the Lord your God.

Heb. Then shall ye be (i. e. walk, or go) after the Lord i. e. God shall still go before you, as he hath hitherto done as your Leader or Governor to direct, protect and deliver you and he will not forsake you, as you have given him just cause to do. Sometimes this phrase of going after the Lord signifies a man's obedience to God but here it is otherwise to be understood, (as it is no new thing for the same phrase in several places to be understood in quite different senses) and it notes not a duty to be performed but a promise of a privilege to be received upon the performance of their duty because it is opposed to the threatening denounced in case of disobedience in the next verse.

15 But if ye will not obey the voice of the Lord, but rebel against the commandment of the Lord, then shall the hand of the Lord be against you, as it ever was against your fathers.

Who lived under the judges, and you shall have no advantage in that point by the change of government, ye shall your kings be able to protect you against God's displeasure.

16 Now therefore stand and see this great thing, which the Lord will do before your eyes.

By standing, he intends not the posture of their bodies but the constancy of their minds by serious and fixed consideration.

17 Is it not "when harvest to day?" I will call unto the Lord, and he shall send thunder and rain that ye may perceive and see that your wickedness is great, which ye have done in the sight of the Lord, in asking you a king.

At what harvest it was a rare thing in those parts, have thunder or rain as the Scripture oft implies, and from storms who was an eye witness of it, the weather being more constant and certain in its seasons there, at many other parts, than it is with us who live in island as all travellers inform us. He shall send thunder and rain that by this unreasonable and pernicious storm you may understand that God is displeased with you, and at his foolishly and wickedly you have done in rejecting the government of that God, at whose command are all things, both in heaven and in earth.

18 So Samuel called unto the Lord, and the Lord sent thunder and rain that day and all the people greatly feared the Lord and Samuel.

Who had such great power and favour with God.

19 And all the people said unto Samuel, "Pray for thy servants unto the Lord thy God, that we die not: for we have added unto all our sins this evil, to ask us a king."

Pray for thy servants, for so we shall still own ourselves to be, though we have got another master. Unto the Lord thy God, whom thou hast so great an interest in, and cannot so easily prevail with for any mercy, whilst we are ashamed and afraid to call him our God, because we have so highly offended him. That we do not, that this terrible storm may be taken away, lest our persons and the fruits of the earth be all destroyed. To ask us a king so horribly were they blessed with their prejudices and passions, that nothing but a miracle could convince them of this particular sin.

20 ¶ And Samuel said unto the people, Fear not: ye have done all this wickedness: yet turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart,

Fear not, to wit with a servile and desponding fear, as if there were no hope left for you.

21 And *turn ye not aside: *for then should ye go after vain things, which cannot profit nor deliver, for they are vain.

*Turn ye not aside to wit, after idols, as they had often done before, and notwithstanding this warning, did afterwards. Should ye go, or, should ye turn aside, which words are easily to be understood out of the foregoing branch, such ellipses being most frequent in Scripture, as Deut 11, 1 Kings xiv 11, 2 Kings ix 27. Vain things, so idols are called Deut xxv 21, Jer ii 5 and so they are, being mere *nothing. 1 Cor viii 4, having no divinity nor power in them, no influence upon us, nor use or benefit to us. Which cannot profit nor deliver, which will not only be unprofitable, but highly pernicious to you, the contrary affirmative being understood under the negative as Exod xx 7 Numb xvi 21, Deut ii 30.*

22 For *the Lord will not forsake his people: *for his great name's sake: because *it hath pleased the Lord to make you his people.

For his great name's sake, i. e. for his own honour, which would seem to suffer much more, if he should not preserve and deliver people in eminent danger, as if he were so weak or forgetful or unconstant or unkind or unskillful of human affairs, or unkind to those who own and worship him when all the rest of the world forsake him. Hence this argument hath been often pleaded with God, not without good success, as Exod xxxii 12 Numb xiv 13 &c. And this reason God here telleth to take them off from all conceit of their own merit, and to assure them, that if they did truly repent of all their sins, and served God with all their heart, which is here supposed, yet even in that case their salvation would not be due to their merits, but only the effect of God's free mercy. It hath pleased the Lord to wit out of his own free grace, without any desert of yours as he saith Deut vii 7 ix 5 and therefore he will not easily forsake you, except you desert him away.

23 Moreover is for me, God forbid that I should sin against the Lord: *in ceasing to pray for you: but *I will teach you the *good and the right way.

I think not that because you have so highly disobeyed and rejected me, that I will revenge myself by neglecting to pray for you, or by praying against you, as I have now done for your conviction and humiliation, and so for your preservation, I am sensible of my duty as I am a sum of Israelites, I must call a people to pray for you. But I will teach you, Heb xii 12 &c. I will not only pray for you, which is one branch of my duty, but will also teach and instruct you which is the other branch of it. And though you have cast me off from being your judge and ruler, yet I will not cease to be your instructor and instructor, to keep you from error and destruction.

24 *Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart: for *consider how great things he hath done for you.

Fear the Lord, and serve him, i. e. with a pure heart, without any prayer nor counsels will stand you in any stead. He hath done for you, or, among you, both at this time and forever.

25 But if ye shall still do wickedly, *ye shall be consumed, *both ye and your king.

CHAP. XIII.

Saul and Jonathan's select band. Jonathan smote the garrison of the Philistines at Gibeath: the people are called together at Gilgal, 1-4. The Philistines' great host the Israelites run into, and tremble, 5-7. Saul offereth before Samuel cometh to him; he reproves him for it, foretelleth him that his kingdom should not last long, 8-14. Three companies of the Philistines invade the land, they had no smith to make them weapons, &c., nor had any of the Israelites, save Saul and Jonathan, sword or spear, 15-23.

SAUL † reigned one year, and when he had reigned two years over Israel,

Reigned one year, i. e. had now reigned one year, from his first election at Mizpeh, in which time these things were done, which are recorded chap xi, xii, to wit, peaceably, or righteously. Compare 2 Sam ii 10.

2 Saul chose *in three thousand men of Israel, *wherof two thousand were with Saul in Michmash and in mount Beth-el, and a thousand were with Jonathan in Gibeath of Benjamin: and the rest of the people he sent every man to his tent.

Saul chose Heb. and (i. e. then as that adverb is old, i. e. Gen ii 5, xxiii 10, &c.) Saul chose. Three thousand men of Israel, which might be sufficient for constant attendance and service, intending to summon the rest when need should be. Michmash, a tract of ground near Ramah and Beth-el, in the border of Benjamin, and near to the Philistines.

3 And Jonathan smote *the garrison of the Philistines that was in Gaba, and the Philistines heard of it: And Saul blew the trumpet throughout all the land, saying, Let the Hebrews hear.

The design of Saul and Jonathan was to free the land from the garrisons which the Philistines had in it, and they first began to clear their own country of Benjamin. Gaba, not the same place called Gibeath, ver 2. (For if the place were the same, why should he vary the name of it in the same story, and in the next verse? not so likely for Jonathan would choose that place for his camp where the Philistine had a garrison) but another place in the same tribe, in which there were two distinct places, Gaba and Gibeath, Josh xxiii 25. Let the Hebrews hear, i. e. he sent messengers to tell them all what Jonathan had done, and how the Philistines were enraged at it, and made great preparations for war, and therefore what necessary the way of gathering themselves together, and coming to him, for his and their own defence.

4 And all Israel heard say that Saul had smitten a garrison of the Philistines, and that Israel also † was had in abomination with the Philistines: And the people were called together after Saul to Gilgal.

Saul had smitten i. e. Jonathan by Saul's direction and encouragement. The actions of an army are commonly ascribed to their general. Gilgal, the place before appointed by Samuel chap x 8.

5 ¶ And the Philistines gathered themselves together to fight with Israel, thirty thousand chariots, and six thousand horsemen, and people as the sand which is on the sea shore in multitude.

and they came up, and pitched in Michmash, eastward from Beth-aven.

Thirty thousand chariots this number seems incredible to a faithful to whom it may be said sent to reply, that it is far more reasonable to acknowledge a mistake in him that copied out the sacred text in such numeral or historical passages, wherein the doctrine of faith and good life is not directly concerned, than upon such a pretence to question the truth and divinity of the Holy Scriptures, which are so fully attested, and evidently demonstrated. And the mistake is not great in the Hebrew, schalosh for cheshum, and so indeed those two ancient translators, the Syrian and Arabic, translate it, and are supposed to have read in their Hebrew copies, three thousand. Nor is it necessary that all these should be military chariots, but many of them might be for carriage of things belonging to so great an army for such a distinction of chariots we find Exod xiv 7. But there is no hint of this reply. Chariots here may very well be put for the men that rode upon them and fought out of them, by a figure called a metonymy of the subject for the adjunct, or the thing containing for the thing contained in it, than which none more frequent. In the very same manner and by the very same figure the basket is put for the meat in it, Deut xxviii 5, 17, the wilderness for the wild beasts of the wilderness, Psal xxix 8, the nest for the birds in it, Deut xxxii 11, the cup, for the drink in it Jer xlv 12, 1 Cor x 21. And to come more closely to the point, a horse is put for a horse load of wares laid upon it, 1 Kings x 8. and an eye of bread is put for an eye load of bread, both in the Hebrew text of 1 Sam xvi 20, and in an ancient Greek text. And, yet nearer the word chariots is immediately put either for the horses belonging to them, or rather for the men that fought out of them, as 2 Sam x 18, where it is said in the Hebrew that David slew seven hundred chariots, that is seven thousand men which fought in chariots, as it is explained, 1 Chron xix 18, and 1 Kings xx 21, where Ahab is said to smite horses and chariots, and 1 Chron xxiii 4. Psal lxxvi 6 where the chariot and horse (i. e. the men that ride and fight in chariots or upon horses) are said to be cast into a dead sleep, and Ezek xxxix 20, where it is said Ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, (i. e. with men belonging to the chariots, for surely the chariots of iron had been very improper food) with mighty men &c. And let my caviling infidel produce a wise reason why it may not, and ought not, to be so understood here also. Add to all this, that the Philistines were not alone in this expedition but had the help of the Canaanites and the Egyptians, as is very credible, both from Ecclus i 20 and from the nature of the thing. If it be further inquired Why the Philistines should raise so great an army at this time? the answer is obvious. That not only then old and formidable enemy Samuel was yet alive, but a new enemy was risen, even king Saul, who was lately confirmed in his kingdom and had been flushed with his good success against the Ammonites, and was likely to grow more and more potent, if not timely prevented, and they thought that now the Israelitish affairs were come to some consistency, being put into the hands of a king, and therefore they thought fit, one for all to put forth all their strength to suppress the Israelites, and to prevent that ruin which otherwise threatened them.

6 When the men of Israel saw that they were in a strait, (for the people were distressed,) then the people hid themselves in caves, and in thickets, and in rocks, and in high places, and in pits.

They were in a strait, notwithstanding their former presumption, that if they had a king they should be free from all such straits. And hereby God intended to teach them the vanity of all carnal confidence in men, and that they did not one jot less need the help and favour of God now than they did before, when they had no king. The people were distressed, they were not mistaken in their apprehensions of danger, as men oft are for they were really in great danger, their enemy's host far exceeding theirs both in number, and order, and courage, and arms. The people did hide themselves in caves, whereof there were divers in those parts for this very use, as we read in Josephus, and in the Holy Scripture.

7 And some of the Hebrews went over Jordan to the land of Gad and Gilead. As for Saul, he was yet in Gilgal, and all the people followed him trembling.

All the people, to wit, his whole army, opposed to the common people, ver. 6.

8 ¶ And he tarried seven days, according to the set time that Samuel had appointed, but Samuel came not to Gilgal, and the people were scattered from him.

Seven days, not seven complete days, for that the last day was not finished plainly appears from Samuel's reproof, which had then been groundless and absurd and he had falsely charged Saul with breaking God's command therein, ver. 13. And as Samuel came on the seventh day, and that with intent to sacrifice, so doubtless he came in due time for that work, which was to be done before sunrise, acting Exod xxix 38, 39. So Saul waited only six complete days, and part of the seventh, which is here called seven days, for the word day is oft used for a part of the day, as among lawyers so also in sacred Scripture, as Matt xii 10 where Christ is said to be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights i. e. one whole day, and part of the other two days. Moreover this place may be thus rendered He tarried until the seventh day, (as this same phrase is used Gen vi 10, Heb until the seventh of the days) (as the Hebrew lamed is oft taken,) the set time that Samuel had appointed.

9 And Saul said, Bring hither a burnt offering to me and peace offerings. And he offered the burnt offering.

Either himself, or rather by the priest, as Solomon is said to offer, 1 Kings iii 1. Compare 1 Sam x 3.

10 And it came to pass, that as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt offering, behold Samuel came, and Saul went out to meet him, that he might salute him.

Behold Samuel came, i. e. it was told Saul, Behold, Samuel is coming. Salute him i. e. congratulate his coming. Thus he did partly out of respect, and partly by this testimony of his affection and respect to Samuel, he might prevent that rebuke which he might receive from him.

11 ¶ And Samuel said, What hast thou done? And Saul said, Because I saw that the people were scattered from me, and that thou comest not within the days appointed, and that the Philistines gathered themselves together at Michmash.

What hast thou done? he suspected that Saul had transgressed either by his dejected countenance, or some words uttered by him, though not here expressed, but he asks him that he might be more fully and exactly informed, and that Saul might be brought to an ingenuous confession of his sin, and true repentance for it. Within the days appointed i. e. when the seventh day was come, and a good part of it past, whence I concluded thou wouldst not come that day and that thou hadst forgotten thy appointment, or been hindered by some extraordinary occasion.

12 Therefore said I, The Philistines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication unto the Lord. I forced myself therefore, and offered a burnt offering.

I have not made supplication unto the Lord, hence it appears, that sacrifices were accommodated with solemn prayer. I forced myself, I did it against my own mind and inclination. My conscience told me I should forbear it and punctually obey God's command I owed to me by Samuel, but my necessity urged me to make haste.

13 And Samuel said to Saul, Thou hast done foolishly. Thou hast not kept the commandment of the Lord thy God, which he commanded thee. for now would the Lord have established thy kingdom upon Israel for ever.

Thou hast done foolishly in that very thing wherein thou thinkst thou hast done wisely and politically in disobeying my express command upon a pretended necessity, or reason of state. The Lord thy God not only upon common grounds, as thou art his creature, and one of his people, but in a special manner who hath conferred peculiar favours and honours upon thee which is an aggravation of thy sin. Now would the Lord have established thy kingdom upon Israel for ever. Quest. How could this be true, when the kingdom was promised to Judah, Gen. xlix. 10, and consequently must necessarily be taken away from Saul, and from his tribe. Answer. First. The phrase for ever in Scripture use, oftentimes signifies only a long time, as Gen. xlii. 9. I will dwell in the land of the Egyptians. 2. So this had been abundantly verified, if the kingdom had been enjoyed by Saul and by his son, and by his son's son, after whom the kingdom might have come to Judah. Secondly, Though the kingdom had been promised to Saul and to his posterity for ever in a larger sense, yet that was upon condition of his obedience. And therefore God might well promise the kingdom to Judah because at that time, and before, he foretold that Saul would by his disobedience forfeit that promise, and that he would take the forfeiture, and transfer the kingdom to Judah.

14 But now thy kingdom shall not continue. The Lord hath sought him a man after his own heart and the Lord hath commanded him to be captiv over his people, because thou hast not kept that which the Lord commanded thee.

Hath sought, i. e. hath found or discovered as men do by seeking, an anthropopathy. A man after his own heart i. e. such a man as he desires, one who will fulfil all the desires of his heart and not oppose them as thou dost. Hath commanded, i. e. hath appointed or decreed. A law word command is sometimes used for it was not yet actually done.

Because thou hast not kept that which the Lord commanded thee. Quest. First, What was Saul's sin. Answer. First. That Saul invaded the priest's office and offered the sacrifice himself which is not probable both because he had priests with him and among others an eminent one Abiathar chap. xix. 3, and therefore had no occasion nor pretence for that presumption. Or rather secondly, That Saul did not wait the full time for Samuel's coming, for that is the thing which God commanded chap. x. 8. and the breach of the command is the only fault for which Saul makes an apology ver. 11, 12. Quest. Secondly, Why did God so severely punish Saul for so small an offence, and that occasioned by great necessity and done with an honest intention. Answer. In 1. Men are very incompetent judges of God's judgments, because they see but very little, either of the mercy by the offence of God or of the heinous nature and aggravations of the offence. For instance, men see nothing but Saul's outward act which seems small, but God saw with how wicked a mind and heart he did this, with what rebellion against the light of his own conscience as his own will imply with what gross indelicacy and distrust of God's providence with what contempt of God's authority and justice and many other wicked principles and motions of his heart unknown to men. Besides God clearly saw all that wickedness that yet lay hid in his heart and foresaw all his other crimes, and therefore laid the more grounds for his sentence against him than we can imagine. Secondly, God doth sometimes punish small sins severely and that for divers weighty reasons, as that all men may see what the least sin deserves, and how much they owe to God's free and such mercy for passing by their real offences and what need they have not to impute them to in any small sin. Men are very prone to relax upon any punishment of God's mercy, wherefore they are easily and continually drawn on to heinous crimes, and for many other reasons so that some such instances of God's severity are necessary to maintain and caution to all mankind in the present and future ages, and therefore there is far more of mercy and indulgence in such actions, than of rigour and severity, as the law is particular to one person, and therefore is a mercy. Thirdly, It must be remembered that the kingdom of Israel was now in its infancy, and that the first command which he received from God had been ever held a piece of wisdom in all Israel, to punish the first violators of their laws, to secure the honour and obedience, and to afflict and caution command for the future. And accordingly God dealt with Saul the first murderer, with Israel, for their first disobedience with the call, with the first miscarriage of the priests, ver. 1, with the first profanation of the sabbath, Numb. xv. 32, with the first gross hypocrites in the Christian church, Matt. 23, 16. And therefore it is neither strange nor unjust if he deal with Saul after the same manner, and upon the same grounds. Fourthly, Though God threaten Saul with the loss of his kingdom for this sin, yet it is not probable that there was a tacit condition implied as in many such cases, as Jonah in 1 to wit, if he did not heartily repent of this and of all his sins, for the full and final, and exemplary sentence of Saul's rejection is plainly ascribed to another cause, chap. xv. 23, 26, 28, 29, and till that offence neither the Spirit of the Lord departed from him, nor was David anointed in his stead, chap. xvi. 13.

15 And Samuel arose, and gat him up from Gilgal unto Gibeah of Benjamin. And Saul numbered the people that were present with him, about six hundred men.

Unto Gibeah of Benjamin, whither Saul also followed him. It appears from the next verse, either because it was better fortified than Gilgal, or because he expected a greater increase of his army there, it being in his own tribe, and nearer the heart of his kingdom, or because he hoped for Samuel's assistance there.

16 And Saul and Jonathan his son, and the people that were present with them, abode in Gibeah of Benjamin but the Philistines encamped in Michmash.

17 ¶ And the spoilers came out of the camp of the Philistines in three companies. One company turned unto the way that leadeth to Ophrah, unto the land of Shual.

In three companies. That they might march several ways and so were several parts of the country. Ophrah, a city of Benjamin Josh. xviii. 23, south-west from Michmash.

18 And another company turned the way to Beth-horon, and another company turned to the way of the border that looketh to the valley of Zeboun toward the wilderness.

Beth-horon, a city of Ephraim, Josh. xvi. 3 north-west from Michmash. The wilderness, i. e. the wilderness of Jordan eastward.

19 ¶ Now there was no smith found throughout all the land of Israel for the Philistines said, Lest the Hebrews make them swords or spears.

This was a politic course of the Philistines, which also other nations have used. So the Chaldeans took away their smiths, 2 Kings xviii. 14, Jer. xlii. 1, xxii. 2 and Persiana obliged the Romans by covenant, that they should use no iron but in the tillage of their lands.

20 But all the Israelites went down to the Philistines, to sharpen every man his share, and his coulter, and his ax, and his mattock.

In the Philistines, not to the land of the Philistines, for it is not said so, and that was too remote; but to the stations and garrisons which the Philistines yet retained in several parts of Israel's land, though Samuel's authority had so far prevailed them, that they durst not give the Israelites any disturbance. In these, therefore, the Philistines kept all the

the sword of their art
the sword of their art

11 Yet they had a file for the mattress, and for the coulters, and for the for the axes, and to sharpen the goads.

12 And the same day. They allowed them some small helps to make their weapons, and in some sort to serve their purpose. And these words may be otherwise translated, and are so in the Hebrew, both ancient and modern, translations. Therefore the mouths or edges of the mattresses and coulters, &c. were dull or blunt. (In either thus,
It is (1) and put for when at the pariah and is sometimes rendered, as Mark xv 25) the mouths or edges of the mattresses, &c. were blunt. So this passage very well agree both with the foregoing and following words, and the whole sense of the place is entirely thus, They went to the Philistines to sharpen their spears, and mattocks, and coulters, and axes, when they were blunt and (which was more strange, they were forced to go to them even) to sharpen their goads.

22 So it came to pass in the day of battle, that there was neither sword nor spear found in the hand of any of the people that were with Saul and Jonathan but with Saul and with Jonathan his son was there found.

Quest. How could the Israelites smite either the garrison of the Philistines, above, ver 3, or the host of the Ammon-ites chap 11, without arms? And when they had conquered them why did they not take away their arms and reserve them to their own use? Ans. 1 This want of swords and spears is not affirmed concerning all Israel, but is restrained unto those six hundred who were with Saul and Jonathan, whom God by his providence might suffer to be without those arms that the glory of the following victory might be wholly ascribed to God, is for the very same reason God would have but three hundred men left with Gideon, and those armed only with trumpets and pitchers, and lamps, Judg vii. There were no doubt a considerable number of swords and spears among the Israelites, but they generally hid them, as now they did their prowess from the Philistines. And the Philistines had not yet attained to so great a power over them, as wholly to disarm them, but thought it sufficient to prevent the making of new arms, knowing that the old ones would shortly be decayed and useless. 2 There were other arms more common in those times and places than swords and spears, to wit, bows and arrows and slings and stones, as appears from Judg. xx 16 2 Sam i 18 22 2 Kings iii 21, 1 Chron xii 1, 2, besides clubs, and instruments of agriculture which might easily be turned into weapons of war.
3 God so governed the affairs of the Israelites that they had no great number of swords or spears, Judg v 8, that they might be kept in more dependence upon and submission unto God, wherein their safety and happiness consisted. And therefore that famous victory obtained against the Philistines in Samuel's days, was not got by the word of men, but only by thunder from heaven, chap vi 10.

23 And the garrison of the Philistines went out to the passage of Mich-mash.

A place so called, because it was near to Mahanaim and ed towards Gibeon, which, it seems they designed to be surge, and in the mean time to waste the adjoining country.

CHAP XIV

Jonathan and his armour-bearer secretly smite the Philistines' army, they slay one another, 1-10, which being perceived, 16-17, Saul pursueth the Philistines the captivated and hidden Israelites joining in the pursuit, 18-21
Saul adjureth the people not to eat any thing till evening
Jonathan eateth honey: the Philistines are smitten, 24-31
The people eat flesh with the blood Saul restraineth them, and smiteth an other, 32-35. Desiring to pursue the Philistines by night, he consults God, who answers not.

he said to him, And that the cause Jonathan is taken,
Saul's sword, &c. his daughter, wife, &c. 46-52

NOW it came to pass upon a day, that Jonathan the son of Saul said unto the young man that bare his armour, Come, and let us go over to the Philistines' garrison, that is on the other side. But he told not his father.

This was a rash and foolish attempt, if it be examined by common rules, but not so, if we consider the singular promises made to the Israelites, that one should chase a thousand, &c. and especially the heroic and extraordinary motions which were then frequently put into the minds of gallant men by God's Spirit whereby they undertook and accomplished noble and wonderful things, as did Samson and David, and his worthies. On the other side, beyond that rocky passage described below ver 4, 13, which he pointed it with his hand. He told not his father, lest he should hinder him in so improbable an enterprise. Nor was it necessary he should inform him of it because he had a commission from his father to fight when he saw opportunity as he had done without his father's privacy, chap xiii 3.

2 And Saul tarried in the uttermost part of Gibeon under a pomegranate tree which is in Migron and the people that were with him were about six hundred men.

In the uttermost part of Gibeon, in the outworks of the city where he had intrenched himself to observe the motion of the Philistines. In Migron or towards (as the Hebrew both is oft used) Migron, which was another place, but near Gibeon. See Isa x 28.

3 And Ahiah, the son of Ahitub, I-chabod's brother, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eli, the Lord's priest in Shiloh, wearing an ephod. And the people knew not that Jonathan was gone.

Ahiah, the same who is called 11 melchik, 1 Sam xvi 9 11 20, the high priest who was here to attend upon the ark, which was brought hither ver 1. An ephod, to wit the high priest's ephod wherein the Urim and Thummim were.

4 And between the passages, by which Jonathan sought to go over unto the Philistines' garrison, there was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side and the name of the one was Bozez, and the name of the other Seneh.

The passages, so these might be two known and common passages both which Jonathan must cross, or pass over to go to the Philistines, between which the following rocky
ly. But the words may be rendered thus, In the middle (for so the Hebrew participle ben signifies, as Isa xlv 1 and bet, in, is understood by a very frequent ellipsis) on the passage the plural number being put for the singular as is frequent. A sharp rock on the one side, and on the other side, which is not so to be understood as if in this passage one rock was on the right hand, and the other on the left for we should have gone between both, and there was no need of climbing up to them, which is mentioned below ver 15. But the meaning is, that the tooth (or protuberance) of the one rock (as it is in the Hebrew) was on the one side i.e. northward, looking towards Michmash, (the garrison of the Philistines,) and the tooth of the other rock was on the other side, i.e. southward, looking towards Gibeon (where Saul's camp lay,) at the next rock informs us, and Jonathan was forced to climb over these two rocks, because the other and common ways from one town to the other might now be obstructed, or were not so fit for his present design.

5 The forefront of the one was situate northward over against Michmash, and the other southward over against Gibeah

6 And Jonathan said to the young man that bare his armour, Come, and let us go over unto the garrison of these uncircumcised: it may be that the Lord will work for us: for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few

These uncircumcised, so he calls them, partly in contempt, and principally to strengthen his faith by this consideration that his enemies were enemies to God, and without any hope in God or help from him: whereas he was circumcised, and therefore in covenant with God, who was both able and inclined to assist his people. It may be, he speaks doubtfully: for though he found and felt him self stirred up by God to this exploit and was assured that God would deliver his people: yet he was not certain that he would do it at this time and in this way. The Lord will work to wit out it and wonderful thing. There is no restraint to the Lord, there is no person nor thing which can hinder God from thus doing

7 And his armourbearer said unto him, Do all that is in thine heart: turn thee, behold, I am with thee according to thy heart

Turn thee, march on to the enemies

8 Then said Jonathan, Behold, we will pass over unto these men, and we will discover ourselves unto them

9 If they say thus unto us, Turn ye until we come to you, then we will stand still in our place, and will not go up unto them

10 But if they say thus, Come up unto us: then we will go up: for the Lord hath delivered them into our hand: and this shall be a sign unto us

Jonathan not being assured of the success of this present exploit, he measures and by the instance of God's Spirit, as the text shows, pitched upon this: Divers such heroic and extraordinary impulses there were among great and good men in ancient times. 1 Sam. xiv. 13 Judg. vi. 7 which are not precedents to us

11 And both of them discovered themselves unto the garrison of the Philistines: and the Philistines said, Behold, the Hebrews come forth out of the holes where they had hid themselves

Therefore Jonathan chose that rocky and unusual way: But the Philistines might suppose they did not come from Saul's camp to fight with them: but rather out of the caves and holes of the rocks from which their necessity had now driven them

12 And the men of the garrison answered Jonathan and his armourbearer and said, Come up to us, and we will shew you a thing: And Jonathan said unto his armourbearer, Come up after me: for the Lord hath delivered them into the hand of Israel

He will shew you the way having something of importance to communicate to you: A speech of contempt and derision. The Lord hath delivered them, he piously and modestly ascribes the success which he now foresees to God only

13 And Jonathan climbed up upon his hands and upon his feet, and his armourbearer after him: and they fell before Jonathan, and his armourbearer: and he said, I am here

The Philistines could not have denied their ascent, but thought scorn to do more: questioning, but they could not get them off in a moment when they were come up to them according to their invitation

Jonathan and his armourbearer being endowed with extraordinary strength and courage, and having with un-credible boldness killed the first they met with, and so proceeding with success, it is not strange if the Philistines were both astonished and intimidated. God also struck them with a panic terror, and withal, intimidated their minds, and possibly put an evil spirit among them, which in this universal confusion made them conceive that there was treachery amongst themselves, and therefore caused them to slay their swords in one another: how else as appears from ver. 16, 20

14 And that first slaughter, which Jonathan and his armourbearer made, was about twenty men, within as it were an half acre of land, which a yoke of oxen might plow

15 And there was trembling in the host, in the field, and among all the people: the garrison, and the spoilers, they also trembled, and the earth quaked, so it was: a very great trembling

Trembling, a great consternation, partly from this unexpected and prodigious slaughter, which made them suspect there was more than man in the case, and that the Lord (of whose infinite power they had had former experience) was come forth to fight against them, and partly from the Lord who took away their spirits and strength and struck them with fear and amazement. In the field i. e. in the whole host, which was there in the field. Among all the people i. e. among all the rest of their forces, as well those in the garrison (as it is here explained in the following words) at Michmash as the spoilers mentioned chap. xii. 17: the report of this prodigy and with it the terror of God speedily passed from one to another. The earth quaked, either, 1. Metaphorically and hyperbolically the whole land i. e. the inhabitants of the land, to wit, of the Philistines trembled. Or rather, 2. Properly God sent an earthquake among them which probably overthrew their tent and chariot and destroyed many of their persons and scattered the whole host making them to flee away: for their lives

16 And the watchmen of Saul in Gibeah of Benjamin looked, and, behold, the multitude melted away, and they went on beating down one another

In Gibeah, or, in the hill as the very same word is rendered chap. xii. 10 and that was the fittest place for watchmen. The multitude, to wit of that numerous host of the Philistines. Melted away i. e. were strangely and suddenly dispersed, and put to flight. Beating down one another, either, 1. Accidentally, through hasty flight; or, 2. With design to destroy one another, as the authors or detectors of the present calamity. Possibly God blinded their eyes or their minds that they could not distinguish friends from foes. Compare Judg. vi. 22, 2 Kings vi. 18, &c., 2 Chron. xx. 23

17 Then said Saul unto the people that were with him, Number now and see who is gone from us: And when they had numbered, behold, Jonathan and his armourbearer were not there

Saul probably supposed that not only Jonathan, but also some considerable number of his army, was gone, and that by them that slaughter was made

18 And Saul said unto Ahiah, Bring hither the ark of God. For the ark of God was at that time with the children of Israel

That the priest may put on the ephod, and may inquire of the Lord before the ark what the occasion of this tumult among our enemies is, and what we shall do. With the children of Israel, to wit in the camp whither some way it was brought, as 1 Sam. iv. 5 and now the rather, partly because it was now in an unsettled condition, and without the tabernacle, and therefore easily removed from place to place, and partly because Saul thought to compensate Samuel's absence with the presence of the ark

19 ¶ And it came to pass, while Saul talked unto the priest, that the noise that was in the host of the Philistines went on and increased, and Saul said unto the priest, Withdraw thine hand.

Trouble not thyself in putting on the breastplate, with the ephod, to inquire of God, for I now plainly discern the matter, the business calls not for prayer but for action. But if it did so, there was the more need of God's direction and blessing, that they might act with more success. Herein therefore he shows his impatience in waiting upon God, his hypocrisy, in pretending to religion, and yet his profaneness, in neglecting and despising it.

20 And Saul and all the people that were with him assembled themselves, and they came to the battle, and behold, every man's sword was against his fellow, and there was a very great discomfiture.

The Philistines slew one another, which might come either from mistake, of which see on ver 16, or from mutual jealousies and passions, to which God could easily dispose them.

21 Moreover the Hebrews that were with the Philistines before that time, which went up with them into the camp from the country round about, even they also turned to be with the Israelites that were with Saul and Jonathan.

It hath went up with them into the camp, either by constraint as servants, or in policy, to gain their favour and protection.

22 Likewise all the men of Israel which Phad had themselves in mount Ephraim, when they heard that the Philistines fled, even they also followed hard after them in the battle.

23 So the Lord saved Israel that day, and the battle passed over unto Beth-aven.

The battle is the warriors who were engaged in the battle, and were pursuing and fighting with the Philistines.

24 ¶ And the men of Israel were distressed that day, for Saul had adjured the people, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food until evening, that I may be avenged on mine enemies. So none of the people tasted any food.

Here distressed with hunger and weakness and faintness. Hence arising, and all by reason of the following oath. As Saul's intention was goddly, namely, to execute vengeance upon God's and his enemies, so the matter of the obligation was not simply and in itself unlawful. It had not been so rigorous in excluding all food without any exception of cases of necessity, and in obliging the people to it under pain of a curse and in incurring death, ver 24-29. 41, which was a punishment far exceeding the oath. None of the people tasted any food, partly in obedience to the king's command, and partly for fear of the curse.

25 And all they of the land came to a wood, and there was honey upon the ground.

All they of the land, Heb. all the land is the people of the land; as it is explained below ver 29. and so the word is taken Gen xli 57. All the Israelites who were with Saul.

26 And when the people were come into the wood, behold, the honey dropped, but no man put his hand to his mouth, for the people feared the oath.

The honey dropped. It hath been observed by many travellers and writers, that bees do oftentimes settle themselves, and make their hives and honey, in the trunks of trees, or clefts of rocks, or holes of the earth, and thus in divers countries, but eminently in this of Canaan, as may be gathered from Deut xxxii 13, Psal lxxxi 16, whence it was called a land flowing with milk and honey.

27 But Jonathan heard not when his father charged the people with the oath, wherefore he put forth the end of the rod that was in his hand, and dipped it in an honeycomb, and put his hand to his mouth; and his eyes were enlightened.

Jonathan heard not, being then absent and in pursuit of the Philistines, divers of the Israelites having joined themselves with him, ver 21. His eyes were enlightened, he was refreshed and recovered his lost spirits, whereof put went into his optic nerves, and so cleared his sight, which was much darkened by fume as is usual.

28 Then answered one of the people, and said, Thy father straitly charged the people with an oath, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food this day. And the people were faint.

One of the people, who came along with Saul, whose forces were now united with Jonathan's.

29 Then said Jonathan, My father hath troubled the land, see, I pray you, how mine eyes have been enlightened, because I tasted a little of this honey.

The land is the people of the land, the whole army, whom by this rash oath he hath greatly injured. The zeal of defending himself makes him run into the other extreme of accusing his father, and that before the people, whom by this means he might have stirred up to a sedition.

30 How much more, if haply the people had eaten freely to day of the spoil of their enemies, which they found? for had there not been now a much greater slaughter among the Philistines?

31 And they smote the Philistines that day from Michmash to Ajalon, and the people were very faint.

Ajalon, either that in Dan, Jerh vii 12, or rather, that in Judah, 2 Chron xi 10.

32 And the people flew upon the spoil, and took sheep and oxen and calves, and slew them on the ground, and the people did eat them with the blood.

The people flew upon the spoil, to wit, at evening, when the time pitched by Saul was expired. With the blood, not having patience to tarry till the blood was perfectly gone out of them as they should have done. See Gen ix 4. Lev xii 11. Deut xii 16. So they who seemed to take countenance of the king's commandment for fear of the curse, broke the scripture of transgressing God's command.

33 ¶ Then they told Saul saying, Behold, the people sin against the Lord, in that they eat with the blood. And he said, Ye have transgressed, roll a great stone unto me this day.

He sees their fault, but not his own, in giving the occasion to it. Roll a great stone unto me, that the cattle might be all killed in one place, under the inspection of Saul, or some other appointed by him for that work, and upon the stone that the blood may sooner and better flow out.

34 And Saul said, Disperse yourselves among the people, and say unto them, Bring me hither every man his ox, and every man his sheep, and slay them here, and eat, and sin not against the Lord in eating with the blood. And all the people brought every man his ox with him that night, and slew them there.

And his sheep, which is to be understood out of the foregoing words.

35 And Saul built an altar unto the Lord.

<sup>1 Heb. that altar he began to build upon the 14th B.</sup>
JOHN † the same was the first altar that he built unto the LORD

Either for a monument of the victory, or rather, for sacrifice, as the next words imply. The same was the first altar, though he had occasion to do so oft ere this time. So this is noted as another evidence of his neglect of God and his own life. It is true Saul sacrificed before this, as at Gilgal, but that was upon an old altar, erected by others.

36 ¶ And Saul said, Let us go down after the Philistines by night and spoil them until the morning light and let us not leave a man of them. And they said, Do whatsoever seemeth good unto thee. Then said the priest Let us draw near hither unto God.

Remembering Saul's contempt of God's ordinance the last time and the ill consequence of it, and perceiving Saul ready to run into the same error again, even though he had not now the same picture of the necessity of haste as before and that the people were forward to comply with the motion, he gives them this pious and prudent advice. Hither unto God to wit to the ark, is above, ver. 18.

37 And Saul asked counsel of God, Shall I go down after the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into the hand of Israel? But he answered him not that day.

1. Because he was displeased with Saul for his former neglect ver. 18-19 where he began to ask advice of God, but was so rude and impious as not to try for an answer and therefore it was but a pretence that when Saul did ask God would not vouchsafe him an answer. Or 2. To manifest his dislike of the violation of oath. For although Jonathan might have a favour even from his invincible ignorance and in extremity and though Saul had done foolishly in making this oath (which also God would this way discover yet when once it was made, God would hereby teach them that it should be observed and that they should obtain even from all appearance of the breach of it.

38 And Saul said, Draw ye now hither all the chief of the people and know and see wherein this sin hath been this day.

All the chief of the people in the name of all the people that you may be witnesses and may see where the fault lies.

39 Let, as the LORD liveth, which saveth Israel, though it be in Jonathan my son he shall surely die. But there was not a man among all the people that answered him.

None of them who either saw Jonathan eating or heard of it, interposed in his behalf partly because they were attested that his offence excused him and that there was some other reason of God's not answering and partly from their great love to Jonathan whom they would not expose to death for a small offence.

40 Then said he unto all Israel Be ye on one side, and I and Jonathan my son will be on the other side. And the people said unto Saul, Do what seemeth good unto thee.

41 Therefore Saul said unto the LORD God of Israel Give a perfect lot. And Saul and Jonathan were taken but the people escaped.

Give a perfect lot, or a lot that is not put for declaring or pronouncing a doom ver. 42. 1. Prov. 16. 1. the perfect or lucky person is the LORD, so guide the lot, that it may discover who is guilty in this matter, and that it may clear the innocent. The people escaped, to wit, the danger, they were pronounced guilty.

42 And Saul said, Cast lots between me and Jonathan my son. And Jonathan was taken.

God so ordered the lot, not that he approved Saul's creation, ver. 24, or his oath that the transgressor should die, ver. 39, nor that he would expose Jonathan to death, (for he designed so to rule the hearts of the people, and of Saul also that Jonathan should not die,) but because he would have the whole matter brought to light, partly, that Saul's folly might be chastised, when he saw what danger it had brought upon his eldest and excellent son; partly, that Jonathan's innocency might be cleared; and partly to establish the authority of kings and rulers, and the obedience which subjects owe to all their lawful commands.

43 Then Saul said to Jonathan, Tell me what thou hast done. And Jonathan told him, and said, I did but taste a little honey with the end of the rod that was in mine hand, and, lo, I must die.

I am sentenced to death for it which is hard measure. He had another answer, that he knew not of his father's command but that being said before, ver. 27, it was needless here to repeat it.

44 And Saul answered, God do so and more also for thou shalt surely die, Jonathan.

From this and other like expressions of Saul's, some gather that he was exceeding prone to the vice of swearing and cursing. Thou shalt surely die strange perverseness. He who was so indulgent as to spare wicked Agag, chap. xv. is now so severe as to destroy his own worthy son. He that could easily dispense with God's righteous and reasonable command, will not bear the violation of his own rash and foolish command, because his own authority and power is concerned in this, and only God's in the other.

45 And the people said unto Saul, Shall Jonathan die who hath wrought this great salvation in Israel? God forbid. As the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of his head fall to the ground, for he hath wrought with God this day. So the people rescued Jonathan, that he died not.

With God's concurrence with God, or by God's help he had wrought this salvation. God is so far from being offended with Jonathan, as thou apprehendest, that he hath graciously owned and assisted him in the great service of this day.

46 Then Saul went up from following the Philistines and the Philistines went to their own place.

Saul went up from following the Philistines, partly because he was discouraged by God's refusing to answer him and partly because his delays had given them occasion to secure themselves.

47 ¶ So Saul took the kingdom over Israel, and fought against all his enemies on every side against Moab, and against the children of Ammon, and against Edom, and against the kings of Zobah, and against the Philistines and whithersoever he turned himself he vexed them.

Took the kingdom, i.e. recovered it, and resumed the administration of it, after he had in a manner lost it, partly by Samuel's sentence chap. xiii. 14, and partly by the Philistines, who had almost turned his back on it. But now, being encouraged by this success, he returns to the exercise of his kingly office. Zobah lay not far from Damascus. See 2 Sam. viii. 5. He vexed them, Heb. condemned them, he treated them like wicked people, and enemies to God and his people, or, he persecuted them.

48 And he gathered an host, and smote the Amalekites, and delivered Israel out of the hands of them that spoiled them.

into the Amalekites, which is here mentioned only in the general, but is particularly described in the next chapter

49 Now the sons of Saul were Jonathan, and Ishui, and Melchishua and the names of his two daughters were these: the name of the firstborn Merab, and the name of the younger Michal

Ishui, called also Abimelech, chap xxxi 2, 1 Chron viii 33. Ishbotheb, Saul's other son, is here omitted, because he intended to mention only those of his sons who went with him into the battles here mentioned and who were afterwards slain with him

50 And the name of Saul's wife was Ahinoam, the daughter of Ahimaaz and the name of the captain of his host was Abner, the son of Neri, Saul's uncle

51 And Kish was the father of Saul, and Ner the father of Abner was the son of Abiel

52 And there was sore war against the Philistines all the days of Saul and when Saul saw any strong man, or any valiant man, he took him unto him into his service, or army

CHAP XV

Samuel sendeth Saul to destroy the Amalekites his army 1-5 He favoureth the Kenites spareth Agag and the best of the spoil God rejects Saul from being king 6-11 Thus Samuel declares to Saul, he commendeth earnestly at last humbly himself, 12-25 Samuel is unmoved hereafter, his mouth rent is a sign Saul of his ruin God cannot lie 26-29 Samuel killeth Agag, goeth from Saul, and mourneth for him, 30-35

SAMUEL also said unto Saul, The Lord sent me to anoint thee to be king over his people, over Israel now therefore hearken thou unto the voice of the words of the Lord

The Lord made thee king and therefore thou art highly obliged to serve and obey him Thou hast committed one error already, for which God hath severely rebuked and threatened, now therefore make amends for thy former error, and regain God's favour by thy exact obedience to what he now commands

2 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way when he came up from Egypt

I seem to have forgotten, but now I will show that I remember and now will revenge, those old injuries done four hundred years ago, which now I will punish in their children; which was the more just, because they continue in the same cruel practices below vs 33 In the way when he came up from Egypt, when he was newly come out of cruel and long bondage and was now weak and weary, and faint, and hungry Deut xvi 18 and therefore it was barbarous and inhuman, instead of that pity which even nature prompted them to afford, to add affliction, to the afflicted; it was also horrid impiety to fight against God himself and to lift up their hand in a manner against the Lord's throne, as some translate these words Exod xvii 16, whilst they struck at that people which God had brought forth in so stupendous and miraculous a way

3 Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not, but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass.

All that they have, both persons and goods, kill all that live, and consume all things without life, for I will have no remnant of that people, whom long since I have cursed and devoted to utter destruction Spare them not, show no compassion or favour to any of them The same thing repeated to prevent mistake and oblige Saul to the exact performance hereof, viz, to leave him without excuse, in case of neglect Infant and suckling for their parents' crime and punishment, which was not unjust because God is the supreme Lord and giver of life, and can requite his own when he pleaseth Infants also are born in sin, Psal li 5 and therefore liable to God's wrath, Eph ii 3, and to death Rom v 12, 14 Their death also was rather a mercy than a curse to them, as being the occasion of preventing the vast increase of their sin and punishment Or and sheep, camel and ass, which being all made for man's benefit it is not strange nor unjust if they suffer with him, and for him, and for the instruction of mankind

4 And Saul gathered the people together, and numbered them in Telaim, two hundred thousand footmen, and ten thousand men of Judah

Who are particularly noted here, as also chap xi 8, either as select persons of extraordinary strength and courage, or to commend that tribe which, though the kingdom had been promised to their own tribe yet were forward in serving, and obeying a king of another, and that a firm united tribe

5 And Saul came to a city of Amalek, and he laid wait in the valley

A city of Amalek then chief city, where then king was as is probable from ver 8 Saul wait, intending to draw them forth of their city by some pretence like that of Joshua Josh vii and then to intercept them, and so surprise their city which imply they did though it be not here recorded it being not worth while to mention all the minute circumstances of such matters

6 And Saul said unto the Kenites, Go, depart, get you down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them for ye shewed kindness to all the children of Israel, when they came up out of Egypt So the Kenites departed from among the Amalekites

The Kenites, a people descending from or nearly related unto Jethro who anciently dwelt in rocks near the Amalekites, Numb xxiv 21 and afterwards some of them dwelt in Judah Josh i 16, whence it is probable they removed (which dwelling in tents they could easily do,) and retired to their old habitation, because of the wars and troubles wherewith Judah was annoyed Ye showed kindness to all your progenitors did so Exod xxiii 12, Numb x and for their sakes all of you shall live the better for ye were not guilty of that sin for which Amalek is now to be destroyed

7 And Saul smote the Amalekites from Havilah until thou comest to Shur, that is over against Egypt

From one end of their country to the other, he smote all that he met with, but a great number of them fled away upon the noise of his coming, as is usual in such case, and sought themselves in other places, until the storm was over, when they returned again, of whom we read before, chap xiii 6, xiv 22

8 And he took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive, and utterly destroyed all the people with the edge of the sword

Saul spared Agag either out of foolish pity for the goodness of his person, which Josephus notes, or for his respect to his royal majesty, in the preservation of which he thought himself concerned or for the glory of his triumph compare ver 12 All the people, to wit, the body of the people, but not every individual person is both been showed Universal particles are commonly thus understood, as in confessed

9 But Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best of the sheep, and of

<sup>1</sup> of the the oxen, and <sup>2</sup> in sort of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly.

Saul and the people, the one proposed to do so, and the other consented to it and so both were guilty. All that was good, which it is more than probable they reserved for their own use rather than for sacrifice, because they knew God would not accept it, either contrary to his own command. Thus they obey God only so far as they could without inconvenience to the selves: they destroyed only what was not worth keeping nor fit for their use.

10 ¶ Then came the word of the Lord unto Samuel, saying,

11 <sup>1</sup> repent It repenteth me that I have set up Saul to be king: for he is <sup>2</sup> turned back turned back from following me, <sup>3</sup> and hath not performed and hath not performed my commandments. And it <sup>4</sup> grieved grieved Samuel, and he cried unto the Lord all night.

It repenteth me—repentance properly notes grief of heart and change of counsels, and therefore cannot be in God, who is unchangeable, most wise, and most blessed: but it is ascribed to God in such cases when men say God came to repent, and when God alters his course and method. I do it, and treats a person as if he did indeed repent of all the kindness he had showed to him. He grieved me—the Lord did not to explore his pardoning mercy for Saul and for the people, so far was he from repenting, in their calamity, as an envious and self-seeking person would have done.

12 And when Samuel rose early to meet Saul in the morning, it was told Samuel, saying, Saul came to Carmel and behold he set him up a place, and is gone about, and passed on, and gone down to Gilgal.

Carmel, not Mount Carmel, of which Josh. xii. 22, but another mountain or town in the tribe of Judah, of which see Josh. xv. 55. A place—a commemorative trophy of his victory: at the same Hebrew word is used 2 Sam. viii. 18. And this may be here noted by way of remark, that he set it up not to God's honour, but to himself, i. e. to his own praise, which he minded in the first place, and afterwards went to Gilgal, as it here follows, to offer sacrifice to God.

13 And Samuel came to Saul, and Saul said unto him, Blessed be thou of the Lord: I have performed the commandment of the Lord.

Blessed be thou of the Lord—I thank thee, and I beg that God would bless thee for sending me upon this employment and giving me the opportunity of manifesting my obedience to God. I have performed the commandment of the Lord—to wit for the mun and substance of it, to wit the extirpation of that wicked people, for he thought the sparing of Agag, and the cattle very inconsiderable in the case, though indeed it was expressly contrary to God's command, but self-interest made him exceeding partial to his own cause: or else like a bold hypocrite, he pretends that for his part he had obeyed God, resolving, it seems, to cast the blame upon the people, as he did.

14 And Samuel said, What meanest thou thus bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?

How can this evidence of a wicked heart stand with the profession of thy innocency?

15 And Saul said, I have brought them from the Amalekites: for the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God, and the rest we have utterly destroyed.

They, i. e. the people. Thus, after the manner of all hypocrites, he excuseth himself and lays the blame upon the people, whereas they could not do it without his privity and consent and he should have used his power and authority to overrule them for God's sake, as he had done formerly for his own sake. But the truth is, he was zealous for his own honour and interest, but foreworn where God only was concerned. To sacrifice unto the Lord—it is not likely that this was his and the people's design, but thus he now pretends, and ascribes that to his piety which was indeed the effect of his impiety and avarice. Thy God, whom thou lovest and serveest, and therefore must needs be pleased with our pious respect to him and his service.

16 Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee what the Lord hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, Say on.

17 And Samuel said, When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the Lord anointed thee king over Israel?

Little in thine own sight, i. e. modest humble, and submissive as I Sam. ix. 21, x. 22, whereby he implies that now he was grown proud, and stubborn, and impudent, both to commit it, and justify it.

18 And the Lord sent thee on a journey, and said, Go and utterly destroy the sinners the Amalekites, and fight against them, until they be consumed.

The sinners—so called by way of eminency, as that word is used Gen. xiii. 13, Matt. ix. 10, John ix. 21, 31.

19 Wherefore then dost thou not obey the voice of the Lord, but didst fly upon the spoil, and didst evil in the sight of the Lord?

Who cannot be deceived by thy fair professions of religion but knows very well that thou didst not seek sacrifice for God but profit thyself.

20 And Saul said unto Samuel, Yea, <sup>1</sup> I have obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have gone the way which the Lord sent me, and have brought Agag the king of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites.

He addeth obstinacy and impudence to his crime, and justifies his fact, though he hath nothing of any moment to say but what he said before. So he gives Samuel the lie and reflects upon him as one that had falsely accused him. Thou broughtst Agag, to be dealt with as God pleaseth and as thou thinkest fit.

21 But the people took of the spoil, <sup>1</sup> sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in Gilgal.

Heb. the chief of the devoted things, which being devoted to destruction I thought it most proper to destroy them by way of sacrifice to God. But God had commanded Saul himself to smite and lay all upon the place, above, <sup>1</sup> and to utterly destroy them.

22 And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, <sup>1</sup> to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

To obey is better than sacrifice, because obedience to God is a moral duty, constantly and indispensably necessary, but sacrifice is but a ceremonial institution, sometimes unnecessary as it was in the wilderness, and sometimes sinful when it is offered by a polluted heart, or in an irregular manner, therefore thy gross disobedience to God's express command is not to be compensated with sacrifice. To hearken, i. e. to obey, as hearing is oft used in scripture. Is as the fat of rams, than the choicest part of all the sacrifice, to wit, the fat, which was appropriated to God, 1 er in 16; whereas the offerer might partake of other parts of it.

23 For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being king.

Rebellion, i. e. disobedience to God's express precept, which was Saul's case. Is as the sin of witchcraft, i. e. though not so great, yet as inexcusable and impudent a sin as witchcraft; as plainly condemned, and as certainly destructive and damnable. Stubbornness, either wilful and presumptuous sin, whereby a man violently breaks loose from God's command, and resists his authority, or rather perseverance or contumacy in sin, justifying it, and pleading for it, which was Saul's present crime. Is an iniquity and idolatry, or, the iniquity of idolatry, this being an hendads, as judgment and justice, Dent xvi 18 is put for the judgment of justice, or just judgment. Or idolatry (for so the Hebrew word aven signifies, as Jer x 15, Hos iv 15, & 5, compared with 1 Kings xii 29) even the teraphim, which is here mentioned as one of the worst kinds of idolatry. Hath also rejected thee from being king, i. e. hath pronounced the sentence of rejection, for that he was not actually rejected or deposed by God plainly appears, because not only the people, but even David afterwards, owned him as king, and Samuel at Saul's desire did honour him, i. e. own him as king before the people, ver 30.

24 ¶ And Saul said unto Samuel, I have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the Lord, and thy words, because I d feared the people, and obeyed their voice.

I have sinned, which confession proceeded not from true repentance, but from the sense of his great danger, and from a desire of recalling that dreadful sentence denounced against him. The commandment of the Lord, and thy words, i. e. the commandment of the Lord delivered to me by thy words, another hendads. I feared the people, who as thou knowest are set upon mischief, and would probably have broken forth into mutiny or rebellion had I done otherwise. But how little he feared the people may be seen by 1 Sam xi 7, xii 21. But this was a false cause: he doth he acknowledge the true cause, which was his covetousness, and because he did not fear God.

25 Now therefore, I pray thee, pardon my sin, and turn again with me, that I may worship the Lord.

Pardon my sin, use thy great interest with God to obtain the pardon of my sin. Or do thou pardon my sin, against thee, for he had sinned not only against God, but against Samuel also, as God's prophet, and therefore needed a pardon both from God and man. And turn again with me to Gilgal, whence Saul was gone forth to meet Samuel, and Samuel is said to turn again to Gilgal, not properly for he had not now been there, but by way of concomitance, because he accompanied Saul, who was come thence, and returned thither. See the like expression Ruth i 10 22, ii 6. That I may worship the Lord, that I may offer fruit and sacrifices to God, partly to praise him for the past victory, and partly to implore his mercy, and the taking off of my sin and punishment. This was a politic device of Saul's, that Samuel might at least seem to countenance his design of retaining the cattle for sacrifice, which Samuel seeing refused to do it. Heb and I will worship the Lord, i. e. I will seek his pardon and favour.

26 And Samuel said unto Saul, I will not return with thee: for thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord hath rejected thee from being king over Israel.

I will not return with thee, this was no he might he desired to be returned, because he spoke what he meant, his words and intentions agreed together, though afterwards he saw reason to change his intentions (compare Gen vi 23) which may relieve many perplexed consciences, who think themselves obliged to do what they have said they would do, though they see just cause to change their minds.

27 And as Samuel turned about to go away, he laid hold upon the skirt of his mantle, and it rent.

28 And Samuel said unto him, The Lord hath rent the kingdom of Israel from thee this day, and hath given it to a neighbour of thine, that is better than thou.

Samuel makes use of the emergent occasion, as a sign, to signify and confirm his former prediction. A neighbour of thine, either another man, or another Israelite, for the word neighbour is used both ways, or rather, one of the neighbouring tribe, even Judah whose inheritance did not only join to that of Benjamin, but was partly mixed with it.

29 And also the strength of Israel will not be nor repent for he is not a man that he should repent.

He calls God the strength of Israel, partly, to show the reason why God neither will nor can he, because lying is a weakness, and proceeds from the sense of a man's weakness, because he cannot many times accomplish his design without lying and dissimulation, which the more many princes have used for the very reason. But, saith he, God needs no such artifices, he can do whatsoever he pleaseth by his absolute power, and hath no need to use lies to accomplish his will. Partly to show that Israel should be no longer by Saul's loss as he might vainly imagine, because he had saved them from their enemies on every side, chap xiv 17. For not Saul but God was the strength and Protector of Israel, and he would continue to save them when Saul was lost and gone. And partly to assure Saul that God would execute the threatening because he wanted not strength to do it, and none could hinder him in it. Not repent, i. e. nor change his counsel, which denotes an effect of weakness and imperfection, either of wisdom or power.

30 Then he said, I have sinned: yet honour me now. I pray thee, before the elders of my people, and before Israel, and turn again with me, that I may worship the Lord thy God.

Here he plainly discovers his hypocrisy, and the true nature of this and his former confession, he was not solicitous for the favour of God but for his honour and power with Israel.

31 So Samuel turned again after Saul, and Saul worshipped the Lord.

Samuel turned again after Saul, not to worship the Lord with him, for that he did not, and therefore it is here mentioned that Saul only worshipped the Lord, but for two other reasons: first, that people might not upon pretence of this sentence of rejection immediately withdraw all respect and obedience to their sovereign, whereby they would both have sinned against God and have been as sheep without a shepherd. Secondly, that he might rectify Saul's error and execute God's judgment upon Agag.

32 ¶ Then said Samuel, Bring ye hither to me Agag the king of the Amalekites. And Agag came unto him delicately. And Agag said, Surely the bitterness of death is past.

Delicately, or in delights, or in his ornaments, i. e. he came not like an offender, expecting the sentence of death, but in that subtle and graceful which became his quality. Agag said, or, for Agag said, this being the reason why he came so. The bitterness of death is past, I who have escaped death from the hands of a warlike prince in the face of battle, shall certainly never suffer death from an old prophet in time of peace.

33 And Samuel said, As thy sword hath made women childless, so shall thy mother be childless among women. And Samuel hewed Agag in pieces before the Lord in Gilgal.

They sword hath made women childless, whereby it appears that he was a cruel tyrant and guilty of many bloody actions, and that towards God's people, though it be not related elsewhere. And this seems to be added for the fuller vindication of God's justice and to show, that although God did at this time remember and revenge a crime committed by this man's ancestors four hundred years ago, yet he did not punish an innocent son for his father's crimes but one that allowed and persisted in the same evil courses. Samuel hewed Agag in pieces by Divine instinct, and in pursuance of God's express and particular command, above, ver. 3, which being sinfully neglected by Saul is now executed by Samuel. See the like example 1 Kings xviii 10. But these are no precedents for private persons to take the sword of justice into their hands, for we must live by the laws of God and not by extraordinary examples. Before the Lord, either before the ark which, it seems, Saul carried with him in this, or he did in his former expedition chap. xiv 18, or before God's altar or in the public assembly.

34 ¶ Then Samuel went to Ramah, and Saul went up to his house to Gibeah of Saul.

35 And Samuel came no more to see Saul until the day of his death: nevertheless Samuel mourned for Saul: and the Lord repeated that he had made Saul king over Israel.

To see Saul, i. e. to visit him either in token of respect or friendship, or to seek counsel from God for him, or to give counsel to him. Seeing is put for visiting here, and 2 Kings viii 29. Otherwise he did see him afterwards chap. xiv 24. I thought and it was not Samuel that came thither with a design to see Saul, which is implied in the phrase here, but Saul went thither to see Samuel, and that accidentally. Samuel mourned for Saul, partly for Saul's sake, whose sad condition he lamented, and partly for Israel's sake, whose sin he feared might by this means be doubtful and dangerous.

CHAP. XVI.

Samuel is sent by God, who under pretence of a sacrifice for fear of Saul cometh to Beth-lehem, sanctifieth Jesse and his sons 1-5. His human judgment in choosing Ithai the eldest son is reproved 6-7. God had chosen David the youngest to be king in Saul's place 8-12. Samuel anointeth him and the Spirit of God cometh upon him, but departeth from Saul and an evil spirit cometh upon him, 13-14. He sends for David to quiet at his house. Saul beareth him and maketh him his armour-bearer: he playeth before Saul when the evil spirit deserveth him 15-23.

AND the Lord said unto Samuel, "How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing I have rejected him from reigning over Israel? Fill thine horn with oil, and go, I will send thee to Jesse the Beth-lehemite: for I have provided me a king among his sons."

How long wilt thou mourn for Saul and pray for his restitution? which the following words imply that he did have rejected him from reigning over Israel, the manifestation of my peremptory will should make thee submit to my pleasure. Fill thine horn with oil which was used in the inauguration of kings, is chap. xvi 1 Kings i 39. But here it is used in the designation of a king, though David was not actually made king, but it still remained a subject, as is evident from chap. xxv 2. And the reason of this anticipation was partly the request of Samuel and other good men, against whom it was in case of Saul's death, of which they expected every day to hear, and partly the assurance of David's title which otherwise would have been very doubtful. For the prevention of which doubt, it was very meet that the same person and prophet who had anointed Saul, might now, upon God's rejection of Saul, anoint David to succeed him upon his death: and because Samuel was now not far from his death, and was to die before Saul, it was fit that David's anointing should be hastened and done before its proper time, I have provided me a king this phrase is very emphatical, and implies the difference between this and the former king. Saul was a king of the people's providing, he was the product of their inordinate and sinful desires, they desired him for themselves, and for their own glory and safety, as they supposed but this is a king of my own providing, one that I have spied out, one of that tribe to which I have anointed the kingdom, Gen. xlix 10. A king for me, not one to gratify the people's desires, but to fulfil all my will, as it is said, Acts xiii 22, and to serve my glory. Or, my king, the Hebrew phrase, to me, or for me, being commonly used for the word mine.

2 And Samuel said, How can I go? if Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the Lord said, Take an heifer with thee, and say, I am come to sacrifice to the Lord.

How can I go, to wit, safely? a question which seems to favour of him in fault, for he should have strongly believed that God, who had set him upon the work, would carry him through it. I am come to sacrifice to the Lord, which he used oft to do, sometimes in one place, and sometimes in another, that so he might encourage and keep up the worship of God in all of them. This was one cause though not the only cause, of his coming, nor was he obliged to declare all the causes of it.

3 And call Jesse to the sacrifice, and I will shew thee what thou shalt do: and thou shalt anoint unto me him whom I name unto thee.

Call Jesse to the sacrifice i. e. invite him to the feast which, after the manner was made of the flesh of the sacrifice, and it belonged to Samuel, as the officer of the sacrifice to invite whom he pleased. Whom I name, i. e. whom I shall describe as it were by name.

4 And Samuel did thus which the Lord spake, and came to Beth-lehem. And the elders of the town trembled at his coming, and said, Comest thou peaceably?

The elders of the town trembled at his coming, partly because it was strange and unexpected to them, this being but an obscure town Micah i 2, and remote from Samuel, and therefore they justly thought there was some extraordinary reason for it, and then guilty consciences made them fear that he came to denounce some dreadful and particular judgment of God upon them, and partly that Saul whose heart was estranged from and incensed against Samuel, should upon this occasion conceive a jealousy of them, and a displeasure against them. Peaceably, Heb. in or with peace, either, first, To thyself. Comest thou voluntarily, or to flee from the rage of Saul? Or, secondly, To us. Comest thou with no evil tidings to us, either from God or from Saul? The Hebrew phrase Comest thou in peace? being as much as to say, (in our phrase,) Is all well?

5 And he said, Peaceably. I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord: sanctify yourselves, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice.

Sanctify yourselves, prepare yourselves in the manner expressed, Exod. xix 14, 15. To the sacrifice Heb. the sacrifice, i. e. join with me in this act of worship, and offering this sacrifice thereby to give thanks for the blessings you have received from him and to pray for what you want. It seems evident that there was something peculiar in Jesse's invitation. For first, Both he and his sons were invited, whereas the others are only invited in their own persons. Secondly, The different phrase used, that he sanctified these, when he only bade the sacrifice themselves, argue a singular care and agency of Samuel in their sanctification, (unless we should say, He sanctified them, is no more but that he caused them to be sanctified; that is, these in particular amongst others,) which makes it probable that the rest were only to join with him in the act of sacrificing, but these, and only these, were invited to feast upon the remainders of the sacrifice; which feast is here called a sacrifice, as it is above, ver 9. And the only inconvenience of this interpretation is, that the word sacrifice is taken in different senses in the same verse, which is no unusual thing. See Matt. viii. 22. And this difference may possibly be intimated by the differing prepositions prefixed to the same word, the first being before, and the latter last. However, that only Jesse and his sons were present at the feast may seem probable, from Samuel's design of privacy, and from the foregoing relation.

¶ 8. ¶ And it came to pass, when they were come that he looked on 'I Hah, and said, Surely the Lord's anointed is before him

¶ When they were come, when the most of Jesse's sons were come, either to the place of the feast or to some other place near it, appointed for this private discourse, whither they were to come before they went to the feast. It must also be understood that Samuel had acquainted Jesse with his design, which is easily gathered out of the context, and needed not be expressed. Is before him is in this place where God is now present. For it is observable, that not only the sacrifice is said to be offered, but even the feast upon the remainders of it is said to be eaten, before the Lord, Deut. xii. 7. i. e. before or near his altar, where God was present in a special manner. And the ground of this expression seems to be this that Jesse brought not all his sons together, but made one after another to come to the place, and to pass before Samuel, who stood before the Lord, in some place near the altar; that this great business might be managed with more solemnity. And Eliah being the person now before Samuel is said to be now before the Lord. But whatsoever the ground of this phrase is this is certain and confessed, that this is his meaning. This I take to be the person whom I am sent to anoint, wherein yet he was greatly mistaken as other prophets sometime were when they hastily spoke their own thoughts before they had consulted God in the case, as 2 Sam. vii. 3.

¶ 7 But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature, because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.

¶ The Lord spake by secret inspiration. The height of his stature, whereby thou wast once deceived in Saul chap. x. 23, 24, and therefore shouldst not now be deceived a second time. Man looketh on the outward appearance, men value men by their outsides. The Lord looketh on the heart, God esteems of men by the goodness of their hearts, and hath now proceeded by that rule in the choice of a king, and would have done so before if the people's malign desires had not provoked him to give them a bad king.

¶ 8 Then Jesse called 'Abinadab, and made him pass before Samuel. And he said, Neither hath the Lord chosen this.

¶ 9 Then Jesse made 'Shammah to pass by. And he said, Neither hath the Lord chosen this.

¶ Shammah, called also Shumrah, 2 Sam. xiii. 3, and Shimeon, 1 Chron. ii. 13.

¶ 10 Again, Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel. And Samuel said unto Jesse, The Lord hath not chosen these.

¶ Seven of his sons, i. e. the rest of his sons, which were besides David; for in all he had eight, 1 Sam. xvi. 12. It is true, the text says but seven of them named 1 Chron.

ii. 13-15, but that may be because one of them was either born of a concubine, or an obscure person, or one that died immediately after this time.

¶ 11 And Samuel said unto Jesse, Are here all thy children? And he said, There remaineth yet the youngest, and behold, he keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Send and fetch him for we will not sit down till he come hither.

¶ He keepeth the sheep, and consequently is the most unfit of all my sons for that high employment. Either therefore he did not thoroughly understand David's great wisdom and slow, or he judgeth him unfit, by reason of his mean education. And God so ordered it by his providence, that David's choice might plainly appear to be God's work, and not Samuel's or Jesse's design. He will not sit down, to wit, to the feast. Quest. How could David be admitted to this feast, being as it seems not sanctified with the rest of his brethren? Ans. 1. It is not strange if the prophet, by God's direction dispensed with the ordinary rule, in a person so extraordinary, both for his piety and the dignity to which he was chosen. 2. It is not affirmed that David did sit down with them to the feast but only that they would not do so till he came. And when he was come, and Samuel had done what he intended with him David, for aught we know, might depart and the rest sit down to the feast, for David was not now actually raised to any higher degree, but returned to his former employment, as we read below ver. 19.

¶ 12 And he sent, and brought him in. Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he.

¶ He was ruddy, which may be referred either to the colour of his hair, or rather to the complexion of his face. Goodly to look to, of a comely but masculine and majestic aspect.

¶ 13 Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren, and the Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to Ramah.

¶ In the midst of his brethren, according to this translation, his brethren were present at this act and knew that David was anointed king. But this seems, to some neither consistent with Samuel's design of secrecy, nor with Eliah's scornful words concerning him after this chap. xviii. 28. But it is otherwise replied that David's brethren saw David's anointment but did not particularly understand that he was anointed to the kingdom, but were only told by Samuel that he was anointed to some great service which he after they should know, but at present it was fit to be concealed. Thus Jesse only and David understood the whole business, and his brethren were able to attest to that act of Samuel's anointing him, which, with other collateral evidence, was abundantly sufficient to prove David's right to the kingdom if need should be. And thus seems fully to accord and explain the matter. But the words may be otherwise translated out of the Hebrew, that he anointed him out of the midst of his brethren, i. e. he selected him from amongst the rest of his brethren to be king, as Christ is said to be raised from the midst of his brethren. And when as the Hebrew word is bekereb, in the midst, not mikkereb out of the midst. It is confessed that the preposition be in, is oft used for from, or out of, as hath been formerly showed by many instances; and so it may be here. And further, the place may be thus rendered, that Samuel anointed him, being taken out of the midst of his brethren, and on these words may be added, to signify that Samuel took him out from the rest of the company, and privately anointed him, Jesse only being present at the action. And thus there is an ellipsis of a verb or particle, which is frequent, as Gen. ii. 15, The woman was taken (i. e. was taken and carried) into Pharaoh's house, and many such places.

¶ The Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward, i. e. he was immediately endowed with extraordinary gifts of God's Spirit, as strength and courage, and wisdom and magnanimity, and other excellent qualities, which fitted him for and put him upon noble attempts, for which he presently grew famous even whilst he lived a private life. See below ver 18, xvii 31 &c

14 ¶ But the Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him

God took away that prudence and courage and clarity and other gifts and instances of God's Spirit wherewith he had qualified him for the management of his public employment. In evil spirit, properly so called for what need is there of forsaking the proper signification of the word? It is evident both from Scripture and experience that God hath permitted some men to be really acted and disquieted by the devil, and why not Saul as well as other? From the Lord i. e. by God's permission or judgment delivering him up to Satan. Troubled him, turned up in him evils and tormenting passions. 1 Sam. xvi 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000

15 And Saul's servants said unto him Behold now, an evil spirit from God troubleth thee

16 Let our lord now command thy servants, which are before thee, to seek out a man, who is a cunning player on an harp: and it shall come to pass when the evil spirit from God is upon thee, that he shall play with his hand, and thou shalt be well

And the success confirms their opinion. For though music cannot directly have any influence upon an evil spirit to drive him away yet because the devil is not permitted to possess him but only make use of the power of his mind and all humours of his body to molest him; and because it is manifest that music hath a heavenly power to qualify and sweeten these and to make a man sedate and cheerful it is evident by the unanimous consent of learned writers and by common experience it is not strange if the devil had not that power over him when his mind was more composed which he had when it was disordered: is the devil had less power over him in the decrease than in the increase of the moon. Matt. xviii 18. And seeing music pleased the Lord's prophets for the entertainment of the good Spirit as 2 Kings iii 15 why might it not dispose Saul to the resistance of the evil spirit and why might not the charming of his heart in some measure strengthen him against those temptations of the devil which were fed by his melancholic humours

17 And Saul said unto his servants, Provide me now a man that can play well, and bring him to me

18 Then answered one of the servants and said Behold I have seen a son of Jesse the Bethlehemite that is cunning in playing, and a mighty valiant man, and a man of war, and prudent in matters, and a comely person, and the Lord is with him

Wouldst not that David was so suddenly advanced from a poor contemptible shepherd to so great a reputation for these were the effects of that Spirit of the Lord which he received when he was anointed though some would be so far gone as to say that this was a fiction in this chapter happened after the history of chapter xvii though it be placed before such transpositions being not unusual in historical relations. The Lord is with him effects and prosper all his undertakings

19 ¶ Wherefore Saul sent messengers unto Jesse, and said Send me David thy son, which is with the sheep

20 And Jesse took an ass laden with bread, and a bottle of wine, and a kid, and sent them by David his son unto Saul,

This present, though in our times it would seem contemptible yet was very agreeable to the usage of those times, and to the condition of Jesse, which was but mean in the world. And it seems to have been the custom of those times as it is yet in the eastern countries (where they made their appearance before princes or great persons, to bring a present see Gen. xxxii 20, xlii 23, 26, and the where), to which civil custom that religious precept seems consonant. 1 Cor. xvi 15, Deut. xvi 16. None shall appear before me empty. And he might send it, partly as a testimony of his respect to his sovereign, and partly to gain David favour and acceptance with him being sensible that he was going into a place and state of hazard but knowing Saul's furious temper, he durst not refuse to send him; and he sent him the more willingly because so this seemed a most likely means to accomplish God's promise of the kingdom, and to prepare him for it

21 And David came to Saul, and stood before him: and he loved him greatly, and he became his armourbearer

Stood before him, i. e. ministered unto him, or (as we use to speak) waited upon him, as that phrase oft signifies, 1 Deut. i 38, x 8. He became his armourbearer, he had that place conferred upon him, though we do not read that he ever exercised it, for it seems he was gone back to his father upon some occasion not related and had bided with him some considerable time before the war described, chap. xvii happened

22 And Saul sent to Jesse, saying, Let David, I pray thee stand before me: for he hath found favour in my sight

23 And it came to pass when the evil spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took an harp, and played with his hand: so Saul was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him

To wait for a season. And the reason of this success may be partly natural and common, of which see on ver. 16. and partly supernatural and special respecting David, whom God designed by this means to bring into favour with the king and his court, and so to smooth the way for his advancement

CHAP. XVII

He armed the Israelites and Philistines ready for battle Goliath terrified the Israelites with his stature, armour, and challenge. 1-11. David went by his father to visit his brethren, is willing to encounter with him, 12-27. For which I love him, he is brought to Saul and is shown the reason of his confidence. 28-37. He taketh a staff and sling with five stones, 38-40. Goliath's words and threatenings him. 41-44. David's faith he strengthen him. 45-50. The Philistines flee, are smitten and plundered. 51-54. Saul taketh notice of David. 55-58

NOW the Philistines gathered together their armies to battle, and were gathered together at Shocoh, which belongeth to Judah: and pitched between Shocoh and Azekah, in the Ephraim-dammim

To revenge their former great and shameful defeat, chap. xiv

2 And Saul and the men of Israel were gathered together, and pitched by the valley of Elah, and set the battle in array against the Philistines

3 And the Philistines stood on a mountain on the one side, and Israel stood on a mountain on the other side: and there was a valley between them

Or a mountain on the other side where they had disposed and fortified their camps, that if the one should assault the other, the assailant should have the disadvantage, and be obliged to fight from a lower place.

4 ¶ And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span.

4 champion. Heb. a man between two either because he used to come forth, and stand between the two armies, or because he moved that the business should be decided between two, whereof he would be one. If his height was six cubits and a span, which is not strange for besides the giants mentioned in Scripture, Herodotus, Diodorus Siculus and Pliny, and others make mention of persons seven cubits high, which is near double to an ordinary man's height.

5 And he had an helmet of brass upon his head, and he was armed with a coat of mail, and the weight of the coat was five thousand shekels of brass.

The common shekel contained only a fourth part of an ounce, and so 5000 shekels made 1250 ounces, which make exactly 78 pounds, which weight is not unsuitable to a man of such vast greatness and strength, as his height speaks him to be.

6 And he had greaves of brass upon his legs, and a target of brass between his shoulders.

7 And the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam, and his spear's head weighed six hundred shekels of iron and one bearing a shield went before him.

A weaver's beam on which the weavers fasten their web. It was like this for thickness, and for length that he counts as easy to be collected by proportion to the rest. And though the whole weight of Goliath's armour may seem prodigious, yet it is not so much by far as one Ashurites did damage of whom Pliny relates, that he saw him come into the theatre with arms weighing 12,000 ounces.

8 And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, Why are ye come out to set your battle in array? am not I a Philistine, and ye servants to Saul? choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me.

That the battle may be decided by a two alone. Such offers were frequent in those times. And probably he thought the valiant Jonathan who had led a whole army, would never have refused this challenge. But God so ordered the matter that none should accept it but one who would reserve this honour for David as a step to his kingdom.

9 If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants; but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us.

10 And the Philistine said, I defy the armies of Israel this day, give me a man that we may fight together.

11 When Saul and all Israel heard those words of the Philistine, they were dismayed, and greatly afraid.

Which may seem strange, considering the glorious promises, and their late experiences of Divine assistance. But the truth is, all men do so entirely depend upon God in all things, that when he withdraws his help the most valiant and resolute persons cannot find their hearts not lands, as daily experience shows.

12 ¶ Now David was the son of that Ephraimite of Beth-lehem-judah, whose name was Jesse: and he had eight sons.

and the man went among men for an old man in the days of Saul.

The son of that Ephraimite, i.e. of the man of Ephraim; or Beth-lehem, Gen. xxxv. 19. He had eight sons. See on chap. xvi. 10.

13 And the three eldest sons of Jesse went and followed Saul to the battle, and the names of his three sons that went to the battle were Eliab the firstborn, and next unto him Amadab, and the third Shammah.

14 And David was the youngest: and the three eldest followed Saul.

15 But David went and returned from Saul to feed his father's sheep at Beth-lehem.

From Saul either, 1. From Saul's court, where having been entertained by Saul to relieve him in his melancholy fit, he was permitted to go to his father's house, to be sent for again upon occasion. Or 2. From Saul's camp, whilst he used to come to visit his brethren, as appears from ver. 17.

16 And the Philistine drew near morning and evening, and presented himself forty days.

17 And Jesse said unto David his son, like now for thy brethren in ephah of this parched corn, and these ten loaves, and run to the camp to thy brethren.

Parched corn a food then much in use, which they used to mix with water or milk, or oil, &c.

18 And carry these ten cheeses unto the captain of their thousand, and look how thy brethren fare, and take their pledge.

Unto the captain of their thousand, in whose power it was in a great measure, either to preserve them, or to expose them to utmost hazards. Take their pledge i.e. bring me some token of their welfare from them.

19 Now Saul, and they, and all the men of Israel, were in the valley of Elah, fighting with the Philistines.

The posture and readiness to fight with them, as it is explained ver. 20. Men of Elah said in Scripture to do what they might and are prepared to do, it hath been showed formerly by instances.

20 ¶ And David rose up early in the morning, and left the sheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jesse had commanded him, and he came to the trench, as the host was going forth to the fight, and shouted for the battle.

To the trench i.e. to the camp or army which was there pitched. Shouted for the battle, as the manner was both to animate themselves and to terrify their enemy.

21 For Israel and the Philistines had put the battle in array, army against army.

22 And David left his carriage in the hand of the keeper of the carriage, and ran into the army, and came and saluted his brethren.

His carriage, the provisions which he had brought to his brethren.

23 And as he talked with them, behold, there came up the champion, the Philistine of Gath, Goliath by name, out of the armies of the Philistines, and spake according to the same words: and David heard them.

24 And all the men of Israel, when

25 And the men of Israel said, Have ye seen this man that is come up? surely to defy Israel is he come up: and it shall be, that the man who killeth him, this king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his father's house free in Israel

<sup>1</sup> Josh 15 It is observable that Saul in this great distress doth not encourage himself to God nor seek his counsel or favour by prayers and advice but expects relief from men only. This was one effect and sign of the departure of God's Spirit from him. Made his father's house free free from all those tributes or tithes which either the court or the camp required

26 And David spake to the men that stood by him, saying, What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine, and taketh away the reproach from Israel? for who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?

Why should you all be thus dismayed at him? he is but a man, and that of an ordinary size a stranger and enemy to God and no way able to stand before them who have the living and almighty God for their strength and refuge

27 And the people answered him after this manner, saying, So shall it be done to the man that killeth him

28 ¶ And Eliab his eldest brother heard when he spake unto the men: and Eliab's anger was kindled against David, and he said, Why comest thou down hither? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know thy pride, and the unrighteousness of thine heart; for thou art come down that thou mightest see the battle

Eliab's anger was kindled, either because he thought him guilty of intolerable folly and pride and presumption in pretending to such an attempt or because he feared and concluded he would be certainly ruined in the enterprise or rather because he envied him the glory of a post in undertaking, and took this proffer of David's to be what indeed it was a reproach to himself and to all the rest that having the great God on their side had not the future courage to fight with him. With whom hast thou left those few sheep? thou art much later to tend sheep than to appear in armies or to fight with a giant. Thy pride and the unrighteousness of thine heart, thy self confidence, and vain glory and curiosity

29 And David said, What have I now done? Is there not a cause?

<sup>1</sup> ver 17 Either 1 Of my coming, my father sent me on an errand. Or rather, 2 Of my speaking thus: there not reason in what I say? 1 The argument is, because our God is able to oppose him, and subdue him

30 ¶ And he turned from him toward another and spake after the same manner: and the people answered him again after the former manner

<sup>1</sup> ver 20 21 For being secretly moved by God's Spirit to undertake the combat, he speaks with divers persons about it, that so it might come to the king's ear

31 And when the words were heard which David spake, they rehearsed them before Saul: and he sent for him

<sup>1</sup> ver 20 21 32 ¶ And David said to Saul, Let no man's heart fail because of him: thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine

33 And Saul said to David, Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him: for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth

But a youth, either, 1 For age to wit comparatively to Goliath being now not much above twenty years old, as is supposed. Or rather 2 For military skill, as the words following explain it, as if he should say Thou art but a novice, a raw and unexperienced soldier, and therefore unable to fight with him

34 And David said unto Saul, Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion, and a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock

There came a lion, and a bear, not both together, but one after another, at several times

35 And I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he rose against me, I caught him by his beard, and smote him, and slew him

Smote him, to wit the lion, as appears by his beard, which having particularly mentioned it was easily understood and believed, that he did the same to the bear, which therefore it was needless to express

36 Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear: and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them seeing he hath defied the armies of the living God

Slew both the lion and the bear this he is probably thought to have done after he was anointed, when he was endowed with singular gift of God's Spirit, and, among others, with extraordinary courage of heart and strength of body

37 David said moreover, The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said unto David, Go, and the Lord be with thee

The Lord be with thee his good will is the same to me that it then was: and his power is not diminished. It is not strange that Saul consents to the combat considering David's pious and convincing discourse, grounded upon sensible experience and without the dangerous condition of the Philistine's arms and the absolute refusal of all other persons

38 ¶ And Saul furnished David with his armour, and he put an helmet of brass upon his head; also he armed him with a coat of mail

With his armour, either, 1 With Saul's own armour which he used to wear in battle, which seems not to agree with the extraordinary height of Saul's stature, 1 Sam x 23 nor is it like that Saul would disarm himself, when he was going forth to the battle ver 20, 21. Or, 2 With armour taken out of his armoury. Not that the whole armour of Saul was brought into the field, but that some chosen arms were taken out thence, and brought for any emergent occasion. Or rather 3 With his vestments or garments. For, 1 So the Hebrew word properly and usually signifies, and so this same word is translated, 1 Sam xvi 1, 2. His armour is distinguished from this, and is particularly described in the following words. He is thus therefore to speak of some military vestments which were then used in war, and were contrived for defence such as buff-coats now are 39 And David girded his sword upon his armour, and he assayed to go, for he had not proved it. And David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these, for I have not proved them. And David put them off him

I have not proved them I have no skill nor experience in the management of this kind of arms

40 And he took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepherd's bag which he had, even in a scrip, and his sling was in his hand, and he drew near to the Philistine.

His staff, his shepherd's staff. These arms were in themselves contemptible, yet chosen by David, partly, because he had no skill to use other arms, partly because he had inward assurance of the victory even by these weapons, and partly, because such a conquest would be most honorable to God, and most shameful and discouraging to the Philistines. Chose him five smooth stones that if one should fail him, he might make use of another. Smooth stones, because such stones would go most freely out of the sling, and consequently, with more force and certainty, directly to the mark which he aimed at. The sling was a sort of weapon not unusual in the fights of ancient times, and many arrived at great dexterity of slinging stones with great certainty, of which we have instances both in Scripture, as Judg. x. 16, and in Diodorus Siculus, and Livy, and other authors.

41 And the Philistine came on and drew near unto David; and the man that bare the shield went before him.

42 And when the Philistine looked about, and saw David, he smiled upon him; for he was but a youth, and ruddy, and of a fair countenance.

Not having so much as the countenance of a martial person.

13 And the Philistine said unto David, Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves? And the Philistine cursed David by his gods.

With staves, i. e. with a staff. The plural number for singular, as Gen. xxi. 7. And the Philistine of David, he prayed that his god Dagon and Ashtaroth &c. would destroy him.

44 And the Philistine said to David, Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field.

45 Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a word, and with a spear, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied.

In the name of the Lord of hosts, i. e. by a common section to him with confidence in him and assurance of his help, and for the vindication of his honour. When thou hast defied, i. e. by defying that army and people which he is the Lord and Protector.

16 This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand, and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee: and I will give thee the carcasses of the he-goats of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth: that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel.

Heb. that God, the only true God is for Israel, or on Israel's side, and against you. Or that Israel hath a God, i. e. God indeed, one who is able to help them, and not such an impotent idol as you serve.

47 And all this assembly shall know that the Lord is with David, and with Goliath, and that he will give you into our hands.

That the Lord saith not with sword and spear, i. e. that he can save without these arms and with the most contemptible weapons, such as mine seem to thee. The battle is the Lord's, i. e. the events of war are wholly in his power, to give success to whom and by what means he pleaseth. He will give you into our hands. David speaks thus confidently, because he was assured of it by a particular inspiration from God.

48 And it came to pass, when the Philistine arose, and came and drew nigh to meet David, that David hasted, and ran toward the army to meet the Philistine.

49 And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone sunk into his forehead, and he fell upon his face to the earth.

Rather 1. The stone pierced through his helmet, which such stones being sling would not seldom do, as even Diodorus Siculus relates. Or, 2. The stone might get in through one of those holes which are left in helmets, that he that wears it may see his way, and how to direct his blows. Or rather 3. The proud giant had lifted up that part of his helmet which covered his forehead, and that in contempt of David and his weapons, and by the singular direction of God's providence.

50 So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine, and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David.

51 Therefore David ran, and stood upon the Philistine, and took his sword, and drew it out of the sheath thereof, and slew him, and cut off his head therewith. And when the Philistines saw their champion was dead, they fled.

David took his sword. Hence it appears that David was not a little man, as many fancy, but a man of considerable bulk and strength, because he was able to manage a giant's sword, which also he did both here and below chap. xxi. 9. Slew him. Quest. How could this be when he slew him before with the stone, ver. 50. Ans. There he was a general account of the event of the battle, and of the giant's death, but here he gives a particular relation of the manner and manner of his death. The stone threw him down to the earth, and bereaved him of the use of his arms and motion, but there remained some life in him (as it frequently doth in such cases) which the sword took away, and completed the work.

52 And the men of Israel and of Judah arose, and shouted, and pursued the Philistines, until thou comest to the valley, and to the gates of Ekron. And the wounded of the Philistines fell down by the way to Shaaraim, even unto Gath, and unto Ekron.

53 And the children of Israel returned from chasing after the Philistines, and they spoiled their tents.

Heb. then camped. i. e. their camp, but he speaks of it in the plural number, because of the great extent and various quarters of their camp.

54 And David took the head of the Philistine, and brought it to Jerusalem, but he put his armour in his tent.

Brought it to Jerusalem, either to terrify the Jebusites, who yet held the fort of Zion 2 Sam. v. 7, or for another reason not recorded, nor now known. In his tent, i. e. in the tent which was erected for him in the camp, upon this occasion. There it was kept for the present, though afterwards it seems to have been translated to the tabernacle, where we find his sword, chap. xxi. and it is not unlikely the rest of his armour was there also.

55 ¶ And when Saul saw David go forth against the Philistine, he said unto Abner, the captain of the host, Abner, "whose son is this youth?" And Abner said, As thy soul liveth, O king, I cannot tell

Whose son is this youth? Quest How could David be unknown to Saul, with whom he had lived? chap xvi 21 Answer That might well be for divers reasons, because David was not continually with him, nor, as it seems, used by him, but upon extraordinary occasions, and desperate fits of melancholy, from which possibly he had been free for a good while, by God's special providence and care for his people. I say that so he might be capable of governing and protecting them against the Philistines, who watched all opportunities against them, and at last broke forth into an open war. That David had been for some considerable time dismissed from Saul's court, and was returned home, and therefore it is not strange, if Saul had for the present forgotten David for kings because of the encumbrance of public business, and the multitude of persons who come to them on several occasions, may easily forget some persons, yet such as have frequently been with them, especially their servants whom they do not use to observe with so much attention and care as they do others. Add to this, that the disorder of Saul's mind might make him forgetful, and that David might now be much changed, both in his countenance and in his habit from what he had before, and it is apparent, that the change of habits makes so great a difference that it oft keeps us from the knowledge of those persons whom in other habits we very well know. Some give this answer, That this was the first time that Saul had seen David, and that David's exploit here recorded was performed before that which is recorded ver 15 though it be placed after it, but that is confuted by comparing chap xxiii 1-3. I cannot tell which is not strange, because Abner's conversation and employment was generally in the camp when David was at the court, and when Abner was there he took little notice of a person so much inferior to him as David was.

56 And the king said, Languish thou whose son the stipling is

57 And as David returned from the slaughter of the Philistine Abner took him, and brought him before Saul with the head of the Philistine in his hand

58 And Saul said to him, Whose son art thou thou young man? And David answered I am the son of thy servant Jesse the Beth-lehemite

CHAP XVIII

To Jonathan his friend, they came unto together 1-4. Saul cut off David's javelin in his army's cloth to kill him 5-11. is after loft of him and removeth him he is loved by the people, 12-16. Saul offered David his daughters, next Melah who is given to Achish, then Mihal, who loved David 17-20. Saul demandeth one hundred foreskins of the Philistines for a dowry David promiseth delivereth double the number obtaineth Mihal 21-27. Saul's pear and hat d, and David's glory increaseth, 28-30.

AND it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul that "the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David," and Jonathan loved him as his own soul

Partly, for his excellent virtues and endowments which shone forth both in his precious actions, partly for the great and good service which he had done to God and to his people, and partly for the multitude of their age and qualities.

2 And Saul took him that day, "and would let him go no more home to his father's house"

By which it appears that before now David had not his constant residence at court, but did return to his father's house, and thence again to the court, as occasion required

3 Then Jonathan and David made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul

A covenant, is an agreement of sincere and perpetual friendship between them

4 And Jonathan stripped himself of the robe that was upon him and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle

Partly as a pledge of his great respect and affection to him, and partly to vindicate David from that contempt which might cleave to him for his former pastoral habit and condition, and to put him into a habit suitable to his present greatness and glory

5 ¶ And David went out whithersoever Saul sent him, and he behaved himself wisely and Saul set him over the men of war, and he was accepted in the sight of all the people, and also in the sight of Saul's servants

David went out, upon military expeditions, of which that word is oft used. Set him over the men of war, gave him some considerable command in his army, though not the supreme

6 And it came to pass as they came, when David was returned from the slaughter of the Philistine, that "the women came out of all cities of Israel, singing and dancing, to meet king Saul, with tabrets with joy, and with instruments of musick"

When David was returned from the slaughter of the Philistine either for some eminent victory obtained by him against the Philistines though not particularly related wherein the Saul might be present and concerned. Or rather secondly, from the slaughter of Goliath, and the other Philistines with him. Against this it is objected that this song was sung either after David was advanced and employed as is related ver 5 and therefore not immediately after that great victory, or, before he was so advanced, and then it would have raised Saul's jealousy and envy, and consequently hindered David's advancement. But it may be replied that this song though placed afterwards, was sung before David's advancement related ver 5. And that this did not hinder David's preferment must be ascribed partly to Saul's policy, who, though he had an eye upon David and desired to crush him upon a fit occasion, yet saw it necessary for his own reputation, and the encouragement of other men's valour and for the satisfaction of Jonathan's private desire and the just and general expectation of the whole army and people, to give him some considerable preference for the present, and principally to God's providence overruling Saul against his own inclination and his mistaken interest. Out of all cities of Israel, out of all the neighbouring cities, by or through which the victorious army marched. Singing and dancing, accorded to the custom of those times and places, of which see Exod xi 20. Judg xi 34.

7 And the women answered one another as they played, and said, "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands"

Answered one another, singing by parts alternately. David his ten thousands, so they said, because David killed Goliath, which was the principal cause of all the following slaughter of the Philistines

8 And Saul was very wroth, and the saying displeased him, and he said, "They have ascribed unto David ten thousands, and to me they have ascribed but thousands, and what can he have more but the kingdom?"

What greater honour can they give him but that of the kingdom? Or thus, And moreover, this will not rest here, they will certainly give him the kingdom, they will transfer the crown from me to him. Or thus, And moreover, the kingdom certainly belongs to him & I now perceive that this is the favourite of God, and of the people, this is that man after God's own heart, to whom Samuel told me that God would transfer my kingdom.

9 And Saul eyed David from that day and forward.

i. e. Narrowly observed all his counsels and actions that he might understand whether he had any design upon the kingdom or no, and that he might find so no colourable pretence of putting him to death.

10 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that the evil spirit from God came upon Saul, and he prophesied in the midst of the house: and David played with his hand, as at other times: and there was a javelin in Saul's hand.

Saul's envy, and jealousy, and discontent revived his melancholic distemper, which the devil according to his wont, struck in with. He prophesied or, he imagined himself to be a prophet, for so the Hebrew verbs in Hithpahal oft signify, i. e. he used uncouth gesture, and signs and speeches, as the prophets, or sons of the prophets, used to do, for which they were by the ignorant and unskilful sort reputed madmen, 2 Kings ix. 11. And it may seem probable that Saul did now speak of Divine things poetically, that thereby he might lull David asleep, and kill him before he suspected any danger. There was a javelin in Saul's hand which he kept there for the following purpose.

11 And Saul cast the javelin, for he said, I will smite David even to the wall with it. And David avoided out of his presence twice.

Once at this time, and another time upon a like occasion, chap. xix. 10.

12 ¶ And Saul was afraid of David, because the Lord was with him, and was departed from Saul.

Saul was afraid of David, because he had gotten the favour of God, and of all the people he should at a time take away his kingdom.

13 Therefore Saul removed him from him, and made him his captain over a thousand, and he went out and came in before the people.

From him, from his presence and court, which he did partly, because he feared lest David should watch and find an opportunity to kill him, as he had desired to kill David partly, because he was a great exercise and his presence now made him more sad than ever his absence made him cheerful, and principally, that he by so doing exposed him to the greatest hazards and in some sort to try him into the hands of the Philistines. He went out, and came in, he led his soldiers forth to battle, and brought them back again with safety. Compare 2 Sam. v. 9. On the phrase of coming in and going out into a place stood (as elsewhere) for conversing on (as women do) going to and fro about business as chap. xxix. 6.

14 And David became David himself wisely in all his ways, and the Lord was with him.

So that he had great prudence in his conduct, and prosperous success following his design, which were two principal qualifications of a general and of a prince. Thus God turned all Saul's devices upon himself, and to David's advantage.

15 Wherefore when Saul saw that he became David himself very wisely, he was afraid of him.

16 But all Israel and Judah loved David, because he went out and came in before them.

17 ¶ And Saul said to David, Behold my elder daughter Merab, her will I give thee to wife: only be thou valiant for me, and fight the Lord's battles. For Saul said, Let not mine hand be upon him, but let the hand of the Philistines be upon him.

Her will I give thee to wife this was no more than Saul was obliged to do by his former promise chap. xvii. 25, which here he renews and pretends to perform, though he intended nothing less, as the sequel shows, whereby he makes himself guilty of ingratitude, injustice, and breach of trust, and withal of gross hypocrisy. Let the hand of the Philistines be upon him, he thought so great an offer would oblige him who was of himself valiant enough to give proofs of more than common valour, and to venture upon the most dangerous enterprises.

18 And David said unto Saul, Who am I? and what is my life, or my father's family in Israel, that I should be son in law to the king?

My life i. e. my manner of living. How obscure is that condition in which I was born and have been bred! Or rather thus. How little is my life worth that by the expounding of that to some hazard (which Saul required of him) I should purchase a king's daughter! In the so expressive David sheweth not only his humility, but also his wisdom in discovering so deep a sense of his own meanness, that Saul might see how far he was from aspiring at the kingdom and might have no occasion to suspect that he was already mounted thereto.

19 But it came to pass at the time when Merab Saul's daughter should have been given to David, that she was given unto Achish the Gittite to wife.

When Merab should have been given to David, when the marriage was even ready to be solemnized. Achish the Gittite, the son of Bazai, as he is called, 2 Sam. xvi. 8. This was an act of great injustice and perfidy, and accordingly the marriage was accounted by God and the children begotten in it were not God's appointment out of 2 Sam. xvi.

20 And Michal Saul's daughter loved David, and she told Saul and the things which he did to her.

Not for any respect he had in David but for his own interests and wicked ends, that he might make use of her love to David, to insure and ruin him, which he thought might be done many ways, whereof one is here expressed.

21 And Saul said, I will give him her, that she may be a snare to him, and that the hand of the Philistines may be against him. Wherefore Saul said to David, Thou shalt this day be my son in law in the one of the twain.

This day i. e. suddenly, within a time which probably Saul prefixed. In the one of the twain where as I have only two daughters, and thou wast disappointed of thy expectation in the one by an unexpected accident thou shalt certainly have the other, which is the same thing. Heb in the twain. Thus the oars of Gilead is put for one of them, Judges xii. 7, and the sides of the ship for one of the sides, Jonah i. 3. Or he saith in the twain, or in both because he was in effect betrothed to the one, and should be married to the other, and so was his son-in-law upon a double account.

22 ¶ And Saul commanded his servants, saying, Commune with David secretly, and say, Behold, the king hath delight in thee, and all his servants love thee: now therefore be thou the king's son in law.

Commune with David, whom having so fully and grossly deceived, he found backward to embrace his snare, and therefore sent others on work to persuade him.

the opportunity to improve his melancholy, as before he had done.

10 And Saul sought to smite David even to the wall with the javelin, but he slipped away out of Saul's presence, and he smote the javelin into the wall, and David fled, and escaped that night.

11 Saul also sent messengers unto David's house, to watch him, and to slay him in the morning; and Michal David's wife told him, saying, If thou save not thy life to night, to morrow thou shalt be slain.

To slay him in the morning, why not in the night? In part, because it would have been barbarous, and most dishonourable to Saul, to break into David's house by night and kill him in his own house and bed, and it seemed more expedient to kill him as he came out of his house in the morning, partly because the night might give David some opportunity of escaping which the day light would prevent, and principally, by God's singular providence, insinuating Saul's mind to take the worst course, so that David might be delivered from him. To-morrow thou shalt be slain, which she might learn either by information from Jonathan, or some other courtier that was privy to the design, or from her own observation of some suspicious or dangerous persons hovering about the house.

12 So Michal let David down through a window, and he went, and fled, and escaped.

Michal let David down through a window, because this was in wait for him at the doors of the house, whensoever he should come forth there.

13 And Michal took an image, and laid it in the bed, and put a pillow of goats' hair for his bolster, and covered it with a cloth.

An image, Heb. toraphim which was an image made in an shape, which she might keep secretly either out of superstitions regard to it, or out of mere curiosity. This image she used, because knowing her father's unquiet and jealous, and furious temper she suspected he might send to see whether David was there or no. Put a pillow of goats' hair for his bolster, i.e. put great goat's hair upon his bolster, i.e. upon the head and feet of the image which lay upon his bolster that it might have some resemblance of David's head and hair at least in a man's bed, where there used to be but a phylomorph. Goats' hair is here put for goats' hair, as it manifestly is Job xxxi 1, xxvi 7, xxxv 26. It is acknowledged by learned writers, that in those east countries goat's hair much longer hair than ours have, and were shorn like sheep's hair that their hair was not unlike to a man's or woman's hair, as may also be gathered from Cant. iv 1. They have as a flock of goats' hair, i.e. as the hair of a flock of goats. And as there was goats' hair of several colours, as the wool of sheep in divers parts is of very differing colours, as white, or black, or yellow, &c. so it was that Michal took that colour which was like to the colour of David's hair. And she took this rather than the hair of a man because the procuring and ordering of that would have taken up some time, whereas she had plenty of all sorts at hand, as being used in spinning or weaving. Or the sense may be this according to our time, that she put a pillow of the softest part of goats' hair under the head of the image, as they used to put under the heads of sick men; whereby also the head of the image lying into the pillow might be less discerned especially when it was either wholly or in part covered with a cloth. And all this art was used, that David being supposed, and by some persons who were sent to inquire perceived as he thought, to be in the bed, Saul might be hindered from coming and overtaking him before he had got into some place. Covered it with a cloth upon pretence of being sick, and needing some such covering, but really design to prevent the discovery of her deceit.

14 And when Saul sent messengers to take David, she said, He is sick.

Messengers to wit, other messengers in the morning, supposing the former to be either slow or perfidious.

15 And Saul sent the messengers again to see David, saying, Bring him up to me in the bed, that I may slay him.

Again to see David, or only, to see David, which they did not believe, but went away satisfied (as it was fit they should) with her report and testimony of his sickness.

16 And when the messengers were come in, behold, there was an image in the bed, with a pillow of goats' hair for his bolster.

17 And Saul said unto Michal, Why hast thou deceived me so, and sent away mine enemy, that he is escaped? And Michal answered Saul, He said unto me, Let me go, why should I kill thee?

If thou dost not permit me to escape without discovery, I shall be forced for my own defence to kill thee. Though it is most likely this was a lie and a fiction of her own.

18 So David fled, and escaped, and came to Samuel to Ramah, and told him all that Saul had done to him. And he and Samuel went and dwelt in Naioth.

Came to Samuel to Ramah, partly for comfort and direction in his great distress, and partly for safety, supposing that Saul would be ashamed to execute his bloody designs in the presence of so venerable a person as Samuel who had had so great obligations upon Saul, and had such great and great reputation with the people.

19 And it was told Saul, saying, Behold, David is at Naioth in Ramah.

On near Ramah the Hebrew phrase is both in, being oft put for near, as it is apparently used Num. xxxiii 37. Josh. x 13. Jer. x 2, xxix 7. Naioth was either a house or college in the town of Ramah, or a village in the territory of Ramah, or near to the town of Ramah, in which there was a college of the prophets, amongst which Samuel thought David might be seen.

20 And Saul sent messengers to take David. And when they saw the company of the prophets prophesying, and Samuel standing as appointed over them, the Spirit of God was upon the messengers of Saul, and they also prophesied.

Saul sent messengers to take David, thus Saul's wickedness in this increased, and he that at first used only secret powers against David, now breaks forth into open and impudent hostilities, plainly declaring that he neither feared God, nor revered a man. He would have punished Samuel, as afterwards he did Ahimelech for giving David entertainment, but that he feared the people, who had so great and unanimous a veneration for him. Prophesying, i.e. prophesying of God, or of the things of God, by Divine inspiration, either praising God, or instructing men. Compare Num. xi 25. 1 Sam. x 5. Appointed over them, to direct moderately, and direct them in those holy exercises. For though they prophesied by Divine inspiration, which Samuel could not govern, yet they were both to keep and direct themselves at beforehand, and to make good improvement of it afterwards, in both which the blessed Samuel's counsel and assistance. And where some would falsely pretend to those raptures, or the devil might insinuate himself into an angel of light, and convey some evil or false suggestion into some of their minds, Samuel's presence and judgment was necessary to prevent and to detect such impostures. Besides, Samuel would by his present conjunction with them in those holy exercises encourage them, and stir up others to the copying of those gifts, and the performance of such religious duties. They also prophesied, being inspired by God to do so, as was Balaam also was; that, being rapt up into such an ecstasy, their minds might be wholly taken up with those matters, and quite taken off from their design of pursuing David.

21 And when it was told Saul, he sent other messengers, and they prophesied likewise. And Saul sent messengers again the third time, and they prophesied also.

22 Then went he also to Ramah, and came to a great well that is in Sechu, and he asked and said, Where are Samuel and David? And one said, Behold they be at Naoth in Ramah.

Where are Samuel and David? for his messengers not returning, he knew not exactly where they were.

23 And he went thither to Naoth in Ramah, and the Spirit of God was upon him also, and he went on, and prophesied, until he came to Naoth in Ramah.

The Spirit of God was upon him also, it came upon him in the way, whereas it came not upon his messengers till they came to the place, whereby God would convince Saul of the vanity of all his design against David and that in them he fought against God himself.

24 And he stripped off his clothes also, and prophesied before Samuel in like manner, and lay down naked all that day and all that night. Wherefore they say, Is Saul also among the prophets?

His clothes, to wit his military or royal garments, which he did, either that he might suit himself and his habit to the rest of the company, or because his mind being altogether taken up with Divine things, he did not under stand or heed what he did. Also the prophesies which he sent who probably were military persons had done so before him. Prophesied before Samuel, this doth not contradict 1 Sam. xv. 35 where it is said that Samuel came up more to see Saul, for here Saul goes to Samuel and that not with design to see him but to imitate David in like manner, as the rest of the prophets there did. Lay down Heb. felt to wit down upon the earth, for his mind being in an ecstasy he had not the use of his senses or motion as 1 Sam. xvi. 1. God so ordering it that David might have an opportunity to escape. Naked he stripped of his upper garments, as was said before, and is the word naked is oft used as Job. ii. 2. Mich. i. 8. See also 2 Sam. vi. 20, John xvi. 7. And it is here repeated to signify how long he lay in that posture. All that day and all that night, so God kept him as it were in chains till David was got out of his reach. Is Saul also among the prophets? The same proverb which was taken up upon a like occasion, 1 Sam. x. 12 is here remembered and revived upon this new occasion as in evidence of God's wonderful care over David. He made Saul in some sort a prophet, that he might make David a King.

CHAPTER XX.

David complained to Jonathan of Saul, he comforteth him, can hardly believe what David saith of his father, prometh to see how notice how his absence was taken, they receive a covenant of friendship and swear to each other, 1. 17. Then said 18. 23. Saul useth for David at the feast of the new moon 21. 27. Jonathan exhorteth David, Saul counsel bereaveth Jonathan, and useth to kill him 28. 31. Jonathan adviseth David 35. 40. Then part untill 41. 11. 12.

AND David fled from Naoth in Ramah, and came and said before Jonathan, What have I done? what is mine iniquity? and what is my sin before thy father, that he seeketh my life?

David felt what a sin it was to fly from Naoth in Ramah to Gibeah, where he was not to be, the opportunity of Saul's absence, that is, a sin against his father, what is it which thus provoked thy father against me? what crime doth he charge me with? That he seeketh my life, to wit to destroy it, as he hath used oft used, as chap. xii. 23, Psal. xxxviii. 12, Job. x. 9.

2 And he said unto him, God forbid; thou shalt not die. behold, my father will do nothing either great or small, but that he will shew it me, and why should my father hide this thing from me? it is not so.

Thou shalt not die, I will secure thee by my interest with my father, nor doth he design to destroy thee, for what he doth in his frantic fits is not to be imputed to him, and when he comes to himself, I doubt not to reconcile thee to him. For Jonathan gave credit to his father's oath, chap. xix. 6, and the wisest minds are least suspicious and most charitable in their opinions of others.

3 And David swore moreover, and said, Thy father certainly knoweth that I have found grace in thine eyes, and he saith, Let not Jonathan know this, lest he be grieved, but truly as the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, there is but a step between me and death.

The matter being of great moment, and Jonathan doubting the truth of it, David confirms his word with an oath, which follows in the end of the verse, only he interposeth a reason why he should concealed it from Jonathan.

4 Then said Jonathan unto David, (Whosoever thy soul desireth, I will even do it for thee.)

To wit for the discovery of the truth, and for the preservation of thy life.

5 And David said unto Jonathan, Behold to morrow is the new moon, and I should not fail to sit with the king at meat, but let me go, that I may hide myself in the field unto the third day at even.

The new moon was a solemn and festive time, as among the Romans and other heathens, so also with the Hebrews who solemnized it with offering peace offerings to God, for time to other upon the remainders of it after the manner. See Num. ix. 10. xviii. 11. Psal. lxxxi. 3. should not fail to sit with the king at meat, then he came to expect my company those other times. I into the third day, i.e. unto the next day but one after the new moon, as appears by comparing ver. 19. 27, 33. His meaning is not that he should hide himself in any certain place all the three days, but that he should secure himself, either at Beth-lehem with his friends, or in any other place, till the third day.

6 If thy father at all miss me, then say David earnestly asked leave of me that he might run to Beth-lehem his city, for there is a yearly sacrifice there for all the family.

Quest. How could David imagine that Saul would expect his company, whom he had once and again endeavored to kill? Answer. First, He might suppose that David would ascribe all that to his madness and frantic fits, which being over he would promise himself safety in the king's presence. Secondly, David might not think that Saul would under any expectation to sit with him, considering the love and great danger from Saul, but that Saul would make use of this pretence and require his presence, that he might lay hold upon him, and therefore he desired to try the experiment. Asked leave of me, who being the king's son and deputy used to give licence to military men to depart for a season upon just occasions. His city, the place of his birth and education. John vi. 42. A yearly sacrifice, a sacrifice which was offered up in some holy place there yearly upon some special occasion not mentioned in Scripture, which was accompanied with a feast, or, a yearly feast, as the Hebrew word is sometimes used. For all the family, wherein all the members of our family used to meet together, when they will earnestly expect me above others, and will charge me with pride and unnaturalness, if I neglect their invitation.

a See Deut.
1:28 3 have.
17 4.

7 <sup>W</sup> If he say thus, It is well; thy servant shall have peace. But if he be very wroth, then be sure that evil is determined by him.

Then be sure, Heb. Assure thou, for indeed David knew well enough that Saul designed to kill him, but he useth this course for Jonathan's information and satisfaction, and for his own greater vindication, if he did wholly withdraw himself from Saul, and from his wife, which he foresaw he should be forced to do.

1 Job 2:16.

8 Therefore thou shalt deal kindly with thy servant, for thou hast brought thy servant into a covenant of the Lord with thee notwithstanding, <sup>11</sup> if there be in me iniquity, slay me thyself, for why shouldst thou bring me to thy father?

Thou shalt deal kindly with thy servant, in giving me timely notice, and a true account of Saul's disposition and intention towards me. A covenant of the Lord is a solemn covenant, not lightly undertaken but seriously entered into in the name and fear of God, and in his presence, calling him to be the witness of our sincerity therein and the avenger of perfidiousness in him that breaks it. Slay me thyself, I am contented thou shouldst kill me. Why shouldst thou bring me to thy father? why shouldst thou betray me to thy father, by concealing his evil intentions from me?

9 And Jonathan said, I am for it from thee: for if I knew certainly that evil were determined by my father to come upon thee, then would not I tell it thee?

I am for it from thee, I abhor the thoughts of either killing thee myself, or giving thee up to my father to slay thee.

10 Then said David to Jonathan, Who shall tell me? or what if thy father answer thee roughly?

By what means or messenger shall I understand this: for peradventure thou wilt not be able to come to me thyself.

11 ¶ And Jonathan said unto David, Come, and let us go out into the field. And they went out both of them into the field.

Let thy should be overheard.

12 And Jonathan said unto David, O Lord God of Israel, when I have sounded my father about to morrow my time, or the third day, and behold, <sup>11</sup> if there be good toward David, and I then send not unto thee, and shew it thee,

O Lord God of Israel, do thou hear and judge between us. It is an abrupt speech, which is usual in private prayers.

13 The Lord do so and much more to Jonathan: but if it please my father to do thee evil, then I will shew it thee, and send thee away, that thou mayest go in peace: and the Lord be with thee as he hath been with my father.

The Lord gave thee that honour and success in all thy affairs which he hath given to my father. Jonathan undoubtedly knew of Samuel's sin and irrevocable entrance of Saul's rejection from the kingdom, and of the substitution of some other person after God's own heart in his stead, and that David was this person he might truly say, (that which even Saul suspected) both from his eminent piety, and wisdom, and valor, and universal worth and from the great things which God had done both by him and for him, in preserving and advancing him by such unusual methods; and it is most likely that Jonathan did ask David about it, and that David did faithfully inform him of the whole truth, as may be gathered both from the words here following, and from chap. xxv. 17. And that the knowledge hereof did not raise jealousy, and envy, and rage in him, who was the next heir of the crown, as it did in his father, must be ascribed to Jonathan's piety towards God, to whose disposal he cheerfully submitted himself, and to his sincere friendship to David, in whose happiness he rejoiced as in his own.

14 And thou shalt not only while yet I live shew me the kindness of the Lord, that I die not.

Or, And wilt thou not, if I shall be alone (to wit when the Lord shall be with thee, as he hath been with my father as he now said, i.e. when God shall have advanced thee to the kingdom, as he did him,) yea, wilt thou not (the same particle twice repeated for asseveration, i.e. I am well assured that thou wilt) show me the kindness of the Lord, i.e. either such kindness as the Lord hath showed to thee in preserving thy life in the midst of so many and such great dangers, or that kindness to which thou hast engaged thyself in the covenant sworn between thee and me in God's presence. That I die not, that thou do not kill me or mine as princes of another line use to kill the nearest relations of the former line, from whom the kingdom was translated to them, which they do either by way of revenge, or in policy, and reason of state, to secure the kingdom to themselves.

15 But also thou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house for ever up, not when the Lord hath cut off the enemies of David every one from the face of the earth.

Thy kindness, he saith not the kindness of the Lord as before because the covenant between them seem to have been only personal and not comprehending their posterity. And therefore as Jonathan speaks confidently of his own preservation by virtue of that covenant, so he here lays this additional obligation upon David that he would extend his kindness to all his progeny. When the Lord hath cut off the enemies of David, which he will certainly do without exception of Saul my father, and those of his children who have joined, or shall join with him in his hostilities and cruelties against David. And by this word cut off he implies the reasonableness of his request, because Jonathan was none of that number, and therefore not to be treated as such.

16 So Jonathan made a covenant with David at the house of David, saying, At the Lord's request I will even requite it at the hand of David's enemies.

The covenant which before was personal he now extends to the whole house of David expecting a reciprocal engagement of it on David's side which doubtless he obtained. Let the Lord even requite it at the hand of David's enemies i.e. either I or any of my house shall break this covenant and shall prove enemies to David, or to his house, let the Lord the witnesses of this covenant, severely punish the violators of it, wherever they are. Others thus, Let the Lord requite and punish the breach of this covenant in David if he break it. But because it was ominous and reproachful to suppose such a thing of David by a figure called euphemism, he names David's enemies for David, as they also expound 1 Sam. xxv. 22. But the former sense seems more probable, because this verse contains only Jonathan's stipulation or covenant with David and his house, which being expressed in the former part of it, is in the latter part confirmed by the usual form of imprecation and the stipulation or covenant of David to Jonathan and his house is mentioned in the next verse. Yet may that which sense stand well enough, taking these words for Jonathan's adjuration of David to be kind to him, confirmed with an imprecation in case he do otherwise as if he should say, I adjure thee, as thou hast to escape such evil as I have, (which I had rather might befall thine enemies than thee,) that thou deal not so ungratefully with me or my house which adjuration of Jonathan David seconded by oath in the next verse, at the request of Jonathan.

17 And Jonathan caused David to swear again, because he loved him: for he loved him as he loved his own soul.

¶ And Jonathan added on proceeded to make David

24 <sup>1</sup> e having himself sworn to David, or adjured David, in the foregoing verse, he here requires David's oath to him, by way of restitution or confirmation. Because he loved him, because he had a true friendship for David, he desired that the covenant might be inviolably observed through all their generations.

18 Then Jonathan said to David, "To-morrow is the new moon and thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty."

Thy seat, i. e. the place where David used to sit at meals with Saul. See ver. 2.

19 And when thou hast stay'd three days, then thou shalt go down to the place where thou didst hide thyself; when the business was in hand, and shalt remain by the stone.

When thou hast stay'd three days, either at Beth-lehem with thy friend, ver. 6, or elsewhere, as thou shalt see. When the business was in hand, Heb. in the day of business, out of the business. And these words are to be joined either 1. With the words next foregoing, and so they note the time when David had hid himself there, which was when this same business which now they were treating about was in agitation formerly to wit to discover Saul's mind and purpose towards him, chap. x. c. 2. 3. Or 2. With the more remote word, and so they note the time when David should come to the place appointed, and thereby noted him of in upon a like case to wit, in the day when the business he spoke of was to be done, i. e. when the discovery of Saul's mind was to be made. By the time I shall be by the stone of great truth, i. e. by that stone which directeth travellers in the way to wit in some cave or convenient place which was to be hid in.

20 And I will shoot three arrows on the side of the roof; a though I shot a mark.

He chose this way to avoid Saul's suspicion because bows and arrows were the prime instruments of his craft and Jonathan, as well as others, did oftentimes to exercise himself with them both for recreation and improvement of his skill in that art. He did he knew not that he had here any opportunity of private converse with David, by reason of purpose, thus though the event proved better than he expected.

21 And, behold, I will send a lad saying, Go find out the arrows. If I expressly say unto the lad, Behold the arrows are on this side of thee, take them; then come thou; for there is peace to thee, and no hurt. If he say, Behold the arrows are on that side of thee, then I will shoot them; either out of love or beyond him, as I shall in occasion.

22 But if I say thus unto the young man, Behold the arrows are before thee, so thy way for the word shall be thy way.

Take the least notice of God's providence that thou shouldst creep away with a countenance.

23 And as toucheth the matter which thou and I have spoken of, behold the Lord be between thee and me for ever.

24 So David hid himself in the field, and when the new moon was come, the king of him down to eat meat.

David hid himself to wit at the place appointed, for it seems probable that he was to be hid in the field. Jonathan told his father of this, and he went to the field, when the occasion came, we must charge him with a downright lie, as he did to be missed (without any apparent cause) every day and night, especially in so dangerous and dangerous a conjuncture. And why should he hide himself so long before the time when Jonathan was to come thither to inform him? Nor were there any need of appointing a certain time to meet if David were there all the while.

25 And the king sat upon his seat, as at other times, even upon a seat by the wall and Jonathan arose, and Abner sat by Saul's side, and David's place was empty.

Jonathan arose, to wit, from his seat where he was sat next to the king, whence he arose, and stood up at Abner's coming, to do honour to him, who was his father's equerry and the general of the army. David's place seems to have been next to Abner, on the same side with him.

26 Nevertheless Saul spake not any thing that day, for he thought, Some-thing hath befallen him, he is not clean; surely he is not clean.

Something hath befallen, some accident which hath rendered him unclean and so unfit to partake of this feast which consisted in part of the remainders of these peace offerings, according to the law, Lev. vii. 20, unfit also to come into any company, much more into the king's company, lest he should pollute them also. See above, on ver. 5. See also Lev. xi. xv.

27 And it came to pass on the morrow, which was the second day of the month, that David's place was empty, and Saul said unto Jonathan his son, Wherefore cometh not the son of Jesse to me to-day, neither yesterday, nor to day?

Which was the second day of the month, or on the morrow of the new moon, being the second day, either 1. Of the three days appointed ver. 5, 19. Or 2. Of the feast. Or 3. Of the month. Saul said unto Jonathan who was David's friend and best knew his mind and his ways. He calls him the son of Jesse, in scorn and contempt, to note the name of his own uncle, and is not degrading to call him by his proper name, see below chap. xxii. 9. Why is he not here yesterday nor to-day, for the uncleanness which came by some chance usually lasted but for one day. See Lev. xi.

28 And Jonathan answered Saul, David earnestly asked leave of me to go to Beth-lehem.

29 And he said, Let me go, I pray thee; for our family hath a sacrifice in the city, and my brother be hath commanded me to be there; and now, if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me set away. I pray thee, and see my brethren. Therefore he cometh not unto the king's table.

He hath commanded me to be there, either in his father's name, as the right of the first born, one branch of which is authority over his brethren in all the concerns of the family, whereof this was one.

30 Then Saul's anger was kindled against Jonathan, and he said unto him, 31 Thou son of the perverse rebellious woman, do not I know that thou hast chosen the son of Jesse to thine own confusion and unto the confusion of thy mother's nakedness?

The son of the perverse rebellious woman, this base term of thine thou hadst not from me but from thy mother, of whose perverseness I have had so much experience. Thou son of perverse rebellion, i. e. thou perverse and rebellious son. Thou most perverse rebel, for in the Hebrew language the word son, thus used, is an aggravation of a man's crime and notes one who is extraordinarily addicted to it. Hence he calls him because he had and perceived that man whom the king had commanded to be his right heir, that he might be slain. To thine own confusion, and it will be a horrible shame and reproach unto thee, that David by his crafty insinuations and false promises should cheat thee of thy kingdom. To the confusion of thy mother's nakedness, men will conclude, that thy mother was a whore, and thou a bastard, and that thou but no royal blood in thy veins, that canst so tamely give up thy crown to so contemptible a person

31 For as long as the son of Jesse lyeth upon the ground, thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom. Wherefore now send and fetch him unto me, for he shall surely die

Thus he grossly mistakes the cause of Jonathan's loss of the kingdom, which was not David's art but Saul's sin, and vainly endeavours to prevent God's irrevocable sentence.

32 And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, "Wherefore shall he be slain? what hath he done?"

33 And Saul cast a javelin at him to smite him: whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to slay David

To smite him, i. e. to wound him though not to smite him even to the wall, as he designed to do to David chap. xix. 10

34 So Jonathan arose from the table in silence, and did eat no meat the second day of the month: for he was grieved for David, because his father had done him shame

Or and because, for this is a second cause of his grief. The conjunction and is oftentimes omitted, and to be supplied, as Psal. xxiii. 2, Job. 9. Josh. xiii. 11. Heb. ii. 11

35 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field at the time appointed with David: and a little lad with him

In the morning, to wit, of the third day, appointed, for his work, ver. 5

36 And he said unto his lad, Run, and cut now the arrows which I shoot. And is the lad run, he shot an arrow beyond him

37 And when the lad was come to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot, Jonathan cried after the lad, and said, Is not the arrow beyond thee?

To the place, i. e. near to the place. Or and the lad went on to the place, for the words following show that he was not yet come thither. The Hebrew verb which properly signifies to come, sometimes signifies to go, as here, and Ruth in 7. Josh. 13

38 And Jonathan cried after the lad, Make speed, haste, say not. And Jonathan's lad gathered up the arrows, and came to his master

He to stay not, so he had him because finding the constraint made haste to take the opportunity to speak with his dearly beloved David

39 But the lad knew not any thing: only Jonathan and David knew the matter

40 And Jonathan gave his bow and arrows unto his lad, and said unto him, Go, carry them to the city

His artillery, his bow, and arrows, and quiver

41 ¶ And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the south, and fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himself three times: and they kissed one another, and wept one with another, until David exceeded

Toward the south, in respect of the stone where David hid himself, and hid himself. Untill that day exceeded, as well he might, because he was driven away not only from his dear friend Jonathan, but also from his wife, and all his relations, and from the commonwealth of Israel, and from the service of God, as he complains below chap. xxii. 19

42 And Jonathan said to David, Go in peace, forasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of the Lord, saying, The Lord be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed for ever. And he arose and departed, and Jonathan went into the city

We have sworn both of us, therefore doubt not but I will ever love thee, and faithfully serve thee: and the like I assure myself from thee, and this must be our comfort in our state of separation

CHAP. XXI

David cometh to Nob to Ahimelech the priest, pretendeth secret business from Saul, asketh bread. Ahimelech giveth him the shew bread 1-6. David seeth this, 7. David asketh urns. Ahimelech giveth him Goliath's sword 8-9. David cometh to Achish, asketh, and afraid, feigneth himself mad 10-13. Achish is angry with his servants for bringing him 14-15

THE N came David to Nob to Ahimelech the priest, and Ahimelech was latitud at the meeting of David, and said unto him, Why art thou alone, and no man with thee?

Nob, a city of priests, it is called chap. xxi. 19. or ther. 1. Because it was assigned to the priests. For though it be not expressed by this name among the cities, Jer. xxi. yet it might be one of those cities, there named by some other name, which name might be changed, or another new name added to the old for some reason now unknown. It was very usual among the Hebrews to compare 1 Chron. vi. Or 2. Because it was now inhabited by the priests for the service of the tabernacle, which now was here, as appears from ver. 7-9. For as the kings of Israel were to consult with God's oracle in all their wars, having often so they endeavored to have it in or near their own habitations. Hence it was first carried by Joshua to Shiloh in his tribe of Ephraim, and afterwards by David into his tribe of Judah, and now it seems had been by Saul carried to Nob, a city in the tribe of Benjamin. Neh. xi. 32. near to Ardath 1 Kings ii. 26. Hitherto, reported partly for a supply of the necessities, which he supposed he might receive here, without danger of being betrayed into Saul's hand, and principally that in this great distress, and his resolution of coming out of the kingdom he might seek and receive comfort and counsel from the Lord. Ahimelech the priest to win the chief priest, brother to that Ahiah chap. xxi. 1. he had been now dead, his successor in the priesthood, they were both sons of Ahitub 1 Sam. xiv. 3. xxi. 1. Ahimelech was afraid, suspecting some extraordinary business, in such a manner, and fearing the worst, as men usually do in such cases. What art thou afraid of? though David had some servants and companions, yet manifest from ver. 1-5, and from Matt. xii. 1. whom Jonathan probably had sent to a place appointed to serve and guard him, yet they were left at another place, as David himself sheweth ver. 2. And David was now alone, as it is here, when he fled to Achish, ver. 10.

2 And David said unto Ahimelech the priest, The king hath commanded me a business, and hath said unto me, Let no man know any thing of this business whereabout I send thee, and what I have commanded thee, and I have appointed my servants to such and such a place

The king hath commanded me a business, this seems to be a pain he, extorted from him by fear and necessity. But as it was odious for himself, so it was pernicious to all the priests there. Where David afterwards declares his repugnance for this sin of lying, Psal. cxix. 29. To such and such a place, to a certain place which is not material nor convenient to mention because the whole business requires concealment

3 Now therefore what is under thine hand?

give me five loaves of bread in mine hand, or what there is present
Under thine hand, to wit in thy power, and ready for thee to give, and for me to take and eat

4 And the priest answered David, and said, There is no common bread under mine hand, but there is hallowed bread, if the young men have kept themselves at least from women

Under mine hand, to wit here in the tabernacle, though doubtless he had enough of that and of other provisions in his house, but David was in great haste and in fear of Doeg whom he saw and knew their chap xxii 22, and therefore would not stay till any thing could be fetched thence. Hallowed bread, the shew bread which was appropriated to the priests, of which see Exod xvi 30, Lev xxiv 5. At least from women either from uncleanness by women which might be divers ways contracted, or from conjugal converse with their wives, which though it did not defile them, yet he thought might debar them from the participation of such very sacred things; which he gathered by the analogy of that precept Exod xix 15. There was a double impediment to the giving of this bread to them. 1 Its sacredness in itself, which the priest implies and David answers, ver 5 and the priest was satisfied therein by David's extraordinary occasions and great necessities. 2 The purity and abstinence from all women, which he supposeth should be in those that use it, concerning which he now inquires. And though he mention this only concerning David's young men and out of modesty and reverence to David forbears to name him, yet he is also included in the number, as David's answer shows.

5 And David answered the priest, and said unto him, Of a truth women have been kept from us about these three days, since I came out and the vessels of the young men are holy, and the bread is in a manner common, yea, though it were sanctified this day in the vessel.

About these three days, as long as the law required Exod xix 15. And so long David and his men had, it seems had themselves for fear of Saul in some of those caves whereof there were many in those parts, whereby they were kept both from all converse with any other persons besides themselves and consequently from women and without from food convenient for them. Since I came out from the place where Jonathan and David met. The vessels are either, 1 Their garments or other utensils for their journey. Or 2 Their bodies, for of them the question was ver 4 and having now said that women had been kept from them he infers that therefore their bodies were holy, their manners were undefiled. Thus the word vessel is used. 1 The vessel and in other authors both Greek and Latin. The bread is in a manner common, Heb and this (to wit, the bread which is easily supplied out of the former verse because that was the thing about which the present discourse was and against the giving whereof the priest started an objection ver 4, to which David here giveth answer) is in a manner or after a sort common, i.e. considering the time and our necessity this may be asked in a manner like common bread and so is used by others. For though for a season whilst it is to stand before the Lord, it is so holy that the priest himself might not eat it, yet afterwards it is eaten by the priest, and by his whole family, as their common food and so it may be by us in our circumstances. Though it were sanctified this day in the vessel, if it were but newly put in the vessel, it must give place to the great law of necessity and charity, because God will have mercy preferred before sacrifice. Or thus, especially, when or the vessel because this day there is other (i.e. new bread) sanctified in the vessel, i.e. put into the vessel which was made to receive it or used, Exod xvi 29, and thereby sanctified or consecrated to God, and therefore the former shew bread is now to be renewed, and employed for the common use of the priest and his family.

6 So the priest gave him hallowed bread for there was no bread there but the shewbread, that was taken from before the Lord, to put hot bread in the day when it was taken away.

There was no bread there, to wit, in the tabernacle, where David and the priest now were. In the day when it was taken away, which was done upon the sabbath day, Lev xxiv 8, for though they might not then kindle a fire to heat the bread in, yet they might and did keep it hot in an oven that had been heated before the sabbath.

7 Now a certain man of the servants of Saul was there that day, detained before the Lord, and his name was Doeg an Edomite, the chiefest of the herdmen that belonged to Saul.

Detained, not by force from others, but by his own choice, he fixed his abode there for that day, either because it was the sabbath day, on which he might not proceed in his journey or other business, or for the discharge of some vow, or to beg direction and help from God in some great business. Before the Lord, i.e. at the tabernacle. An Edomite, either, 1 By his habitation and conversation among those people for some considerable time, as for the same reason Uriah is called the Hittite, and Obad-edom the Gittite or rather, 2 By his birth and nation but he was proselyted to the Jewish religion, or took it up for his friends being advanced, as here we read, to a place of trust and preferment, possibly upon this occasion.

8 ¶ And David said unto Ahimelech, And is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? for I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the king's business required haste.

He left his weapons behind him, that he might with less suspicion remove from place to place and hide himself from Saul and his spies. The king's business required haste, the message came to me when I was unarmed, and the business required so great expedition that I could not go home to fetch my weapons.

9 And the priest said, The sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Elah, behold, it is here wrapped in a cloth behind the ephod: if thou wilt take that, take it for there is no other save that here. And David said, There is none like that, give it me.

Behind the ephod, i.e. behind that holy place allotted for the keeping of the sword or priestly garments, all which are here comprehended under the ephod, which, as the chief of the kind is put for all the rest. Here it was laid up as a sacred monument of God's power and goodness, and that famous victory, related chap xvii. There is none like that, because it not only served him for his use, for he was a strong and tall man, and one that could wield that sword as we saw, chap xvii, but was also a pledge of God's favour to him, and a great encouragement to his faith.

10 ¶ And David arose, and fled that day for fear of Saul, and went to Achish the king of Gath.

A strange action, but it must be considered, 1 That Saul's rage was so great and implacable, his power also and diligence in hunting after him so great, that he despaired of escaping him any other way, and it is not strange if a desperate disease produceth a desperate remedy. 2 David might reasonably think, that being persecuted and banished by Saul, and the Israelites under his command, he should be welcome to the Philistines, who would be glad, not only to be freed from all those evils which he had from time to time done and was likely further to do to them, but also to make him their friend, and oblige him by their kindness, and to make him the more odious and irreconcilable to Saul and the Israelites. Quest But why did he go to these, and not rather to some other neighbour

11 And <sup>the servants of Achish said</sup> unto him, <sup>Is not this David the king of the land?</sup> <sup>did they not sing one to another of him in dances, saying, "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands?"</sup>

<sup>The king of the land, or, of this land, i. e. of the land of Canaan. They call him king, either more generally for the governor, as that word is used Deut xxxiii 5, for the most eminent captain and commander, and, as it were, the king of the Israelitish armies, or rather, more specially, the king, i. e. with the king elect, the person designed to be king; for by this time the fame of Saul's rejection and David's destination to the kingdom, was got abroad among the Israelites, and from them probably to the Philistines' ears. Did they not sing one to another of him in dances, saying, Saul hath slain his thousands and David his ten thousands? and therefore consider what to do, and now thine and our great enemy is in thy hand, be sure thou never let him go alive.</sup>

12 And David <sup>laid up these words in his heart, and was sore afraid of Achish the king of Gath.</sup>

<sup>Lest either their revenge or policy should prompt them to kill him.</sup>

13 And <sup>he changed his behaviour before them, and feigned himself mad in their hands, and scrabbled on the doors of the gate, and let his spittle fall down upon his beard.</sup>

<sup>His behaviour, his speech and gesture, and, it may be his habit also. Feigned himself mad, which they might the more easily believe, partly because of the disappointment of his great hopes, and his extreme danger and trouble from Saul, which might well make him mad, and partly because he had put himself into their hands, which they supposed none but a fool or a madman would have done. And David counterfeited this madness, that he might procure both their pity and their contempt, that they being freed from jealousies and fears of future mischief from David, and from his wise conduct, of which they had sad experience, might be secure of him and spare him. In their hands, i. e. whilst he was in their power, and before them.</sup>

14 Then said Achish unto his servants, <sup>Lo, ye see the man is mad, wherefore then have ye brought him to me?</sup>

<sup>Ye see the man is mad, and so were Achish and his men too, to let so soon cheat. But this must be ascribed to a wise and powerful providence of God who in answer to David's prayer now made, which is recorded Psal xxxv and lvi, did visitate them, as he hath done many others in like cases. Wherefore then have ye brought him to me? what service can I expect from him? or what cause have I to fear him?</sup>

15 Have I need of mad men, that ye have brought this fellow to play the mad man in my presence? shall this fellow come into my house? <sup>I need wise men not such fools or madmen as this. I will not have my court disgraced with entertaining such fellows.</sup>

CHAP XXII

<sup>1. corieth to Adullam, where companions resort to him, 1, 2. He goeth to Mizpeh, and commendeth his parents to the king of Moab, 3, 4. Admonished by Gad, he returneth to Judah. Saul pursueth him, complaineth of his servants' infidelity, 5-8. Doeg arraiseth Ahimelech. Saul sentoneth him the high priest, and the rest of the priests, to die. Doeg slayeth eighty-five priests the city Nob and all in it is laid waste, only Ahithay the priest remained alive fleeing to David, 9-21. David acknowledgeth himself to be the cause hereof, 22, 23.</sup>

DAVID therefore departed thence, and escaped <sup>to the cave Adullam</sup> and when his brethren and all his father's house heard <sup>it</sup>, they went down thither to him.

<sup>The cave Adullam, a place of considerable strength, 2 Sam xxiii 13, 1 Chron xi 15, in the land of Judah Josh xv 21, 35, which being his own tribe, and the tribe to which God had first promised the kingdom, Gen xlv 10, he hoped for some protection and assistance there. They went down thither to him, partly, to comfort and assist him, partly, to secure themselves at the present from Saul's rage, which they knew to be fierce and cruel and thought he might extend it to David's friends, especially because they had so lately entertained him, chap xx 6, 29, and partly, that they might share with David in his honour and advancement, which they now concluded certain and near, though it was interrupted with some difficulties.</sup>

2 And every one that was in distress, and every one that was in debt, and every one that was discontented, gathered themselves unto him, and he became a captain over them, and there were with him about four hundred men.

<sup>Every one that was in distress, through want, or oppression or otherwise. Every one that was in debt. How could David receive and countenance such persons to the wrong of their creditors? Answer 1. David might be ignorant of their debts, and it is most likely they concealed that and pretended other causes of their coming to him, as the protection of the innocents and the defence of his just rights, &c. 2. They might be and probably were poor debtors, whom their creditors were obliged to spare and favour, Exod xxi 25. And though their persons were with David, yet their land and goods were liable to their creditors. Every one that was discontented, or bitter of soul, i. e. in an afflicted and calamitous condition. He became a captain over them, he did not justify nor maintain any injustice or wickedness which some of them possibly might be guilty of, but, on the contrary, he instructed and obliged them to the practice of all justice and honesty, as appears from chap xxv 15, and he only used them for his just defence.</sup>

3 And David went thence to Mizpeh of Moab, and he said unto the king of Moab, I et my father and my mother, I pray thee, come forth, and be with you, till I know what God will do for me.

<sup>Mizpeh of Moab, so called, to distinguish it from that Mizpeh Sam vii 5. He said unto the king of Moab, partly because he was related to and descended from one of his people Ruth iv 10, and partly because he was Saul's enemy 1 Sam xiv 17, and therefore most likely to be David's friend. My father and my mother, who being very aged, were not able to endure those journeys and hardships which David foresaw that he was likely to be exposed to. Till I know what God will do for me, till I see the accomplishment of God's promise made to me.</sup>

4 And he brought them before the king of Moab, and they dwelt with him all the while that David was in the hold.

<sup>Before the king of Moab, into his presence, that he might see them, and give them leave to dwell in his dominion. In the hold, either, 1. In Mizpeh of Moab, which was a very strong hold. But it is apparent he speaks of some hold where his father and mother were exposed to fear and danger from Saul, which they were not in the king of Moab's royal city. Or, 2. In the cave of Adullam, mentioned above, ver 1. Or, 3. In holes, the singular number being put for the plural, as is frequent, i. e. as long as David was forced to go from place to place and from hold to hold, to secure himself, for it concerned David to secure his father, and he did doubtless secure him for all that time, and not only whilst he was in the hold of Mizpeh, or of Adullam, which was but a little while.</sup>

5 ¶ And the prophet <sup>1</sup> Gad said unto David, Abide not in the hold, depart, and get thee into the land of Judah. Then David departed, and came into the forest of Hareth.

Abide not in the hold, do not shut up thyself in holes and holds. Get thee into the land of Judah, go and show thyself in the land of Judah, that thou mayst publicly put in thy claim to the kingdom after Saul's death, and that thy friends may be invited and encouraged to appear on thy behalf. Hereby also God would exercise David's faith, and wisdom, and courage, and so prepare him for the kingdom, and uphold and increase his reputation among the people. In the forest of Hareth there were many caves and lurking-places.

6 ¶ When Saul heard that David was discovered, and the men that were with him, (now Saul abode in Gibeah under a tree in Ramah, having his spear in his hand, and all his servants were standing about him,)

In Ramah, i. e. in the territory of Gibeah in or near (for so the Hebrew participle is oft used as hath been shown) Ramah. Or in the town of Gibeah—in a high place, for so the word Ramah unquestionably signifies, and so it is here rendered by some, both ancient and modern, interpreters. Having his spear in his hand, either as an ensign of majesty for in old times kings carried a spear instead of a sceptre, as Justin and others note, or as an instrument of self defence or cruelty, as occasion required.

7 Then Saul said unto his servants that stood about him, If at now, ye Benjamites, will the son of Jesse give every one of you fields and vineyards, and make you all captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds,

Ye Benjamites, you that are of my own tribe and kindred, from whom David designs to translate the kingdom to another tribe, will he distribute profits and preferments amongst you Benjamites as I have done, and intend still to do? will he not rather prefer those of his own tribe before you?

8 That all of you have conspired against me, and there is none that sheweth me that my son hath made a league with the son of Jesse, and there is none of you that is sorry for me, or sheweth unto me that my son hath stirred up my servant against me to lie in wait as at this day?

My son hath made a league with the son of Jesse this he suspected partly from Jonathan's passionate love for David which he had formerly and constantly declared, and from his late discontent and departure from his father, mentioned chap. xx. 31. and partly from David's confidence in my doing, the land with four hundred men, which he thought he would never presume to do, without some encouragement or promise of assistance from Jonathan. To lie in wait, i. e. to design against my crown and life (which will appear to be a most groundless suspicion and false accusation).

9 ¶ Then answered Doeg the Edomite, which was set over the servants of Saul, and said I saw the son of Jesse coming to Nob, to Ahimelech the son of Ahitub.

See chap. xxi. 7.

10 And he enquired of the Lord for him, and gave him victuals, and gave him the sword of Goliath the Philistine.

He enquired of the Lord for him this is not recorded chap. xxi. and therefore some think that Doeg, to curry favour with Saul, feigned this for it is certain David clung to him with the sword of Goliath. Psal. li. 3. though it is not improbable that he told other men also, not here expressed, and withal, he is guilty of concealing part of the truth, which in this case he was obliged to declare for Ahimelech's just defence. It was the cunning pretence and artifice whereby David threatened Ahimelech. Others think this was true, because Ahimelech seems to confess it ver. 15, though that may be spoken by way of confession. If it were so, as Doeg declares, there was no new thing. Then he might add that it was not so, though this be not here mentioned; for it is evident that all his answer or apology is not here expressed, for here is not a word of the victuals or sword which he gave him.

11 Then the king sent to call Ahimelech the priest, the son of Ahitub, and all his father's house, the priests that were in Nob; and they came all of them to the king.

All his father's house, of the house of Eli, which God had threatened to cut off, chap. ii. 31.

12 And Saul said, Hear now, thou son of Ahitub. And he answered, Here I am, my lord.

Thou son of Ahitub, he shows his contempt and anger, that he would not vouchsafe to name him. See before on chap. xx. 27.

13 And Saul said unto him, Why have ye conspired against me, thou and the son of Jesse, in that thou hast given him bread, and a sword, and hast enquired of God for him, that he should rise against me, to lie in wait, as at this day?

14 Then Ahimelech answered the king, and said, And who is so faithful among all thy servants as David, which is the king's son in law, and goeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine house?

He doth not determine the differences between Saul and David, nor affirm what David now was, but only declared what David had formerly been both really and in public fame and opinion.

15 Did I then begin to enquire of God for him? be it far from me: let not the king impute any thing unto his servant, nor to all the house of my father: for thy servant knew nothing of all this, less or more.

Any thing or, this thing, to wit, which thou now chargest me with, that I should assist David in any evil design against thee. Thy servant knew nothing of all this, i. e. of thy suspicion concerning him. For as for Saul's attempts upon David will might Ahimelech impute them wholly to the violence of Saul's passion and disease, seeing even Jonathan did so, as may be gathered from 1 Sam. xx. 2.

16 And the king said, Thou shalt surely die Ahimelech, thou, and all thy father's house.

17 ¶ And the king said unto the footmen that stood about him, Turn, and slay the priests of the Lord, because their hand also is with David, and because they knew when he fled, and did not shew it to me. But the servants of the king would not put forth their hand to fall upon the priests of the Lord.

Choosing rather to offend the king, by disobeying his wicked and bloody command, than to offend God, by shedding the blood of such innocent and sacred persons.

18 And the king said to Doeg, Turn thou, and fall upon the priests. And Doeg the Edomite turned, and he fell upon the priests, and slew on that day fourscore and five persons that did wear a linen ephod.

Turn thou, or, go about, to wit, from man to man u i thou hast killed all. The Edomite, which is used to wipe off the stain of this barbarity from the Israelitish nation, and to show why he was so ready to do it, because he was one of that nation which had so implacably hated against all Israelites, and against the house of the Lord. See on that day fourscore and seven persons, with his own hand, which was not difficult, when no resistance was made. That did wear a linen ephod, not at that time, as some say, but usually; such as used to minister to the Lord in a linen ephod, which priests and Levites used to do. See 1 rod. xxviii. 40, &c.; 1 Sam. ii. 18 19 And Nob, the city of the priests, smote he with the edge of the sword, both men and women, children and sucklings, and oxen, and asses, and sheep, with the edge of the sword.

He, either Saul, or Doeg with the help of some others whom Saul appointed to that work. By this barbarous and bloody fact Saul thought to frighten all his subjects from giving any countenance or assistance to David.

20 ¶ And one of the sons of Ahimelech the son of Ahitub, named Abiathar, escaped, and fled after David.

Abiathar, by his father's death, was now high priest. Fled after David, to Keilah, chap xxiii. 6, 7

21 And Abiathar shewed David that Saul had slain the Lord's priests.

22 And David said unto Abiathar, I knew it that day, when Doeg the Edomite was there, that he would surely tell Saul. I have occasioned the death of all the persons of thy father's house.

I knew it, his malice and ambition made me suspect that he would do it.

23 Abide thou with me, fear not: for he that seeketh my life seeketh thy life; but with me thou shalt be in safeguard.

Because God will certainly preserve me to the kingdom; which he hath promised, and I by his help will protect thee.

CHAP XXIII

David, inquiring of the Lord by Abiathar, rescueth Keilah, and goeth into it, 1-6. God showing him the coming of Saul, and treachery of the Keilites, 7-12, he flieth thence to the wilderness of Ziph, with his six hundred men, 13-15. Here Jonathan cometh to him, and reneweth the covenant of friendship with him, 16-18. The Ziphites discover him to Saul, 19-23, who pursueth him into the wilderness of Maon, 21-26. He is called away by a message that the Philistines had invaded the land, 27, 28. David dwelleth at Engedi, 29.

¶ THEN they told David, saying, Behold, the Philistines fight against Keilah, and they rob the threshingfloors.

Then they told David, or, Now they had told David, before he heard of the slaughter of the priests. Keilah a city in the tribe of Judah, Josh xv. 41 not far from the forest of Hachish, where David now was, chap xxii. 5. The threshingfloors usually were without the cities, in places open to the wind. See Judg vi. 11, Ruth iii. 2, &c.

2 Therefore David inquired of the Lord, saying, Shall I go and smite these Philistines? And the Lord said unto David, Go and smite the Philistines, and save Keilah.

David inquired of the Lord, either by Abiathar, or rather, by God, who was a prophet, 2 Sam. xvi. 11, and David's seer, 1 Chrom. xxi. 9, and was now with David, chap xxii. 5, for Abiathar was not yet come to him, ver 6. Shall I go and smite these Philistines? for the case was both doubtful and new, he having not yet made any attempt upon the Philistines, but by Saul's commission; and dangerous, because of the small number of his forces.

3 And David's men said unto him, Behold, we be afraid here in Judah: how much more then if we come to Keilah against the armies of the Philistines?

Here in Judah, i. e. in this part of Judah, whereas yet we have no army to oppose us, for else Keilah also was in Judah. If we come to Keilah, when we shall have a potent enemy before us, the Philistines, and, it may be another behind us, even Saul, who probably will come forth, either to resist the Philistines, or to intercept us.

4 Then David enquired of the Lord yet again. And the Lord answered him and said, Arise, go down to Keilah, for I will deliver the Philistines into thine hand.

David inquired of the Lord yet again, not for his own, but for his soldiers' satisfaction and encouragement, as Gideon did Judg vii.

5 So David and his men went to Keilah, and fought with the Philistines, and brought away their cattle, and smote them with a great slaughter. So David saved the inhabitants of Keilah.

The Philistines had either brought their cattle out of their land, or had taken from the Israelites in their march, for the sustenance of their army.

6 And it came to pass, when Abiathar the son of Ahimelech fled to David to Keilah, that he came down with an ephod in his hand.

Or with the ephod, to wit, the high priest's ephod in which were the Urim and Thummim, Exod xxviii. 30, which when Ahimelech and the rest of the priests went to Saul, were probably left in his hand, and to his care, which gave him the opportunity both of escaping whilst Doeg the butler was killing his brethren, and of bringing away the ephod, which Saul had oft grossly neglected, and now was justly deprived of it.

7 ¶ And it was told Saul that David was come to Keilah. And Saul said, God hath delivered him into mine hand, for he is shut in, by entering into a town that hath gates and bars.

He easily believed what he greedily desired, though his own experience had oft showed him how strangely God had delivered him out of his hands, and what a singular care God had over him. For he is shut in, by entering into a town that hath gates and bars, so that which he chose for his safety will be his certain ruin.

8 And Saul called all the people together to war, to go down to Keilah, to besiege David and his men.

9 ¶ And David knew that Saul secretly practised mischief against him, and he said to Abiathar the priest, Bring hither the ephod.

Saul secretly practised mischief against him, where by it may seem he pretended that he raised his army to defend Keilah and his country from the Philistines, and kept his intention against David in his own breast. Or, designed or devised, for so the word signifies, and so it is here interpreted by many, and it seems both from ver. 9, and from his publicly avowed jealousy of and rage against David, that he designed his design to be against him, as a traitor to his crown and dignity. Bring hither the ephod, and put it upon thee, that thou mayest ask counsel of God for me.

10 Then said David, O Lord God of Israel, thy servant hath certainly heard that Saul seeketh to come to Keilah, to destroy the city for my sake.

David said this by the priest, for he was to make the inquiry of God, Numb xviii. 21, and David puts the words into his mouth.

11 Will the men of Keilah deliver me up into his hand? will Saul come down, as thy servant hath heard? O Lord God of Israel, I beseech thee, tell thy servant. And the Lord said, He will come down.

Will the men of Keilah deliver me up, to wit, if I continue in their city, and if Saul come down? The Lord said. From this place it may appear that God's answer by Urim and Thummim was not by any change in the colour or situation of the precious stones in the breastplate of the ephod, but by a voice or suggestion from God to the high priest. He will come down, i. e. he purposeth to come if thou continuest here, for still, as David's question so God's answer, is upon opposition as is here sufficiently implied.

12 Then said David, Will the men of Keilah deliver me and my men into the hand of Saul? And the Lord said, They will deliver thee up.

To wit if thou abidest there, for God saw then David's then purposes and passion, their aversion from David, and their affections to Saul, and knew better than themselves what they would do in that case.

13 ¶ Then David and his men, which were about six hundred, arose and departed out of Keilah, and went whithersoever they could go. And it was told Saul that David was escaped from Keilah, and he forbore to go forth.

Which were about six hundred, two hundred being added to his former number chap. xxii. 2, upon his first and great success against the Philistines. Whithersoever they could go, hither or thither, where they could find refuge or a hiding place.

14 And David abode in the wilderness, in strong holds, and remained in a mountain in the wilderness of Ziph. And Saul sought him every day, but God delivered him not into his hand.

As Saul fondly persuaded himself he intended ver. 7.

15 And David saw that Saul was come out to seek his life, and David was in the wilderness of Ziph in a wood.

David saw, either by information from his spies, or by prospect from the top of the mountain where he was.

16 ¶ And Jonathan Saul's son arose, and went to David into the wood, and strengthened his hand in God.

Jonathan went where David had appointed to meet him at that time, and strengthened his hand in God, he comforted and supported him against all his fears, by reminding him of God's inflexible promises made to him, and his singular providence which hitherto had and still would be with him.

17 And he said unto him, I fear not for the hand of Saul, my father shall not find thee, and thou shalt be king over Israel, and I shall be next unto thee. And that also Saul my father knoweth.

I shall be next unto thee, which he gathered either from David's generosity, magnanimity, and true friendship to him, or from some promise made to him by David concerning it. Or the meaning of the words, next unto thee, may be as much as to say, I shall be under thee, after thee, or inferior to thee, in the phrase which connotes signifies. So that the whole imports that which I do not look to be king myself, (as by my birth I might expect) but that thou shalt be king, God having so appointed; and I but in a secondary place next unto thee. That also Saul my father knoweth, by strong and well considered conjectures, is hath been noted.

18 And they also made a covenant before the Lord, and David abode in the wood, and Jonathan went to his house.

They two made a covenant, i. e. renewed their former covenant before the Lord, setting themselves as in God's presence, and calling upon him to be witness between them.

19 ¶ Then came up the Ziphites to Saul to Gibeah, saying, Dost thou not David hide himself with us in strong holds in the wood, in the hill of Hachilah, which is upon the south of Jeshimon?

The Ziphites were of David's own tribe, though in their unnatural and strange carriage to him he calls them strangers, Psal. lvi. 3.

20 Now therefore, O king, come down according to all the desire of thy soul to come down, and our part shall be to deliver him into the king's hand.

It shall be our care and business to the utmost of our power. Or, we will undertake to deliver him, or betray him to thee.

21 And Saul said, Blessed be ye of the Lord, for ye have compassion on me.

Whilst others harden their hearts against me, and join with David in his treasonable conspiracy you show your pity to me by your readiness to help me.

22 Go, I pray you, prepare yet, and know and see his place where his haunt is, and who hath seen him there, for it is told me that he dealeth very subtilly.

Prepare yet to wit the matter, inform yourselves carefully of things, and dispose them so that we may not be frustrated in our attempt. Where his haunt is, in what cave or wood or mountain he is most frequently.

23 See therefore, and take knowledge of all the lurking places where he hideth himself, and come ye again to me with the certainty, and I will go with you, and it shall come to pass, if he be in the land that I will search him out throughout all the thousands of Judah.

I. e. Through all the parts of that tribe. Every tribe was divided into thousands, as counties are now with us into hundreds. See Judges vi. 15. Or with all the thousands of Judah, i. e. I will chase against him all the force of that tribe in which he trusteth and hideth himself. This he saith to animate them to the more vigorous prosecution of him.

24 And they arose, and went to Ziph before Saul, but David and his men were in the wilderness of Maon, in the plain on the south of Jeshimon.

Before Saul to prepare things for Saul who marched after them. In the wilderness of Maon, whither he went from the wilderness of Ziph upon suspicion or information that Saul was coming thither.

25 Saul also and his men went to seek him. And they told David wherefore he came down into a rock, and abode in the wilderness of Maon. And when Saul heard that, he pursued after David in the wilderness of Maon.

Into a rock, i. e. into a cave which was in the rock, or which might be called a rock, not for the height, but the strength of its situation, where at first he might think to hide himself, but upon further intelligence or consideration he removed from thence upon Saul's approach. Or, he came down from the rock, i. e. rather, first from the mountain mentioned in the next verse, whence he came down that so he might get out of Saul's sight and reach. Or secondly, from the hill of Hachilah, where David hid himself, which is said to be on the south of Jeshimon, ver. 19, as this place where he now was is also described ver. 24, only that speaks of the plain, and this of the rock or hill adjoining to it, or in the midst of it. Or, he came down to Maon, as the Syriac and Arabic translate it; a place so called from the many rocks or stones which were in it, or near it.

26 And Saul went on this side of the mountain, and David and his men on that side of the mountain. And David made haste to get away for fear of Saul; for Saul and his men compassed David and his men round about to take them.

Dividing themselves into several parties, each marching a several way after him.

27 ¶ But there came a messenger unto Saul, saying, Haste thee, and come, for the Philistines have invaded the land.

God stirring them up by his all disposing providence to do it at this time for David's rescue. Comp. 2 Kings xix 9.

28 Wherefore Saul returned from pursuing after David, and went against the Philistines; therefore they called that place Sela-hammahlekoth.

The rock of divisions, because there Saul was separated and in a manner pulled asunder from David, who was now almost within his reach.

29 ¶ And David went up from thence, and dwelt in strong holds at Engedi.

CHAP XXIV

Saul pursueth David to 1 n gide, cometh into a cave in which Saul and his men, who cutteth off the skirt of Saul's mantle, but will not kill him 1—7 He communeth with Saul and hereby evidenceth his innocency towards him 8—15 Saul acknowledgeth his fault, taketh an oath of David, and departeth, 16—22

AND it came to pass, when Saul was returned from following the Philistines, that it was told him, saying, Behold, David is in the wilderness of Engedi.

2 Then Saul took three thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and went to seek David and his men upon the rocks of the wild goats.

Which the wild goats use to delight and climb into. The very rocks are exceeding steep, and full of precipices, dangerous to travellers, as an eye witness hath left on record. And yet Saul was so transported with rage to venture himself and his army here, that he might take David who, as he thought, would judge himself safe and therefore be secure in such inaccessible places.

3 And he came to the sheepcotes by the way, where was a cave, and Saul went in to cover his feet; and David and his men remained in the sides of the cave.

Some think the sheep-cotes to have been caves into which they used to drive their sheep for shelter in tempestuous weather. To cover his feet, i. e. to ease his belly, is the phrase is thought to be used, Judg in 21. The reason whereof is, because the eastern and some other nations of old wore no breeches, but loose and long coats or gowns like those which women with us wear, but shorter, whence their feet and legs were in a great part uncovered, and sometimes other parts, which also in Scripture are designed by the name of the feet, (of which see on Gen xlix 10, Deut xxviii 57, 2 Kings xviii 27, Isa vii 20) were exposed to view. But when they went to perform this office of nature, which obliged them first to lift up their garments, they afterwards disposed them so decently that all those parts might be covered and kept out of the sight of others. But possibly the words may have another meaning, and it is not to be despised that those ancient and venerable interpreters, the Syriac and Arabic, interpret this place and phrase quite otherwise, that Saul went in to sleep there, which was no uncouth thing to Saul, who being a military man, used to sleep with his soldiers upon the bare ground, as he did Chap. xxvi. And it is not improbable that Saul, being exceedingly weary with his eager and almost incessant pursuit, first of David, then of the Philistines and now of David again both needed and desired some sleep. God also disposing him thereunto, that David might have this imminent occasion to demonstrate his integrity to Saul, and to all Israel, and the season possibly being hot he might choose to sleep in the cave, for the benefit of the shade. But all the question is, how it may appear that this is the meaning of this phrase, and what is the reason and ground of it? To which many things may be said. First. That this phrase is but twice used in Scripture, as far as I remember here, and Judg in 21, and this sense may conveniently enough agree to both of them. Nay this sense may seem better to agree with that place Judg in, for that summer parlour or summer chamber (for both seem to be the same place, and were apparently for the same use ver 24, 25) seems to be a place far more convenient for sleeping than for easing of nature. And the servants' long stay and waiting for their lord seems to imply that they judged him gone to sleep, (which might take up a considerable time) rather than to that other work, which requires but a little time. See my notes on Judg in 21. Secondly. That there are many Hebrew phrases which do confidently signify several things, albeit the reason of such significations be now utterly unknown to us, though it was doubtless known to the ancient Hebrews. Nor need I instance in particulars, seeing it is so in all languages, and particularly in the English tongue at this day, in which the use of many proverbs and phrases is well understood though the reason of them be now lost, which in our modern infidels, who scoff at some passages of Scripture, which they either do not or will not understand, would consider they would lose much of their sports. Thirdly. Although there be not that clear and full proof of this sense which some may require (though indeed it cannot be reasonably expected in a thing so ancient, and in a phrase of so concise and narrow a language as the Hebrew is, and in an expression so rarely used in Scripture) yet there are some intimations in Scripture which may seem to favour this interpretation. For persons composing themselves to sleep in this manner are not only noted in the general to have been covered with a mantle, as is said of Simeon Judg ix 18 19, but particularly they are said to have their feet covered, as is expressly observed concerning Boaz when he lay down to sleep in the threshing floor, Ruth in 4, 7. The reason whereof may possibly be this, that when they lay down to sleep in their garments they were secured as to the other parts of their body only their feet were open and stable, and therefore it was convenient to cover their feet, partly to prevent the inconveniences of cold (for which reason we here take special care to cover our feet in such cases) and partly for decency sake, lest their garments being loose and large below should be disordered, and so their modesties should appear as it happened to Noah, Gen ix 21. Compare Exod x 26. And therefore it cannot seem strange or forced, if in this place Saul's covering of his feet design his composing himself to his rest. And if this be so then the following difficulties of this history will appear to be plain and easy. For if Saul were fast asleep, which might easily be perceived by David and his men within, then it is not strange that Saul neither heard David and his men talking of him, nor felt David when he came to cut off his lip. David and his men remained in the sides of the cave, for that there were vast caves in those parts is affirmed not only by Josephus, but also by heathen authors, and Strabo, in his 16th book, writes of one which could receive four thousand men.

4 And the men of David said unto him, Behold the day of which the Lord said unto thee, Behold, I will deliver thine enemy into thine hand, that thou mayest do to him as it shall seem good unto thee. Then David arose, and cut off the skirt of Saul's robe privily.

Quest. How came it to pass that Saul did not hear the debates of David and his men? Answer. First, The greater noise of Saul's men and horses, just by the cave's mouth, might easily drown the lesser. Secondly, There were in these large and capacious caves several cells or parts, whereof some were more inward and remote from the cave's mouth in which they might freely converse and discourse, and yet neither be heard nor seen by Saul, though they could easily see him, and observe all his postures and actions, because he was in the mouth of the cave. Thirdly, Saul might be asleep as hath been discoursed. Behold the day of which the Lord said unto thee, not that either God said these words, or made any such particular promise as some apprehend, but they put this construction upon those confessed and known promises which God had made to him, of delivering him from all his enemies, and carrying him through all hindrances and difficulties to the throne and kingdom, which promise they conceived put him under an obligation of watching and taking all opportunities which God by his providence should put into his hand for their accomplishment whereof this was an eminent instance. David arose, and cut off the skirt of Saul's robe privately. Quest How could David do thus and Saul not perceive it? Answe First This might be some loose and upper garment which Saul might then lay at some distance from him, as we oft do on the same occasion. Secondly In these vast caves there were divers particular cells and rooms which were distinct one from another, yet as there were secret passages from one to another, so may be collected from the relations of historians and travellers. At the mouth of one of these Saul might lay his upper garment, which David perceiving and very well knowing all the cells and passages of that cave might go some secret way to it and cut off a little part of it. Thirdly, The noise which David's motion might be supposed to make was but small and that he well knew would be perfectly drowned with the far greater noise of Saul's army, which lay at the mouth of the cave. Fourthly The heroic actions of great men in Scripture are not to be measured by common rules. And as divers of the prophets and saints of old were in some of their actions so David might be in this moved to it by secret and Divine impulse, which all gave him confidence of God's assistance therein and of the success of his enterprise. Fifthly, This difficulty doth perfectly vanish if Saul was now asleep. And is no man can prove that he was not so that he was may be probable from what is said above.

5 And it came to pass afterward that David's heart smote him, because he had cut off Saul's skirt.

Not only because it was inhumane and reproachful and dangerous to the king but possibly because he had some secret thought of doing more to him though he suppressed and overcame it, for he attempted this in pursuance of his soldiers suggestion yet it which if followed would have carried him to further action.

6 And he said unto his men, The Lord forbid that I should do this thing unto my master, the Lord's anointed to stretch forth mine hand against him, seeing he is the anointed of the Lord.

He said unto his men either first, Before he cut off Saul's lap. Or rather secondly Afterwards when he returned with Saul's cup in his hand and his soldiers were enriched that he had not killed him. This thing which you persuade me to do even cut off Saul. Into my master whom I must still own for my sovereign lord and king, to whom I owe obedience whilst he lives, although after his death the right of the kingdom be mine. To stretch forth mine hand against him to put to kill him. A sacred prohibition. Quest xxxiv. 22. The anointed of the Lord, i. e. anointed by oil to the kingdom by whichunction his person was and sacred and inviolable, and so to be accounted by me, and you, and all his subjects. And as God only exalted him, and God only could pronounce a state of deprivation of his kingdom against him, so it belongs to God only to execute his own sentence and actually to depose him.

7 So David stayed his servants with these words, and suffered them to rise against Saul. But Saul rose up out of the cave, and went on his way.

Stayed his servants, Heb. out, or clave, or divided, or them off. The word notes both the eagerness and violence of David's men in prosecuting their desire, and David's resolute in opposing them, as it were, by force, wherein he shows great piety and generosity, and love to Saul.

8 David also arose afterward, and went out of the cave, and cried after Saul, saying, My lord the king. And when Saul looked behind him, David stooped with his face to the earth, and bowed himself.

9 ¶ And David said to Saul, Wherefore hearest thou men's words, saying, Behold David seeketh thy hurt?

He prudently and modestly translates the fault from Saul to his followers and evil counsellors.

10 Behold, this day thine eyes have seen how that the Lord had delivered thee to day into mine hand in the cave and some bade me kill thee but mine eye spared thee, and I said, I will not put forth mine hand against my lord; for he is the Lord's anointed.

Mine eye, which words are easily understood both from the nature of the thing and from the use of this phrase in other scriptures is Deut. xii. 16, xiii. 8. The eye is said to spare because it affects the heart with pity, and moves a man to spare.

11 Moreover, my father, see, yea, see the skirt of thy robe in my hand. For in that I cut off the skirt of thy robe, and killed thee not, know thou and see that there is neither evil nor transgression in mine hand, and I have not sinned against thee yet thou huntest my soul to take it.

My father so he calls him partly, because he was his father in law partly in testimony of his respect and affection to him as to a father and partly that by so familiar a compellation he might both insinuate himself into his favour and mind him of that duty which as a father he owed to David. There is neither evil nor transgression in mine hand I neither design mischief against thee with my hand nor will I execute it with my hand which my followers told thee I would do if thou didst at any time bid me into my hand.

12 The Lord judge between me and thee, and the Lord avenge me of thee but mine hand shall not be upon thee.

Vengeance me of thee or will avenge me of thee, to wit if thou dost persist in thy inhumane and cruel designs against me. Mine hand shall not be upon thee, I will not execute vengeance on thee, but will leave it wholly to God.

13 As saith the proverb of the ancients, Wickedness proceedeth from the wicked but mine hand shall not be upon thee.

Wicked men will do wicked actions, among which this is one, to kill their sovereign lord and king as David implied above ver. 6, and more fully expressed, ch. xxi. 9. And therefore if I were so wicked and wicked person as thy court is represent me to thee, I should make no conscience of laying wicked and violent hands upon thee, but should assassinate thee when I had opportunity which because I have now neglected and refused to do though moved to it by some of my wicked soldiers, know therefore that I am not guilty of any wicked designs against thee, but am just and innocent towards thee. Or thus Wicked actions (such as that would have been if I had killed thee) proceed only from the wicked of which number I am none, and therefore my hand shall not be upon thee.

14 After whom is the king of Israel come out? after whom dost thou pursue? after a dead dog, after a flea.

after a worthless, contemptible, and impotent person, such as I am. Thou disparagest thyself in contending with such a person, and even thy conquest of me will be ungracious and shameful.

15 ¶ The Lord therefore be judge, and judge between me and thee, and see, and plead my cause, and deliver me out of thine hand.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, when David had made an end of speaking these words unto Saul, that Saul said, Is this thy voice, my son David? And Saul lifted up his voice, and wept.

Is this thy voice, my son David? he knew his voice, though being at a great distance from him, he could not discern his face. And wept, partly from the sense of his sin against God, and of his wicked and base carriage to David, (for there are some such temporary passions oftentimes in hypocrites and ungodly men,) and principally from the remembrance of so great and so late a danger as he had escaped, which commonly produces great and true tears. 2 Sam xiii 36 Yet these may be tears of affliction or tenderness (upon the sense of David's kindness) rather than of relief.

17 And he said to David, Thou art more righteous than I: for thou hast rewarded me good, whereas I have rewarded thee evil.

Thou hast rewarded me good for the evil that I have done to thee: I have rewarded thee evil for thy good will to me.

18 And thou hast shewed this day how that thou hast dealt well with me: forasmuch as when the Lord had delivered me into thine hand, thou killedst me not.

19 For if a man find his enemy, will he let him go well away? wherefore the Lord reward thee good for that thou hast done unto me this day.

Will he let him go well away? i. e. he will certainly destroy him. And therefore thou hast not dealt with me after the manner of men, but hast imitated the clemency of God in this act.

20 And now, behold, I know well that thou shalt surely be king, and that the kingdom of Israel shall be established in thine hand.

I know well on, unconvicted not only by the time of Samuel's anointing thee, but by God's singular providence watching over thee, and by that good Spirit and those other and princely virtues wherewith God hath endowed thee.

21 Swear now therefore unto me by the Lord, that thou wilt not cut off my seed after me, and that thou wilt not destroy my name out of my father's house.

Thou wilt not cut off my seed after me, as princes use to destroy their competitors, and those that have any hopes of pretences to their crown, and Saul had endeavoured to destroy David for the same reason, and therefore he feared retaliation. Thou wilt not destroy my name, to wit, by cutting off my seed. So it is the same thing repeated in their words, as is usual in Scripture.

22 And David swore unto Saul. And Saul went home, but David and his men gat them up unto the hold.

David swore unto Saul. Quest. How then could David destroy so many of Saul's sons? 2 Sam xxi 8, 9. Answer. David could bind himself by his oaths, but he could not bind God, to whose good pleasure all promises, vows, and oaths must in all reason be submitted, and that was done by God's command, and God was well pleased with it, 2

Sam xxi 14. Nor is it to be supposed that David swore not to destroy any of them in case God should specially command it, or that should by unbecomingly render themselves obnoxious to the sword of justice, but only that he would not do it barely on his own private account, nor seek occasions of so doing. Into the hold, to wit of Enged, ver 1 for having had so great and frequent experience of Saul's inconstancy, and malice, and perfidiousness, he would trust him no more.

CHAP XXV.

Samuel dieth. David goeth to the wilderness of Paran. 1 Nabal's riches. 2 His and his wife Abigail's nature and condition. 3 David requesteth of Nabal some relief for his camp. He entreateth David's messengers. 4 Nabal is provoked, and murthereth to destroy him. 4-13 Abigail understands it, 11-17, taketh a present, 18-22, and by her wisdom, 23-31, pacifieth David, 32-35. Nabal hearing of this death 36-38. David taketh Abigail and Ahinoam to be his wives 39-43; Saul having quenched Michal to Pholai 44.

AND Samuel died, and all the Israelites were gathered together, and lamented him, and buried him in his house at Ramah. And David arose, and went down to the wilderness of Paran.

Buried him in his house, according to the manner of those times. See Gen xxiii 9, 15. Mut xxviii 60. The wilderness of Paran in the southern borders of the land of Judah, that so when occasion served, he might retire out of Saul's dominions.

2 And there was a man in Maon, whose possessions were in Carmel, and the man was very great, and he had three thousand sheep, and a thousand goats: and he was shearing his sheep in Carmel.

Maon, a place in or near to the wilderness of Paran. See chap xxiii 21. Carmel, not that Carmel in Issachar, of which see chap xv 12. 1 Kings xxi 1, but another in the tribe of Judah, as unto Maon a journey from Beth-xv 55.

3 Now the name of the man was Nabal, and the name of his wife Abigail, and she was a woman of good understanding, and of a beautiful countenance: but the man was surly and evil in his doings, and he was of the house of Caleb.

This is added to aggravate his crime, that he was a degenerate branch of that noble stock of Caleb, and consequently of the tribe of Judah, as David was.

4 ¶ And David heard in the wilderness that Nabal did shear his sheep.

Which times were celebrated with feasting and jollity. See 2 Sam xiii 23, 24.

5 And David sent out ten young men, and David said unto the young men, Get you up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and greet him in my name.

6 And thus shall ye say to him that liveth in prosperity, Peace be both to thee, and peace be to thine house, and peace be unto all that thou hast.

To him that liveth in prosperity, Heb. to him that liveth. It is oft put for a prosperous and happy life, as in that prayer, Let the king live, 1 Sam x 21, 1 Kings i 25, and in other passages of Scripture, and other authors, for an afflicted and calamitous life is unworthy of the name of life, and is esteemed a kind of death, and oft so called, as 2 Cor i 10, xi 23. By this expression David both congratulates Nabal's felicity, and tenderly minds him of the

penury and distress in which David and his men now were to their house, i. e. to all thy family Unto all that thou hast, i. e. all thy goods So David's prayer is very comprehensive, reaching to his soul and body, and wife, and children, and servants and all his estate

7 And now I have heard that thou hast shearers now thy shepherds which were with us, we hurt them not, neither was there ought missing unto them, all the while they were in Carmel

Which, considering the licentiousness of soldiers, and the necessities which David and his men were oft exposed to was no small favour and privilege which Nabal was bound both in justice, and gratitude, and prudence to requite

8 Ask thy young men, and they will shew thee Wherefore let the young men find favour in thine eyes for we come in a good day give, I pray thee, whatsoever cometh to thine hand unto thy servants, and to thy son David

In a good day, i. e. in a day of fasting, and rejoicing, when men are most cheerful and liberal, when thou mayst relieve us out of thy abundance without damage to thyself when thou art receiving the mercies of God, and therefore obliged to pity and relieve distressed and indigent persons, Deut. xii. 12, xiv. 26-29, xv. 7 Unto thy servants, to us who have been and still are ready to serve and guard thee and thine Or the word servants may be only used as a word of respect, frequently used in Scripture, where inferiours speak to superiours, especially when they are suppliant, and beg some favour To thy son, so he calls himself, to shew that respect and affection which he bore to Nabal as being older and wealthier than himself and of the same tribe with himself and a branch of so worthy a family as Nabal was

9 And when David's young men came, they spake to Nabal according to all those words in the name of David, and ceased

10 ¶ And Nabal answered David's servants, and said, Who is David? and who is the son of Jesse? there be many servants now a days that break away every man from his master

Who is David? what relation or obligation have I to David There be many servants now a days that break away, i. e. he saith both David as one revolted from and risen up against Saul his lord and master and his soldiers as fugitives from their master, and creditors &c. See chap. xxi. 2 11 Shall I then take my bread, and my water, and my flesh that I have killed for my shearers, and give it unto men, whom I know not whence they be?

My water, he speaketh thus, either because in those hot and dry parts water was scarce and precious, or water is here put for any kind of drink, as bread is oft taken for all sorts of meat

12 So David's young men turned their way, and went again, and came and told him all those sayings.

13 And David said unto his men, Gird ye on every man his sword And they girded on every man his sword, and David also girded on his sword and there went up after David about four hundred men and two hundred abode by the stuff

Gird ye on every man his sword having resolved and sworn to revenge himself of Nabal as expressed, ver. 21, 22 By the stuff. See chap. xxi. 2, xxx. 21

14 ¶ But one of the young men told Abigail, Nabal's wife, saying, Behold, David sent messengers out of the wilderness to salute our master, and he railled on them.

One of the young men told Abigail, wisely considering the injurious effects likely to follow so churlish messages.

15 But the men were very good unto us, and we were not hurt, neither missed we any thing, as long as we were conversant with them, when we were in the fields

16 They were a wall unto us both by night and day, all the while we were with them keeping the sheep

A wall i. e. a defence against wild beasts, and robbers, and enemies 17 Now therefore know and consider what thou wilt do, for evil is determined against our master, and against all his household for he is such a son of Belial, that a man cannot speak to him.

Evil is determined against our master, which it was easy to guess, either from some threatening expressions which David's men used, or from the consideration of David's great power, and that rage which so high a provocation was likely to produce in military persons A man cannot speak to him, to wit, without hazard to himself, and therefore I acquaint thee rather than him with this matter

18 ¶ Then Abigail made haste, and took two hundred loaves, and two bottles of wine, and five sheep ready dressed, and five measures of parched corn, and an hundred clusters of raisins, and two hundred cakes of figs, and laid them on asses

Abigail took two hundred loaves, which she did without his leave, and against his mind, because it was a case of apparent necessity for the preservation of herself and her kind and all the family from imminent ruin And such that real and urgent necessity which dispense with God's positive commands, might well dispense with the husband's right in this case

19 And she said unto her servants, Go on before me, behold, I come after you But she told not her husband Nabal

I come after you, for she knew she could quickly overtake them

20 And it was so, as she rode on the ass, that she came down by the covert of the hill, and, behold, David and his men came down against her, and she met them

By the covert of the hill, in the lower part and under the shadow of the hill, or of the trees that grew upon it, so that David did not see her till she met him David and his men came down, to wit, from another opposite hill

21 Now David had said, Surely in vain have I kept all that this fellow hath in the wilderness, so that nothing was missed of all that pertained unto him, and he hath requested me evil for good.

David had said, either in his journey, or as soon as he heard that reproachful answer This fellow; whom he thought unworthy to be named, for his barbarous ingratitude and churlishness

22 So and more also do God unto the enemies of David, if I leave of all that pertain to him by the morning light any that pisseth against the wall

Unto the enemies of David, i. e. unto David himself But because it might seem ominous and unnatural to curse himself, therefore by a figure called euphemismus, instead of David, he mentions David's enemies See 1 Sam. xx. 16. The words may be thus rendered So and more also let God do for (the Hebrew lamed being very oft so used) thy enemies of David, i. e. let God work for them, and give them as much prosperity and success as Nabal hath hitherto had. Or, let God utterly destroy their enemies, and especially myself, the chief of them, if I do not destroy this man. Any that persecute against the weak, i. e. any of the multitude, for they only do so, and of them this phrase is manifestly understood, 1 Kings xiv 10, xxi 27, & 2 Kings ix 4. and men not wholly barbarous have generally spared women in such cases. Quest. Why then was Abigail so much concerned and afraid? Ans. Partly from humanity, and the horror of so general and dreadful slaughter of her family and nearest relations, and partly because when the sword was once drawn, she knew not where it would rest, nor whether she should escape, for she knew nothing of this limitation of David's threatening till she came to him.

23 And when Abigail saw David, she hasted, and lighted off the ass, and fell before David on her face, and bowed herself to the ground,

Not only in token of deep reverence, but as a most humble suppliant, as 2 Kings iv 27.

24 And fell at his feet, and said, Upon me, my lord, upon me let this iniquity be, and let thine handmaid I pray thee, speak in thine audience, and hear the words of thine handmaid.

Upon me let this iniquity be, impute Nabal's sin to me, and if thou pleasest, punish it in me, who here offer myself as a sacrifice to thy just indignation. This whole speech of Abigail is done with great artifice, and she doth here, by an absolute submitting to mercy, without any pretence of justification of what was done, (but rather with aggravation of it) endeavour to work upon David's generosity and good nature to pardon it, and with great art, first would divert the punishment from her husband to herself, because she had then much more to say why David should spare her than why he should spare Nabal. And then it was hardly any lead of argument, whence the greatest orator might argue in this case, which he doth not manage to the best advantage, and most plausible insinuations for such an exigent.

25 Let not my lord, I pray thee, regard this man of Behai, even Nabal for as his name is, so is he, Nabal is his name, and folly is with him, but I thine handmaid saw not the young men of my lord, whom thou didst send.

I let not my lord regard this man, his person and words deserve thy contempt, but not thy regard. Man of Behai, for such he hath showed himself to be by this wicked and abominable carriage towards thee. Folly is with him, his noted folly and stupidity is a more proper object for thy pity than anger. His sordid answer to thy servants did not proceed from any ill design, or deep malice, but from brutish sottishness, and want of the understanding of a man in him. It may be thought a great crime, that she traduced her husband in this manner, but this may be said for her, that she told them nothing but what they all knew concerning him, and that she only seemed to take away that which he never had indeed, to wit, his good name, that she might perceive that which he had, and which was more dear and important to him, even his life and soul. Thine handmaid saw not the young men of my lord; though I freely submit myself to the punishment in my husband's sin, yet I was innocent of the crime.

26 Now therefore, my lord, as the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, seeing the Lord hath withholden thee from coming to shed blood, and from preventing thyself with thine own hand, now let thine enemies, and they that seek evil to my lord, be as Nabal.

Seeing the Lord hath withholden thee from coming to shed blood, seeing God hath so ordered this business by his wise and wonderful providence, that I should accidentally and unexpectedly come to the knowledge of my husband's vile and sordid carriage, and that I should come to meet thee, and find thee so gracious, as to give a favourable audience, and all this, that hereby he might withhold thee from the sin of blood-guiltiness. Be as Nabal, let them be as contemptible and hateful as Nabal is and will be for this heinous action, let them be as unable to do thee any hurt as he is, let them be forced to yield to thee, and implore thy pardon and favour as Nabal now doth by my mouth, let the vengeance thou didst design upon Nabal and his family fall upon their heads, who, by their constant and inveterate malice against thee, do more deserve it than this silly fool for this one miscarriage, and much more than all the rest of our family, who, as they are none of thine enemies, nor such as seek thee evil, so they were no way guilty of this wicked action. And therefore spare these, and execute thy vengeance upon more proper objects.

27 And now this blessing which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that I follow my lord.

This blessing, so a gift or present is called here, and Gen xxviii 11, and elsewhere, not only because the practice of it comes from God's blessing, but also because it is given with a blessing or with a good will. Let it even be given unto the young men, as being unworthy of thine acceptance or use.

28 I pray thee, forgive the trespass of thine handmaid, for the Lord will certainly make my lord a sure house, because my lord fighteth the battles of the Lord, and evil hath not been found in thee all thy days.

The trespass of thine handmaid, i. e. which I have taken upon myself, ver 24, and which if it be not pardoned, but punished, the punishment will reach to my lord. Will certainly make my lord a sure house, i. e. will give the kingdom to thee, and to thy house for ever, as he hath promised thee. And therefore let God spare kindness to that make thee gentle and merciful to others, do not only thy approaching glory with the stain of innocent blood, but consider that it is the glory of a king (what if it be not by God's appointment, and shall we long after it) to pass by offences, and that it will be thy loss, if thou such as will shortly be thy subjects. The battle of the Lord, i. e. for the Lord, and for the people of the Lord, against their enemies, especially the Philistines. And that this is thy proper work, and therein thou mayst expect God's blessing and help, so it is not thy work to draw thy sword in thy own private quarrel against any of the people of the Lord, and God will not bless thee in it. I will have not been found in me all thy days, though thou hast been oft reproved, and charged with many crimes, by Saul and others, yet thy innocency hath been and is evident to all men, do not therefore now by this cruel act of vengeance justify thine enemies' reproaches, nor blemish thy great and just reputation.

29 Yet a man is risen to pursue thee, and to seek thy soul, but the soul of my lord shall be bound in the bundle of life with the Lord thy God, and the souls of thine enemies, them shall he sling out, as out of the middle of a sling.

A man, to wit, Saul, though no way injured nor justly provoked by thee. To seek thy soul, i. e. to take away thy life. In the bundle of life, or, in the bundle, i. e. in the society or congregation of the living, out of which men are taken and cut off by death. The phrase is taken from the common usage of men, who bind those things in bundles which they are afraid to lose because things that are solitary and unbound are soon lost. The meaning of the place is, God will preserve thy life, and therefore it becomes not thee unjustly and unmercifully to take away the lives of any, especially the people of thy God and Saviour. With the Lord thy God, i. e. in the hand and custody of God, who, by his watchful providence, preserves this bundle, and all that are in it, and thee in a particular and singular manner, as being thy God in a peculiar way and special covenant. God himself will hide and keep thee in the secret of his presence, Psal. xxxi. 20, where no kind of violence can reach thee. And therefore all the attempts of Saul or others against thee are vain and ridiculous. For who can destroy whom God will keep? Them shall he sling out as out of the middle of a sling, God himself will cut them off suddenly, violently, and irresistibly, and cast them far away both from his presence, and from thy neighbourhood, and from all capacity of doing thee any hurt.

30 And it shall come to pass, when the Lord shall have done to my lord according to all the good that he hath spoken concerning thee, and shall have appointed thee ruler over Israel,

31 That this shall be no grief unto thee, nor offence of heart unto my lord, either that thou hast shed blood causeless, or that my lord hath avenged himself: but when the Lord shall have dealt well with my lord, then remember thine handmaid.

Nor offence of heart unto my lord, thy mind and conscience will be free from all the torment which the guilt and shame of such an action would cause in thee. By which she cunningly insinuates what a blemish this would be to his glory, what a disturbance to his peace and felicity, if he proceeded to execute his purpose, and without any less how sweet and comfortable it would be to him to remember that he had for conscience to God denied himself and restrained his passions. That thou hast shed blood causeless, which she signifies would be done if he should go on. For though Nabal had been guilty of abominable rudeness, uncharitableness, and ingratitude, yet he had done nothing worthy of death by the laws of God or of man. And what soever he had done, the rest of his family were innocent. That my lord hath avenged himself, which is directly contrary to God's law Lev. xix. 18, Deut. xxiii. 3 compared with Rom. xii. 19. When the Lord shall have dealt well with my lord, then remember thine handmaid, when God shall make thee king, and I shall have occasion to pry into all to thee for justice or redress let me find room in thy sight, and so let me do at this time. O my lord, and the Lord will bless my lord, and recompense thee for this mortification of thy passion, and thou wilt remember thine handmaid, i.e. thou wilt remember my counsel with satisfaction to thyself, and thankfulness to me.

32 ¶ And David said to Abigail, 'Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which sent thee this day to meet me.

Which by his gracious and singular providence so disposed matters that thou shouldst come to me. He rightly begins at the fountain of this deliverance, which was God, and then proceeds to the instruments.

33 And blessed be thy advice, and blessed be thou, which hast kept me this day from coming to shed blood, and from avenging myself with mine own hand.

Moved by thy advice, and blessed be thou, i.e. the Lord bless and recompense thee for this thy good advice. From coming to shed blood, which I had sworn to do. Hereby it plainly appears that only when by men bind themselves to any sin or evil, and so, and as it was a sin to make them, so it is advice, sin to sin to perform them.

34 For in jeopardy as the Lord God of Israel liveth, which hath kept me back from hurting thee except thou badst hastened and come to meet me, surely there had not been left unto Nabal by the morning light any that perished against the wall.

Hath kept me back from hurting thee, i.e. not that he intended to kill her, but the males only, i.e. was not on ver. 22. Their destruction was a due effect of their sin and danger to her.

35 So David received of her hand that which she had brought him, and said unto her, 'Go up in peace to thine house; see, I have hearkened to thy voice, and have accepted thy person.

1. 2. Showed my acceptance of thy person, by my grant of thy request, see Gen. xix. 21.

36 ¶ And Abigail came to Nabal, and, behold, he held a feast in his house, like the feast of a king, and Nabal's heart was merry within him, for he was very drunken: wherefore she told him nothing, less or more, until the morning light.

Like the feast of a king, as the manner was upon those solemn occasions. Sordid covetousness and vain prodigality were met together in him. She told him nothing, because, their incapacity of admonition, his reason and conscience being both asleep.

37 But it came to pass in the morning when the wine was gone out of Nabal, and he told him these things, that his heart died within him, and he became as a stone.

He was oppressed with grief, and fainted away through the fear and horror of so great a mischief, though it was past. As one who having in the night elopped over a plank laid upon a broken bridge over a deep place, when in the morning he came to review it, was struck dead with the horror of the danger he was in.

38 And it came to pass about ten days after, that the Lord smote Nabal, that he died.

1. 2. Either inflicted some other stroke or disease upon him or increased his grief and fear to such a height killed him.

39 ¶ And when David heard that Nabal was dead, he said, 'Blessed be the Lord that hath pleaded the cause of my reproach from the hand of Nabal: and hath kept his servant from evil: for the Lord hath returned the wickedness of Nabal upon his own head.' And David sent and commended with Abigail, to take her to him to wife.

How could David rejoice at the death of his enemy? None. Although it may be said that he rejoiced not in Nabal's death as such, but only in the declaration of God's justice in punishing so great a wickedness, which was an honour to God, and a document, and therefore a benefit to mankind, and so a public good, and cause of joy, yet the matter is not weighty if we confess that this was another instance of human infirmity in David, and that it is not proposed for our imitation, but for our caution. Yet it may be further said, that this was not purely an act of private revenge, because David was a public person, and anointed king, and therefore Nabal's reproach cast upon David above, ver. 10, 11, was a contempt of God, and of his ordinance and appointment, which was vindicated by this remarkable judgment. Hath kept his servant from evil, i.e. from the sin of blood-shed and self-revenge, ver. 33.

David sent, to wit, messengers, which he thought fitter than to go himself, partly because if he had met with a repulse, it had been less ignominious; and partly because he would leave her to her freedom and choice, and would not so much as seem to take her by violence. But this doubtless was not done immediately after Nabal's death, but in some convenient space of time after it, though such circumstances be commonly omitted in the sacred history, which gives only the heads and most important passages of things.

40 And when the servants of David were come to Abigail to Carmel, they spake unto her, saying, David sent us unto thee, to take thee to him to wife.

41 And she arose, and bowed herself on her face to the earth, and said, Behold, let thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet of the servants of my lord. <sup>1 Sam 25:30</sup>
 She showed this reverence, and spoke thus to them, as representing David's poison.

12 And Abigail basted, and arose, and rode upon an ass, with five damselfs of hers that went faster her, and she went after the messengers of David, and became his wife. <sup>1 Sam 25:31</sup>

She went after the messengers, not immediately but at a convenient time after they were gone. She considered David's present situation and poverty, which she thought her plentiful estate might supply, not his danger from Saul, but by a true and strong faith rested upon God's promise made to David, not doubting but God would perform it.

43 David also took Abinoam's of Jezreel, and they were also both of them his wives. <sup>1 Sam 25:32</sup>

44 ¶ But Saul had given Michal his daughter, David's wife, to Phalti the son of Laish, which was of Gath.

Let us for as the Hebrew texts oftentimes used. For this may be added as a reason why David took other wives, since Saul had given his former wife to another man, it might as for a he could distinguish all relation and owed to him, whom he hated, and withal, cut off his and pretence to the crown upon that account.

CHAP XXVI

by the discovery of the Ziphites, cometh to Hachilah and David, 1-3, who cometh with Abishai to Saul's camp, slayeth him from killing Saul, but taketh his spear and crown, 4-12. He upbraideth Abner 13-16, and telleth Saul, 17-20 who acknowledgeth his sin, 21-25.

AND the Ziphites came unto Saul to Gibeath, saying, "Doth not David hide himself in the hill of Hachilah, which is before Jeshimon?"

Having once betrayed him before, they thought themselves desperate with David, and therefore did more strenuously assist Saul in discovering him, in order to his ruin. He is not David hide himself? he is returned to his former count, of which see chap xxv. 19. This place might be convenient for him, either for his nearness to Abigail, or because he might think that Saul was mollified by the Ziphites' caution, or by the unsuccessfulness of their former attempt, or because he could from thence make his retreat into other places if need were.

2 Then Saul arose, and went down to the wilderness of Ziph, having three thousand chosen men of Israel with him, to seek David in the wilderness of Ziph.

3 And Saul pitched in the hill of Hachilah, which is before Jeshimon, by the way. But David abode in the wilderness, and he saw that Saul came after him into the wilderness.

He understood by information, probably from his dear friend Jonathan.

4 David therefore sent out spies, and understood that Saul was come in very deed.

5 ¶ And David arose, and came to the place where Saul had pitched, and David beheld the place where Saul lay, and Abner the son of Ner, the captain of his host, and Saul lay in the trench, and the people pitched round about him.

Came to the place where Saul had pitched, came near to the skirts of Saul's camp, which he might easily discover from some neighbouring hill or wood, and yet not be discerned himself. And it is probable he came thither disguised and towards night. Saul lay in the trench, compassed with his carriages for better security. <sup>1 Sam 25:20</sup>

6 Then answered David and said to Ahimelech the Hittite, and to Abishai the son of Zeruiah, brother to Joab, saying, Who will go down with me to Saul to the camp? And Abishai said, I will go down with thee.

Abimelech the Hittite, so called, either because he was one of that nation, but converted to the Jewish religion, compare 2 Sam 21:3, xv 18, or from his habitation upon some relation, to some of that people. Zeruiah, David's sister, see 1 Chron 2:16. His father is not named, either because he was now dead, or because he was an obscure person.

7 So David and Abishai came to the people by night, and behold, Saul lay sleeping within the trench, and his spear stuck in the ground at his bolster, but Abner and the people lay round about him.

To the people, i.e. to Saul's host and camp. It might seem a bold and strange attempt, but many things are to be considered. 1 That heretofore persons have oft attempted things of no less difficulty and danger than this was, as many credible historians relate. 2 That David did and might easily perceive that they were all fast asleep. 3 That David had a particular assurance that God would preserve him to the kingdom. 4 That he had expected instruction from God to this work, and possibly God might inform him that he had cast them into a deep sleep, that he might have this second opportunity of manifesting his innocency towards Saul, and the justice of his cause.

8 Then said Abishai to David, God hath delivered thine enemy into thine hand this day: now therefore let me smite him, I pray thee, with the spear, even to the earth at once, and I will not smite him the second time.

David answered him to the ground at a blow that I shall not need a second stroke.

9 And David said to Abishai, Destroy him not: for who can stretch forth his hand against the Lord's anointed, and be guiltless?

There could be a cruel tyrant and rejected by God, yet he is our sovereign lord and king, and I, though designed king to crown him but a private person and his subject, and therefore cannot kill him without sin, nor will I consent that thou shouldst do it.

10 David said furthermore, As the Lord liveth, the Lord shall smite him, or his day shall come to die, or he shall descend into battle, and perish.

The Lord shall smite him, by some sudden and mortal stroke. On his day shall come to die, according to the course of nature.

11 The Lord forbid that I should stretch forth mine hand against the Lord's anointed: but, I pray thee, take thou now the spear that is at his bolster, and the cruse of water, and let us go.

Take thou now the spear, which will show where we have been, and what we could have done. The cruse of water might be put there, either to wash himself in case of any accidental pollution, which oft happened in the night, or to refresh him, and quench his thirst in that hot climate and season, or for divers other uses.

12 So David took the spear and the cruse of water from Saul's bolster, and they gat them.

away, and no man saw it, nor knew it, neither awaked for they were all asleep, because a deep sleep from the Lord was fallen upon them

<sup>a Gen 2:21</sup>

13 ¶ Then David went over to the other side, and stood on the top of an hill afar off, a great space being between them

That his person might be out of their reach, and yet a voice might be heard which in a clear air and in the silence of the night, might be heard at a great distance

14 And David cried to the people, and to Abner the son of Net, saying, Answerest thou not, Abner? Then Abner answered and said, Who art thou that criest to the king?

<sup>a 12:12</sup> On with or beside the king i.e. so near to him, so as to disturb the king

15 And David said to Abner, Art not thou a valiant man? and who is like to thee in Israel? wherefore then hast thou not kept thy lord the king? for there came one of the people in to destroy the king thy lord

<sup>a 12:12</sup> Who is like to thee for courage and conduct? and therefore thy fault herein is the greater

16 This thing is not good that thou hast done. As the Lord liveth, ye are not worthy to die, because ye have not kept your master, the Lord's anointed. And now see where the king's spear is, and the crust of water that was at his bolster

<sup>a 12:12</sup> A thing is not good i.e. it is very bad a great crime
<sup>a 12:12</sup> A thing which moves, as Prov. xxviii 9, xix 2

17 And Saul knew David's voice, and said, Is this thy voice, my son David?

And David said, It is my voice, my lord, O king

<sup>a 12:12</sup> My son David as thou wast my son by marriage so thou hast expressed the care and affection of a son to me now a second time

18 And he said, Wherefore doth my lord thus pursue after his servant? for what have I done? or what evil is in mine hand?

19 Now therefore I pray thee let my lord the king hear the words of his servant. If the Lord have stirred thee up against me, let him accept an offering, but if they be the children of men, cursed be they before the Lord, for they have driven me out this day from abiding in the inheritance of the Lord, saying, Give, serve other gods

<sup>a 12:12</sup> If the Lord have stirred thee up against me, if the Lord move by the evil spirit which he hath sent on by his secret providence limited thy rising against me for the punishment of thine or my sin. Let him accept an offering, let us offer up a sacrifice to God to appease his wrath against us. If they be the children of men who by their crafty insinuations and calumnies have accused thee against me. He sheweth his patience and clemency and meekness, that he accuseth not the king but translateth the fault wholly upon his evil ministers as the Philistines do in the like case, 1 Sam. viii 14. From coming in the inheritance of the Lord, from the land which God hath given to his people for their inheritance and where he hath established his presence and worship. Saying Give, serve other gods this was the language of their infidelity by driving him from God's land, and the place of his worship, into foreign and idolatrous lands. They exposed him to the peril of being either unwearied by their counsels or examples, or forced by their threats and power to worship idols.

20 Now therefore, let not my blood fall to the earth before the face of the Lord for the king of Israel is come out to seek a flea, as when one doth hunt a partridge in the mountains

<sup>a 12:12</sup> Let not my blood fall to the earth, do not attempt to spill my innocent blood like water upon the ground. Before the face of the Lord, remember, if thou dost it. God the Judge of all men seeth it, and will avenge it. Though I will not avenge myself. A flea, hard to be taken, and not worth catching, a mean and contemptible person in the mountain, where his advantage doth no way compensate his labour

21 ¶ Then said Saul, I have sinned. <sup>a 12:12</sup> return, my son David. for I will no more do thee harm, because my soul was precious in thine eyes this day. <sup>a 12:12</sup> behold, I have played the fool, and have cried exceedingly

He not only confessed, but aggravated his fault, because his conscience was fully convinced, though his heart was not changed

22 And David answered and said, Behold the king's spear! and let one of the young men come over and fetch it

23 The Lord render to every man his righteousness and his faithfulness for the Lord delivered thee into my hand to day, but I would not stretch forth mine hand against the Lord's anointed

I desire that God would deal no otherwise with me than I have dealt with thee

24 And, behold, as thy life was much set by this day in mine eyes so let my life be much set by in the eyes of the Lord, and let him deliver me out of all tribulation

25 Then Saul said to David, Blessed be thou, my son David: thou shalt both do great things, and also shalt still prevail. <sup>a 12:12</sup> So David went on his way, and Saul returned to his place

David went on his way, knowing Saul's unstable and deceitful heart he would not trust to any of his professions or promises, but kept out of his reach

CHAP XXVII

David with his six hundred men, and all his family goeth to King Achish, and abideth there a while, Saul pursued no more after him, 1-4. He obtaineth Ziklag of Achish to dwell in 5-7. He misadeth neighbour nations, leaves no man alive to complain, persuadeth Achish he fought against Judah 8-12

AND David said in his heart, I shall now perish one day by the hand of Saul: <sup>a 12:12</sup> there is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape into the land of the Philistines, and Saul shall despair of me, to seek me any more in any coast of Israel: so shall I escape out of his hand

<sup>a 12:12</sup> I shall now perish one day by the hand of Saul, I see by this late experience his restless and implacable hatred against me, and how little heed is to be given to all his professions of repentance or friendship. There is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape into the land of the Philistines: but this was certainly a very great mistake and fault in David, for, 1. Thus proceeded from David's distrust of God's promise and providence, and the other such repeated demonstrations of God's peculiar care over him, which gave him cause to conclude quite contrary to what is here said. 2. He forsakes the place where God the Lord liveth there shall no punishment be upon thee for this thing.

11 Then said the woman, Whom shall I bring up unto thee? And he said, Bring me up Samuel.

Whose kindness and compassion to him, as he had formerly experienced, so now he expected it in his deep distress. Thus practice of divination by the dead or by the ghosts or souls of dead persons, called up by magical art was very usual among all nations, and from them Saul learned it.

12 And when the woman saw Samuel, she cried with a loud voice and the woman spake to Saul saying, Why hast thou deceived me? for thou art Saul.

She cried with a loud voice, for fear of her life. Saul himself being witness of her crime. Thou art Saul, this she knew, either by some gesture of reverence which did suppose Samuel might show to Saul, as to the king, or by information from this ghost, or from the spirit by whose help she had raised him.

13 And the king said unto her, Be not afraid for what sawest thou? And the woman said unto Saul, I saw gods ascending out of the earth.

A god, a divine person glorious, and full of majesty and splendour exceeding not only mortal men but common hosts. She useth the plural number, gods, either after the manner of the Hebrew language, which commonly useth that word of one person, or after the language and notion of the heathens. But the whole coherency shows that it was but one. For Saul desired but one, ver. 11 and iniquity and the woman answer only of one ver. 11. in thy out of the earth as if it came from the place of his death.

14 And he said unto her, What form is he of? And she said, An old man cometh up and he is covered with a mantle. And Saul perceived that it was Samuel, and he stooped with his face to the ground and bowed himself.

He is covered with a mantle, the usual habit of prophets, 2 Kings ii 8, 13, Zech xiii 4 and particularly of Samuel 1 Sam xv 27. Saul perceived that it was Samuel, though he pretended and said upon her sworn belief that it was Samuel indeed, and so many popish and other writers conceived. But that it was not Samuel but a devil representing Samuel is sufficiently evident. For first it is most incredible that God who had just now refused to answer Saul by the means which himself appointed and used in that case would answer him or suffer Saul to answer him in that way, and upon the use of the means which God detested and condemned which would have given great countenance and encouragement to Saul and the witch, and all professors and consulters of those devilish arts. Secondly there are divers passages in this relation which plainly discover that this was no good but an evil spirit, as first, That he receives that word from Saul, ver. 14, which good spirits would not suffer at xv 0, xxii 8, 9. Secondly That amongst other sins for which he condemneth him he smiteth him of king counsel of one that had a familiar spirit to enquire of, for which transgression, with others, he is expressly said to have died 1 Chron x 13, which the true Samuel who was so zealous for God's honour and so faithful a reprover would never have neglected especially now when he takes Saul in the very fact. Thirdly, That he pretends and is to be disquieted and brought up ver. 11, by Saul's art, and the witch's art, which is most false, and monstrous, and absurd to imagine concerning those blessed spirits who are returned to their God, Eccles xii 7, and entered into peace and rest, Isa lvi 2 and lodged in their own bosom Luke xvi 22 and rest from their labours Rev x 13. The only argument of any colour to the contrary is that the devil could not so particularly and punctually discover Saul's future events as this Samuel doth, ver. 19. But this also hath little weight in it, it being confessed and notoriously known, that evil spirits, both in the oracles of the heathen and otherwise have oftentimes foretold future contingencies, God being pleased to reveal such things to them, and to permit them to be the instruments of revealing them to men, in the first of some, and for the terror and punishment of others. Besides, the devil might foresee this by strong conjecture as by the numerousness, strength, courage, and insolence of the Philistine host, and the quite contrary condition of the Israelites and by divers other symptoms far above the reach of mortal men but such as he by his great sagacity could easily discern. And for that express determination of the time, to morrow ver. 19 that word may be understood not of the very next day but indefinitely of some short time after this as it is taken, Exod xiv 14; Deut vi 20, Josh ii 6, 21. And then it was easy to gather from the present posture of the two armies, that the fight and the ruin of the Israelites was very near. And that it was not the very next day, but some days after this, is evident from the course of the story, and hath been proved by a late learned writer. See my I. Sam. Synopsis on this place.

15 ¶ And Samuel said to Saul, Why hast thou disquieted me, to bring me up?

And Saul answered, ¶ I am sore distressed, for the Philistines make war against me, and God is departed from me, and answereth me no more neither by prophets, nor by dreams therefore I have called thee that thou mayest make known unto me what I shall do.

Samuel said to Saul, as the devil appeared in Samuel's shape and garb so also he spake in his person that he might insure Saul and encourage others to seek to him in this wicked way. And God permits him to do so for Saul's greater condemnation and punishment. Neither by prophets nor by dreams, he omitteth the thing here, because he knew that did nor could inquire by that because Abiathar had carried it away to David and so he expected no answer that way.

16 ¶ Then said Samuel, Wherefore then dost thou ask of me, seeing the Lord is deputed from thee, and is become thine enemy?

17 And the Lord hath done to him, as he spake by me for the Lord hath rent the kingdom out of thine hand, and given it to thy neighbour, even to David.

The Lord hath done to him, as to David, as it is explained in the following words, the pronoun relative put before the noun to which it belongs as usual in the Hebrew text. ¶ I have done to thee, such changes of persons but a frequent among the Hebrews. Otherwise, for himself, for the accomplishment of his counsel, and protection and oath, and for the glory of his justice and holiness. As he spake by me still he nourisheth this persuasion in Saul that it was the true Samuel that spake to him.

18 ¶ Because thou obeyedst not the voice of the Lord, nor executest his fierce wrath upon Amalek, therefore hath the Lord done this thing unto thee this day.

¶ And thou executest his fierce wrath upon Amalek, he mentions this as an eminent instance of his disobedience.

19 Moreover the Lord will also deliver Israel with thee into the hand of the Philistines and to morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me the Lord also shall deliver the host of Israel into the hand of the Philistines.

With me i. e. in the state of the dead and so it was true both of Saul and Jonathan. Or in the state of rest, for though thou shalt suffer here for thy sin, yet after death thou shalt be happy as dying in the Lord's service so the devil's design might be to flatter Saul into an opinion of his own future happiness, and to take him off from all serious thoughts and cares about it. And it is here observable, that it was the manner of the heathen oracles to answer unambiguously the better to save his credit in case of mistake, (the devil himself not being certain of future events, but only conjecturing at what was most likely,) so doth this counterfeit Samuel here. For as concerning the time, he says to-morrow, which he understood indifferently for the very next day, or for some short time after. And as concerning the condition thou shalt be with me, which may be understood either of a good condition if understood as spoken in the person of Samuel, or of a bad condition if understood as spoken by an evil spirit, or at least indifferently of a dead condition be it good or evil, which last he foresees by circumstances to be very likely.

20 Then Saul † fell straightway all along on the earth, and was sore afraid, because of the words of Samuel: and there was no strength in him, for he had eaten no bread all the day, nor all the night.

Saul fell along on the earth being quite dispirited with these sad and surprising tidings, and so unable to stand.

21 ¶ And the woman came unto Saul and saw that he was sore troubled, and said unto him, Behold, thine handmaid hath obeyed thy voice, and I have † put my life in my hand, and have hearkened unto thy words which thou spakest unto me.

The woman came unto Saul, from whom she deputed when she had brought him and Samuel together, that they might more freely converse together as being alone.

22 Now therefore, I pray thee, hearken thou also unto the voice of thine handmaid, and let me set a morsel of bread before thee, and eat, that thou mayest have strength, when thou goest on thy way.

This earnestness did not come merely from her humanity and respect to Saul, but from a prudent and necessary care of herself, because if Saul had died in her house, his blood would have been charged upon her.

23 But he refused, and said, I will not eat. But his servants, together with the woman, compelled him: and he hearkened unto their voice. So he arose from the earth, and sat upon the bed.

Compelled him, i. e. did overpersuade him by importunate entreaties: as the next words show.

24 And the woman had a fit child in the house, and she hasted, and killed it, and took flour, and kneaded it, and did bake unleavened bread thereof.

Not having time to leaven it.

25 And she brought it before Saul, and before his servants: and they did eat. Then they rose up, and went away that night.

Before morning i. e. he came by night ver. 9 and went away before day: it will be to have it discovered that he had consulted with a witch.

CHAP. XXIX

David marching with the Philistines is disallowed by their princes. Achish pleads for him, and against his will discomfeth him 1-7. He is consulted with Achish 8. His answer, 9, 10. David departs 11.

Aphek, either, that in the tribe of Asher Josh. viii. 30, or rather another town of that name in Issachar, though not mentioned elsewhere in Scripture; this being the case of many places, to be but once named.

2 And the lords of the Philistines gathered on by hundreds, and by thousands: but David and his men gathered on in the rereward with Achish.

1 e As the life-guard of Achish, as he had promised, chap. xxviii. 2, Achish being, as it seems, the general of the army.

3 Then said the princes of the Philistines, What do these Hebrews here? And Achish said unto the princes of the Philistines, Is not this David, the servant of Saul the king of Israel, which hath been with me these days, or these years, and I have found no fault in him since he fell unto me unto this day?

The princes of the Philistines, the lords of the other eminent cities and territories, who were confederate with him in this expedition. These days or these years, i. e. Did I say days? I might have said years, either because he hath now been with me a full year and four months, chap. xxviii. 7, or because he was with me some years ago chap. xxi. 10, and since that time hath been known to me. And it is not improbable but David, after his escape from thence, might hold some correspondence with Achish as finding him to be a man of more generous temper than the rest of the Philistines and supposing that he might have need of him for a refuge, in case Saul continued to seek his life. Since he fell unto me, i. e. since he revolted or left his own king to turn to me, for that sense Achish put upon this escape of David, (as it is called chap. xxviii. 1,) and so is the phrase of falling to a party elsewhere used Jer. xxxviii. 13, 14.

4 And the princes of the Philistines were wroth with him, and the princes of the Philistines said unto him, Make this fellow return, that he may go again to his place, which thou hast appointed him, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest in the battle he be an adversary to us: for wherewith should he reconcile himself unto his master? should it not be with the heads of these men?

Were wroth with him, were unsatisfied and offended with Achish for this intention and declaration. Make this fellow return here in the wise and gracious providence of God appeared both in helping him out of those snares and difficulties out of which no human wit could have extricated him, but he must either have been, or have been thought, to be a traitor and an ungrateful, unworthy person either to the one or to the other side, and moreover in giving him the happy opportunity of recovering his own and his all from the Amalekites which had been irrecoverably lost if he had gone into this battle. And the kindness of God to David was the greater, because it had been most just for God to have left David in all those distresses into which his own sinful counsel and course had brought him. Of these men i. e. of these our soldiers they speak according to the rules of reason and true policy, for by this very course great enemies have sometimes been reconciled together.

5 Is not this David, of whom they sang one to another in dances saying, Saul slew his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

6 ¶ Then Achish called David, and said unto him, Surely, as the Lord liveth, thou hast been upright, and thy going out and thy coming in with me in the host is good in my sight: for I have not found evil in thee since the day of thy coming unto me unto this day: nevertheless the lords favour thee not.

As the Lord beareth, he swears by Jehovah; either because he did acknowledge their Jehovah to be a God, being, it may be, convinced and instructed therein by David, though he did worship Dagon with him, and above him. Or because this was David's God, and therefore he swore by him, partly out of complaisance with David, that he might receive his unwelcome message to him with less offence, and partly that this oath might gain more credit to his words with David. Thy going out and thy coming in with me; i. e. thy whole conversation with me See chap xviii 13, and many other places where this phrase is used. Since the day of thy coming unto me, though before that time there was evil in thee towards me and my people.

7 Wherefore now return, and go in peace, that thou †displease not the lords of the Philistines.

8 ¶ And David said unto Achish, But what have I done? and what hast thou found in thy servant so long as I have been †with thee unto this day, that I may not go fight against the enemies of my lord the king?

This was deep dissimulation and flattery, but he apprehended it necessary, lest he should tacitly confess himself guilty of that whereof they accused him, and there by expose himself to the utmost hazards. These perplexities he brought himself into by his irregular course, in forsaking the land of Judah, where God had placed him, chap xxii 5 and promised him protection and putting himself into the hands of the Philistines.

9 And Achish answered and said to David, I know that thou art good in my sight, <sup>1</sup>as an angel of God notwithstanding <sup>2</sup>the princes of the Philistines have said, He shall not go up with us to the battle.

As an angel of God, in whom nothing is blameworthy. Or it may be used to express David's great wisdom (as well as integrity), as 2 Sam xiv 17 xix 27. The heathens acknowledged good spirits which also they worshipped as an inferior sort of deities, who were messengers and ministers to the supreme God, only Achish had learned the title of angels from the Israelites his neighbours, and especially from David's conversation.

10 Wherefore now rise up early in the morning with thy master's servants that are come with thee and as soon as ye be up early in the morning and have light, depart.

With thy master's servants, he intimates the ground of the Philistines' jealousy concerning David and his men that they were all servants of Saul, and therefore had an obligation and were suspected to have an affection to their old lord and master against whom even David himself could not make them fight, especially with and for the Philistines. As soon as ye have light, depart before the battle begin, lest, if you delay the lords of the Philistines fall upon you, and destroy you.

11 So David and his men rose up early to depart in the morning, to return unto the land of the Philistines. And the Philistines went up to Jezreel.

CHAP XXX

The Amalekites in David's absence spoil Ziklag, and carry away the people and his two wives captives, 1-6 David asking counsel is encouraged by God to pursue them 7-10 By the means of an Egyptian who was left behind he is brought to the enemies and recovereth all the spoil and spoileth them, 11-20, makes an order for the dividing the prey, 21-25, sendeth presents to his friends, 26-31.

AND it came to pass, when David and his men were come to Ziklag on the third day, that the

Amalekites had invaded the south, and Ziklag, and smitten Ziklag, and burned it with fire;

On the third day, to wit, after David's departure from Achish, for Ziklag was at a great distance from the camp and place of fight, as appears from 2 Sam i 2, and David's men being all footmen, could make but slow marches. The Amalekites, the remainders of that people who lived near those parts where David had destroyed their brethren chap xxvii 8, 9. The south, to wit, the southern part of Judah, and the adjacent parts. See below, ver 11. Spoil ten Ziklag, i. e. sacked and spoiled it.

2 And had taken the women captives, that were therein they slew not any, either great or small, but carried them away, and went on their way.

They slew not any, which was strange, considering how David dealt with them, chap xxvii 9. But this must be ascribed partly to their selfish or fleshly interest, for they might reserve them, either to make sale of them for their profit or to abuse them for their lust, or, it may be, to revenge themselves upon David and his men by reserving them to extraordinary, and lingering, and repeated punishments, but principally to God's overruling and wonderful providence, who set these bounds to their rage, and though he designed to chastise David's sin and folly, yet would not deliver him nor his up to death.

3 ¶ So David and his men came to the city, and, behold, it was burned with fire, and their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, were taken captives.

4 Then David and the people that were with him lifted up their voice and wept, until they had no more power to weep.

All either the humour was wholly spent, or the consideration of their calamity had made them stupid.

5 And David's two wives were taken captives, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite.

6 And David was greatly distressed, for the people spake of stoning him, because the soul of all the people was grieved, every man for his son and for his daughters; but David encouraged himself in the Lord his God.

The people spake of stoning him as the author of their miseries by coming to Ziklag at first, by provoking the Amalekites to this cruelty, by his forwardness in marching away with Achish and leaving their wives and children unprotected. In the Lord his God, i. e. in that that the all-wise and all-powerful Lord was his God by covenant relation and special promise and true and fatherly affection as he had showed himself to be in the whole course of his providence towards him.

7 And David said to Abiathar the priest, Ahimelech's son, I pray thee, bring me hither the ephod. And Abiathar brought thither the ephod to David.

Bring me hither the ephod, and put it upon thyself, that thou mayst inquire of God according to his ordinance, Numb xxvii 21. See above, chap xxiii 9. David was sensible of his former error in neglecting to ask counsel of God by the ephod when he came to Achish and when he went out with Achish to the battle, and his necessity now brings him to his duty and his duty meets with success.

8 ¶ And David enquired at the Lord, saying, Shall I pursue after this troop? shall I overtake them? And he answered him, Pursue, for thou shalt surely overtake them, and without fail recover all.

Before God answered more slowly and gradually, chap xxiii 11, 12 but now he answers speedily and fully at once because the business here required more haste. So gracious is our God, that he considers even the degree of our necessities, and accommodates himself to them.

9 So David went, he and the six hundred men that were with him, and came to the brook Besor, where those that were left behind stayed

10 But David pursued, he and four hundred men * for two hundred abode behind, which were so faint that they could not go over the brook Besor.

I our hundred men, a small number for such an attempt, but David was strong in faith, giving God the glory of his power and faithfulness

11 ¶ And they found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him to David, and gave him bread, and he did eat, and they made him drink water,

They found an Egyptian whom by his habit they guessed to be a soldier that had been engaged in that expedition. They made him drink water, partly out of humanity and compassion to a perishing creature, and partly in pudence that by him they might learn the true state of their enemies

12 And they gave him a piece of a cake of figs, and two clusters of raisins, and when he had eaten, his spirit came again to him for he had eaten no bread, nor drunk any water, three days and three nights

Which is to be understood synecdochically of our whole day and part of two others as the same phrase is taken Matt xii 40, as appears from the next verse where he saith three days ago I fell sick but in the Hebrew it is this is the third day since I fell sick

13 And David said unto him, To whom belongeth thou? and whence art thou? And he said, I am a young man of Egypt, servant to an Amalekite, and my master left me, because three days ago I fell sick

I am a young man of Egypt, God by his providence so ordaining, it, that he was not one of that cursed race of the Amalekites, who were to be utterly destroyed but an Egyptian who might be spared. My master left me in this place and condition which was barbarous inhumanity for he ought and easily might have cured him (as was with the prey which they had taken) But he paid dearly for this cruelty for this was the occasion of the ruin of him and of all their company And God by his secret providence ordered the matter thus for that very end So that there is no fighting against God who can make the smallest accident serviceable to the production of the greatest effects

14 We made an invasion upon the south of the Cherethites, and upon the coast which belongeth to Judah, and upon the south of Caleb, and we burned Ziklag with fire

The Cherethites i.e. the Philistines as is manifest from ver 16, who are so called Zeph ii 5 And upon the coast which belongeth to Judah and upon the south of Caleb this is added by way of explication qd that part of the south of Judah which belongs to Caleb's posterity, Josh xiv 13

15 And David said to him, Canst thou bring me down to this company? And he said, Swear unto me by God, that thou wilt neither kill me, nor deliver me into the hands of my master, and I will bring thee down to this company

For his master had told him whether they intended to go, that he might come after them as soon as he could

16 ¶ And when he had brought him down behold they were spread abroad upon all the earth, eating and drinking, and dancing, because of all the great spoil that they had taken out of the land of the Philistines, and out of the land of Judah

Spread abroad upon all the earth, secure and careless, because they were now come almost to the borders of their own country, and the Philistines and Israelites both were otherwise engaged, and David, as they believed, with them So they had no visible cause of danger, and yet then they were nearest to their destruction

17 And David smote them from the twilight even unto the evening of the next day and there escaped not a man of them, save four hundred young men, which rode upon camels, and fled

From the twilight the word signifies both the morning and evening twilight But the latter seems here intended partly because their eating, and drinking, and dancing was more customary and proper work for the evening than for the morning, and partly because the evening was more convenient for David that the fewness of his forces might not be discovered by the day light Object It is not likely that David would fall upon the Amalekites before his men who had been tired with a long and hasty march, were refreshed Answer Nor is it said that he did It is probable that when he came near them, he reposed himself and his army in some secret place whereof there were many in those parts, for a convenient season and then marched on so as to come to them at the evening time

18 And David recovered all that the Amalekites had carried away and David rescued his two wives

19 And there was nothing lacking to them, neither mall nor great, neither sons nor daughters, neither spoil, nor any thing that they had taken to them

David recovered all

20 And David took all the flocks and the herds, which they drove before those other cattle and said, This is David's spoil

All the flocks and the herds to wit, which the Amalekites had taken from the Philistines, or others Before those other cattle, be it that which belonged to Ziklag This is David's spoil i.e. the soldiers who lately were so incensed against David that they spoke of stoning him, now upon this success magnify him, and triumphantly celebrate his praise, and say concerning this spoil, David purchased it by his valour and conduct and he may dispose of it as he pleaseth

21 ¶ And David came to the two hundred men, which were so faint that they could not follow David, whom they had made also to abide at the brook Besor and they went forth to meet David, and to meet the people that were with him and when David came near to the people, he saluted them

They went forth to meet David, to congratulate the victory which, it is probable, David had sent a messenger to acquaint them with He saluted them, he spoke kindly to them, and did not blame them because they went no farther with them

22 Then answered all the wicked men and men of Belial, of those that went with David, and said, Because they went not with us, we will not give them ought of the spoil that we have recovered, save to every man his wife and his children, that they may lead them away, and depart

Then answered all the wicked men, when those two hundred men required or expected a part of the spoil, and they gathered from David's words and carriage that he intended to give it to them Wicked men and men of Belial, no he calls them, for their covetousness, and injustice, and uncharitableness to their brethren, by which expressions we may judge how heinous and odious those sins are in God's sight Because they went not with us, which was from their impotency not by choice or design. Herein therefore was their iniquity and unreasonableness, they would punish them for no fault.

23 Then said David, Ye shall not do so, my brethren, with that which the Lord hath given us, who hath preserved us, and delivered the company that came against us into our hand.

It is not his power and authority, he overruls them; but manageth it with all sweetness, calling them brethren; not only as of the same nation and religion with him, but as his fellow soldiers. With that which the Lord hath given us, what he hath freely imparted to us, we should not unkindly and injuriously withhold from our brethren.

24 For who will hearken unto you in this matter? but as his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff they shall part alike.

Who will hearken unto you? what wise or just man will be of your opinion in this matter? They shall part alike a prudent and equitable constitution, and therefore praised by the Romans, as Polybius and others note. The reason of it is manifest, because they were exposed to hazards as well as then brethren, and were a reserve to whom they might retreat in case of a defeat and they were now in actual service, and in the station in which their general had placed them.

25 And it was so from that day forward, that he made it a statute and an ordinance for Israel unto this day.

26 ¶ And when David came to Ziklag, he sent of the spoil unto the elders of Judah, even to his friends, saying, Behold a present for you of the spoil of the enemies of the Lord.

Putly in gratitude for their former favour to him and partly in policy, to engage their affections to him now when he apprehended Saul's death near. The enemies of the Lord, he intimates that though he was fled to the Philistines, yet he employed not his forces against the Israelites, as, no doubt, Saul's counters and soldiers reported that he designed, but only against God's enemies.

27 To them which were in Beth-el and to them which were in south Ramoth, and to them which were in Jattir.

Beth-el in Kirjath jearim, where the ark was, 1 Sam. x. South Ramoth, a city in the tribe of Simeon Josh. xix. 8, so called by way of distinction from Ramoth in Galad, which was more northward, 1 Kings xii. 12 Jattir, of which see Josh. xv. 48.

28 And to them which were in Aroer, and to them which were in Siphmoth, and to them which were in Eshtemoa, Aroer, not that beyond Jordan, Numb. xxxii. 34 as many think, which was too remote from David, but another place of that name in Judah where the rest of the places here named were, this being one of those places where David and his men were wont to haunt as is expressed, ver. 31.

29 And to them which were in Rachal and to them which were in the cities of the Jerahmeelites, and to them which were in the cities of the Kenites,

30 And to them which were in Hor-mah, and to them which were in Chor-asian, and to them which were in Athar-n,

31 And to them which were in Hebron, and to all the places where David himself and his men were wont to haunt

Or, to go, whither they used to resort in the time of Saul's persecution, either to hide themselves in some of their territories, or to get provision from thence.

CHAP. XXXI.

The Israelites were smitten by the Philistines. Saul's sons were slain. Saul is wounded - he falleth on his own sword, as doth his armour-bearer, 1-6. The rest flee, and the Philistines possess their towns, and triumph over the dead carcasses, 7-10. They of Jabesh-gilead by night take down the bodies of Saul and of his sons, and burn them, and mournfully bury their bones, 11-13.

NOW the Philistines fought against Israel, and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down slain in mount Gilboa.

The Philistines fought against Israel, whilst David was engaged against the Amalekites. So he returns to the history which had been interrupted to give an account of David's concerns.

2 And the Philistines followed hard upon Saul and upon his sons, and the Philistines slew Jonathan, and Abinadab, and Michtishua Saul's sons.

The Philistines slew Jonathan David's dear friend, God so ordering it for the further exercise of David's faith and patience, and that David might depend upon God alone for his crown, and receive it solely from him, and not from Jonathan, who doubtless had he lived, would have speedily settled the crown upon David's head which would have in some sort eclipsed the glory of God's grace and power in this work. There was also a special providence of God, in taking away Jonathan (who of all Saul's sons seems to have been the fittest for the crown,) for the preventing divisions, which have happened amongst the people concerning the successor. David's way to the crown being by this means made the more clear. Abinadab, called also Ishui, 1 Sam. xiv. 19. Ish hosheth was not here, being possibly at home for the management of public affairs there.

3 And the battle went sore against Saul, and the archers hit him; and he was sore wounded of the archers.

1 Then said Saul unto his armour-bearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith, lest these circumcised come and thrust me through, and abuse me. But his armourbearer would not, for he was sore afraid. Therefore Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

Thrust me through and abuse me, lest they take me and put me to some shameful and cruel death. Saul took a sword and fell upon it, and died of the wound, as it follows.

5 And when his armourbearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise upon his sword, and died with him.

6 So Saul died, and his three sons, and his armourbearer, and all his men, that same day together.

7 ¶ And when the men of Israel that were on the other side of the valley, and they that were on the other side Jordan, saw that the men of Israel fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, they forsook the cities, and fled, and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

Of the valley, to wit, the valley of Jezreel, where the battle was fought. On the other side Jordan, or rather, on this side Jordan, for these were in the most danger, and the Hebrew proposition is indifferently used for on this side, or for beyond.

8 And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his three sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And they cut off his head, and stripped off his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to publish it in the house of their idols, and among the people.

They cut off his head as the Israelites did by Goliath to publish it in the house of their idols, to give them the glory of this victory.

10 And they put his armour in the house of 'Ashteroth and they fastened his body to the wall of 'Beth-shan.

11 ¶ And when the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead heard of that which the Philistines had done to Saul,

Jabesh-gilead which was beyond Jordan, for the people on this side Jordan were fled from their cities, as was now said.

12 All the valiant men arose, and went all night, and took the body of Saul and the bodies of his sons from the wall of Beth-shan, and came to Jabesh, and burnt them there.

Burnt their flesh, after the manner

13 And they took their bones, and buried them under a tree at Jabesh, and fasted seven days.

To testify their sorrow for the public loss of Saul, and the people of God, and to entreat God's favour to prevent the utter extinction of his people. But you must not understand this word of fasting strictly as if they eat nothing, for seven whole days, but in a more large and general sense as it is used both in sacred and profane writers, that they did eat but little, and that seldom, and that but in a food, and drunk only water for that time.

THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL,

OTHERWISE CALLED

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE KINGS

CHAP I

David being at Ziklag receiveth tidings by an Amalekite of Saul and Jonathan's death: the messenger pretendeth himself to have killed Saul, 1—12. David causeth him to be put to death: 13—16. lamenteth Saul and Jonathan with a song: 17—27.

1 NOW it came to pass, after the death of Saul, when David was returned from the slaughter of the Amalekites, and David had abode two days in Ziklag.

Which though burnt yet was not so consumed by the fire that David and his men could not lodge in it.

2 It came even to pass on the third day, that, behold, a man came out of the camp from Saul, with his clothes rent, and with upon his head, and so it was, when he came to David, that he fell to the earth, and did obeisance.

On the third day, from David's return to Ziklag, as the foregoing word maketh. With his clothes rent and earth upon his head, pretending sorrow for the loss of God's people, in compliance with David's humour.

3 And David said unto him, From whence comest thou? And he said unto him, Out of the camp of Israel am I escaped.

4 And David said unto him, How went the matter? I pray thee, tell me. And he answered, That the people are fled from the battle, and many of the people also are fallen and dead, and Saul and Jonathan his son are dead also.

He mentions only these two as those who seemed most to obstruct David's coming to the crown.

5 And David said unto the young man that told him, How knowest thou that Saul and Jonathan his son be dead?

For the knowledge of this did most concern both David and the whole commonwealth of Israel.

6 And the young man that told him said, As I happened by chance upon mount Gilboa, behold, Saul leaned upon his spear, and, lo, the chariots and horsemen followed hard after him.

7 And when he looked behind him, he saw me, and called unto me. And I answered, Here am I.

8 And he said unto me, Who art thou? And I answered him, I am an Amalekite.

9 He said unto me again, Stand, I pray thee, upon me, and slay me: for anguish is come upon me, because my life is yet whole in me.

Stand upon me, i. e. lean upon me by thy weight and force, that the spear may come through me, or, stay by me i. e. stop thy flight, and tarry so long with me till thou hast killed me. Anguish is come upon me, i. e. I am in great pain of body and anguish of mind. Or thus, my coat of mail or embroidered coat, hath hindered me, that the spear could not pierce into me. Thus divers both Hebrew and other learned expositors understand it. My life is yet whole in me, I am heart whole, and not likely to die, as well as not willing to live.

10 So I stood upon him, and slew him, because I was sure that he could not live after that he was fallen, and I took the crown that was upon his head, and the bracelet that was on his arm, and have brought them hither unto my lord.

I stood upon him, and slew him. It is most probable this was a lie, devised to gain David's favour, as he supposed. For, 1. Saul was not killed by a spear, as he pretends, but by his sword, 1 Sam. xxxi. 4. 2. It is expressly said that Saul's armour-bearer, being yet living, saw that Saul was dead, 1 Sam. xxxi. 5; which doubtless he would very thoroughly examine and know, before he would kill himself upon that account, as he did. 3. Saul's death is manifestly ascribed to his own action, even to his falling upon his sword, 1 Sam. xxxi. 4, 5. I was sure that he could not live after that he was fallen. this he addeth by way of caution and excuse, that it might be thought an act of necessity and kindness, and not of choice or ill will, that he killed Saul. But here also he betrays himself, for how could this be true, when Saul's life was whole within him as he had now said ver. 9? The crown that was upon his head, not that he then wore it, which would have exposed him too much, and that unnecessarily, to the rage of the Philistines, but that he used to wear it. It is not likely that he found it now actually upon Saul's head but that he met with it in some part of the camp, whither Saul had brought it to wear it when he saw fit. Unto my lord, unto thee, whom, now Saul is dead I own for my lord and king.

11 Then David took hold on his clothes, and rent them, and likewise all the men that were with him.

12 And they mourned, and wept, and fasted until even, for Saul, and for Jonathan his son, and for the people of the Lord, and for the house of Israel, because they were fallen by the sword.

13 ¶ And David said unto the young man that told him, Whence art thou? And he answered, I am the son of a stranger, an Amalekite.

Whence art thou? David heard and knew before what he was, but he asked it again judiciously, in order to his trial and punishment.

14 And David said unto him, How wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the Lord's anointed?

Why didst not thou refuse to kill him, as his armour-bearer had done? I or notwithstanding his great danger, something might have fallen out through God's all disposing providence, whereby his life might have been preserved.

15 And David called one of the young men, and said, Go near, and fall upon him. And he smote him that he died.

16 And David said unto him, Thy blood be upon thy head, for thy mouth hath testified against thee, saying, I have slain the Lord's anointed.

Thy blood be upon thy head, the guilt of thy bloodshed or death lies upon thyself not upon me for thy free and voluntary confession is sufficient proof of thy guilt in killing the king.

17 ¶ And David lamented with this lamentation over Saul and over Jonathan his son.

18 (Also he bade them teach the children of Judah the use of the bow, behold, it is written in the book of Jasher.)

After having mentioned David's lamentation in general before he comes to the particular description of it, he interposes this verse by way of parenthesis, to signify, that David did not so give up himself to lamentation as to neglect his great business, the care of the commonwealth which now lay upon him, but took particular care to fortify them against such further losses and calamities as he bewails in the following song, and by his example, and this counsel, to instruct the people that they should not give up themselves to sorrow and despondency for their great and general loss, but should raise up their spirits, and take themselves to action. He bade them David being now actually king upon Saul's death, takes his power upon him, and gives forth his commands. The children of Judah these he more particularly teacheth, because they were the chief, and now the royal tribe, and likely to be the great bulwark to all Israel against the Philistines, upon whose land they bordered; and what, to be the most friendly and true to him, and to his interest. The use of the bow, i. e. the use of their arms which are all synecdochically expressed under the name of the bow, which then was one of the chief weapons, and for the dexterous use whereof Jonathan is commended in the following song which may be one reason why he now gives forth this order, that so they might strive to imitate Jonathan in the military skill, and to excel in it, as he did. It is written, not the following song, as many think, for that is written here, and therefore it was needless to refer us to another book for it, but this foregoing counsel and course which David took to repair the last loss which is here mentioned but briefly, and in general terms, but as it seems, more largely and particularly described in the book of Jasher, of which see on Josh. x. 13.

19 The beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: how are the mighty fallen!

The beauty of Israel, their flower and glory, Saul and Jonathan and their army consisting of young and valiant men. Upon thy high places, i. e. those which belong to thee O land of Israel. How are the mighty fallen! how strangely! how suddenly! how dreadfully and universally!

20 Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph.

Tell it not in Gath, this is not a precept but a poetical wish, whereby he doth not so much desire that the might not be done which he knew to be vain and impossible, as express his great sorrow because it was and would be done to the great dishonour of God and of his people. He mentions the daughters of the Philistines because it was the custom of women in those times and places to celebrate those victories which their men obtained, with triumphant songs and dances as Exod. xv. Judg. xi. 31, & Sam. xxi. 6.

21 Yet mountains of Gilboa let there be no dew, neither let there be rain, upon you, nor fields of offerings: for there the shield of the mighty is vilely cast away, the shield of Saul, as though he had not been anointed with oil.

Let there be no dew, neither let there be rain upon you, this is a supererogation, which he had no reason to inflict upon those harmless mountains, but only a passionate representation of the horror which he conceived at this public loss, which was such, as if he thought every person or thing which contributed to it were fit to bear the tokens of Divine displeasure such as this is, when the earth wants the blessed and necessary influence of dew and rain. Nor fields of offerings, i. e. fruitful fields, which may produce sin and goodly fruits fit to be offered unto God. The shield of the mighty, the shields of the valiant men of Israel. Vilely, dishonourably, for it was a great reproach to any soldier to cast away or lose his shield. Cast away to wit, by themselves that they might die more swiftly away, as the Philistines did, and Saul with the rest, as is said, 1 Sam. xxxi. 1, 2. As though he had not been anointed with oil, as if he had been no more nor better than a common soldier, he was exposed to the same kind of death and reproach as they were.

22 From the blood of the slain, from the fat of the mighty, the bow of Jonathan turned not back, and the sword of Saul returned not empty.

Turned not back to wit, without effect. compare Isa. xlv. 23; lv. 11. Their arrows shot from their bows, and their swords, did seldom miss, and commonly pierced fat, and flesh, and blood, and reached even to the heart and bowels. Empty, i. e. not filled and glutted with blood for the sword is metaphorically said to have a mouth, which we translate an edge, and to devour, 2 Sam ii 26, xi 25, Jer ii 30, xlvii 10. And this their former successfulness is here mentioned as an aggravation of their last infelicity.

23 Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided: they were swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.

Pleasant, amiable and obliging in their carriage and conversation, both towards one another, and towards their people, for as for Saul's fierce behaviour towards Jonathan 1 Sam xv 30-33 it was only a sudden passion, by which his ordinary temper was not to be measured: and for his carriage towards David that was from that jealousy and reason of state which usually engenders even good natured and well nurtured princes to the same hostilities in like case. But it is observable that David speaks not a word here of his piety and other virtues, but only commends him for those things which were truly in him: a fit pattern for all princes in their funeral commendations. In their lives, Jonathan was not false to his father as was reported, but stuck close to him. In their death they were not divided, and as he lived so he died with him at the same time and in the same common and good cause. Swifter than eagles: expeditious and nimble in pursuing their enemies and executing their designs, which is a great commendation in a prince and in a soldier. Stronger than lions in regard of their bodily strength and the courage of their minds.

24 Ye daughters of Israel, weep over Saul, who clothed you in scarlet with other delights, who put on ornaments of gold upon your apparel.

Ye daughters of Israel: these he mentions partly because the women then used to make songs, both of triumph and of lamentation: occasion required: and partly because they usually are most delighted with the ornaments of the body here following. Who clothed you in scarlet: this he did partly because he procured them so much peace as gave them opportunity of enjoying themselves, and partly because he took these things as spoils from the enemies, and clothed his own people with them. Compare Psal lxxvii 12.

25 How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle! O Jonathan, thou wast slain in thine high places.

Which were in thy country, and (had not thy father's iniquities) due to his sins) in thy dominions.

26 I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan: very pleasant hast thou been unto me: thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women.

For thee: for the loss of thee. For he feels the loss of a true friend and all the comfort of friendship which is inestimable: he lost him who both could and undoubtedly would have given him speedy and quiet, and sure possession of the kingdom, whereas now he met with long and troublesome interruptions. The love of women: i.e. that love which they have their husbands or children for their affections are usually more vehement and ardent than men's.

27 How are the mighty fallen, and the weapons of war perished!

Either 1. Metaphorically so called to wit Saul and Jonathan and the brave commanders and soldiers of Israel who might have been called the champions of Israel and the horsemen thereof. Or rather, 2. Properly, for together with the army, their arms were lost which was a very great aggravation of their loss, and that loss seems to be at this time more irretrievable and dangerous than the loss of their men.

CHAP II

David, by God's direction with his company went up to Hebron, where he is made king of Israel, 1-4. He commends them of Jabesh-gilead for burying Saul, 5-7.

Abner maketh Ish-bosheth king of Israel, 8-11. A mortal fight between twelve of Abner's and twelve of Joab's men, 12-17. Achish pursueth Abner, and is slain by him, 18-24. At Abner's death, Joab soundeth a retreat, 25-31. Achish's burial, 32.

AND it came to pass after this, that David enquired of the Lord, saying, Shall I go up into any of the cities of Judah? And the Lord said unto him, Go up. And David said, Whither shall I go up? And he said, Unto Hebron.

David inquired of the Lord, by Urim, as 1 Sam. xxiii. 6, 9, xxx 7, 8. Thus David begins at the right end, and lays his foundation in God's counsel and assistance, which now he seeks. He asketh not whether he should take the kingdom, for that was appointed and known before; and he would not offend God, nor dishonour his ordinance, with frivolous and unnecessary inquiries, but only where he should enter upon it, whether in Judah as he supposed, because of his relation to that tribe, and his interest in it, or whether in some other tribe for he doth not limit God, but resolves exactly to follow his counsels. Unto Hebron, which was next to Jerusalem, (part whereof the Jebusites, now possessed,) the chief city of that tribe and a city of the priests Josh. xxi 10 &c. and in the very centre or middle of that tribe, to which the whole tribe might speedily resort, when need required.

2 So David went up thither, and his two wives also, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail Nabal's wife the Carmelite.

3 And his men that were with him did David bring up, every man with his household: and they dwelt in the cities of Hebron.

The cities or towns belonging and subject to Hebron which was the metropolis, Josh. xxi 11, 12, for in Hebron it all there was not space for them all, because it was filled with priests and with David's court.

4 And the men of Judah came, and there they mounted David king over the house of Judah. And they told David, saying, That the men of Jabesh-gilead were they that buried Saul.

They mounted David king over the house of Judah: thus they did upon just grounds, because not only the kingdom was promised to that tribe, Gen. xlix 10, but David was designed and anointed by God, whose will both they and all Israel were obliged to observe and obey. And thus piously resolved not to neglect their duty though they saw the other tribes would. Yet their prudent caution and modesty is observable, that they make him king of Judah only and not of all Israel. And therefore there was need of a third anointing to the kingdom over all Israel, which he had chap. v 3. But as for that first anointing, 1 Sam. xvi 13 it was only a designation of the person who should be king but not an actual inauguration of him to the kingdom.

5 ¶ And David sent messengers unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, and said unto them, Blessed be ye of the Lord, that ye have shewed this kindness unto your lord, even unto Saul, and have buried him.

This kindness, this respect and affection to procure him burial. For as it is and ever was esteemed an act of inhumanity to deny burial to the dead; so it is an act of mercy and kindness to bury them.

6 And now the Lord shew kindness and truth unto you: and I also will requite you this kindness, because ye have done this thing.

Kindness and truth, i.e. true and real kindness, not in words only, but also in actions, as you have now done to your king, the Lord's anointed. I will requite you for this kindness, so far am I from being offended with you for this kindness to my late enemy, that I will requite it.

7 Therefore now let your hands be strengthened, and † be ye valiant for your master Saul is dead, and also the house of Judah have anointed me king over them.

Be ye valiant; be not afraid, lest the Philistines should punish you for this fact, but take good courage, I will defend you. For your master Saul is dead, or though your master should be dead, and so your hearts may faint within you, as if you were now sheep without a shepherd.

8 ¶ But Abner the son of Ner, captain of † Saul's host, took Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, and brought him over to Mahanaim;

Partly out of envy and malice against David, and partly out of his own ambition and desire of rule, because he knew that Ish-bosheth would have only the name of king, whilst he had the power. Ish-bosheth, called also Lah baal 1 Chron viii 33, ix 39, it being usual with the Hebrews, instead of Baal, the name of false gods, to put Bosheth, which signifies shame, or confusion, or a shameful thing, as appears thus by comparing ix 33 with 2 Sam vi 21, and 2 Sam iv 4, with 1 Chron viii 31, and from Jer in 21, Hos ix 10. Mahanaim, a place beyond Jordan whither he carried him partly to secure those brave and valiant men of Judah given to himself and principally because this place was most remote from David, and from the Philistines too, and therefore here he might recruit his forces with less disturbance than in other places.

9 And made him king over Gilead, and over the Ashurites, and over Jezreel and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, and over all Israel.

David, largely so taken for all the land of Israel beyond Jordan as it is Josh xxii 9, Judg x 8. The Ashurites, the tribe of Asher, as the Chaldee Paraphrast and others understand it. Jezreel, a large and rich valley situated in the borders of the tribes of Zebulun Issachar and Nephthali, and so put synecdochically for them all. All Israel, except Judah as it follows.

10 Ish-bosheth Saul's son was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and reigned two years. But the house of Judah followed David.
